8. Gertrude Gardner Snyder then read the poem "Eulogy to the Old Wedding Hat." This poem was located by SRP among some papers that belonged to Lois Norton Curtis. The author of the poem is unknown but was doubtless a Clinton Township person because there are several explicit references in the poem to Clinton Township. That poem is as follows:

EULOGY TO THE OLD WEDDING HAT

Old hat, how quickly the years have passed and gone,
Fifty years ago in 1851
You figured in this vanity fair,
Then you were trim and neat and handled with care,
Now so shapeless at you people stare.

In a bandbox you were with care put away,
And worn occasionally, and on a Sunday
With a silk bandana you were proudly brushed:
Alas! now you are slighted, completely crushed.

From place to place you are tossed and kicked about,
All forget you have seen better days no doubt;
For you nobody has respect or pity,
Once you proudly bowed to the pretty and witty.

In those days when you were so handsome and gay,
Lived a young lad on Bethany hills far away;
In'tricks Tom Twist could not beat him in his day.
Far better than books he loved his fun and play.

When his father was taking the gospel light
Over this rough cold country and away at night,
When the rest were fast asleep and it was late,
From bedroom window he would steal way to skate.

At somersaults he could turn heels over head,
Or head over heels as easy people said.
At wrestling he could do the town boys up brown;
Finally the circus wanted him for a clown,
But then, his good pious father called him down.

One night however, as he just crawled in bed,
His father came home and to his mother said,
Where's son? I'll go and see his mother replied,
With candle bright held above his eyes she tried
His face to scan; it was so serene and mild
She merely thought it hard to suspect the child.

But she had scarcely gotten out of his sight
When the lucky truant boy giggled outright.
'It was hard to snore and keep my eyes shut tight,
With mother looking straight at me with that light.
Golly! I'm thankful I could that gaze endure
For I have escaped one good flogging for sure.'

Once father away he thought he would dare
At night to slip away to the village square;
For a rough and tumble, plans had all been laid,
For a jolly good time with the Boys' brigade;
Of his mother's slippers he was not afraid.

But in the midst of his fun he felt the grip
Of a strong hand; quickly for home he did skip;
But it was not the grip that made his bones ache,
It was the bad medicine he had to take.

But later in life he sobered quietly down
Regularly he came to church at Clinton town.
And there from the choir midst furbelow and lace,
He chose a maiden adorned with modest grace.

Then he traveled over hills, not with gospel light,
But with light in his heart, and one stormy night
As he was walking along so big and swell
Some careless one left uncovered a deep well
Right in the middle of the road, and in he fell.
At this the timid beau would quickly appall,
Nothing so trifling could thwart his purpose at all.

And this is how it all came about old hat,
From the store you were bought, and this glove and that;
Then old hat when you were so trim and neat,
The guests were invited, the knot tied, and all complete.

Old hat! your career was then merely begun;
Since, you've figured on the stage to please everyone.
First to represent the dandy so trim and fine,
Then the quack doctor who dealt out his quinine.
After that you were reduced to a lower state,
The yankee peddler took you and you served first rate
As he peddled his notions and sought for a mate.

Then lower steps took you down, down,
And finally you represented nothing but a clown:
Now old hat, do not think it a great sin,
If these uncles, aunts, cousins and friends at you grip.
This is the NEW CENTURY, 1901,
And your eventful career is almost done;
We will bid you a merry, merry good-night -
Then we will tuck you in the rag-bag out of sight.

At the conclusion of Gertrude Snyder's reading of this poem, Alice Curtis Lund asked Edith Gardner:
"Did Grandmother Curtis write that?" Edith Gardner:
"I can't answer you that." Alice Curtis Lund: "I have a copy of it in Grandmother Curtis' handwriting."

Thus ended the report of the Corresponding Secretary/Historian.

1987 FINANCIAL REPORT Donald W. Powell, Treasurer

The financial report for 1987 covers the period from the 1986 Griswold Reunion (08-23-1986) up to and including the 1987 Griswold Reunion (08-22-1987).
After expenses were paid following the 1986 Griswold Reunion, there were $203.04 in the account. At the 1987 Griswold Reunion, $119.00 were collected.

The following expenses were incurred at the 1987 Griswold Reunion:

1. $20.00 to Alice and Norman Lund for the ham;
2. $20.92 to reimburse SRP for the cost of having printed the announcements for this year's Reunion;
3. $17.76 to reimburse SRP for the cost of mailing out the 1987 announcements (#2, above);
4. $25.00 to the Clinton Center Baptist Church for the use of the building for the Reunion;
5. $10.00 to the Clinton Center Cemetery to help meet the cost of maintaining the Cemetery.

The total of those expenses is $93.68. The balance in the treasury, therefore, is $203.04 + $119.00 - $93.68 = $228.36.

The cost of printing and mailing this issue
(Volume I, Number 3) of the CLINTON CENTER
PIONEER DAY AND GRISWOLD REUNION
NEWSLETTER has not yet been deducted from the balance given above of $228.36.

THE FLOOR IS YOURS: SPEAK UP!

1. John Rude spoke up and said: "I'm one of the five directors of the Clinton Center Cemetery Association, across the street here, and each year for the last three years we've gotten $10.00 from the Arnold Reunion. I got the check for this year just two or three days ago. I think that if we get enough money in today, I don't think it would hurt if we gave a donation to help in the upkeep of the Cemetery--and the expense of that keeps getting more each year.

Francis Curtis III then added: "I think I can agree with you. I'm president of our cemetery association and costs are going way up, and so I think that's something we should consider."

S. Robert Powell: "Maybe we should have a motion to that effect?"

It was then moved (SRP) and seconded (Norvelle Curtis Kern) that the Griswold Reunion make a donation to the Clinton Cemetery Association whenever the Reunion meets at the Clinton Center Baptist Church. The motion was carried unanimously.

2. SRP thanked Florence Robinson and Elizabeth Jones for their help with preparing for the Griswold Reunion and for serving as intermediaries between the Griswold Reunion and the Clinton Center Baptist Church.

3. SRP thanked the Table Committee and Mary Tyler, Ann Tyler, Donald W. Powell for their careful work. He also thanked John Rude for the flowers that were on the tables. The flowers, unbeknownst to John Rude, were picked by Ann Tyler, Mary Tyler, Donald W. Powell and S. Robert Powell from the roadside near the John Rude farm on 08-21-1987.

4. SRP: "In keeping with our President's suggestion that members recall earlier Griswold Reunions that they attended, I wonder, Edith, if you can remember the first time you came to the Griswold Reunion."

Edith Gardner: "I can remember coming, but I can't honestly tell you that I remember the first time. My memory is pretty good. I live in the past, as you know. At that time, we had to hire a horse and carriage or what have you, in Carbondale, and drive over."

John Rude then added: "The horse sheds were right out here by the spruce trees. The Farno School was our here, just across the brook, on the South side of the Church, and the Farno Post Office was in the house up here on the North side of the Church, and when they baptized the people, I can remember they had a concrete foundation down in there to dam the water up, just East of the bridge."

Alice Curtis Lund, Norvelle Curtis Kern, and Beatrice Curtis Bartholomay then spoke up and said that they were baptized in the creek "out here" (i.e., next to the Clinton Center Baptist Church).

5. Alfred Shaffer spoke up and thanked the Lord for all that He has done for us all during the past year.

WHEN AND WHERE FOR NEXT YEAR?

It was moved (John Rude) and seconded (LaVange Arnold) that the Griswold Reunion next year (1988) be held at the Clinton Center Baptist Church on the third Saturday (the 20th) of August. Family members are asked to bring their own table service.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS FOR 2-YEAR TERM 1988-1989

The present officers of the Griswold Reunion were re-elected, namely:

President: Francis Curtis III
Vice President: John R. Rude
Secretary/Treasurer: Donald W. Powell
Corresponding Secretary/Historian: S. Robert Powell
Table Committee: Elizabeth Jones, Eleanor Rude, Ann Tyler

Francis Curtis III then congratulated the Powell brothers for doing annually what they do for the Griswold Reunion. The Powell brothers were then given a round of applause by the Griswold Reunion.

82nd GRISWOLD REUNION
Saturday, August 20, 1988
Clinton Center Baptist Church
R. D., Waymart, PA 18472

The 82nd annual Griswold Reunion began with a half-hour registration period, beginning at 11:30 A.M. The following 36 persons signed the registration book: Donald W. Powell, John V. Buberniak, Mary Zollbrecht, Alfred Shaffer, Eileen Bessette, Gloria Johnston, Jane Shaffer, Edith A. Gardner, Gertrude G. Snyder, Mildred E. LaBarre, Amy R. Rude, John R. Rude, LaVange Arnold, Fay Sosenko, Gertrude Loomis Schaffer, Verla C. Arnold, Helen R. Powell, Amy Schermerhorn, Dorothy Olver, Fred Olver, Helen Giles, Doris Mead, Judith Blair, Minna Blair, Eleanor Rude, Jill Schermerhorn, Laura Schermerhorn, Mary Schermerhorn, William Schermerhorn, Ray E. Grace, Walter S. Powell, S. Robert Powell, Beatrice Bartholomay, Patricia Lawrence, Myrtle Curtis, Doris Howell. At 12:00 P.M. a covered-dish dinner was served.

Following the dinner, the annual business meeting of the Griswold Reunion took place. The meeting was called to order by Donald W. Powell, in the absence of the President, Francis W. Curtis III. Donald welcomed all family members and friends to the Reunion and reminded everyone that this was the 82nd annual reunion of the descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden. DWP to Edith Gardner: "Were you here at the first Reunion?" EG: "I presume so, but I can't exactly remember it." Donald then polled the group to identify the oldest members and determined that LaVange Arnold and Edith Gardner were both 91, the former born on January 25, 1897 and the latter born on July 8, 1897, which means that LaVange Arnold was the oldest member in attendance. The third oldest person present was Gertrude (Gardner) Snyder, age 89, born on February 11, 1900; the fourth oldest person present was Myrtle Curtis, who was born on November 7, 1901; the fifth oldest person present was Fred Olver, who was born on February 12, 1902. The youngest person present was Laura Schermerhorn, age 16.

The persons who traveled the shortest distance to arrive at the Reunion were John and Amy Rude, who traveled 1 1/4 miles. Those who traveled the farthest were Minna and Judy Blair, who traveled 146 miles.

The family with the most persons present was the Rude family, with seven members present; next was the Alfred Shaffer family with five members present. The person who attended the most reunions was Edith Gardner.

Donald then showed the group the first minute book of the Griswold Reunion, and again reminded everyone to make sure to sign the guest book. Donald also showed the group some photographs from the early Pioneer Day celebrations and the early Griswold Reunions.

Donald was asked by Dorothy Olver where the beautiful flowers in the church basement were from and he pointed out that the majority of them came from Robert Powell's garden in Elkdale, and that the flowers would remain in the church for the Pioneer Day celebration on the following day.

Donald then turned the floor over to S. Robert Powell who gave his report as Secretary/Historian of the Griswold Reunion, as follows:

Report of the Secretary/Historian

1. The complete list of descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden for 1987: over 100 pages in length. At last year's Reunion, Verla C. Arnold, Helen Giles, Clarence E. Loomis, LaVange Arnold ordered the complete list. Those copies were mailed out on January 5, 1988. Copies were also mailed on January 16, 1988 to Clarissa Sheehan (the historian of the Arnold Reunion) and to the Steinsto family in Norway, who ordered a copy of last year's complete list but did not receive it. Three persons wanted the up-dated list for 1987: John Rude, Gloria Johnston, and Jane Shaffer. Those copies, plus one to Clarissa Sheehan, were mailed out by the Secretary on January 16, 1988. SRP then pointed out that he had extra copies of the 1987 update with him at the Reunion and those copies were then passed out to all interested persons. In updating the descendant list there are always confusions that occur because of duplication of names (father and son with the same name, for example). After last year's Reunion, Robert got help from Crystal C. Gummoe (who helped clarify some confusion with the Cook and Muzal families), Verla C. Arnold (who helped clarify some confusion with members of the Cowger and Bodick families), and Elwin Walker. (At Christmas 1987, SRP wrote to Marjorie Norton Walker to ask her help with information on the sons of William Curtis Norton and Ruth Loeser, namely: William Curtis Norton, Jr., born 02-23-1951; Henry Sheldon Norton, born 02-26-1952. The question to be answered: Who are Christie, David and Anna Norton? The children of William, Jr. or Henry? Alice and Norman Lund reported to Donald and Robert Powell on their 1987 Christmas card that Marjorie Norton Walker had died around Thanksgiving 1987—a month before SRP had written to her to ask her help with this Norton question. On August 18, 1988, Elwin Walker wrote to SRP to report that Marjorie Norton Walker had died on November 20, 1987.) Robert publicly thanked Crystal Gummoe, Verla Arnold and Elwin Walker for their help in these matters.

2. CLINTON CENTER PIONEER DAY AND GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER (Volume I, Number 3, August 20, 1988). Robert announced that 200 copies of this 12-page (11 1/2" X 17") newsletter were mailed out from the Carbondale Post Office to all family members in January 14, 1988. The newsletter represents hundreds of hours of work and in this issue are published the minutes for the 1986 Griswold Reunion, the 1986 Clinton Center Pioneer Day, the 1987 Clinton Center Pioneer Day and the 1987 Griswold Reunion. One hundred and twenty went to various places in Pennsylvania, 65 went out of Pennsylvania, 14 went to Carbondale, and 1 went to Norway (via boat, January 17). Also on January 21, 1988, Robert mailed out eight 5" X 7" copies of the group photograph that was taken of the group by SRP at the 1987 Reunion. The persons who ordered, paid for ($2.00) and received this photograph are as follows:

Beatrice Bartholomay, Helen Giles, Mildred LaBarre, Doris Mead, Jane Shaffer, Gloria Johnston, Mary Zollbrecht, and Verla Arnold.

Robert then asked all persons who were interested in receiving either a complete copy of the 100+ page descendant list ($5.00, to cover the cost of xeroxing and mailing) or a copy of the additions/corrections (the new material for this year) to this list to sign a paper that he circulated among the group. Mary Zollbrecht and Minna Blair ordered copies of the complete list (which were mailed on November 30, 1988). The addition/corrections list was requested by John Rude, Mary Zollbrecht, Gloria Johnston, Patricia Lawrence, Verla C. Arnold, Mildred E. LaBarre. (Copies of the 1988 update were mailed to those persons, plus one copy to Clarissa Sheehan, on December 1, 1988.)

Robert then asked that anyone who wanted a copy of the 1988 photographs that Donald took of various groups of family members as they arrived at the Reunion to sign a photograph request list, which was circulated about the room. Ten people requested photographs and paid $3.00 for the cost of the prints and mailing: Beatrice Bartholomay, Jane Shaffer, Gloria Johnston, Mary Zollbrecht, Patricia Lawrence, Verla C. Arnold, Doris Mead, Helen Giles, Mildred E. LaBarre, Gertrude Schaffer.

3. Announcements for the 1988 Griswold Reunion. The Carbondale News (8/10/88, p. 9), The Forest City News (8/11/88, p. 10; also in the same issue was the announcement, on page 3, of the Clinton Center Pioneer Day on August 21, 1988), and The Wayne Independent (8/9/88, p. 5A) all published the release that Robert mailed to them, on 08-05-1988, about the Reunion. Also announcing the Reunion, Robert mailed out to everyone on the mailing list on July 29 the two page Griswold Reunion announcement; one page is the questionnaire and the other is the actual announcement. One hundred and eighty-three copies were mailed on July 29th: 15 to Carbondale, 106 to various places in Pennsylvania, 62 to out of state members, 1 to Norway. Robert then asked for all additions/corrections to the mailing list of the Griswold Reunion, and passed a sheet for that purpose.

4. Questionnaires and correspondence received containing information to be incorporated in the 1988 descendant list:

- Elwin Walker (see #1, above)
- Betty Arnold
- Alice and Norman Lund
- Rose Curtis Withol (Pompano Beach, FL), who sent a newspaper clipping from The Miami Herald entitled "Smitten for Life Pair Wed Yet Again." Included with the clipping were some photographs of Rose and Al Withol, including one in which Rose is shown with her 88th birthday cake, and one in which she is dressed as Pocohantas and Al as Chief Red Tomahawk. In these costumes, they won second prize at a Medical Center Mardi Gras party in 1988.

I was there in 1938, and Mother and I stayed with Uncle Milo and Aunt Harriet, and family and then I met several cousins of Aunt Laura and Aunt Augusta's. My daughter, Geraldine, who teaches at New York University, plans to come for two weeks and will arrive in Spokane on the 20th of August... If there are any relatives who live near New York City, I'm sure she would love to meet them. Sincerely, Esther Patey Forsberg."

- Gertrude G. Snyder
- Donald W. Powell

Robert then thanked again all the above named persons. On the basis of the information received from those people, Robert will produce an updated list of family statistics for 1988 and also an updated complete list of descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden for 1988.

In addition, Robert showed some newspaper clippings that he either cut from the papers himself or which were handed to him:

- Scrantonian, 10/25/87, p. A3: "People of Peace: the Unobtrusive Quakers Are Alive and Well in Region"; article by Ron Davis about Ralph and Marie Curtis, Sterling, PA

- note from Patricia L. Peltz: "Appreciate your keeping me up to date with Griswold Newsletter. It's great! Check for $10 enclosed."

- February 5, 1988 letter from Leeta Geuther: "I received the Newsletter of the Griswold Reunion and the Clinton Center Pioneer Day. Thank you so much. It is very interesting. I was unable to attend the Reunion in 1987 as I was in the Philadelphia Hospital for a hip operation. Time will tell whether I can attend this year. Thank's again for the Newsletter. I am enclosing a check for $5.00 for sending the Newsletter."

- March 5, 1988: Esther Forsberg sent a large brown envelope. "I was so happy to receive the report of the Curtis Reunion in August of 87. My sister Mabel Haven and daughter Betty from Oregon were able to be there and I wish I could have been there with them. I have a letter, dated August 26, 1904, from my mother, Amanda Curtis Patey, which she received from her Aunt Julia, whom she often spoke of. In this letter, Julia speaks of her daughter, Julia Morgan, and I am sending you GRIT, which tells about Julia Morgan as architect of the Hearst Castle in San Simeon, California ("Hearst Castle Mania," by Ray Hamilton and Al Elmer, GRIT, January 3-9, 1988, p. 21)... Mother used to talk about her Aunt Julia and a Morgan living in Hollywood, and we visited there in 1938 in her home. I believe that she mentioned that she had designed the lights for the Hearst Castle." Robert then passed around the newspaper clipping on Julia Morgan as well as a copy of the 1904 letter from Aunt Julia to Amanda Curtis Patey.

Here is a typescript of that letter:

"Sun A.M. Aug. 26 - 04

Amanda, My highly respected & loved niece; -

I have been a long time getting here with you - that is getting a copy of the Banning history ready to send you and a chance to sit down quietly and have a talk on paper. The family seven of them have gone up to ch.(urch) Uncle James and myself are here alone - last Sun. we all went. Mr. Card from Hawley exchanged with Mr. Gibson - in the evening the children had their time - the house was full to overflowing, and over six dollars raised for the work. Will sent me the letter you wrote him recently. I was much pleased to read it. All I have read yet from Augusta is the first one she wrote to be sent all around - it was full of special interest. I sent her a copy of the history soon as I read it but have rec'd no word regarding it, so I fear she has not rec'd it. Your father and mother came to uncle E. K s to dinner last Fri - and here to supper. The visit was all too short. Your father seemed real well also your mother - our tongues just run while they were here. I'm glad indeed that your lines have fallen to you and yours in such pleasant places. May it always so continue - and may the good work always prosper in your hands. Your parents attended the unveiling of the Meredith Monument: it was a big time for old Wayne: about five thousand people present. Do you know that Lizzie and Hattie (your sisters) attended commencement exercises at Lewisburg? Such is a fact. I fear you will feel disappointed when you read the history at not finding more account of your work in this part of the state - but I had to curtail every thing as much as possible; as I found it a big job before completing it and it made Hattie about sick to copy it, as she had only her noon hour to work on it because she has no type writer at her home. She could not do as many as was necessary to reach around but I am hoping that sometime she will feel able to get out another edition so that all can have one who would like to get one. It is quite a compensation to me to hear from those rec'ing one so many kind words of appreciation you father is greatly pleased with it and said he did not see how I ever got so much together about our antecedents, he left a substantial token also in the shape of a dollar bill. So many have expressed a desire to remunerate me I have told them I would accept a small sum say 50 (cents) to cover actual outlay for stationery &c and it comes very good. I suppose you know that Wayne Asso. meets at Aldenville this yr. I hope all who come can be well provided for as regards entertainment; it is so centrally located that there is always a large attendance. We shall do our best whether all demands are met or not. If we keep reasonably well it will turn out all right. What a terrible disaster on the east river that of the burning of the excursion boat the Slocum and what terrible things are occurring all the time Well my dear girl I must bring my writing to a close and set about getting dinner for a hungry family of nine. Do you know that cousin Dr. John Curtis has a daughter and Julia (my Julia) Morgan a son. I shall have to add an appendix to the history if it keeps on - Uncle E. K. is better Aunt Effie is real well Aunt May just keeps around - they are expecting a crowd to spend the fourth all their children & wives &c - Harry Haight Thorne is still in Eng. Friend & family are living in Philadelphia, Gilbert is not very well he expects to go to a hospital to be treated for rupture. Effie's health is not first class. Augusta does not meet with much success in getting some one to go to Alaska but it will come sometime. Let me hear from you soon kindest regards to your husband & a kiss for the little ones. Aunt Julia."

John Rude: "I remember that visit. She stayed with Aunt Harriet and Uncle Milo but she also got over to see Aunt Laura and Uncle Will. My grandfather took her to the Wayne County Fair that year." John Rude also reported that he had heard from the Brudos family earlier in the day: "We were talking with Darwin and Eleanor, that would be Earnest and Pearl's son and daughter-in-law, and this week they are celebrating their 65th wedding anniversary. They will both be 90 years old this fall. William Van Tassel Curtis and Francis Curtis went out west with a fellow by the name of E. K. Norton and a load of pigs. They were going to the Chicago Fair and then to the Saint Louis Fair. When they got to Chicago, the land boom was on for South Dakota, so Francis and William decided that they were going to homestead and they went to South Dakota and they homesteaded. They had to live on their piece of property for a year and it would be theirs. So they built a sod hut on the line between the properties and the bed was placed so that the center of the bed was on the line and they both slept in the same bed to keep warm. Francis Curtis came back here and married a Stanton and that's Frank up here and Myrtle's father-in-law, but William, he stayed out there and he married a Mary Peterson, and they raised seven girls and he said that he was blessed with daughters and cursed with sons-in-law, and one of his daughters is Pearl, and she married a Brudos, and that's how they are connected... My father retired from school in 1959. In 1961 he started going to South Dakota and he went there for nine years and hunted pheasants with the Brudos family. The Brudos family and the Peterson family are both Scandinavian. The last year that the Reunion was at the Ridge Farm, the Brudos were here, both Earnest and Pearl and Darwin and Eleanor and their two children." SRP:

"Tell us more about the Ridge Farm pigs." John Rude: "E. K. Norton raised pigs and every year he would take a train car load of pigs, first to the Wayne County Fair, where he would take red, white and blue ribbons. He would then take them out to Chicago and then to Saint Louis and then sell them on the auction block. These were gilts. And then he would come back. And every year he would take local people from the area to take care of the pigs. And then E. K. Norton's pigs had hog cholera and they lost all their pigs. And we have a field over on the farm in the pasture that they call the graveyard lot, because that's where they buried all the pigs. These were Yorkshire pigs, and up until a year ago we had a picture of Black Rose and Black Diamond, which were the pigs that started the whole line. And I have two ribbons, I could have brought them with me, that he won at the Chicago Fair. The date on the ribbons is 1885 I believe. After the pigs, the Nortons raised horses." SRP then added: "I can't resist telling you, while we're on the subject of blue ribbons, that I won 17 of them at the Wayne County Fair this year on chickens; a couple kinds of Wyandottes, Orpingtons, Australorps, Buttercups, and some others. I have always liked birds and now I'm raising chickens." SRP also reported that he raises Flying Tippler pigeons, which fly for 15 to 20 hours at a time and then land on the coop. It's an English breed of pigeons and they are trained for long-time flying. SRP: "I've also recently decided that I like Guinea Hens and so I have a bunch of them now, and a banty hen hatched out five more Guinea keets yesterday, so I've got quite a collection."

Regarding the Julia Morgan/Hearst Castle clipping, Edith Gardner remarked, on 03-15-1988, to SRP: "I could be wrong, but Julia Morgan lived in New Britain, Connecticut. She was the daughter of Dr. Curtis in Hawley."

Fred Olver: "I used to have a good time on my grandparents' farm. It was not far from Creamton Corners; if you were going to Rude's, it would be 296 down across the hollow, the other side of the hollow before you come up the next rise where you go down the incline and then turn right into Rude's road, it was the farm that sits off the road up to the left."

—GRISWOLD FAMILY ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA. The Clinton Township Griswold Reunion is a member of the Griswold Family Association of America and every year we receive newsletters from the national organization. Richard and Evelyn Griswold are the editors of the national Newsletter. In the course of this past year we have received two newsletters; Bulletin 84, November 1987; Bulletin 85, May 1988. All of the Clinton Township Griswold information that is contained in the complete list of descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden has been reported to the national organization and included in the last volume of the published history of the family.

—ELECTION OF OFFICERS: We elected officers for a two-year term last year and those same persons will serve again for the coming year. They are:

President: Francis Curtis III
Vice President: John R. Rude
Secretary/Treasurer: Donald W. Powell
Corresponding Secretary/Historian: S. Robert Powell
Table Committee: Elizabeth Jones, Eleanor Rude, Ann Tyler

GRISWOLD PRIDE:

This procedure was begun last year, and we must continue to record items about the Griswolds on a national level.

John Rude reported: "Jerry Pratt, Honesdale. His son Pratt's Showcase, where they sell paint and wallpaper and so on just before you enter Honesdale. Jerry's mother was a Griswold. In my wife's genealogy, she is also related to the Griswolds. Her branch of the family goes back to a town up there in the New England states, and our branch goes back to the same town. In her history it says that she goes back to one Griswold in that town and we go back to another and they haven't yet figured out if they are related. My wife has the complete genealogy." SRP: "Yes, I think that that is the genealogy that we have been going to get up and have a look at for over a year now." Amy Rude: "It's there, but when we moved up to the big house from the little house we packed it up and we haven't found the box we put it in yet. But it's there." SRP: "Sounds to me like you need Edith Gardner's help. She is a wonderful organizer, she could help you out." John Rude: "And I also want to say one thing. If it hadn't been for you and your brother, I think that the Griswold Reunion would have dwindled away at the time it was so small in the Grange Hall and there were only 8, 9 or 10 people attending. You two boys deserve all the credit for building it back up." The Reunion gave the Powell brothers a warm round of applause in appreciation of their efforts on behalf of the Griswold Reunion. SRP: "Thank you very much. It's a labor of love. It's a nice thing to do." John Rude: "Well it has to be. There's no pay in it."

THE FLOOR IS YOURS. SPEAK UP!

Fred Olver: "I started coming to the Reunions when I was three or four years old. We lived at 58 Canaan Street then and we're still there. Until I was three, we lived at 32 Canaan Street. For three years I didn't come to the Reunion because I spilled the gravy."

Amy Rude reported that she attends the Walrath family reunion in Cooperstown, NY, and that that Reunion has been going on for 118 years. LaVange Arnold reported that the Arnold Reunion has been going on since shortly after World War I. "We had about the same number there this year that we have here today. We had a real good time and no deaths in the reunion. There were no deaths in the family this last year and we have that to be thankful for. We hold it in Lakeville and that's because most of the family that attends are from that area. It's in the Community Hall next to the Church... My grandson wanted to come to visit us one time and he wanted to know if he could come and I said yes, but you've got to come to the Reunion with me if you do. So he didn't know what a reunion was. He said, 'What is that?' So I explained to him what it was. We came down to the Reunion. It was at Maple Grove at the time, and that boy was actually shaking. He was scared to death. He didn't know what a reunion was. He never had seen the family together like that. His mother's family didn't do that, and his father's family was all here. So we brought him down and when he went home he was so pleased, he said 'Why everybody there was related to me somehow or the other and they were all so nice to me. I was so glad you took me down there.' And there was a picture taken, and I have the picture and he's been trying to get it away from me ever since because it has his picture in it. He's the boy with the long hair and the beard in the picture."

Fred Olver: "My brother Harold is now 94 and he was president of this Reunion for three years in a row. He lives in Florida and he has just written his autobiography. It's quite a work. We'll make sure you get a copy."

THE ANNUAL COLLECTION:

Treasurer's Report by Donald W. Powell

An empty tea pot served at the collection plate. Robert reminded the group of some of the expenses that are incurred annually. The printing of Volume I, Number 3 of the CLINTON CENTER PIONEER DAY AND GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER, for example, cost $190.74; mailing fees (bulk rate mailing) to send out copies of all persons on the mailing list were $17.00, plus $.77 to send one copy to Norway. After the 1987 Reunion, we had $228.36 in the Treasury. The expenses incurred in printing and mailing this year's Newsletter totaled $208.51, leaving a balance in the Treasury after the production and mailing of the Newsletter of $19.85. There were several donations to the Griswold Reunion after that time, plus interest on the total in the account, giving a balance in the account before the 1988 Reunion of $81.63.

The following bills were submitted for payment at the 1988 Reunion: $20.63 (the expense of printing and mailing out the announcements for this year's reunion), $12.00 (membership renewal in the Griswold Family Association of America), $25.00 (to the Clinton Center Baptist Church for the use of the building for the Reunion), $10.00 (to the Clinton Center Cemetery). It was moved by John Rude, with a second by Judy Blair, that we pay our bills. The motion carried. $112.00 was collected in the tea pot at the 1988 Reunion.

WHEN AND WHERE FOR NEXT YEAR? It was moved by John Rude and seconded by Eleanor Rude that the Reunion for 1989 take place on the third Saturday of August at the Clinton Center Baptist Church.

SRP: "Before we adjourn, I'd like to tell you that we have a collector of a very unusual item in our midst. You may not know about this collector. Beatrice Bartholomay is quite a collector. Tell us about your collections."

Beatrice Bartholomay: "I collect pens and pencils with advertisements on them. At my last count I have two thousand four hundred and some. I finally have gotten all of the presidents. I have them in shoe boxes up in the attic and I have it marked on the cover of each one how many are in that box." SRP: "So, if you're ever driving through Waymart and you need to make a note of something and you wonder who's got a pen, stop at Center Street and I'll bet you can find a pen to borrow. Maybe if you have some unusual pens in your top drawer and you wonder what to do with them you should give them to Beatrice."

It was then moved by LaVange Arnold, with a second by Fred Olver, that the 1988 Griswold Reunion be adjourned. The motion carried.

VITAL STATISTICS UPDATE, 1988

Presented hereafter are the Births, Marriages, Deaths and Achievements of members of the Griswold family, which either took place since the 1987 Griswold Reunion or were reported for inclusion in these records at the 1988 Griswold Reunion.

The data given in each category (Births, Marriages, Deaths, and Achievements) are reported in sequence in terms of the six sons of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden, namely: John, Francis, Orrin, Sumner, Horace, Sedate. That is to say, for example, the births in the Francis Griswold line are given before the Sumner Griswold line births. The six lines are identified in column 1 as: John (J), Francis (F), Orrin (O), Sumner (S), Horace (H), and Sedate (SE). The numbers in column 2 are the pages in the 1988 official list of descendants whereon these data for 1988 are incorporated.

The following persons, listed in no particular order, furnished the Corresponding Secretary (S. Robert Powell) with these data, and he synthesized them and incorporated them into the 1988 official list of descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden: Crystel C. Gummoe, Verla C. Arnold, Alice C. Lund, Jane Shaffer, Jeffrey Curtis, K. G. and Betty L. Pratt, Mrs. Robert H. Sheehan, Mrs. Calvin Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. Al Wihtol, Patricia Lawrence, Mrs. Dino C. Young, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bostwick, Mrs. Larry Buckingham, Mr. and Mrs. Gary Freiermuth, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Winters, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Stiles, Mildred E. Labarre, Leeta Geuther, Clarence E. Loomis, Esther Patey Forsberg, Mr. and Mrs. John Gardner, Mary Zollbrecht, Elwin Walker, Mr. and Mrs. John Rude, Doris Mead, Gloria Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Cook, Francis Curtis III, Gertrude L. Schaffer, Mary Schermerhorn, Mrs. John W. Rebernik, Edith A. Gardner, Gertrude G. Snyder, Donald W. Powell, and S. Robert Powell.

Without the help and cooperation of all of those persons, the Corresponding Secretary could not have produced this "Griswold Reunion Vital Statistics Update, 1988," and we are pleased to express here our thanks to all of them for their contributions. Special thanks are here extended to Clarissa Treat Sheehan, the Historian of the Arnold Reunion (Sumner Griswold line), for her detailed report of the Births, Deaths, Marriages and Achievements for 1988 from the Henry and Clarissa (Gelatt) Arnold Reunion of July 24, 1988.

THE 157th ANNIVERSARY HISTORICAL PROGRAM

Prelude: a hymn played on the piano by Ruth Hauenstein.

Welcome by S. Robert Powell: "Good afternoon, and welcome to this Clinton Center Pioneer Day, the 157th anniversary of the founding of this church. We are here today because 157 years ago, 24 very courageous people got together and decided to establish a church here in Clinton Township, and I think it's very important that we hear their names again. The 24 people who founded this church: Rufus Grennell, David West, Reuben Peck, Ovid Grennell, Sylvester E. North, Jasper Grennell, John Reynolds, William Bayley, Michael Grennell, Jonathan Sanders, Olive Norton, Sally A. Peck, Harriet Norton, Anna Grennell, Susanna Gaylord, Amanda North, Joanna Gaylord, Ruth Kenyon, Beulah Blanding, Lydia Campbell, Phoebe Grennell, Elizabeth Marshall, Caroline Walter, and Elisabeth Wilmot. We're here today because those 24 people took a stand 157 years ago and decided to establish this church. This church has had 157 of glorious history. May it have at least that many more, and many times that again more. We have an interesting historical program today. We'll be hearing about Rev. Henry Curtis, one of the very important early ministers in the church, one of many important people associated with this church. We'll be hearing about Eliza Banning, who married Henry Curtis. We'll also hear some other historical facts. We'll begin with a prayer by Rev. Arthur Richner."

Rev. Arthur Richner: "Let us stand together as we unite our hearts in a moment of prayer. Our great God and our heavenly Father, we come into your presence today in the name of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. We come today, Father, giving thanks today for thy goodness and for thy grace and for thy mercy which thou has poured down upon us. Indeed we are a privileged people. We thank you, Father, that you have sent your son, the Lord Jesus Christ, that he came into the world and we beheld his glory as the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and full of truth. We thank you that this love of God has been shed abroad in our hearts and we rejoice and we give thanks unto you for all thy bountiful blessings. Lord we thank you for this church, we thank you for those 24 men and women who, many many years ago, had the vision, called to God, determined that they would build a church for this community in order that the glorious Gospel, the liberating saving Gospel of Jesus Christ, might be proclaimed throughout this community. And Father we thank you and praise you for the men and the women who labored hard for many many years, who sacrificed much, in order that they could have a place where they could worship you, who could have a place where they could bring up their children in the fear, in the admonition and in the instruction of the living word of God. And Father, how thankful we are to know that our labor in the Lord is never in vain, and because of their faithfulness we know that there has been a great outreach, their witness has gone forth throughout the earth, and we give you thanks and we give you praise for them. And Father we would be remiss if we did not remember also those who work and labor with us in this venture and who are preaching the gospel of Christ and who support the efforts of this church. And we just pray that you would have your hand with us and upon us as we seek to know your will and do those things that ever bring glory and honor to the name of Jesus Christ. And so we pray that there will exist among us that spirit of love and determination and a spirit of not my will be done but thy will O God, may it be done. And we will give you praise and glory in Jesus' name. Amen and Amem. You may be seated."

SRP: "Now that you have had two seconds to sit down. Let's stand up and sing again. Hymn #404: Come, Ye Thankful People Come. All four verses."

Rev. Richner: "Before my sister, Mrs. Ruth Hauenstein and I, sing a duet, I have a letter that was just placed in my hands from the First Baptist Church of Honesdale, Pennsylvania.

Pastor, Officers, and Members of Clinton Center Baptist Church. Dear Friends in Christ: The Pastor, officers and members of the First Baptist Church of Honesdale join in extending their most sincere and hearty congratulations to you and to your people on reaching such a significant milestone in the history of your church. You are to be commended for the faithfulness and the dedication of your leaders and their willingness to fulfill God's will on the paths of the people through the years which has made possible these 157 years of service to your God and the people of our surrounding area. We are happy to be a sister church in the Wayne Bridgewater Baptist Association and thus a fellow worker with you in this great task to which God has called us. We rejoice that His blessings have been upon your efforts, bringing you this happy and important moment. We will continue to pray that the richest blessings and betterments of the Almighty will continue to be realized upon your efforts for Him. May your commemoration of these 157 years of service be but a stepping stone to the enlarged service that you will render in the coming years. May the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing that you may abound in hope through the power of the Holy Ghost (Romans XV: 13). Sincerely in Christ, First Baptist Church, Honesdale, Pennsylvania, George W. Stanton, Chairman of the Board of Directors, Ralph E. Reed, Pastor." We're happy to have Ralph with us today, and we thank him for these words of encouragement and again we give you thanks.

At this time, Ruth and I will sing a song entitled "You Are Here."

SRP: "In the course of the 157 years of rich history of this church, there have been three missionaries from this church, and I would like to tell briefly something about each of them before we hear from Alice Lund on Rev. Henry Curtis. Three missionaries have gone out from this church:

AUGUSTA G. CURTIS, who graduated in 1891 from the first class of the Baptist Institute of Philadelphia. She worked with blacks in Franklinton, North Carolina, and in the Baptist orphanage in Kodiak, Alaska; also with the Crow Indians in Montana; in later year she was Director of Missions of Wayne County. She died at the age of 94.

AMANDA CURTIS PATEY, who graduated from the Moody Bible Institute. She was instrumental in organizing the Blooming Grove Baptist Church in Pike County, PA. She did evangelistic work in Puget Sound, Washington, and in Alaska.

NETTIE LOOMIS GRAHAM, who graduated from the Christian Alliance School in Nyack, New York, and who went to China in 1919. She was home on furlough 8 years later. Upon her return to China she married Rev. Graham. Later they were driven out of China by the communists and the Grahams retired to Canada.

Three extraordinary women. Three missionaries from this church. Another extraordinary lady who is associated intimately with this church is seated behind me, Alice Curtis Lund, and Alice will now speak to us in an historical paper about her ancestor and about a very important man in this church and in this township, Rev. Henry Curtis."

Alice Curtis Lund: "I think also we should remember Clistia Belva Curtis. Clistie was married to a chaplain, Gordon Hawley, and she and Gordon are buried in Arlington Cemetery. I believe she was also ordained. She went from this church.

I have been a member of this church since 1916. Before that I came to the church in my mother's arms. My parents preserved this church and worshipped here all their lives, as did their parents and grandparents. That goes: George Curtis, Henry B. Curtis, and Rev. Henry Curtis. And we're going to talk today about Rev. Henry. He was the first full time pastor of this church. There were two part time before him. The church was organized in 1831, and Rev. Henry came in 1832. Rev. Henry Curtis was born in Ilstone, Leicestershire, England, October 11, 1800. He was the youngest of twelve children and bore his father's name. This is the first generation that doesn't have a Henry Curtis. All the way down through there has been a Henry Curtis. The family was associated with the Congregationalists and his mother was a devoted member of the denomination. She raised her family in a pious manner in morals and religion. It was through her prayers that the life of her youngest son was led toward the ministry. The family migrated to America in 1812, settling on a farm near Gilbertsville, Otsego County, New York, and both parents were removed by death within a period of two years. Henry lived a short time in Norwich, then, with an older brother went to New York City and was apprenticed to a cabinet maker. At the age of 16 he was led to feel the need of a personal saviour and the following year was baptized in the Oliver Street Baptist Church where he became an active worker. In this church he was licensed to preach in 1824. It was in this year that he was married to Eliza Benning. He left New York this same year and settled with the Windsor and Colesville Church, now called Harpersville. It was in this church that he was ordained. He was pastor here for seven years. In the autumn of 1832, he received a call from the Bethany and Canaan Church, now called Clinton. He accepted the call, sold his farm, and moved his family to Bethany where he purchased the home in which they lived for 13 years. The family now consisted of four sons and two daughters. At this time, a farm was decided on and one purchased on the West Branch of the Lackawaxen, at Edenvale. There also was a schoolhouse down Edenvale, near where his farm was. The farm was later owned by the Gillow family. His labors to Clinton covered 14 years and during this time the church enjoyed three general revivals. His residence in Wayne County covered 35 years, where he preached at Bethany, Clinton, Carbondale, Damascus, Lebanon, Berlin, Ashland, Berlin II, Aldenville, Paupack Eddy (now Hawley), Palmyra, Lackawaxen, Barryville, Shohola, and Jackson in the Bridgewater Association, and he was instrumental in starting many of these churches. He was instrumental in starting the church at Aldenville, the church in Hawley, and for many years he worked in Carbondale in the Baptist Church over there. His field during the last five years extended over a distance of 30 miles. The nearest, 14 miles from his residence. Bad weather never prevented him from keeping an appointment. He was known to go when the roads were considered impassable. During his entire ministry he baptized over 1,000 professed believers. All his children were baptized by their reverend father and were settled in life before his departure. With the Clinton church he preached his first sermon in this state and in the fellowship of this church he died. His death came August 13, 1867, in the 67th year of his life. Rev. Curtis was a man of more than ordinary ability and of very considerable intelligence. His mind was clear in its perceptions, firm and immovable in its convictions. He was eminently acquainted with the Scripture. His preaching was instructive and useful. Rev. Curtis was a man of sterling religious character whose labors were so abundant, whose life was so useful. He nurtured this church in the early years of its growth. We, as his descendants, are proud to carry on the work he began in this church he served so well."

SRP: "Thank you Alice. Shall we stand now and sing another hymn. Hymn #310: Near the Cross. All four verses."

SRP: "An annual--and very enjoyable--portion of these Clinton Center Pioneer Day historical programs is the moment when Alice Lund shares with us some "sense and nonsense." In her readings and in the course of her life throughout the year, Alice collects these statements of sense and nonsense and she has a list of them and you will now hear Alice's 1988 edition of "Sense and Nonsense."

Alice Lund: "A future, without the best of the past, isn't worth anything."

No one has ever created a great thing suddenly.

It's nice to be important but more important to be nice.

Many of us have the right aim in life, we just don't get around to pull the trigger.

The reason that worry kills more people than work does is that more people worry than work.

There has never been a statue erected to the memory of someone that left well enough alone.

The one who sows seeds of kindness enjoys a perpetual harvest.

Nothing turns out right unless someone makes it his job to see that it does.

Following the path of least resistance makes both men and rivers crooked.

The only way to save face is to keep the lower end of it closed.

A man can not touch his neighbor's heart with anything less than his own.

A speaker ought to be the first person to know when he's through.

Don't let your pride be inflated, you may have to swallow sometime.

No man has a right to do as he pleases unless he pleases to do right.

When your outcome exceeds your income, your upkeep is your downfall.

You are as young as your faith, as old as your doubt, as young as your confidence, as old as your fear, as young as your hope, as old as your despair.

In the control place of every heart, there is a recording chamber. So long as it receives messages of beauty, hope, cheer and courage, so long are we young. When the wires are all down, and your heart is covered with the snows of pessimism, and the ice of cynicism, then and then only are you grown old.

I want only the chosen few, who stood through good and evil too.

True friendship's test: who only choose to see the best. And then, as only true friends can, forgive the rest."

SRP: "Thank you Alice. Some words to live by, I'm sure. Some of those words we should all take very seriously. Some of them we should laugh at.

Alice Lund will now speak to us for a moment about the free will offering that we will take in a few minutes, and the purpose of this free will offering and the importance of the offering."

Alice Lund: "First, a lot of thanks to the people who have been so kind and faithful in working for Pioneer Day. There are so many that do so much and they get no thanks. I'm so glad that you all came today and I hope you get something out of the service.

We have been doing a pretty good job, I think, with what we take in for our Pioneer Day. We've been keeping the church up, the building, and it isn't easy, an old building like this there's always something to be done. Now, this money that you have been giving so freely is keeping the church up. None of it is spent for any other purpose. We'll take the free will offering now. Give what you feel you want to."

Music on the piano as the offering plates were passed, and then the Doxology. Rev. Richner: "Father, we give you thanks for this part of the worship service that we can offer to you our tithes, our offerings, our gifts. We thank and praise you for the gifts that you have given us, and now we express our love for you. It is but a token, Father, of what we feel and how thankful we are for the blessings that you have bestowed. So bless the gift and the giver. In Christ's name, Amen."

SRP: "We're very happy to have with us today some fine voices from the city of Carbondale, and they will now share their musical talents with us."

Carbondale Choir: Lynee White and Tony Mascaro, with Pam Hudson (granddaughter of Elizabeth Jones) at the piano:

"Beyond the Sunset"

"Jesus the Saviour of Mankind"

"The Lord Is My Shepherd"

SRP: "Some of you may wonder, how on earth are the Powells connected to Pioneer Day. The Powells don't even live in Clinton Township. The family used to live here. Let me tell you how it all works out. My mother, Helen Russell, married Walter S. Powell. Helen's mother was Ora E. Loomis, and she married William Anderson Russell. Ora's parents were Theron Orsemus Loomis and Mary Emma Squire, and they lived up her "under the hill," as the saying goes. Mary Emma's father, Alvin Loomis, was one of the people who helped build this church. Theron's father was Hiram Loomis, who married Laura Griswold, and there are Griswolds from one end of the township to the other. Hiram had a brother, Erastus Loomis, who married Mehitabel Muzzey, and they lived in the house out here next to the church, where the Sanders family now lives, which used to be the Farno Post Office. Erastus Loomis and Mehitabel Muzzey gave this land, this very land where we are located right now, to the Clinton Center Baptist Church on July 14, 1846. So you see, there are some very direct connections between the Powells and this church. The family moved from Clinton Township in the 1880's, when Theron Loomis and Mary Emma Squire moved to Carbondale, and this branch of the family has been Carbondale based for the past one hundred or so years. But for the hundred years before that they were very intimately a part of this township. So it has been a great pleasure for my brother Donald and I (Donald had to leave before the program today; in the program it says that I am Donald, but I am not. My name is Robert) to work with Alice and others on these historical programs for several years. It's a great pleasure.

We've heard now about Rev. Henry Curtis. Let me tell you now a little bit about the Banning family and about Rev. Henry Curtis's wife, Eliza Banning. She wasn't Elizabeth Banning, I might add, (as given in the printed program), she was Eliza Banning.

THE BANNING FAMILY (author of this text unknown; copy among the papers of the late Lois Norton Curtis)

"John and Mary Banning of the city of Reading, Berkshire, England, came to this country in the year 1818, and settled in the city of New York.

Mary, his wife, was married to him at the age of sixteen, and he was then a widower with grown up children. His business was that of a shoe manufacturer, and he employed quite a number of workmen. He was a modest, unostentatious man, and highly esteemed by his friends and neighbors, as was shown by the attention paid him as he with his oldest son stood on the rear of the stage ready to depart from his town, to sail for America. The street was filled with people who gathered to pay their last respects to him, and the picture of his figure as they moved away waving an adieu was vivid to his oldest daughter Eliza, who after a period of 60 years related the incident with emotion to her children. He came over with his oldest son (John) and the remainder of the family (wife and nine children) came in the same vessel on its next trip. He was seven weeks on the water, and the rest of them five. Sailing vessels then only were known. (A letter written by him on his arrival at New York and sent back to his wife is still in possession of some of the Olivers and a copy would be exceedingly interesting to insert here.) Also a view opposite the home in Reading painted by Frederick Scatcherd, and presented to Eliza Banning, but now in possession of her daughter, Mrs. E. P. Haight.

Of John Banning's antecedents nothing is known.

Mary Banning was of noble birth--the great great grandfather was Lord Arthur Hamblin, who engaged in a rebellion against the government, the actual fight occurring October 5th, 1715. He owned a large estate which was confiscated on account of the above mentioned facts.

With the hope of recovering the estate, Mary Banning, who with her husband were at that time Congregationalists, had her children christened by a rector in the parish church, so as to have their names recorded in a book of the church of England.

John Banning, Sr., died April 17, 1820, of consumption.

Mary, his wife, died July 4th, 1851.

John Banning, Jr., M. D., died July 6th, 1823, in Charleston, S.C., of yellow fever. He was married to Maria Wells, who after his death married a Mr. Booth. John Banning was a student of Dr. Valentine Mott.

Eliza Banning Curtis was born in Reading, England, Oct. 19, 1801. Came to this country 1818. Was baptized in the Oliver St. Baptist Church in New York City by Rev. John Williams, 1819. Married to Rev. Henry Curtis March 13, 1824. Died at Aldenville, Pa., May 26, 1879. She was the mother of eight children.

Maria Banning was married to Frederick Scatcherd. Died Nov. 7, 1859. She had three children - Sarah Chichester, Maria Rhodes and Charlotte Demeray.

Harriet Banning married Jacob Van Tassel. Died Sept. 27, 1875, at Tarrytown, aged 72 years. Had two children, William and John.

Mary Banning, born Sept. 21, 1812. Married to Frank Nash. Had four children - Mary Buck, Daniel, Frank, and Susan Buxton. Married James Lock 1856. Died July 21st, 1887.

Elizabeth Banning, married Wheelock Corby. She was born Jan. 2, 1815. Was married when she was 16 years old. Had ten children, six girls and four boys (1 pair of twins). She died Aug. 15, 1870. "Ane never was there one better than She or more lovely." A. B. Corby.

Emma Banning, born Aug. 31st, 1816. Married Joseph Oliver, Dec. 31st, 1833. Died Apr. 21st, 1881. Had six children - Joseph, John, Frank, Mary Emma Peck, Fannie Serples, and Mardie Hendrickson.

Sarah Banning, born May 1st, 1814. Married to John W. Avery, Feb. 1831. Had eight sons. Died May 6th, 1886."

SRP (continued): "And so we have that brief bit of information about Eliza Banning, the wife of Rev. Henry Curtis. Some of those names you will recognize, others are less familiar. Let me read to you now some other important names. This very important cemetery across the street from us holds the earthly remains of hundreds and hundreds of the pioneers and their descendants. It also holds the earthly remains of many American soldiers. Let me read to you the names of those soldiers:

REVOLUTIONARY WAR: Levi Norton, Michael Grenell, John Griswold

WAR OF 1812: Erastus Holcomb

CIVIL WAR: Joseph Bennett, Horatio Bennett, H. M. Bunting, Jefferson Goodrich, Emmet Bennett, John

WORLD WAR I: Warren P. Norton, Neal Downtramer, Dr. Clyde Kern, Dr. Ray Tooley

WORLD WAR II: Robert Neal Arnold, Merton Geuther, Reed Giles, Calvin Arnold, William Anderson, Frank Breidenstein, Alfred Cookson, Paul Ihlefeldt, Ray McAvoy, Russell Loomis.

I'm sorry that I don't have any information on the Korean War or the Vietnam War. If someone could help me out with that information after the program today, I would appreciate it. I think it's very important to hear the names of these soldiers for America.

We will not have a duet by Dick and Ruth Pazel, as printed in the program. Instead, we shall have some music in the form of a hymn. Let's turn to Hymn #212: My Hope Is Built. All four verses."

Rev. Richner: "Let us pray together. Father, we again thank you for this afternoon, for this time when we can remember, remember the past, the things that have been accomplished. And Father, we thank you for each one that has come. We thank you for the wonderful time of fellowship that you have allowed us to experience together this day. We thank you for opportunities to be new people. And Father, we ask your blessing on each one, we pray that you would go with us to our homes, and to our neighborhoods, and father we would pray that we would be able to continue and carry out the desire of those who settled this community long ago. We pray that we might be inspired by their courage and their convictions and that we too might have strong commitments and convictions as they had to the work and the ministry of Christ and to the proclamation of the good news and the love of Jesus and that we might go forth from this place desiring to share that with our brothers and sisters in Christ and those that have never heard about Jesus. So again, we thank you for this opportunity to be together and for the things that we have heard. We rejoice and give you thanks. We ask now that the love of God and the grace of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ and the communion of the Holy Spirit will rest and abide upon each one now and forever more. Amen."

Postlude by Ruth Hauenstein on the piano.

CLINTON CENTER PIONEER DAY 1989

The Clinton Center Pioneer Day celebrations that have taken place in the Clinton Center Baptist Church in recent years would not have taken place were it not for the dedication, hard work and devoted service of Alice (Curtis) Lund to her church, the Clinton Center Baptist Church.

Each year a free will offering for the maintenance of the church building was collected at the Historical Programs organized by Alice Lund at each Clinton Center Pioneer Day. As a result of those offerings, the following repairs/improvements to the church building have been made: the church was roofed, the church was painted, the big windows were repaired and repainted, the floors in the sanctuary were varnished, the north wall of the basement was repaired, the basement was painted. The funds collected at last year's Clinton Center Pioneer Day are in the church's treasury and are designated for the repair of the front steps of the church.

Again this year, Alice Lund volunteered to organize and carry out a Clinton Center Pioneer Day celebration (covered-dish dinner following the morning worship service, followed by an Historical Program in the afternoon) for her church, the Clinton Center Baptist Church. Her offer to do so was refused by the present minister of the Clinton Center Baptist Church, Rev. Arthur J. Richner. Following Rev. Richner's refusal to accept Alice Lund's offer to organize and carry out a 1989 Clinton Center Pioneer Day, the congregation of the Clinton Center Baptist Church met. Accordingly, at that meeting, it was regularly moved and seconded, therefore, not to have a Clinton Center Pioneer Day celebration in 1989.

THE GRISWOLD REUNION MAILING LIST

Who are the known living descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden of Clinton Township, Wayne County, PA? The answer to that question is given herebelow and on the following two pages. We have made every effort to make this list as comprehensive as possible, but we have probably left someone out. If you know of someone who is a descendant of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden whose name and address are not given in this list, please tell us who they are and what their address is.

Similarly, if we have an incorrect address for someone, please tell us the correct address.

When you sit down to write your Christmas cards this year, keep this list at hand and send a card to some relatives you haven't heard from in a long time. It will give them pleasure to receive a card from you and you will be surprised to discover how good it makes you feel to renew an acquaintance with a long-lost relative. You no longer have the excuse that you don't have the addresses you need.

FINANCIAL REPORT
by Donald W. Powell
Treasurer, Griswold Reunion

The financial support of the entire Griswold family is necessary to keep the Griswold Reunion alive and well. To get the GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTERS printed takes money, and we all know about postage costs. In addition, there are the actual costs of holding the Reunion (fee for the use of the Grange Hall, miscellaneous expenses associated with the covered-dish dinner, &c.). The loyal support of those who give every year, whether they attend the Reunion or not, is very much appreciated. If you have never given your financial support to the Griswold Reunion, start this year. It's never too late.

EIGHTY-THIRD ANNUAL GRISWOLD REUNION

August 19, 1989

The 83rd annual reunion of the descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden took place on August 19, 1989 at the Moosic Grange Hall, R. D., Waymart, PA. The decision to return to the Moosic Grange Hall (Nicholas Buroff, Master) for the Griswold Reunions was made during the summer when several members of the "Reunion Committee" attended a yard sale/flea market sponsored by and held at the Moosic Grange Hall. The building and grounds are ideal for such gatherings and are always well cared for by the members of the Moosic Grange.

Members of the Griswold family began arriving shortly after 11:00 A.M. and, when all was said and done, the following 32 persons signed the registration book:

Mary Zollbrecht, Amy Grace, Ray Grace, Zachariah Grace, Wnedy Kille, Candice Kille, Mary Theresa Rebernik, John R. Rude, Amy M. Rude, Eleanor Rude, Fay Sosenko, Sam and Joan Curtis, Gloria Johnston, Jane Schaffer, LaVange Arnold, Gertrude Snyder, Edith Gardner, Alfred Shaffer, Dorothy and Fred Olver, Myrtle Curtis, Doris Howell, Doris Mead, Helen Giles, Helen R. Powell, Mildred LaBarre, Gertrude L. Schaffer, Donald W. Powell, Donald W. Powell II, Francis Curtis III, and S. Robert Powell.

The Reunion began, as always, with a bountiful buffet dinner. The quality and the variety of the food at such gatherings is extraordinary, invariably. No one went away hungry, that's for sure. When the meal was completed and the tables cleared, the family gathered in the main meeting hall in preparation for the business meeting.

Tape recordings of the business meetings are made by the Recording Secretary so that he, too, can enjoy the Reunion and not have to spend all his time taking notes. In the minutes before the business meeting began, the tape recorder picked up the following fragment of a conversation between Edith Gardner and someone else:

Edith Gardner: "I've always admired Doris Howell, always, and I don't get to see her, I never get to see her. That's the way it goes. And with this (the Griswold Reunion), we wouldn't have it without Donald and Robert... marvelous... you see, I haven't driven in seven years... I gave my car to John's daughter and she went through college and used that. It made a good car... but he (John) calls me every week. No, I've no complaints... So you see why I have my specials (people)..."

The business meeting was called to order by the President of the Griswold Reunion, Francis Curtis III, who began by asking that everyone sign the registration book. Parents of small children and infants were asked to sign in for their offspring who were not old enough to do so for themselves.

The President then called for a reading of the minutes of the 82nd Griswold Reunion. Instead of reading the minutes of the last Reunion, the Recording Secretary, S. Robert Powell, announced that the minutes of the 82nd Griswold Reunion (August 20, 1988) were published in Volume I, Number 4 of the CLINTON CENTER PIONEER DAY AND GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER (August 19, 1989) and that copies of that Newsletter would be distributed to all present at the conclusion of the business meeting. This he suggested in the interest of time, since the minutes of the 82nd Griswold Reunion take up the first five pages of the Newsletter and would constitute about 20 pages of typed copy were they presented in the 8 1/2" X 11" format. Also presented in that Newsletter are the minutes of the 157th Clinton Center Pioneer Day, August 21, 1988.

The President then asked that we all introduce ourselves, in turn, to the group, and ask that we indicate our connection to the Griswold family for the benefit of anyone who might wonder how we all go back to John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden.

Interesting remarks were made by many members of the family as the introductions were made and we are pleased to report here some of those remarks:

Fred Olver: "I'm Fred Olver, and this is my wife, Dorothy Lambert. On January 20th, we celebrated our 53rd wedding anniversary."

* * *

Gertrude Snyder: "Are we supposed to talk about our ancestors or what?"

Francis Curtis III: "Anything that you think would be interesting for this group to hear right now."

Gertrude Snyder: "I don't talk too much, but I have here a pin which my mother had. And it's close to a hundred years old. She selected it and she told my dad that she would like this pin. She said, did you get it. And he said, no. So he had the jeweler bring it over to him at the station. When he came into the station, he was running the train, you know, and he got it and he had it wrapped up and Pauline Ludwig, do any of you remember her, she worked for us, and she wrapped it up and put it on the top of the tree. When we got up, we wondered what it was on top of our Christmas tree, so when my mother opened it up, here it was that pin that she had selected and she was thrilled to death with it, and we think it's a beautiful pin." (The pin was then passed around the room for all to admire.)

S. Robert Powell: "In what year might it have been when she was given the pin?"

Gertrude Snyder: "Well, we were kids."

S. Robert Powell (playfully): "So it was more than 20 years ago!"

Edith Gardner: "Well it was more than that. You see, when he was running an engine, because that was his aspiration from the time he was the age of Donald (Donald W. Powell II). He (Milo Gardner) was an orphan and at that time they didn't make much of orphans because after all that's so and so's youngster and those of you who remember him, many of you do, know that he was always thinking of somebody else, and they'd get to this one uncle's, this was out near Factoryville, and they could hear the trains going up the DL&W Railroad and he thrilled to the sound of an engine, so after his mother died and the three (children) were left at Harford (Soldiers' Orphans' School), that's how we got so much interested there. He figured that he would get on the railroad, which he did, and he started at the bottom, he was working as a trackman and eventually got to be the engineer and when he got to engineer, of course, the next aspiration was a passenger run and that's how he happened to be on the run at the time that our mother went into Frank Burr's (Jewelry Store in Carbondale), maybe a couple of you remember where Frank Burr's Jewelry Store was, and, oh, she thrilled to this pin, and so when she told him, he said, well why didn't you get it, well, she'd get something like this, and through that, Gertrude told you the rest of the story, and then we as kids, oh, all we'd do was adore our mother because of her fancy pin, and she got to the point where she was afraid to wear it, so she got a little chain, the chain is on the pin yet, and this, of course, is family. It's a little removed from the Griswolds but nevertheless that's the start of it. So any of you who want to see it, we'll pass it around."

Francis Curtis III (playfully): "And what was your name?"

Edith Gardner: "Well, I am her sister, and she is Gertrude Snyder, but I am Edith Gardner, with an emphasis on the Gardner, and when I first got connected in with Donald Powell, he started in on the family history, and he'd come out, well, I'm going to so and so, I need company. Well, I'd be company for anybody who'd want it, and I went with Donald as long as he was getting ready to take off to be a teacher, and in the meantime, Robert, who was then working in New York, decided that he liked the country better than the city and he came home from New York just about the time that Donald was home from Philadelphia and here's the clan and how they connected (to the Griswold's), that's another thing that was extremely interesting, because I started on, I do much of that, start one thing and forget something else, but anyway, as soon as the folks in Harford, it was the Soldiers' Orphans' School, the day they were 16, good bye, so naturally he started for the railroad and he was a trackman and he worked his way all the way up, and he had to go into Carbondale for his meals, and at that time one of this Curtis gang had gone to teaching school and she (Harriet Curtis) moved over with her sister in Union Dale, and when Dad got to running an engine, he had the trip to Susquehanna County, up North, and when he got to Union Dale they had to stop to fill the engine with water, and in the meantime he went to the boarding house in Carbondale for his meals and this teacher from Union Dale (Harriet Curtis) came to the same boarding house for her dinner and the two looked at one another and that's all they needed and he said, well now just as soon as I get to running an engine, we'll be married, and as soon as he was running the engine, that was it. And having met her in the boarding house, that was all he needed, and she decided that since she was going to live in Carbondale she would make sure that everything connected and her father's birthday was January 1st. Now our father never liked to drive a horse, but if he was going to get her as his bride, he had to drive a horse, so alright on my father's birthday, we'll be married, and he drove over (to Curtis Valley) from Carbondale, the road wasn't quite like it is now but he said he'd meet one fellow with a horse and carriage and the next fella with a horse and sleigh but anyway he got there and on January 1st she decided that she would now not be connected with the Griswolds and Curtises, she'd be a Gardner, and away they went."

Gertrude Snyder: "They were married at Grandma's, weren't they?"

Edith Gardner: "Yes, they were married there (Curtis Valley) on the first of January. Certainly, it was her father's birthday, at Curtis Valley. In the meantime..."

Fred Olver: "What was your father's name?"

Edith Gardner: "Milo. And she used to go down to Burr's, as I say, some of them know Frank Burr's, and that's where she saw this pin, but in the meantime his (Milo's) father had the three children and he decided that his duty was with the army so he joined with the army and went down to Maryland, in that section."

Gertrude Snyder: "New York."

Edith Gardner: "New York, well anyway, he had one thing of value, how it ever came into the family, I don't know, because that side of the family I won't say much about but I can say that he gave her his mother's watch. Well that was fine. And she couldn't have a watch without something to fasten it, so she spent her year's salary as a teacher and bought the chain and then when I came to teen age, of course I thought it was quite smart to wear my grandmother's watch, and we had our first car, and on a Sunday afternoon, when my father was home, he'd say, well let's go for a ride today. Well, where ya going? Oh, we'll go to Aunt Nira's, and away we'd go to Aunt Nira's, who was a sister to his mother. And this day I was wearing the watch and I had a pin to fasten it and we went in and as we walked in the door she (Aunt Nira) said: 'That's my sister's watch, that belongs to me.' And that ended my love for Aunt Nira, so here we are with watch and chain."

Myrtle Curtis: "I'm Myrtle Curtis."

Francis Curtis III: "You don't have a fascinating story for us?"

Myrtle Curtis: "No."

Edith Gardner: "I'll go into her ancestry, too. One of the nine children from up here at Curtis Valley went to South Dakota when that was opened and Brother Frank decided that he would go along to South Dakota, too, so away the two of them go and Will (Curtis) settles, and Frank, heart's in Pennsylvania, so that's your background."

* * *

LaVange Arnold: "I'm LaVange Arnold, the widow of Claude Arnold. I was talking to my husband's niece this week and she said that her brother is making a hobby of genealogy and that he has traced the Arnold family back a little farther than any that we have so I'll have to get a hold of them to get that. Grandmother Arnold was a Griswold, so that's how we get in on this."

Francis Curtis III: "Don't the Arnolds have a reunion about this time of the year?"

LaVange Arnold: "We have our Reunion the end of July, that's when ours is."

Edith Gardner: "In the meantime, these men (Donald and Robert Powell) can tell you how they (the pioneers) came up from Connecticut and so forth and the boo-boo I made when we were talking about that one night, about coming up in the covered wagon in the middle of the winter, and there were the three children, two girls and a boy, and they got up this far, that's the time they were just opening this section of the country, of Penn's Woods, and they each had a section, adjoining, these came from the Loomis side, we come from the Curtis side, and the one that spoke a minute ago (LaVange Arnold) came from a third side."

Sam and Joan Curtis: "We had a daughter graduated from Slippery Rock University last December, Karen. She then went on a post-Baccalaureate semester abroad to Shanghai International Studies University and left in mid-February to attend Shanghai University and was there until June 9th. Sometime earlier that week the State Department suggested that folks leave China, so the Monday and Tuesday of that week she couldn't go anywhere. Shanghai was shut down, the airport was closed, the port was closed, the busses weren't running, and the train station was closed. But by Thursday evening she had gone to the airport with a professor from Slippery Rock and also her roommate who is a student at Lehigh University, lives in Chicago, and they got the professor to the plane, and the girls decided that they were going to stay in Shanghai and so we got a phone call at 2 o'clock in the morning from her saying, we're staying there. A couple days later she did decide to leave and did come out to Hong Kong and spent a month or so in Japan then returned home in mid-July, so she had an interesting year."

Mary Theresa Rebernik: "I'm Mary Theresa Rebernik now, I was married to Kenneth Loomis, and I have a picture of four generations if anyone wants to see it. In it are Henry Loomis, that would be my husband's grandfather; and his father, Merwin Loomis; Kenneth Loomis; and my son Joseph. This was in 1946. And Gertrude Schaffer said that she would like me to have a picture made for her. And I've got two grandchildren married, my grandson Joseph, my son's boy, was in Turkey, and met a girl and married her and they live now in Levittown, Pennsylvania, and he's still in the Reserves. And Margaret is Joseph's sister and she married a fellow from Levittown and they moved up to Hazleton. And my daughter, Margretta, her daughter is engaged. They plan to be married next August and they bought a home in town and they're fixing it up, and her son William is going up to Franklin Pierce College in Rindge, New Hampshire, September 2nd, to study archaeology, and I have three other grandchildren in baseball season. Amy, Margretta's youngest, is on the Lions' Team with the Little League, Kenny is in the Teener League, and the third is on the Forest City High School team and he was on the Babe Ruth team. I have some pictures here. Here's one of the Billy Sunday snowstorm, in Vandling, it's right in front of my house, the big drifts, and you can see the Main Street doesn't have too many differences except with the difference of the snow now being there and the railroad tracks have been taken out now. And there are other pictures here. The one says 1900. I'm going to start with Fred, let Fred pass them around."

Voice in the room: "The Billy Sunday snowstorm was in 1914."

Doris Howell: "I'm Doris Howell, and I guess I'm just lucky to be here."

Francis Curtis III: "We're lucky to have you here."

Jane Shaffer: "I'm Jane Shaffer, and I have the youngest person here today. I do have some information. Last Spring, some time, I'm not sure when it was, my son is in the Army out in California, he was made a C-5, one thing below a sergeant, and he's been in the Army just a year, his name is James Kille."

* * *

Donald W. Powell: "I'm Donald Powell, and this is my son, Donald Powell. He's two and one half years old and this is his first Griswold Reunion."

* * *

Following the introductions, the "superlatives" for the Reunion were determined, with the following results:

OLDEST: LaVange Arnold, 92 in January (born 01-25-1897)
Edith A. Gardner, 92 in July (born 07-08-1897)

LaVange and Edith were given a warm round of applause by the group.

YOUNGEST: Candice Marie Kille, who is 10 days old and who weighed 7 pounds 12 1/2 ounces at birth.

TRAVELED THE FARTHEST TO THE REUNION: Sam and Joan Curtis, who traveled 185 miles from State College, PA.

TRAVELED THE SHORTEST DISTANCE TO THE REUNION: John and Amy Rude, who traveled 1 and 3/10 miles from the Ridge Farm, R. D., Waymart.

FAMILY WITH THE MOST MEMBERS PRESENT: the Alfred Shaffer family (Alfred Shaffer, Mary Zollbrecht, Gloria Johnston, Jane Shaffer, Wendy Kille, Candice Kille).

TREASURER'S REPORT

The Treasurer of the Griswold Reunion, Donald W. Powell, then gave his report.

He reported:

--that the Griswold Reunion Savings Account is in the Pioneer American Bank, Carbondale;
--that last year before the Reunion we had a balance in the account of $81.63;
--that $112.00 were received in the collection last year, giving a balance on hand of $199.48 before today's Reunion.

A call was made for bills from the floor. S. Robert Powell reported that the printing bill for Volume I, Number 4 of the CLINTON CENTER PIONEER DAY AND GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER was $232.00.

The Treasurer noted that the Reunion still owes the Clinton Center Baptist Church $25.00 for the use of the Church for last year's Reunion. Also, the Reunion's dues in the Griswold Family Association of America ($10.00) are now due. In addition, the Reunion makes an annual donation of $10.00 to the Clinton Center Cemetery Association, and the Reunion pays the Moosic Grange $25.00 for the use of the building for the Reunion. Total of bills presented for payment: $302.00.

The annual collection was taken. As the basket was making the rounds of the room, S. Robert Powell announced that copies of the current NEWSLETTER would be distributed to those present and the remaining copies would be mailed to family members not present. Those who receive the NEWSLETTER by mail will be encouraged to make a donation to the Reunion to cover the cost of producing and mailing the annual NEWSLETTER.

S. Robert Powell: "If we do nothing else as a family organization, we must keep records of who we are and some of the things that we have done. Such records are interesting and useful to us and they will be interesting and useful to family members 100 years from now. We all have an obligation to those who come after us to at least describe how we lived our lives. In producing these NEWSLETTERS, we make a concerted effort to pack in as much information as possible so that many years from now those who come after us will have a sense of who we are and what we were like."

Francis Curtis III: "I didn't get around to mentioning it earlier. But we were mentioning at the table that there were four members of this tribe who all went to 'State's' in athletic events in one year and we thought that that was a rather interesting phenomenon. My daughter, Kyra, went to 'State's' in track; Linda, Gertrude Schaffer's daughter, was also at 'State's' in track. She was throwing the discus and my daughter was trying to run fast enough to keep out from under it; Sam and Joan's daughter, Karen, the same one that went to China, was in 'State's' in gymnastics that same year; and the fourth one was my older brother Carroll's son, Keith, who was there in wrestling."

By this point, the collection basket had made the rounds and its contents were counted by the Treasurer, who reported that $123.38 had been collected. Donald W. Powell: "We collected $123.38, and we have $199.48 in the account, giving us a total balance in the treasury of $322.86. Our expenses are $302.00. After we pay our bills, we will have a balance in the account of $20.86. We've covered our expenses, thank you, and we'll expect the same generous donations next year."

In addition to the funds received in the collection basket at the Reunion, the following persons contributed to the support of the Reunion either before the Reunion took place or after the Reunion:

Minna Blair, Leeta A. Geuther, LaVange Arnold, Mrs. C. Geuther, Mrs. C. B. Treat, Mildred LaBarre, Mrs. Beulah Pazel, Alice and Norman Lund, S. Robert Powell, Marjorie Hill Treat, Esther Forsberg, Henry and Althea Neutts, Edith A. Gardner, Mary L. Flanagan, Mr. and Mrs. Gary L. Freiermuth, Marjorie A. Nims, Mrs. Willard Gibson, Douglas S. Blair, Viola E. Silks, Clarence E. Loomis, George Pazel, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Peltz, Mr. and Mrs. Carl G. Spangenberg, K. G. and Betty Pratt, Harold V. Olver, and Mrs. Leona Vaughn.

All of these donations are very much appreciated. They make it possible for the Reunion to produce and publish these Newsletters as well as provide the funds for the expenses involved with the annual meeting (rental of the Grange Hall, postage to send out announcements of the Reunion, membership in the Griswold Family Association of America, &c.).

REPORT BY THE RECORDING SECRETARY/HISTORIAN

The Recording Secretary/Historian, S. Robert Powell, reported the following:

1. Announcements/Questionnaires/Publicity: Every year a two-page questionnaire/announcement is mailed out to all family members announcing the annual Reunion and calling for a vital statistics update from each family. One hundred and eighty-eight copies of the two-page mailer were sent out on 07-14-1989 from the Carbondale Post Office: 20 to Carbondale, 104 elsewhere in Pennsylvania, 63 out of Pennsylvania, and 1 to Norway. The cost of printing and mailing out these 188 announcements ($16.80) was covered by a generous donation from a donor who prefers to remain anonymous.

Questionnaires were returned by the following persons (listed in no particular order): Verla Arnold, Leeta Geuther, Mildred LaBarre, Minna Blair, Mrs. Robert Sheehan (the historian of the Arnold Reunion), Dwight Hauenstein (R. D. 1, Box 220, Pleasant Mount, PA), Claude Manaton, Sam and Joan Curtis, John and Amy Rude, Mary Zollbrecht, Mary Rebernik, Gertrude Schaffer, Wendy Kille, Ray and Amy Grace.

On the basis of the information reported on those questionnaires and the information learned at the annual Reunion, a "Vital Statistics Update" is prepared by the Recording Secretary. In the NEWSLETTER dated today, all genealogical information learned before, during and after last year's Reunion is synthesized in a "Vital Statistics Update." There are page reference numbers in the "Vital Statistics Update" that refer to the appropriate individual(s) in the master list of the descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Cirtenden. That list is now over 100 pages in length.

SRP: "If you would like to order a copy of the complete descendant list, put your name and address on this sheet and pay $5.00 and I will make sure that you get one."

SRP reported that press releases announcing today's Griswold Reunion were mailed to the Carbondale News, the Forest City News, and the Wayne Independent on 08-10-1989. This release was published in the Carbondale and Honesdale papers on 08-16-1989; in the Forest City paper on 08-17-1989.

SRP also reported that copies of Volume I, Number 4 (August 19, 1989) of the CLINTON CENTER PIONEER DAY AND GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER would be mailed out shortly after the Reunion to family members. One hundred eighty-seven copies were, in fact, mailed out on 08-29-1989: 16 to Carbondale, 103 elsewhere in Pennsylvania, 68 out of Pennsylvania. The cost of mailing out these Newsletters ($20.37) was covered by a generous donation from a donor who prefers to remain anonymous.

2. Last year, Fred Olver reported that Harold V. Olver had written his autobiography and that he (Fred) would ask Harold to send a copy to the Reunion. On 09-07-1988, Harold Olver sent the Reunion a copy of "A Brief Autobiography" that he wrote in May 1988 at the age of 94 years and 8 months. The 32-page volume was then passed around for all to see.

3. SRP then showed the Reunion a newspaper clipping that Jane Shaffer cut from the Wayne Independent of 04-29-1989 and presented to the Reunion, through Mary Zollbrecht. The clipping is an obituary of Graydon V. Curtis, who died at age 78, in Preston Park, PA, on 05-03-1989. He was born in Scott Center and married Lillian Hempstead. He was the son of Frank Curtis and Elsie Tarbox. SRP remarked: "This Curtis family is not connected to us. But I appreciate very much having the clipping. It is important to get such information into the official record to avoid any possible confusion in years to come."

4. SRP then showed the group an article from the Forest City News of 03-30-1989 (p.2) about Elizabeth A. Hauenstein of Aldenville, who, through the article, was announcing her candidacy in the Republican party for Clinton Township tax collector.

5. Another newspaper article shown to the group. This one from the Forest City News (03-30-1989; reprinted from the Wayne Independent), entitled: "Former Clinton Township Teacher 'Gets the Lead Out' Occasionally." The article is about Beatrice Bartholomay and her pencil and pen collection.

6. SRP showed the group a birth announcement that Donald W. Powell had given him from the Carbondale News (11-23-1988, p. 6): Amanda Nan Curtis, born 11-13-1988, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Curtis, R. D. 3, Honesdale. John Rude: "This fits into the family. Edward is Henry Curtis Senior's oldest son, Mrs. Iva Robinson is the paternal great grandmother of Amanda Nan Curtis."

7. Another clipping: from the Forest City News of 07-06-1989: a photograph of the 50th anniversary reunion of the Pleasant Mount High School, held at Gale's at Panorama. Family member, Gertrude (Loomis) Schaffer was a member of that class and is shown in the front row of the photograph.

8. SRP reported that a post card photograph of the Carbondale mine fire was recently added to the collection of the Carbondale Historical Society and Museum. The post card is dated March 8, 1913 and is addressed to "Mr. John Griswold, R. D. No. 1, Waymart, PA." The text on the card is as follows: "Dear Father, I hope your cold is better. Did you get the money I sent you for the butter. I owe you 44 cents more will send it as soon as I can. Hope the rest are well. My head is some better but have quite a cold yet. The rest all have some cold. Love Louise." The Louise is Fred Olver's mother and SRP presented Fred with a xerox copy of the post card from his mother to her father.

9. A letter, dated July 3, 1989, to the Reunion from Doris Johnson, great granddaughter of Amanda Curtis Patey, was then shown to the group. Doris is requesting information on the family. She says: "I have been trying to get in touch with Edith Gardner but so far have been unable." Edith Gardner remarked: "I move too fast."

10. Gertrude Loomis Schaffer knows that the Recording Secretary is interested in exhibition poultry. SRP showed the Reunion a newspaper article from The Farmer's Friend of 01-20-1989 that Gertrude Schaffer had sent to him. The article is entitled: "Ulster (Bradford County) Man Knows His Chickens: Has Rare Breed."

11. When Esther Forsberg returned her questionnaire + donation on 09-05-1989, she included the following note: "I sure like to hear about the re-union that my cousins are having back near Curtis Valley. Next year if all goes well I'll try to make it. If I come I want to visit the home place where my Mother and all her brothers and sisters were born and would like to take pictures of the house and yard. My daughter, Geraldine Forsberg, who lives in Astoria, NY, would also like to attend, so we may be seeing all next year."

12. Harold V. Olver sent a donation to the Griswold Reunion on 10-01-1989 and enclosed the following note: "We recently returned home after a month's journey up North to Cape Vincent, N.Y. on the St. Lawrence River at the 1000 islands. We visited my brother Fred and sister Minna Blair on the way. But I was sorry not to get up there in time for the reunion. A lot of accumulated mail contained the copy of Pioneer Day and Reunion Newsletter together with the transmitting letter and your kind words regarding my little booklet. I would appreciate receiving future copies of the Newsletter and will enclose check for my contribution to the Reunion. Thank you for the copy of the current Newsletter. It was very interesting. I recall telling you some time ago that I knew your great Aunt Edna very well and visited her several times when in Detroit. Sincerely, Harold V. Olver. P.S. I was 96 years old last Sunday."

13. Betty Pratt sent a donation to the Griswold Reunion on 09-20-1989 and enclosed a photograph from a newsletter of "Captain William S. Griswold, Chief Director of Auxiliary." She enclosed the following note to Donald Powell: "Do you suppose we're related? Ken and I belong to the Auxiliary." Response by SRP: Although I can not tell you how we're related, my guess is that we are. A careful search through the published Griswold genealogies would very probably produce the connection. The important question is: how far back does William S. Griswold know who his Griswold ancestors were? If he knows the name and place of residence of his paternal grandfather and/or paternal great grandfather, it would be very easy to determine if there is a connection between his Griswold ancestors and ours.

SRP then remarked: "We're very fortunate to have LaVange Arnold here today. LaVange, can you tell us about this year's Arnold Reunion."

LaVange Arnold: "The Arnold Reunion had sort of a damper put on it this year. We had Bliss Treat's wife died and she was buried on Friday and the Reunion was Sunday. At the same time, Verla Arnold's daughter-in-law died down in North Carolina and she had to rush down there, so she and her daughter and granddaughter went down there. So we sorta lacked this year. We had 34 there this year. We had quite a list of deaths this year, we had six. The year before we had none. Some of you may not know that Verla Arnold died this week, on Tuesday. The neighbors heard her TV going all afternoon and evening and along in the night and at 2 o'clock they called the police and the police came up and went in and they found her dead in her chair beside the television and they figured that she had died about 4 o'clock the day before and that would have been Tuesday, and she was buried yesterday, down here at Clinton Center. Just at the time of the Arnold Reunion, which was the 19th of July, she had to go down because her daughter-in-law, Glen's wife, had died, and in May, Maribel Bodick, died, so that family was hit pretty hard this year."

SRP: "Every year we collect things that we put under the category of 'Griswold Pride.' These are things that relate to the Griswolds that we ought to keep a record of. In the Forest City News of July 27th of this year there was an article on the front page entitled: "Article from 1918 tells history of local lumbering industry," written by T. J. Pentecost, son of William Pentecost, who was the founder of Forest City. In the article is the following: '...In trying to make some short cuts I have often walked many miles to free myself from some mystic labyrinth. The Curtis Road was made through Griswold's Gap in 1866. I assisted the surveyors and remember the distance to be twelve rods, less than four miles. The viewers appointed by the Wayne County Court to report on the necessity of this road were: Nathan Griswold, Henry B. Curtis, Ensign McMullen. As the summer wore on all the works referred to above were rapidly being pushed and before winter came...' In that Gap, as we all know, is the famous watering trough, which has been sending forth wonderful water for a long time. It ends up in the back yard at the Curtis Homestead in the fountain." Edith Gardner (playfully): "I was there when they opened the road."

THE ANNUAL PHOTOGRAPH

Donald W. Powell: "I'm going to talk to you about photographs. I have here on the table, I guess you all can see them, pictures from last year. Eight sequential shots as we arrived last year at the back door of the Church, and all of you who ordered these received them in the mail, shortly after Christmas. If you would like any of these, I can simply take the negative to the drug store and have them make another one. My blue book is here. The first Griswold Reunion that I ever attended was here in this room and there we were then outside these double doors, and when we adjourn the business meeting today, I'm going to put our three old-timers here in the doorway so that they don't have to go outside and we'll take a couple of these chairs and a couple of long benches outside and we'll take a group photograph outside the building here in this light. So nobody go away and everybody help with a chair out and back in and we'll have no problem with it. And I have my camera here and I'll take a black and white photograph. So, it's very important that we have a visual record as well. If you haven't looked through this, this is a collection of Griswold Reunion photographs since the first one that Robert and I attended; also photographs of Griswold Reunions from long ago. There have been Griswold Reunions for a long time and I have some photographs of some of them here. So, what I'm asking you to do is to cooperate on the chairs and benches and we'll have a group portrait when the business meeting is over with."

More Talk:

SRP: "Every year in the program we have a section called 'The Floor Is Yours: Speak Up!.' And we're at that point in the program now and if anyone would like to say anything, now is the time. We are grateful to the Moosic Grange for allowing us to meet here. It's been some years since the Reunion has met here and I think it's a lovely place to hold the Reunion. The building and grounds are clean and the grass is cut. Everything was all set. All we had to do was open the door."

* * *

Fred Olver: "My sister, Minna Blair, broke her arm twice, she broke her hip twice, and she still has a little garden that she attends to and she's 84. She would have been here today but she's expecting Harold from Florida this weekend. Too bad he didn't know about the Reunion."

* * *

S. Robert Powell: "I was looking through one of the farm periodicals that Walter Powell receives and I came across an article called, 'Thirsty? Try Switchel.' First time in my life that I have ever heard of switchel. Anybody here know what switchel is?"

Amy Rude: "I read the article too. I didn't know what switchel is."

LaVange Arnold: "It was a drink that they used to make to send out to the men working in the fields. A little vinegar in water. It sounds awful, but then they didn't have lemonade in those days."

S. Robert Powell: "Just as LaVange says, it was a drink highly favored for sweating farm workers of years long gone. The magazine called for recipes and 200 people sent in recipes. Apparently the most typical recipe is: take a cup of cider vinegar, a tablespoon of molasses, four table-spoons of sugar, a teaspoon of ground ginger, two quarts of cold water. One of the recipes said that you could mix in a raw egg. I'm not sure that I would want a raw egg in a cold drink. Maybe that's just me. After I saw this article on switchel I started thinking about standard summertime work on the farm. I started thinking about taking in the hay, and I'm old enough to remember hay wagons coming into my grandfather's barn with the loose hay and I remember the forks coming down. The volume of hay that you can get into a barn when the hay is loose is less than when it's baled, is that correct?"

John Rude: "It's at least double, but it depends on how high the mow is. The higher the mow, your loose hay will pack much tighter at the bottom, but if you only have five feet, say, you can get many many times more in if it's baled."

Another Man (Recording Secretary can not identify the voice on the tape): "One of the problems when we went to baled hay was that the barns were built for loose hay and we broke lots of beams in barns by having too much weight with the bales... It was quite a trick to load loose hay and then have it stay on the wagon until you got back to the barn."

S. Robert Powell: "I recently saw an article in a magazine on how to make a haystack. There is apparently quite an art to making a haystack that stays up. You can't just throw the hay in a pile. Those kinds of skills are quickly disappearing. Who do you know who's made a haystack this year? At one point, everyone in Clinton Township knew how to make a haystack, but now, who does, except maybe John Rude. And while I was thinking about haystacks and haying, I was also thinking about flower gardens, which mean a lot to me, and I wonder who has memories of flower gardens, their mother's flower garden or their grandmother's flower garden. LaVange, any old fashioned flower gardens that you can tell us about?"

LaVange Arnold: "I used to have quite a lot of flowers when I lived down in Pennsylvania. I had flowers for the church. I liked the delphinium and the snapdragons. They made up nice in the baskets for the church."

Fred Olver: "I remember that 52 loads of hay would fill up our barn."

Edith Gardner: "When Aunt Augusta came to live with us, she brought her ferns, and now the fern is touching the floor."

Fred Olver: "After the Griswold farm burned down, the yellow rose bush from the farm was transplanted to Carbon-dale and now the bush has pink flowers."

Sam Curtis: "Some plants are sensitive to the pH in the soil and that may account for the change."

John Rude: "We had a pumpkin that we threw up in the air and it came down a squash."
Mary Rebernik: "Speaking of re-cycling. A good place to keep old newspaper clippings is in paper towel tubing in a bag in the attic."
Alfred Shaffer: "Re-cycled paper is now used for bedding for animals."
Mary Rebernik: "Yes, and it causes a rash on the udders."
Francis Curtis III: "So paper litter is an udder disaster."

With that, the 83rd Annual Business Meeting of the Griswold Reunion was adjourned.

The 84th Griswold Reunion will take place at the Moosic Grange on Saturday, August 18, 1990, beginning at noon.

1990

EIGHTY-FOURTH ANNUAL GRISWOLD REUNION

The 84th annual reunion of the descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden took place on August 18, 1990, at the Moosic Grange Hall, R. D., Waymart, PA.

Around 11:00 A.M., members of the family began arriving at the Grange Hall which, as usual, thanks to Nick Buroff and the members of the Grange, was very clean and in perfect order for the Reunion. There is always a certain amount of table re-arranging and chair moving that goes on at such times as well as getting the coffee pot going and deciding on where to put the food for the buffet: on one of the long tables "on the stage" or on the counter tops and table in the kitchen. The decision was finally made to put the multitude of covered dishes on the counter tops in the kitchen and on the table therein and have everyone pass through the kitchen and fill their plates.

What an array of first class food! Only at family reunions, church suppers and other covered-dish dinners sponsored by private organizations can you dine as well and as bountifully. All restaurants everywhere seem pale by comparison. Not unlike the rest of humanity, the Griswolds can hold their own when it comes to talking, but as soon as everyone has made his way through the kitchen at the Reunion, it suddenly becomes much quieter than it was before the food was served. And that, of course, is a great tribute to the cooks of the family!

The meal began at "around noon" and by "about 1 o'clock" the family gathered in the main hall of the Moosic Grange for the annual business meeting, which was chaired by the President of the Reunion, Francis Curtis III.

Francis Curtis III: "Welcome to the 84th Griswold Reunion. Happy to have you all here. Happy we have such a nice day. Did everyone sign the registration book?"

As the final registrations were made in the minute book, everyone, in turn, introduced himself to the group. When he introduced himself, Fred Olver remarked: "I was here in 1906. I was 4 at the time." When all was said and done, the following 45 persons signed the registration book:

Mary Theresa Rebernik, Gertrude L. Schaffer, Carol Warner, Wendy and Candice Kille, Mary Zollbrecht, Clarence E. Loomis, Ruth Loomis, Judy Blair, Marge Olver Schofield, Francis Curtis, Ann Tyler and Gerals W. Case, Amy and Zachariah Grace, Jill Schermerhorn, William and Mary Schermerhorn, Laura Schermerhorn, Minna Blair, Dorothy L. Olver, Fred Olver, Mildred Wright LaBarre, Jane Shaffer, Gloria Johnston, Alice Williams, Alfred Shaffer, S. Robert Powell, Edith A. Gardner, Gertrude Snyder, Harriette Sochan, Beatrice Bartholomay, Myrtle Curtis, Doris Howell, Helen Giles, Doris Mead, Jennifer Eroh, Marjorie Gravalec, Stephen Gravalec, Becky Geuther, Andy Geuther, John R. Gardner, Dorothy W. Gardner, Donald W. Powell II, and Donald W. Powell.

The annual "superlatives" were then determined.

OLDEST: "I think I probably get that honor," said Edith Gardner. "I was 93 on the 8th of July." Other senior members present: Gertrude Snyder, 90; Myrtle Curtis, 89; Fred Olver, 88; Beatrice Bartholomay, 87; Alice Lund, 83.

YOUNGEST: Gerald Walter Case, who was born on 11-30-1989.

TRAVELED THE FARTHEST TO THE REUNION: Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Loomis, who traveled 240 miles from Hope Valley, Rhode Island.

TRAVELED THE SHORTEST DISTANCE TO THE REUNION: Doris Mead, who traveled 2 1/4 miles from Creamton. Myrtle Curtis lives about 3 miles from the Grange Hall.

FAMILY WITH THE MOST PRESENT: the Rude/Schermerhorn/Tyler family, with 8 members present. Six members of the Alfred Shaffer family were present.

S. Robert Powell: "I can tell you a remarkable fact about one of these senior members of the family, Gertrude Snyder. She is over 90 years old and she drove here from Danville on Thursday. I think that that is extraordinary." A warm round of applause was then given to Gertrude Snyder.

SRP: "Some members of the family have brought with them today some extraordinary things for us to look at. Clarence Loomis then took the floor.

Clarence Loomis: "This is the Loomis genealogy book, and this is the book that was published in 1964 on the first fifty years of the Loomis Institute ('The Harvest of Our Lives. The History of The First Half-Century of The Loomis Institute. by L. W. Fowles, 118 pages), and this is the Loomis Chaffee catalogue for 1989-1990. Ruth and I were fortunate enough to attend the 350th anniversary of the Loomis Homestead and the 75th anniversary of the Loomis Institute on May 26, 1990. This is the program for the day. This is a map of the Loomis-Chaffee School in Windsor, Connecticut. This is an eight-page brochure on "Loomis Families of America, a National Membership Organization, Post Office Box 17, Denair, CA 95316. Here is a copy of the Windsor Historical Society News, Volume VII, No. 6, November 1989. And finally, here are a couple of napkins marked: "Happy 75th Birthday Loomis Chaffee." In some of my drives around the country, I went through Griswold, Connecticut, and this is the information on the historical marker in Griswold, Connecticut:

G R I S W O L D

In 1771 Eliezer Jewett opened a saw mill on the Pachaug River, beginning the village of Pachaug City. This area, later named Jewett's City, was annexed to Preston from Norwich in 1786.

Desiring independence, the North Society petitioned the Legislature and was separated from Preston in 1815. The newly formed town was named for Roger Griswold, a Federalist governor.

Griswold was the last town incorporated under the old constitution of the State of Connecticut, the Charter of 1662. Settlers were attracted to this area, then part of Preston, by the rich land of the Pachaug River Valley. The first permanent settlement was founded near Pachaug about 1690 on land purchased from Owaneco, son of Uncas, the Mohegan Indian sachem.

In 1711 the first saw and corn mills were operating in Hopeville, and July of that same year marked the opening of a grist mill built at "the fals". The hamlet that grew up here was named for Isaac Glasko, famed ironworker.

When Preston divided into two ecclesiastical societies in 1716, a meeting house was erected at Pachaug for the North Society. Hezekiah Lord was the first minister.

Erected by the town of Griswold, the Griswold Historical Society and the Connecticut Historical Commission.

(Information on sign copied down by C. E. Loomis on 08-14-1990.)

Clarence Loomis: "And there is a Fort Griswold in Groton, Connecticut. I will send you a photograph of the historical marker in Griswold." (On 10-27-1990, two color photographs of the historical marker were received by SRP and will be maintained with the records of the Griswold Reunion.)

THE LOOMIS HOMESTEAD. Reproduced here from the cover of the program for the 350th Anniversary of the Loomis Homestead and the 75th Anniversary of the Loomis Institute, May 26, 1990. The Loomis Homestead was built in 1640 by Joseph Loomis (married Mary White) in Windsor, CT, and is located on the campus of the Loomis Chaffee School there.

Clarence Loomis then showed the Reunion the beautiful wooden box that he made to keep his copy of the Loomis genealogy. The name Loomis is on a plaque on the top of the box.

SRP: "We have among us many collectors, and I think that collectors and their collections are always interesting. Beatrice Bartholomay has an interesting collection. Tell us about your collection Beatrice."

Beatrice Bartholomay: "I started collecting pencils and pens 30 to 35 years ago. They're from students I had in school and from places where I have been. Every place I go I buy a pen or pencil with the name on it, and in my attic I have eight shoe boxes full and the last time I counted I had 2,700. I have every one of the presidents now. The first 25 have the years on them that they were in office, and the year that they were born and the year they died, that's for the first 25, but the rest, it's just their names. Two thousand seven hundred was my last count and I've been given a few since then and I really appreciate them."

SRP: "Well I have three more for you. General George Armstrong Custer commemorative pen; Holt Lumber Co., Carbondale; and a Students Against Drunk Driving crooked pen."

Beatrice Bartholomay: "Oh thank you. I appreciate them."

SRP: "We have another object in our show and tell today, and I will walk around the room with it. Edith and Gertrude will tell us about this extraordinary object."

Edith Gardner: "Well, when our grandmother, Louisa Griswold, and their (Donald and Robert Powell) great grand mother, Laura Griswold, were little girls, it was quite the thing for girls to have samplers, and our grandmother made this sampler when she was 10 years old, so, Gertrude said, well it's getting so dull, I said, what can you expect, they didn't have dyes like they have today, whatever she used for the coloring, which is red, we don't know, but at least the alphabet is plain and her name is very weak but it's all here and we prize it highly. It was a sampler, and meant nothing to anybody. It was folded and it was up in their home in Curtis Valley, and Aunt Augusta, who spent her last years with us, brought it over folded, and at that time, Edith Dix, for whom I was named, said, well that's a shame to have that folded because it's going to crack and break apart. So, she took it and had it framed, and now you can see the important parts of the sampler, and we prize it highly, so that's family. It dates back far enough to be Griswold. It's signed on the bottom: 'Louisa Griswold aged 10 years, 1839.'"

SRP: "One evening we were looking at this sampler at 80 Cemetery Street and not long after that I was reading a book on Elizabeth the First of England and I came across this section on needlework in the Elizabethan world and allow me to read you a paragraph from that book:

Needlework was their traditional pass time and it took years of diligent labor to progress from the simple cross stitch, crewel and feather stitch of samplers to the twist, back stitch, satin stitch and chain stitch required by intricate decorative embroidery. Little girls applied themselves to stitching the alphabet and sententious proverbs on wall hangings. By age 6 or 7, they had progressed to fancier work and were able to decorate cushions and clothing. There were dozens of styles to master and an accomplished needlewoman of ten or twelve could spend most of her free time hidden behind an embroidery frame, skeins of thread wound round her neck, her kirtle prickly with needles. Parents found the hours lost in the work reassuring. One nobleman wrote that all daughters should be put to vast embroidery projects that will ever be in the beginning and never ended. At age 6, Elizabeth the First presented her two year old brother with a cambric shirt of her own working and the following year she gave him another piece of needlework.

Donald W. Powell photographed this Louisa Griswold sampler during a visit to 80 Cemetery Street and presented Edith and Gertrude with prints of those photographs at the Reunion: one photograph of the portion of the sampler on which the name Louisa Griswold is given ("Louisa Griswold aged 10 years, 1839") and another of the entire sampler.

SRP: "Who brought these beautiful flowers?"
Doris Mead: "I did. They're from my husband's (Clyde E. Mead) garden in Creamton."
Mary Rebernik: "They're the cream of the crop, right?"

Doris Howell: "Leeta Geuther phoned this morning, and she wanted to be remembered to everyone. She drives her car, I think, but she didn't think she'd be able to get in the steps here at the Grange. She goes with a cane."

On 08-20-1990, Leeta Geuther wrote to the Reunion to say: "Sorry I was unable to be at the Reunion. I'm writing to say I'd love to receive the Newsletter of the Reunion."

On 10-28-1990, Leeta sent in a donation to the Reunion and enclosed the following note: "Sorry I haven't sent this check before but I'm having medical problems, so hard for me to get around. I appreciate your sending me the Newsletter from the Griswold Reunion. Sorry I can't attend the reunions anymore. I have a couple of births and one marriage to report. . ."

SRP: "We have some world travelers in our midst. Gertrude Loomis Schaffer spent some time in Norway this Spring. Would you tell us about that Gertrude?"

Gertrude Schaffer: "I didn't bring any pictures. They're in my car. We came in Carole's. On the 11th of April I got on the plane at Avoca and went to Newark, New Jersey, and from Newark went to Oslo, Norway, and my daughter lives two hours south of there in Tonsberg, which is the oldest known city in Norway. We had a wonderful time there. You get to meet more people when you're living with a family and staying in one place than you would as a tourist. I got to go to the school musicals, the school had a yard sale, I went to the gymnastic competition. I have two granddaughters, one plays the piano very well, she's 14 years old, and the other little girl is 9. I went to their schools and we went swimming in the ocean. Everybody has a boat and I was invited out to coffee in many places. My husband and I were there six years ago and everybody I met at that time had to invite us back. Coffee is a tradition in Norway. The coffee consists of coffee put on the coffee table and then they always have some kind of dessert."

SRP: "How about the language. Did you have any difficulty with the language?"

Gertrude Schaffer: "No, because almost everybody speaks English, or if they don't quite dare to speak it, they understand it, and some of them speak it very well. I had more problems going to the grocery store and trying to figure out how many kroners is equal to how many dollars. Most of the clothing is imported, and they have different customs. They don't set the table with a teaspoon. If they have dessert, the spoon is in front of the plate. There are lots of things that are just a little bit different, but everybody helps you. I have brought a donation, in kroners, for the collection plate. It depends on the exchange rate, but it's about 6,200 kroners but it's in dollars. I went to church over there and every bit of that service was also translated into the English language and the closing song was an American melody, Amazing Grace. I got to see a lot of places. My son-in-law took me up in the mountains and we took a lot of pictures. There's a big hotel up in the mountains and we went to see the heavy water plant which is now a museum. Reader's Digest had an article on that at one time. It was the takeover at that plant that ended the war because the Germans needed that heavy water to make ammunition. And the Americans had part in the takeover. One time the Americans tried to bomb it. They missed, and they bombed a nearby town, but eventually some of the Norwegian boys were in England and from England the Americans and English boys climbed the mountains. One of the boys went within a quarter of mile of his parents' home but they didn't dare to make contact with them. They went in through the sewer pipes and took over the plant and now it's a museum. They also have a restaurant there. I was in Norway for two months and they want me to come back to be there for next May when my granddaughter is being confirmed. I find that in Norway some of our religious holidays are legal holidays. Ascension Day is one, Pentecost is another, and they observe them. They are very serious about it. I know that the church that I went to is a Lutheran Church."

SRP: "I pronounced the name 'Oslo' as though the 's' were a 'z.' I think most of us in America do. Is that incorrect?"

Gertrude Schaffer: "The Norwegians pronounce that 's' as if it were a 'z.' My 14 year old grand daughter can speak English better than I can. She reads a lot but when she goes to school they have British English and there a quite a few words that are different in Britain than here, and over there I learned that the English people still refer to America as 'the colonies' after all this time. I came back on the fifth of June. Norway isn't a little country. We think of it as being small. Norway is the stepping stone to Europe and the people are very nice, and I noticed over there that the Norwegian men treasured their women. It's a whole different attitude. My daughter met Terje in Scranton and he was over here to learn to fly. My daughter said that when she met him she thought that he was very kind and considerate and after being married to him for 19 years she says that he is still kind and considerate."

Mary Rebernik: "I have a daughter-in-law from Turkey, grand-daughter-in-law. My grandson is married to a girl from Turkey, while he was in the service he married her."

* * *

Alice Curtis Lund: "I have a piece of linen that Grandmother Curtis made. She raised the flax and made the thread and wove this piece of linen. I have it at home. And I also have Grandmother's buttle ladle, and I want to show you (SRP) and Donald it some time."

GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER

S. Robert Powell: "We have here the current issue of the GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER, dated today, and we will hand them out to all present now. On page 1 of this issue (Volume I, Number 5, August 18, 1990) you will see the "Vital Statistics Update, 1989," which is a composite list of all births, marriages, achievements and deaths reported at the 83rd Griswold Reunion. On pages 2-4, there is a copy of the Griswold Reunion Mailing List, as of today. If there are any corrections, additions or subtractions to be made to this list, please let me know. I think it is very interesting to see just who we are, the known descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden. On page 4 is a complete report on the finances of the organization for this 84th Reunion, including a list of those persons who contributed financially to the Reunion between August 1989 and November 8, 1989."

Copies of Volume I, Number 5 of the GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER were then distributed to those present in the Moosic Grange Hall. On September 8, 1990, 191 copies of this same newsletter were mailed to the complete membership list of the Reunion: 22 to 18407, 18 to 18431, 17 to 18472, 7 to 18421, 7 to 18470, 16 to New York State, 49 out of Pennsylvania, and 56 everywhere else in PA except those places listed here. The cost of mailing those 191 copies was $16.80. The cost of printing 250 copies of this newsletter was: $126.00.

Two hundred and one copies of the two-page announcement of the 1990 Griswold Reunion were mailed out on 07-11-1990, at a cost of $17.19 (26 to Carbondale, 102 elsewhere in PA, 18 to New York, 6 to New Jersey, 4 to California, 8 to Washington, and 37 elsewhere in the USA). The printing cost for these 201 announcements was $30.00.

TREASURER'S REPORT

Donald W. Powell: "The financial report for this year is on the back page of the GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER dated today. The long and the short of it is that we have a balance in our savings account of $188.74 after all expenses from last year. We have the expense today of $25 for the use of the Grange Hall and $10 to the Griswold Family Association of America for annual dues. The total cost of printing and mailing the announcement for this year's Reunion was $47.19. The total cost of printing and mailing this year's GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER was $142.80. We'll take up this year's collection now by passing this tin box. Let's fill it with money."

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY/HISTORIAN'S REPORT

S. Robert Powell

1. On May 9, 1990, Gertrude Loomis Schaffer mailed a post card to SRP from Norway, with the following message: "I'm spending several weeks in the land of the midnight sun and soft music and soft water showers, enjoying my granddaughters. Hearing Christine play the piano and Diana the flute, seeing old friends and meeting new ones. The language difference is not a problem but sometimes an inconvenience. The Steist family sends greetings. I'll be home the first week of June. Here 'down South' in Spain!" The post card was then passed around for all to read and to enjoy.

2. On September 14, 1990, Viola Silks wrote: "I lived with Uncle Will and Aunt Laura Rude, went to school in Clinton Center for a short time, then to Aldenville. Graduated from a three-year high school and then went to Carbondale and graduated from the same school that my mother did, and Dwight Rude was a professor at the time. I lived with Dwight and Margaret Rude while completing my four-year high school training. I appreciate your sending this information to me. The Curtis Reunion, Clinton Center Baptist Church brings wonderful memories to me. Love, Viola E. Silks."

3. A clipping from the Carbondale News, page 1, 12-06-1989, on which is given a photograph of the nurses on the third shift at Carbondale General Hospital was then showed to the group. Jill Schermerhorn is one of those nurses.

4. Pearl Brudos from Lake City, South Dakota, wrote to the Reunion on August 9, 1990.

SRP: "Edith, will you review for us, just in case there might be someone here who is not conversant on the family history, how the Brudos family fits into the Griswold picture."

Edith Gardner: "That isn't hard. Will Curtis and Francis Curtis decided that when the central part of the United States was opened up for shareholders that they would become settlers and they went to South Dakota. Francis, Uncle Frank, got there, turned around and came home. That's as much as he settled in South Dakota. But Will decided to stay and he married a Petersen woman and they had this huge tract of land that needed lots of men. So they had a daughter. Well, that's alright, the next one will be a son. It was a daughter, and so it went for seven. When they got through they had seven girls and no boys, and needing lots of help, and he said, well it didn't make much difference because he had sons-in-law. And the girls as they married, nobody took up and he eventually lost out on the whole thing, so that was the story of the seven girls, and Leona Vaughn is one of those girls; so is Pearl Brudos."

On August 10, 1990, Pearl Brudos wrote as follows: "Thanks for the Griswold Reunion Newsletter. I have two deaths in our family to report: Augusta Curtis Ewing, age 97, of Bellingham, Washington, died May 1st, 1990, and Nellie Curtis Lawson of Apache Junction, Arizona, died August 17th, 1989. I'm sorry we won't be at the Reunion this year. Distance is a big factor. Hope you have a nice day and a happy day. Sorry we can't make it. A special greeting to Edith Gardner."

5. Clarissa Treat Sheehan sent in the Arnold Reunion statistics for the year on August 16, 1990. In her report on the Arnold family, she reported that Donna DeVita Treat will be the new historian of the Arnold Reunion.

SRP: "Clarissa Sheehan has served as the historian of the Arnold Reunion for many years. Every year she sends to us a very complete and accurate list of the births, marriages and deaths on the Arnold branch of the Griswold family. She has done a wonderful job as Arnold Reunion historian and her contributions to the history of the Griswold family will long be remembered. I wish she were here today so that we could give her a warm round of applause in appreciation and thanks for a job well done."

6. On July 24th, 1990, Harold V. Olver wrote to the Reunion as follows: "Dear Mr. Powell: We will not be making a trip up North this summer and will therefore be unable to attend the Reunion. Having been a member of the Reunion since it was organized in 1906, at the age of 12, and acting as President for three years, 1929-1930-1931, I will always maintain interest in the organization. Distance prevents attendance. I would appreciate if you will keep me informed of Reunion activities. Please confer my regards to all relatives present. (Signed) Harold V. Olver, Clearwater Beach, FL."

7. Alice Curtis Lund has given the Reunion a copy of the obituary of her sister, Rose C. Wihtol, who died in Pompano Beach, FL on Wednesday, July 11, 1990, at the age of 90. From that obituary we learn that she graduated from Bucknell University and then received a Master's Degree from New York University in Home Economics and a Certificate of Costume Design from the Pratt Institute. She taught Home Economics at Washington Irving High School, New York City, and retired in 1967. She was a member of the Major William Lauderdale Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

8. On 07-06-90, Nancy Hungerford Bostwick, from Hamden, CT, sent back the Reunion questionnaire with updated information on the Bostwick family and the following note: "Sorry we can't make the Reunion this year. What a memorable date for our family. August 18th, the birthday of my grandfather, Dwight Rude, the birthday of my sister, Beth Clarkson Hungerford, and the birthday of my daughter, Emilie Clarkson Bostwick."

9. SRP: "We have an update sheet from Claude Manaton in Oregon. I've never met him but he strikes me as being an interesting person. He is very careful about recording information. He has done a lot of work in England on the Griswold family and has sent the Reunion copies of important parish records for our archives."

Doris Mead: "He is a grandson of Olga Stiles Griswold. He works for the government. His son joined the Mormon religion and his son went over to England as a Bishop, I believe."

10. On July 21, 1990, Eileen Weick, 2737 East 21st Street, Tucson, AZ 85716 requested a copy of Volume II, Number 2 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, in which a history of the Clinton Township Griswolds is given. Does anyone know Eileen Weick? Is she connected to the Clinton Township Griswolds?

11. On August 9, 1990, Esther Patey Forsberg sent in a donation to the Reunion and enclosed the following note: "I would love to be there to get acquainted with my cousins. My mother, Amanda, was a great influence on my children. David is an ordained minister, and Gerladine has been with Campus Crusade for Christ for 15 years, and Sandra Nelson is president of Womens' Aglow."

12. On July 15, 1990, Dianne Stiles, Canton, PA, sent in a donation to the Reunion and enclosed the following note: "We will not be able to attend the Reunion this year as we will be in Plano, Texas, where Karen is now living and our first grandchild is due to arrive on or about August 20th. Will be thinking of you all."

13. Leona Curtis Vaughn sent in a donation to the Reunion on July 18, 1990, and enclosed the following note: "I would like to come back but not possible this year. I've just returned from a tour of Germany, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Austria, with the climax to see the Passion Play at Oberammergau. Also brought home a piece of the Berlin Wall." Leona also reported the death, on August 17, 1989, of Nellie Curtis Lawson, in a nursing home in Chandler, Arizona. Nellie Lawson was a retired Registered Nurse who spent most of her life in the Chicago area and who suffered a stroke in May.

14. Judith A. Blair sent in a donation to the Reunion on August 26, 1990, and enclosed the following note to the Treasurer, Donald W. Powell: "So sorry this is late, Donald. When I picked up Mother to head to Carbondale for the Reunion, I left my purse at her house! I had the form and my checkbook, safely resting in Milton. Hope it helps a little. I value my association with the Griswold Reunion, and congratulate you and Robert for your efforts on our behalf."

15. On September 19, 1990, we were pleased to learn that the complete Griswold Reunion Mailing List, as published in Volume I, Number 5 of the GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER is being used actively by members of the family. Patricia C. Lawrence wrote to Donald Powell the following note: "... Thank you for the up-dated listing. Have now learned where Bea Spangenberg (nee Arnold) is--which makes this a really handy reference..."

16. On September 10, 1990, Dorothy C. Hornbeck sent in a donation to the Reunion and expressed her appreciation on receiving the GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER. She also reported a new address for Kenneth Johnson (10508 West 56th Street, Shawnee, KS 66203) and reported the death of Connie Cooley Johnson on June 21, 1990. Connie was the daughter of Florence Curtis Cooley.

17. In her letter to Donald and Robert Powell of October 24, 1990, Alice Curtis Lund reported the following on her garden in Pomona Park, FL: "... Guess the hurricane left more water in Penna. than here, we had a nice shower but no extra. It's dry again. My Florida garden is small, in a bed with flaps to put down to keep it warm. There's some lettuce, three tomato plants, three cucumbers. Flowers are some petunias, pinks and mums. When glad bulbs are on sale, there will be some of them, too. Roses are pretty dilapidated but some trying to bloom. Mowing isn't the chore here as up there, grass creeps along the ground, too discouraged to grow. It is so low the mover can't catch it, only gets a weed now and then..."

REPORT ON THE COLLECTION FROM THE TREASURER

Donald W. Powell: "Not counting the checks in the mail, just what we got her in this room this afternoon, including some $20 bills, we have a total of $75.74. Thank you very much. That's grand."

* * *

Gertrude Snyder: "Mr. President, I'd like to thank Donald and Robert Powell for all the work that they do in getting all this material together. I think they deserve a lot of credit." The Powell brothers were then given a round of applause by the Griswold Reunion.

SRP: "One of the things that the national family organization, the Griswold Family Association of America, does is produce hard cover volumes of the family's history, such as this one, Volume VII of Griswold Family: England and America, published in 1983. This happens to be Copy No. 20 of this Volume. When this volume was being prepared, by the Griswold genealogists, Robert and Esther French, I sent to them a copy of Volume II, Number 2 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, in which all of the known descendants, at that time, 1981, of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden of Clinton Township, Wayne County, PA, are listed. And so all of the material in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA is either listed or referenced in Volume VII of Griswold Family: England and America."

One of the things that Robert and Esther French did not do was list the records of the female line of the daughters of the Griswolds beyond the daughters of mothers born with the name Griswold, even when such information was available. Personally, I strongly object to the exclusion of the female lines from this or any other family history.

In reading the February 1990 BULLETIN (No.90) of the Griswold Family Association of America, I was very pleased to read, on page 3 in the minutes of the Annual Meeting in Groton, Connecticut on October 7, 1989, the following paragraph:

'Esther French reported that she has often been asked why the records of the female line of the daughters of the Griswolds are not carried out beyond the daughters of mothers born with the name Griswold. She explained that to do so would create records and books that were too long. This sparked a lively discussion of the supporters of keeping records of the female line. Maxine Bullard, a new participant who had come to the Annual Meeting because of the advertisement Richard had placed in Yankee Magazine recounted the influence that her grandfather Griswold had had in her life. Bonnie Griswold, the mother of three daughters, reported that her studies seem to indicate that Griswolds are more likely to produce daughters than sons. Finally a motion was made, seconded, and passed that a committee, consisting of Joanna Brunso, Virginia Lake, and the Registrar, Andrew Pikosky, be appointed to investigate how the records of the female line could be included and/or published and to report back to the members at the next GFA Annual Meeting.'

On May 21, 1990, I wrote to Brunso, Lake and Pikosky and congratulated them on behalf of their efforts on behalf of the female lines in the published volumes of Griswold history by the GFA. I also volunteered my help and Donald's help to correct the problem. I also invited Brunso, Lake and Pikosky, as well as the officers of the GFA for 1988-1989 to attend our Reunion here today in Clinton Township. On July 29, 1990, Betty Young, Regional Vice President, GFA West Coast Chapter, wrote me as follows:

'Thank you for your invitation to your Griswold Reunion. I had heard there was a family branch in PA, but am curious as to where you obtained my name and address.

Sorry I can't make it this year since we were already committed to a fall foliage tour of the New England states and attending the Reunion of the Griswold Family Assn. of America in Clinton, CT, on Oct. 5-7. Will take a rain check, however, and would like to invite you to come to ours.

I am a 11th generation descendant from Edward Griswold who settled in Windsor, CT, in 1639. My father being 10th in direct all male lineage. Is your John G. descended from Edward or his brothers Francis or Matthew?

Our GFA genealogists have recently printed the 8th volume of Griswold genealogy, and I would be happy to put you in touch with them.

Would you please send me information about your family branch. I've been working on my own family genealogy as a hobby since our children have been grown. It really is interesting to me and I have recruited new members into the GFA from the west coast areas for the last ten years.

Perhaps in the future our groups could consolidate the Reunions. It would be a big undertaking, however, and take a lot of planning.

I will be looking forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Betty Young, nee Griswold.'

SRP: "Can you imagine how difficult it would be to work out a joint reunion!"

Francis Curtis III: "How about Iowa."

SRP: "Yes, that's it. We'll have Francis Curtis drive us out in a bus."

On August 19, 1990, SRP received a reply to Andrew Clark Pikosky, one of the people to whom he wrote on this matter of the female lines, as follows:

'Thank you for your letter regarding Griswold female lines and your experiences therewith.

Having recently received notice of your Griswold Reunion, held yesterday at Waymart and Curtis Valley, PA, I was reminded, once again, of your thoughts on this subject.

Perhaps I did write you already, but in the event I failed to do so, I do want to express my sympathy to you. Female lines, in any family, are always a problem, but you might have felt pleased to have had several of the Griswolds who come down, like I do, through a Griswold mother, grandmother, etc. express their thoughts on the subject at the Spring Board meeting. Even I was surprised. In fact, they did such an excellent job, I could only agree. There was no need to do anything.

Right now the GFA is in the midst of a new publishing project, a revised first 5 generations, an ambitious job, which hopefully will be done in the Fall.

The 'professional genealogist' which the GFA engaged for some 30+ years was quite dead set against Female Lines, which historically is doubtless the reason one or more of the several 'catch all' volumes never included any. In some of the families this is done, when someone on a branch happens to be an active member and/or a genealogist. If it isn't too long, a footnote is used. These footnotes often run on half page and more. D. L. Jacobus often used this style of footnote, by the way. So, there is an excellent precedent. The Merwin family volumes, printed and edited by the Connecticut Historical Society often threw in a brief female line, as for myself.

At best, it is a delicate subject, but based on recent comments, I would feel it is a very distinct possibility, but not this year or next. Providing everything holds together, and the mid-East crisis doesn't escalate, two years hence might be a timetable to start such a volume.

However, the fund raising side presents quite another hurdle. How well the revised new volumes will go is still not definite. Libraries may buy it, but by no means all. Actually very few libraries bother with genealogies. Most, but not all, will accept one if it's given to them.

I was favorably impressed by the simple reunion get together you people are having.

Today I have just returned from what is an annual reunion for a long gone Methodist Church in North Goshen. It was a busy three hours for the 40+ people who came. A UCC minister conducted some of the service. Descendants and connections provide a lively time of conversation. This year the Halls dominated the event, since A. Hall's house was opened for a reception following the service, by the present owners of the house. I have both a Hall connection, as well as a bona fide Hall line. But it does show how small the world can be at times.

Hopefully, we can keep in contact with you people down in Pennsylvania.

Best Regards,

Andrew Clark Pikosky'

SRP: "Are there any additional births, marriages, achievements, or deaths to be recorded for this year?"

If there are, please write down the information and make sure that I get it by the end of the Reunion today."

Francis Curtis III: "How are we doing about officers. Do we need to elect officers?"

SRP: "No, we're alright this year because we elected last year."

Francis Curtis III: "That's what you told me last year."

SRP: "I know, but I didn't think you'd remember!"

Francis Curtis III: "Does anyone have any other contributions to the Reunion?"

SRP: "Alice, tell us about your garden."

Alice Curtis Lund: "It's bad. It's about the worst year ever. I have a problem down there (Florida) because the state runs salt water and it comes down on my garden. Up here in Seelyville, I have had problems with raccoons and deer. I couldn't keep them out of the garden. I tried everything that everybody told me and nothing worked. Finally I had heard that they were afraid of lights, particularly a kerosene light, because it had an odor. Well, I used that, but it was messy. So, then I got Christmas lights, the blinking ones, and the coons and the deer both stay away."

SRP: "So, if you drive through Seelyville some night and see Christmas lights in the garden, you'll know who's house your passing."

Alice Curtis Lund: "And now my neighbors are starting to use Christmas lights."

Mary Rebernik: "Well, we had a bear right in town, Vandling, right in my daughter's yard."

Francis Curtis III: "I want to thank you all for coming. When we get this many here it makes for a very interesting gathering. We'll meet here next year on the third Saturday in August. Now don't run away, Donald is going to take our picture."

And with the taking of the group photograph by Donald W. Powell, the 84th Griswold Reunion was adjourned.

THE LOOMIS FAMILY IN AMERICA

In 1639, Joseph Loomis and his wife, Mary White, and their eight children arrived in America from Braintree, England, and thereby established the Loomis family in America. In 1640, Joseph Loomis built the family homestead at the confluence of the Farmington and Connecticut Rivers, on the campus of what is today the Loomis Chaffee School, Windsor, CT 06095. The 350th anniversary of the Loomis Homestead and the 75th anniversary of the Loomis Institute were celebrated on May 26, 1990.

WHERE DO WE FIT INTO THE GRISWOLD PICTURE?

The Griswolds of Clinton Township, Wayne County, PA are descended from the English Griswolds who were established at Solihull, Warwickshire, England, prior to 1400. It is from Michael Griswold (born in 1597 in England, settled in Wethersfield, CT), one of the five sons of George Griswold of Kenilworth, England, that the Griswolds of Clinton Township are descended. "Our" John Griswold (1754-1843) has been assigned the number 375A by the Griswold historian Glenn E. Griswold. In October 1790, in Sandisfield, MA, John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden (1761-1851) were married. In the winter of 1813-1814, together with their six sons, they came to Clinton Township, Wayne County, PA.

MINUTES OF THE 1993 GRISWOLD REUNION

The 87th reunion of the descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden took place in the Moosic Grange Hall, Waymart, PA, on August 21, 1993. The following persons signed the register: Jane Shaffer, Wendy Kille, Gloria Johnston, Eleanor Rude Alice Curtis Williams, Clarence E. Loomis, Ruth Loomis, Sam and Joan Curtis, John and Amy Rude, Mary and Bill Schermerhorn, Kathryn Forster, Beatrice Bartholomay, Minna Blair, Fred Olver, Marge Schofield, Francis H. Curtis, Judy Blair, Dorothy Olver, Bernice Dolan, Gertrude L. Schaffer, Myrtle W. Curtis, Doris C. Howell, Helen R. Powell, Donald W. Powell and S. Robert Powell.

Following a bountiful covered dish dinner, the business meeting took place. The members of the Griswold family, without any direction from anyone, rearranged the chairs and tables in the hall for the business meeting. The Secretary commented to the President just as the meeting was about to begin that the members of the family are well-disciplined. Francis Curtis remarked: "As most of you know now, we were in England on a bus tour, and I think it's the only group I've ever been with that was always back at the bus when they were supposed to be. So, that must be a trait of the Griswolds. Well organized."

The Secretary reported that the minutes of the GR in 1992 would be published in a forthcoming issue of the GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER. The minutes for 1989 and 1990 are given in Volume I, Number 6 of the GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER, which was published on August 17, 1991. The minutes for 1991 and 1992 will be published as soon as the Secretary can find the time to prepare them. The Secretary also reported that members of the GR who have paid for a "complete descendant list" (which is over 100 pages in length and which is updated annually) in the past couple of years will receive that list as soon as it is available.

President Curtis began the meeting by asking that all present introduce themselves to the group. The annual "superlatives" were then established:

Oldest member present: Fred Olver, age 91 1/2
(Other "senior" family members present: Myrtle Curtis, 91; Beatrice Bartholomay, 90; Minna Blair, 88; Alice Curtis Williams, 86; and Helen R. Powell, 80.)

The six oldest members present were given a warm round of applause by the entire family.

Youngest member present: Wendy Kille, age 23

Traveled the farthest distance to the Reunion: Clarence and Ruth Loomis, 250 miles. (Also, Judy Blair, 129 miles)

Traveled the shortest distance to the Reunion: John and Amy Rude, 1.4 miles.

Family with the most members present: the Olver family; also the Loomis family.

Robert Powell reported: "I was sitting in the Poultry Building at the Harford Fair, just yesterday, and this woman came in through the door and I said to myself: 'I know this woman, who is she?' It was Lavange Arnold's daughter, Fay Sosenko. She asked me to convey her greetings to one and all here today."

The Secretary reported that an unusually large number of the 1993 Griswold Reunion announcements were returned to him by the U. S. Postal Service. The announcements returned by the Postal Service were addressed to the following:

Mr. and Mrs. C. Bliss Treat
Noreen Arnold Farrow
Ruth Arnold
Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Spangenburg
Curtis Ewing
Kimberly Salerno
Geraldine Forsberg
Fay Sosenko
Philip Clark Loomis
Mr. and Mrs. Joseph K. Loomis, Jr.
Esther Griswold
Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Besette

The Secretary asked for current addresses, if known, for any or all of the preceding persons.

A list of names of persons who sent back the 1993 Griswold Reunion questionnaire and/or contributions for the Griswold Reunion treasury was then read by the Secretary. Those persons are as follows: Mildred LaBarre, Jerry and Marjorie Cook, Susan Rose, Harold Oliver, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Stiles, Minna Blair, Claude and Geneva Manaton, Esther and Harry Forsberg, Clarence Loomis, Patricia Lawrence, Curtis and Phyllis Brudos, William and Kathryn Forster, Leona Vaughn, Douglas and Helen Blair, Russell and Patricia Peltz.

The Secretary thanked all who returned the questionnaires and/or contributed information for the record.

A "show and tell" then took place. It began with a presentation of photographs of Fort Griswold, Groton, CT, by Clarence Loomis, who pointed out that the fort was named after the first Lieutenant Governor of Connecticut. Colonel Ledyard was in command of the fort at the time of a British attack. Colonel Ledyard had to surrender and he turned his sword over to the major who was the head of the British contingent and instead of taking the sword, the major stuck the sword through Colonel Ledyard. A pamphlet on Fort Griswold was passed around the room. Two photographs of the historical marker in the town of Griswold, Connecticut, were also placed on the table for the group to look at. These two photographs of the Griswold historical marker in Griswold, Connecticut, were sent to the GR on 10-27-1990 by Clarence Loomis.

John Rude then spoke on the silk ribbons that were placed on the table for all to see. "I told the story last year about how Mr. Norton raised pigs, and every year he'd take them to the Wayne County Fair, and then to Chicago and then to Saint Louis. This fellow's grandfather (i.e., Francis Curtis' grandfather) and Uncle Will went with them. And I said I would bring those ribbons out if I could find them. Well, I found them about a month ago, and so I brought them along. They are silk ribbons from 1885. The one from the Saint Louis Fair is a blue ribbon, and the other is a red ribbon (second premium), awarded at the Illinois State Fair, Chicago, 1885."

Sam and Joan Curtis and Francis and Ann Curtis returned from a trip to England on August 19th, the day before the Griswold Reunion, and they brought with them many things for the group to see. Francis Curtis: "We went on the Griswold Family Association of America Heritage Tour No. 3. We went back to where the Griswolds originated in England, which is basically in the town of Solihull and vicinity, and visited a number of places associated with Griswold beginnings. One of the more interesting parts of the story was when we went to the Badsley-Clinton (?) Manor. It has a moat and is a fortified manor. During the reign of Henry VIII, when he changed the church to the Anglican church, one of our forebears was reluctant to join the church and was captured at this manor in Badsley-Clinton and was burned at the stake. There is a picture of him at a convent that we went to, which was also an interesting experience in itself. We got to go in and to meet the sisters there and they were very anxious to talk to us. We had quite an enjoyable time."

Sam Curtis added: "One of the things that you people haven't gotten a hold of is "Our Griswold Family in England before 1639." I guess our ancestors came to this country before 1640. This book is available. This is the second edition. While we were there, a gentleman by the name of Bob Crates (?)

is seeking out information to add to this particular history. This book is available. This is Francis' copy. Another thing that was kind of exciting was a tea party on Sunday afternoon at a home at Solihull that they opened for us. The current owner had gotten the will that had been written by William Griswold. It was done the 30th of July, 1614. There a couple of interesting pieces to it. It starts out: 'The will and testament of William Greswolde...' He goes through the opening statement and then goes on to say 'I, William Greyswolde....' Then he names his children in the article. He names Richard Greswold, and then later on he names a daughter, Dorothy Greswolde. So Griswold is spelled three different ways in this one will. And then when he signs it, it is William Greswold. So, he writes his own name three different ways."

Francis Curtis: "In fact, one of the things that we found is that seemed to be very common in England at that time, to not necessarily spell your name in the same way."

Sam Curtis: "The will gives an inventory of all his goods, and a value of them. It's kind of interesting as goes on: two beds, two blankets, two pillows, two bolsters.. all sorts of wooden ware... Two 2-year old heifers, 4 yearlings, 5 weaned calves, 2 mares, 25 sheep, 2 hogs, one day's work of rye, 5 days' work of oats and barley... and so forth. This is a very interesting will."

Francis Curtis: "Doesn't it tell his value?"

Joan Curtis: "It says in there that he was worth about 70 pounds. Somebody put that on a computer just recently to figure out what 70 pounds would be worth today, and it was over a million dollars."

Sam Curtis: "We visited a lot of churches and cathedrals and three in particular had connections to the Griswold family. We visited a Yardley (?) church that dates back to the 11th century. There is a Griswold that was the rector of that church at one point in time. We visited Saint Alphege in Solihull. We went to church there. It's an Anglican church. One Griswold was chaplain here, and a number of Griswolds are buried here. A coat of arms of the Griswold family is in a window there. And also the Griswold burial tapestry is hung in that church in Solihull. That church dates back to 920 A.D. Interestingly enough, in that church there was a gentleman by the name of Charles Curtis. He was rector from 1589 to 1639. A third church, reputed to be one of the oldest in England, is this one, Saint Peter's Church in Wooten Woven in Warwickshire, and we have some material on that particular church. We spent about 10 days in England, half of that time visiting places of interest to the Griswolds."

Francis Curtis: "We might mention that our group made the newspaper. Instead of inviting a celebrity to their money-raising carnival to repair the church, they had a visiting Griswold family group as their celebrities. They had a newspaper photographer there to take our picture... The area of England that the Griswolds came from is right near Birmingham, and the Griswolds came from this little area just south of Birmingham. It's called the Forest of Arden. That's the Shakespeare area. Stratford-on-Avon is in there and Shakespeare talks about the Forest of Arden in some of his plays. We flew into London. We did stop in Shannon, Ireland, for a half hour, so I can now say that I went to Ireland. They had to take a person off the plane who had a heart attack. We came into London. Spent some time at Windsor Castle outside London. Went to the Birmingham area for several days and then went to the mountains of northern England, the Lakes District, which is a beautiful spot. Then back down to Birmingham again. Passed through the old walled city of Chester. The Roman wall is still there. We walked around that wall, saw an amphitheatre where they had their usual Roman sporting events. Interestingly enough, the amphitheatre there was completely buried, and they were digging to put an extension on a convent there and they found this old Roman wall and dug and found the old amphitheatre. We then came down through what is called the Cotswolds on our way back to London. Everywhere you looked, there were sheep in the fields. It's a rolling hills area of England. In London, we went to a play, went to more castles, visited the Tower of London, Westminster Abbey. If you have any questions or want to look at any of our pamphlets, please do. We've only been back about 24 hours, so we don't have pictures yet. Maybe next year we'll have some pictures to show you. There were 23 people on the tour. We saw this tour talked about in the GFA NEWSLETTER, got immediately interested in it, called these people in Wethersfield, CT. I went to the meeting in Vermont. They only had 16 for the tour and they didn't think that they could afford to run it unless they had 20, so I raised my hand and I said 'I'll get you 4 people' and they said, well, OK, then we'll go. The thing that surprised me at the meeting in Bennington is that I walked into the room and the people introduced themselves. They had a few more there than we have, by the way. The first one so-and-so Griswold, the second one, so-and-so Griswold, and so on. I began to think that the room was full of only Griswolds. But there were others. But at first it appeared like they all had the last name Griswold. In Clinton Township we don't have anybody with that last name any more."

Question from the floor: "Do they have this tour every year?"

Francis Curtis: "They have them about every six years. 1981, 1987, and then two years ago they were going to go, but then that was the year of the Gulf war and the trip was postponed."

Clarence Loomis: "I started out in the military with a captain whose first name was Griswold."

Sam Curtis: "One of the people on the trip with us, Dr. Brown, is the gentleman who invented the microwave oven. His wife was a Griswold."

The Secretary asked Francis Curtis if he would make a xerox copy of "The Griswolds before 1639" for the Griswold Reunion files. Francis Curtis said that the book was available from Wethersfield, but offered to make a xerox copy for the GR archives here in Clinton Township.

Francis Curtis: "I might also mention that we had a tour guide from England by the name of Harry Dance. We also had a bus driver who became our second tour guide, because it seemed that anything that Harry didn't know this bus driver would pipe right up and give the answer. He became the expert on anything that had to do with farming, agriculture or the countryside because he seemed to be much more closely associated with that than our tour guide. But they were both interesting people and we had a great time. Our bus driver was a phenomenal driver. He went places that I wouldn't go with a car."

Sam Curtis: "In the Lakes District there was a two-lane highway. Their lanes aren't as wide as ours and they have about 5-foot stone walls right up to the edge of the road on each side, and he took us through there right up to the walls."

Francis Curtis: "There was a line down the middle of the road, but I got to the point where I figured why did they bother because if you were on one side of the road, you lapped over onto the other side anyway, there wasn't enough room for the whole bus on one side of the line. We were in great hands and had a great time."

Joan Curtis: "On our way down through the Cotswolds, I had talked to the driver and told him that we are United Methodists. He told us one story about John Wesley. John Wesley and a friend of his were at Oxford together and after they graduated, the friend got the vicarage at Stanton and John Wesley visited him frequently and had preached there. Apparently John Wesley had fallen in love with the guy's sister but they didn't marry because Wesley went on to found the church. So he took us to Stanton to see this church. Harry said to Fred: 'You won't be able to take the coach in here because there's no way to turn around. So Fred backed in. That was the only place that we stopped with any Wesley connection to it at all. One of the other funny comments that was made: the lectern was really beat up, something like 800 years old; it was beat up especially around the corners. Somebody said that that must have been from Wesley's preaching because no Anglican would have gotten that excited."

John Rude: "Last year, Amy and I took a trip over to England, and we went to Scotland. We went up from one side of the mountain to the other on the bus and the road was one lane wide, and walled on both sides. About every half mile, there was a place where, if you saw somebody coming, you pulled off if you got there first so that the other one could go through. Our bus driver was telling us that on her earlier days of these tours they had to cross very steep bridges over the creeks. With the busses that we used to have, everybody had to get off the bus and walk across because the bus would drag in the middle of the bridge. We went around the corner and there were about a thousand sheep in the road. On the other side of the sheep, there was the bus, and there were the people walking over the bridge. But she said that our bus is higher built, a shorter wheel base so it gets over. We went over the bridge and you couldn't see the ground in front of the bus."

Joan Curtis: "The thing that I enjoyed as much as anything was the gardens. Absolutely beautiful."

S. Robert Powell: "We have here today some of the Curtis grandchildren from the Curtis Homestead. One of those grandchildren, Alice, has brought with her today not only a painting of the Curtis Homestead that she did but also some memories of the Curtis Homestead and of her grandmother that she would like to tell us about."

Alice Curtis Williams: "I'm going to sit and talk. This is the house on the corner, and this is done from memory. My dad built the white picket fence. The North and South Turnpike, I believe, was cut through in 1812. The Curtis Homestead was built in 1819. It was built by John Griswold, for his son Francis, and it was built for a tavern. The cattle drovers used the North and South for driving their cattle to market, and the water came to the tavern through pump logs and within my memory the pump logs were taken up and new pump logs put in. You had to go through one entire log with an auger. The spring was way up on the mountain so the water came by gravity. The Curtis Homestead became known as the Curtis Homestead. Eliza Banning was Henry B. Curtis' mother, and she was of royal blood. That through the Hamblin line. But the Hamblin line must have been kind of spunky because they had a row with the king and lost all of their property. So we didn't get any of that. This set up here, the Curtis Homestead, became known as the Curtis Homestead when Louisa Griswold (Francis Griswold's daughter) married Henry Banning Curtis, who was the son of Rev. Henry Curtis. The Henry Curtis name goes back way into England, and the present generation is the first generation that doesn't have a Henry Curtis in it. There (pointing to crayon portraits) are Louisa Griswold and Henry Banning Curtis. I was born in 1907 and I remember Grandmother, who died in 1913. The Powells come through the same line, through Laura Griswold, who was Louisa Griswold's sister. This set up in the valley was entirely self-sufficient. Back up on the place that Uncle Arthur had, there was a dam, and that dam furnished water for the water wheel that ground the grain and did the heavy work. Down by the house, right in back of the house on the hill, there was another water wheel which Grandmother used for her small work. Louisa Griswold Curtis had 11 children. She raised nine. She did the gardening, she made butter. I still have in my possession, someplace, a butter ladle that has the print of Grandmother's thumb in it, she made so much butter. She used to weave rugs by the yard. She planted flax, she wove it into linens for the family. Understand there were nine children growing up. She was a remarkable woman. I have, it's in Florida, a small piece of linen that she wove. It's a very small piece. The door on the North and South opens into a small hall. To the left is the parlor, to the right is what was the sitting room, but that was the bar room of the tavern in the old days. The small bedroom, the dining room and a room off the kitchen, a large room with only one window--I don't know what they used that room for, probably for an extra bed. And in the back of that room was the clothes press. This was a dark room where they kept all of their clothing, so the moths didn't get into it. Then away from the dining room was the kitchen, and that kitchen is pretty near as big as my house, it's a big kitchen. It has a door opening on the Forest City road, a door opening to the West, a door opening to the South. The door that opened to the South, right outside the window in the kitchen, that door opened to Grandmother's flower garden. All along the South of the house, that's this side, she had another narrow flower bed, and in the middle of that she had a huge red peony. I can remember that red peony as if it was yesterday. Going out of the West door of the kitchen, you went into the summer kitchen. From the summer kitchen you went into the wood house. That has been torn down, that isn't there anymore. From that door there was a flagstone walk to the brook. And they had a flush toilet. It was built out over the brook. That was stopped not too long after but that was the way it was built. It was moved up on the hill right behind the house. To the left of the flagstone walk was the grainery. To the right, raised a little, was Grandmother's work room where she had the water wheel for the power. They didn't need electricity but in the early 1900's, my dad hooked up electricity. The water came from the pond behind Uncle Arthur's house, and they had their own unit. Our house was wired, Uncle Arthur's house was wired. But I'm not sure that the Curtis Homestead was. I don't remember seeing the wires, but I remember seeing them in our house. Grandmother had a big garden. I don't know how she did so much. Ask me some questions now."

Robert Powell: "I'd like to expand on what you said when you connected the Powells to the Griswolds and the Curtises. The Walter Rude family and the Loomis families are connected to the same tree. The Powells go back to Theron Loomis. Laura Loomis Rude and Herbert Loomis, the father of Clarence Loomis, and their brothers and sisters go back to Francis Earl Loomis. Theron and Francis were sons of Laura Griswold and Hiram Pease Loomis. Laura Griswold was the sister of Louisa Griswold Curtis. So, there are lots of us in the room today who connect up to the same pioneer settlers."

Alice Curtis Williams: "It's the same stem of the tree. The barn here that the drovers used was right on the corner. The second building back was the pig house, and they always, when Grandmother was living, had turkeys, and those turkeys, you'd get around them and they seemed like they were as big as a house."

Francis Curtis: "I heard at one time that they also at one time drove turkeys over the turnpike."

Alice Curtis Williams: "Possibly so, and in the background, to the right is the apple orchard, and Elizabeth Jones tells me that her father worked for Louisa and Henry Curtis for 20 years, and in that orchard they picked steady for three weeks. The apples were packed in barrels and shipped that way. For three weeks steady they picked apples. The chimney in the house went all the way down to the basement of the house. There were three fireplaces on the first floor, one in the tavern room, one in the dining room, and one in the parlor. Upstairs there were two fireplaces in the bedrooms. There were four bedrooms and a huge hall that they could put a bed in if they had extra people. In this chimney, on the inside of it, they had the shelves for the canned food."

Donald Powell: "Didn't your Grandmother gather plants and herbs and make medications. I think Edith Gardner used to tell us about that."

Alice Curtis Williams: "Grandmother had an herb book. It would up over on the Ridge Farm. It was in the cupboard there the last I saw it."

John Rude: "I can't tell you where it is now. I haven't seen it."

Alice Curtis Williams: "They raised on that farm everything that they used. The second building, down by the turkey in the painting, that was the pig pen. And in the upstairs of the pig pen is where the turkeys were put in at night. They had to put them in because of the wolves and the wild dogs, and so forth. And then the next building was the carriage house. And the one in the background, that was the milkhouse to the farm. Any questions?"

Female voice: "When did you paint this?"

Alice Curtis Williams: "It's some few years ago. I did it from memory."

John Rude: "They did have electricity in the corner house, the Curtis Homestead. My dad told me that at exactly 9 o'clock at night that Uncle Arthur would go out on his porch, where he had a rope, and he would pull on the rope. The rope went up to the thing and diverted the water away from the generator, and the lights were out in three houses."

Alice Curtis Williams: "The generator was in Uncle Arthur's house. They did have electricity, but they didn't need it because they had the water wheel that did all the heavy work. In my memory, my dad went to New Milford to run the electric plant over there. They had a dam and the flume down. He had to stay there nights. He had a bed, but he wasn't supposed to sleep. He was supposed to be there and take care of the electric. And Dwight Rude, John's father, and my brother, Henry, walked over to New Milford one time."

John Rude: "Dad had showed me where that house was."

Alice Curtis Williams: "We went back and I could pick out where the house was. That was the first time that I ever knew that there was such a thing as a spiral staircase, it was in that house. I was 5 years old at the time."

Male voice from the floor: "Where was that house?"

John Rude: "You get on Route 81, and you start going towards Binghamton from New Milford. There's a road that goes up through underneath. The house is just up that road."

Alice Curtis Williams: "We went over, after we got a car, and the building was all gone, but the bed was there yet. We drove the team, Louise, my mother, and I, drove the team 25 miles over to visit my dad when he was there. That was around 1912, and there was electricity over in New Milford at that time, but before that we had electric in our house."

John Rude: "Dad used to tell that any of the hemlock trees, the big logs, were split and Great Grandfather Curtis would split out of those shingles, and any day that he couldn't work outside, he had his shed, I don't know which one of these buildings it was, where he had it set up with the draw/shave so that he could make shingles, because it was a continual process of keeping enough shingles to keep all the buildings from leaking."

Robert Powell: "That must have been quite an innovation, that generator. There couldn't have been many places with a private generator."

Alice Curtis Williams: "I think ours was the first electricity."

John Rude: "Her (Alice's) father was about the handiest guy that ever came down the pike. If George Curtis couldn't fix it, it was un-fixable."

Alice Curtis Williams: "Well, he rigged up the electric and the generator and all. Back up in there, I don't know if there's any of them left, but there was about 20 acres of virgin timber up in there yet. But I understand that most of those trees have rotted and fallen. But there was 20 acres of virgin timber there when they first came in here. Now, any more questions?"

(Warm round of applause for Alice in appreciation of her account of the early days of the Curtis Homestead.)

Francis Curtis: "Anything else that anyone has?"

Judy Blair: "I have a brief item. It's a discovery for me, but it may not have been for many of you. I was reading in the Griswold genealogy. Several times it's mentioned, the town of Norwich, MA. I believe Francis Griswold was born there in 1793 and the fourth John Griswold lived there and was considered a prominent citizen and died there. And the John Griswold to whom we are related, who came to Wayne County, was born there. Anyway, my point is, I tried to find Norwich, MA, on the map and it doesn't exist, and I had a friend of mine do some research and if anyone in our family would ever want to look up the Griswold line from Norwich, MA, it's now called Huntington. It was originally Merrifield (?), from 1773 to 1853 it was called Norwich, and when they annexed more lands, they named it Huntington. It's in Southwest Massachusetts."

Alice Curtis Williams: "The Griswold family and the Loomis family had been combined before. Francis Griswold's wife was Jane Loomis, but I never connected the present day Loomises with her."

Francis Curtis: "One of the things that interested me from this other Griswold group (the Griswold Family Association of America) is that there were on the trip that we took Griswolds from the same territory that our Griswolds came from."

Sam Curtis: "Apparently four Griswold brothers came to this country, and they have gotten a lot of information on three of them in England, but they can't seem to find much on this fellow Michael Griswold, and apparently we're associated with Michael Griswold. There was a Francis Griswold, an Edward Griswold, a Matthew Griswold, and a Michael Griswold. but they don't have anything on Michael, which is apparently the Griswold that we're related back to. Bob French and his family were hunting for more information in England on this trip about that relationship. I'm not sure they found much."

Francis Curtis: "There's some speculation that they may be half-brothers or even cousins, but not full brothers."

Fred Olver: "My brother, Harold, will be 100 years old on September 24th."

(Everyone present signed a birthday card to be sent to Harold Olver in Florida.)

Francis Curtis: "As a result of our being connected with the Griswold Family Association of America, I went to their meeting in Bennington last Fall to try to assure an opportunity to go to England, and they came out of their Board of Directors' meeting. The President was here in Clinton Township in 1991. He greeted me and said: we have an opening on our Board of Directors, would you like to serve? I declined. I didn't say that I wouldn't do it, but I guess I said that I deferred, because my feelings at the time were that if this group is to be represented, and that was his idea, that our representative should either be Donald or Robert Powell. I did not give him an answer. As I say, I deferred an answer. I talked to both these gentlemen about this. We do have an opportunity to be represented on the Board of Directors of the Griswold Family Association of America, and I would like to hear what you have to say about it."

John Rude: "I think that we should be on that Board of Directors and I think that you would be a good person to be our representative. I vote, I nominate you to serve on that Board."

Clarence Loomis: "I'll second that nomination."

John Rude: "All in favor say aye."

(A resounding "aye" came from the group in the Moosic Grange Hall.)

Francis Curtis: "Thank you. But I do want to say that I think that Donald or Robert would be good on that Board of Directors."

Donald Powell: "Thank you. But Robert and I both agree with John Rude, that you should be our representative."

Francis Curtis: "Well, in that case, I will accept. But I will still say that in terms of the amount of work that is done for this organization that either one of these two gentlemen deserve to represent us on the Board of Directors of the GFA."

Robert Powell: "Thank you. Donald and I do a lot of work here, yes, but the work that you will do for us as a group there is equally important. It's wonderful that you are willing and able to do that. It just broadens our base. I think we've made the right decision. (Applause.) In that same regard, Donald Griswold wrote to me following their visit here, saying: 'It was very heartwarming to have visited with you last August. The welcome that we received will always be remembered and cherished. Unfortunately I can not attend this year....' And then in March of this year he wrote and raised the proposal that Francis has just mentioned; 'I would propose that your organization be represented on our Board of Directors, that is, have a voice in our organization, be in on all policy goals, moneys, and above all a liaison with what's best for you in the realm of genealogy, computer accessing and publications, as well as co-fraternity matters.' He proposed that and described the visit that Francis had made, and brought up the proposal that we have just voted on. One of the most exciting things that have come out of that visit that we had with these national officers here a couple of years ago is another proposal that was made by Don Griswold to Francis at that meeting in Bennington and subsequently communicated to me by means of a letter. Francis, tell us what that was."

Francis Curtis: "OK. The next proposal made by these people, the officers of the Griswold Family Association of America, is that they would like us to host the GFA Reunion in 1996. They would like to have us host it here, and to take a look at the Griswolds in this area. They have a one-day meeting one year and then a three-day meeting the next one. As I understand it, this would be one of their three-day meetings. They would like to use Sunday, for example, to go to the Clinton Centre Baptist Church. They would like to see any of the sights that we can show them connected to the Griswold family in the area, plus any other particularly interesting sights that we might come up with. In Bennington they had a tour of the town and all of the historic sights whether or not they are connected to the Griswolds. So we're not just limited to having them see just Griswold sights. I think that very definitely that if we agree that we will do this that we should show them the Clinton Center Cemetery."

Judy Blair: "Yes, there are many things that would be interesting for them to see. The people who live at the Griswold farm would very likely provide a welcome."

Joan Curtis: "In England we visited the William Griswold home, that is now owned by people who didn't know that William Griswold had lived there until someone told them he did. They welcomed us in. We had a very nice tea party in the back yard. Someone on the trip asked me whether or not we know where the Griswold homestead here was. Of course, not being a Griswold, I didn't know."

Francis Curtis: "So what does the group think about the proposal to hold the 1996 GFA reunion here in Clinton Township?"

Alice Curtis Williams: "I think it would be great."

Francis Curtis: "So do I."

(A chorus of "so do I's" came from the group.)

John Rude: "I think so too. We would open our house to several couples."

Dorothy Olver: "How many people would it involve?"

Francis Curtis: "I asked him that and he said from 60 to 100."

John Rude: "Here two years ago, we had Amy's family reunion at Ridge Farm and we were able to obtain a building at the Salvation Army in Waymart and they rented the whole building and the price is very reasonable. They have to know ahead of time."

Joan Curtis: "What they often do is they have their lunch at some local church where they can help out that local congregation with a donation and they usually have a dinner, a banquet type arrangement, usually at the hotel where they are staying. And they also like to have some tours around the area that might show other things, and we immediately thought of the Stourbridge Lion trip over to Lackawaxen on a Saturday afternoon."

Robert Powell: "In his letter to me, Donald Griswold said that the three-day reunion would be in this format: Friday evening executive meeting; Saturday would be registration, meeting, luncheon, programs, sight seeing tours; Sunday, church services, luncheon and departure. That's a tentative outline. When I received Donald Griswold's letter, I immediately contacted a few Griswolds in the local area and all agreed that the proposed 3-day GFA reunion in 1996 in northeastern Pennsylvania was a wonderful idea. So I immediately wrote back and told Donald Griswold that the Northeastern Pennsylvania Griswold Reunion (1) would be honored to elect a representative to serve on the Board of Directors of the GFA, and (2) would be pleased to host the 1996 GFA three-day reunion. In my letter to Donald Griswold I stated that my "yes" to both of his proposals (elect a member to serve on the GFA Board of Directors, hold 1996 3-day reunion here) was tentative and that the Northeastern Pennsylvania Griswold Reunion, as a whole, would have to officially take action on both proposals at its 1993 reunion. Donald Griswold then invited me to attend the April 17th Executive Committee meeting in Plainfield, NJ. I was unable to attend. On May 2nd, he wrote again, saying: '... the idea of a joint Annual Meeting/Reunion in 1996 was met with approbation; if not 'new territory,' Clinton and environs sounds great to all at our meeting. So we have lots to look forward to, a three-day affair, and hopefully August and/or Oct. date can be selected by committee and Board of Directors of both organizations in future.'

Francis Curtis: "Yes, that raises the question. Do we have our Clinton Center reunion in August and then host the GFA 3-day event in October?"

(A group discussion of that question took place. It was agreed by the group that we should hold our August reunion as usual and then host the 3-day event in October.)

Francis Curtis: "Do I hear a motion, then, that the Northeastern Pennsylvania Griswold Reunion host the 3-day Annual Meeting/Reunion of the Griswold Family Association of America in October 1996?"

Kathryn Forster: "Yes, I'll make that a motion."

Jane Shaffer: "I'll second the motion."

(The group voted unanimously in favor of the motion.)

Francis Curtis: "What we should do right now is to set up a Planning Committee to figure out just what we have to do to host the 3-day GFA reunion."

(Francis Curtis, as our liaison with the GFA, agreed to chair the planning committee. The following people volunteered to serve on the planning committee: John and Amy Rude, Judy Blair, Kathryn Forster, Sam and Joan Curtis. Francis Curtis said that he would telephone Donald Griswold and tell him (1) that he (Francis Curtis) had been officially elected, at the Reunion on August 21st, to serve as the representative from the Northeastern Pennsylvania Griswold Reunion on the Board of Directors of the Griswold Family Association of America, and (2) that the Northeastern Pennsylvania Griswold Reunion had unanimously voted, at its reunion on August 21, 1993, to host, in northeastern Pennsylvania, the 3-day 1996 GFA Annual Meeting/Reunion in October 1996. Francis Curtis asked the members of the newly formed Planning Committee to meet with him following the August 21st reunion and said that the members of that committee, if possible, should plan to attend the October 9, 1993 meeting of the GFA in Wethersfield, CT.)

Robert Powell: "Can you imagine how pleased, may I say, those Griswolds who met here in Clinton Township on March 22, 1906, and decided to hold a Griswold Reunion, would be to know that we are going to sponsor the national meeting of the Griswold Family Association of America here in Clinton Township in 1996."

(With no further business to conduct, the Northeastern Pennsylvania Griswold Reunion adjourned, to meet again on August 20, 1994, in the Moosic Grange #1041 on the North and South in Clinton Township.)

Respectfully submitted,

S. Robert Powell
Secretary

Of course you may make copies, or I can send you one if you feel you may have use for it. This copy was made by Ron Ewing, who attended the 1992 Griswold Reunion along with myself. In the February 1994 issue of COUNTRY LIVING--Judge Griswold home built 1785, one of Vermont's oldest homes, was moved to Charlotte, VT, from the Waitsfield, VT area of Bent Hill, and then restored to a beautiful condition. In the current edition of NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC, on the map circa 1830, is shown Fort Griswold on the Thames River near Groton, CT. Hope you all are well and have a fine and successful Clinton Township reunion on August 20, 1994. In a few years, we will try to attend again. Our focus this year for travel will be Europe, primarily Germany, late August thru September. Best wishes on combining with G.F.A. Keep up the good work. Regards, Gary E. Ewing."

GRISWOLD REUNION

December 21, 1993

Dear Griswold cousins:

Very exciting things are happening with regard to the Clinton Township (Wayne County, PA) Griswold Reunion!

At the Spring Executive Meeting of the Griswold Family Association of America (the "national" Griswold association), held on April 17, 1993 in Plainfield, NJ at the home of Mary and Merton Griswold, it was decided that the Griswold Family Association of America ("GFA") and the Clinton Township Griswold Reunion will hold a joint reunion in 1996 in Clinton Township. The joint reunion will be a three-day event: Board of Directors and Executive Committee meeting (Friday); open membership meeting, luncheon, program, sight-seeing tours in Clinton Township and environs (Saturday); church services, luncheon (Sunday). Got any ideas about any aspect of the 3-day joint reunion: meals, tours, programs, etc.

Traditionally, the GFA holds the Fall reunion the first weekend in October, but it can also be held a week or two earlier or later. The specific date of the 1996 joint reunion has not yet been decided on. Got any ideas about when the joint reunion should be held?

Usually about 100 people attend the GFA reunions; usually about 50 to 80 people attend the Clinton Township reunions. We have to decide where the many out of town people will stay: hotels, motels, private homes. We need to have a place where we can hold a meeting of everyone in attendance. Got any ideas about meeting places, accommodations? Can you provide accommodations for some out-of-town cousins?

Who is on the Planning Committee (formed at this year's Griswold Reunion) for the 3-day joint reunion? Our President, Francis H. Curtis III, will chair the committee, which is made up of the following persons: Judy Blair, Sam and Joan Curtis, John and Amy Rude, and Kathryn Forster. If you have any thoughts on any aspect of the 1996 joint reunion, contact a member of the Planning Committee (their addresses are given at the end of this letter) or convey your thoughts to me and I will pass them on to the Planning Committee.

What is the sequence of events that led up to the proposed 1996 joint reunion? Over the years, various Clinton Township Griswolds have attended the GFA Fall reunion (usually in Connecticut) the first weekend in October, and have reported at our August reunions that the GFA reunions are very nice events and that we should all try to attend. On hearing those reports, I said to myself: "Maybe we should all get together?" In the summer of 1991, I decided to play a long shot and invited the officers and directors of the GFA to attend our Clinton Township reunion (the 86th) on August 17, 1991. To the delight and pleasure of all who attended our reunion in 1991, the President of the GFA, Donald Griswold, and his wife, Ruth (Berlin, MD), together with Mr. and Mrs. David Griswold (Hunlock Creek, PA), attended our reunion in the Moosic Grange Hall in Clinton Township. Everyone had a wonderful time.

In March of this year, Donald Griswold contacted our President, Francis Curtis III, and Donald (Treasurer) and me (Secretary) and proposed (1) that we (the Clinton Township Griswold Reunion) elect a representative to serve on the GFA Board of Directors, and (2) that we (the Clinton Township Griswold Reunion) consider the idea of hosting the 1996 GFA Fall reunion in Clinton Township. The officers of the Clinton Township Griswold Reunion welcomed both proposals. At the April 17, 1993, Spring Executive Committee meeting of the GFA in Plainfield, NJ, both proposals were approved by the GFA Board of Directors. At the August 21, 1993 Clinton Township Griswold Reunion, both proposals were approved by the membership. (Motion by John Rude, with a second by Clarence Loomis, to elect Francis Curtis III as our representative on the GFA Board of Directors. The motion carried unanimously. Motion by Kathryn Forster, with a second by Jane Shaffer, that the Clinton Township Griswold host the 1996 GFA Fall Reunion, to be held in Clinton Township. The motion carried unanimously.)

WE ALL HAVE A LOT TO DO TO MAKE THIS 1996 JOINT REUNION A REALITY. The Planning Committee will coordinate all plans and arrangements, but all of us will have to get involved and do our share to make this 3-day joint reunion in 1996 a grand success. All ideas from everyone are welcomed. During this holiday season, start the ball rolling in your corner of the world by talking up the 1996 joint reunion with family members.

As you know, the Clinton Township Griswold Reunion was formally organized on March 22, 1906 (some 25 years before the GFA) by a group of dedicated family members who were very proud of their roots. It warms my heart to imagine how happy those founding members of the organization would be to know (1) that the Clinton Township Griswold Reunion is at present very much alive and well and (2) that in 1996 we will host the Fall Reunion of the Griswold Family Association of America in Clinton Township!

The 1994 Clinton Township Griswold Reunion will take place on the third Saturday in August (the 20th), at the Moosic Grange Hall in Clinton Township. Mark your calendar NOW. See you there.

Merry Christmas and Happy New Year to all from the Clinton Township Griswold Reunion.

Sincerely yours,

S. Robert Powell

FROM THE SECRETARY

These are exciting times for those of us who trace our ancestry to John Griswold (1754-1843) and Elizabeth Crittenden (1761-1851) of Clinton Township, Wayne County. For the first time since 1906 (when the Clinton Township Griswold Reunion was organized), there will be two Griswold Reunions this year.

The first will be our 90th annual reunion, on Saturday, August 17, 1996, in the Moosic Grange Hall in Clinton Township. The second will be the Joint Reunion, which will be a reunion of the Clinton Township Griswolds and the Griswold Family Association of America (the "national" Griswold association). This Joint Reunion will be hosted by us, the Clinton Township Griswolds, at the Bryn Mawr Convention Center in Honesdale, on October 4-5-6, 1996. Details on this Joint Reunion are given in the article on the right side of this page.

This year's Joint Reunion will surely be a memorable occasion. Mark the dates on your calendar now. The help of many people will be required to guarantee the success of the event. Do your share.

Do you know of people who should be on the Griswold Reunion mailing list but who are not? Do you have data (birth dates, death dates, dates of weddings, and so on) to be recorded in the Griswold Reunion's databank? If you do, please send that information to me and I will record it in the Griswold Reunion papers.

A donation form is enclosed. Your financial support of the Griswold Reunion will be much appreciated, especially as we prepare for "the big event" in October.

Following the traditional (and always delicious) covered-dish luncheon, the annual business meeting took place. The meeting was under the direction of the president of the Griswold Reunion, Francis Curtis III.

The meeting began with each member introducing himself to the group and identifying how he/she is connected to the early Griswolds.

During the introductions, Alice Curtis Lund mentioned that her grandparents, Louisa and Henry Curtis, lived in "the Cold Water Tavern at the corner" (now called the Curtis Homestead and owned by Dorothy and George Hornbeck). Karen Hornbeck asked: "They didn't serve alcohol in that tavern, did they?" Alice Lund: "I think so, before the Curtises got there. That cupboard in the living room was where they kept their spirits. It was a tavern. It wasn't built for a home." Karen Hornbeck: "What was the 'cold water' in the name all about?" Donald Powell: "Maybe the cold water was the refrigerator?" Alice Lund: "The cold water came in pump logs from the spring up behind Aunt Kate's house. I remember them changing the pump logs and putting new ones in." Robert Powell: "Maybe they called it the 'cold water' tavern because they had the water running right into the tavern?" Alice Lund: "The pump logs as I remember were about five or six feet long and holes were bored through the length of the log. The second ones, they bought the logs already made. The log pipe came across the brook and right into the kitchen."

When Jacqueline Smith Pieszala introduced herself, she stated that she was descended from Homer Griswold. A discussion then took place as to how many siblings Homer Griswold had. Alice Lund: "There were about six or seven in that family." Jacqueline Pieszala then asked: "What about Olga Griswold Stiles? Was she an only child? If not, how many brothers and sisters did she have?" John Rude: "She had at least two brothers. Her (Olga's) father died and then her mother married a Hutchins and there were other children." Robert Powell: "Homer Griswold married Alzena Van Meter and they had Francis, Charles, Olga (born in 1872 and died in 1966, married Christian Jonathan Stiles, who was born in 1861 and died in 1937). The children of Olga, who married Christian Jonathan Stiles, are Eva, Leah, Ina, William, Charlotte, Edgar, and Donovan." Jacqueline Pieszala: "When we went to the cemetery, there was a Dora who was born to the Stileses, and Lula, a baby."

Donald Powell (pointing to a photograph of Louisa and Laura Griswold): "These girls had four siblings: they are Louis, Alvin, Laura, Louisa, Nathan, Homer." A discussion then took place on the question of the pronunciation of Louisa Griswold's first name. Was it an "S" sound or a "Z" sound? Alice Lund: "Grandma insisted that it be pronounced with a 'Z' sound. Louisa." Karen Hornbeck then asked: "Didn't they (Louisa and Henry Curtis) lose a child down there?" Alice Lund: "They lost two. She bore eleven children."

When Judy Blair introduced herself, she identified herself as a 10th generation descendant of Michael Griswold. Francis Griswold commented: "Michael Griswold is one of the brothers that ties us into the Griswold Family Association of America, and we're going to host that group here next year in October. It was only recently that they became pretty sure that Michael was one of the brothers." John Rude: "That means that my wife and I are committing incest. She's on one side of the Griswolds and I'm on the other side of the Griswolds." Francis Curtis: "We're talking about ancestors here and not incestors." General laughter.

Robert Powell then spoke about the organizational meetings of the Griswold Reunion in 1906. He said, in part: "... This is the 89th time that this reunion is taking place. We're here because of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden. John Griswold was a Revolutionary War soldier, who was born in 1754 and died in 1843. He married Elizabeth Crittenden, who was born in 1761 and died in 1851. In 1920, the descendants of those two people had the Griswold monument erected in the Clinton Center Cemetery. In 1906 there were two meetings of the Griswold Reunion, one on March 22nd (77 people present), and another in August 15, 1906. The first President was John Griswold, the first Vice President was Fred Griswold, the first Secretary was Theron Loomis, and the first Treasurer was Nathan Griswold. At that meeting, they moved and seconded that the annual reunion be the third Wednesday in August here at the Moosic Grange Hall. . ." Robert Powell then read the complete list of the names (and ages) of those persons present at the August 1906 Griswold Reunion and remarked: "How pleased those organizers of this reunion would be to know that we are still meeting and continuing with what they started."

Beatrice Curtis was 3 years old at the first Griswold Reunion and was present, age 92, at the 89th Griswold Reunion in 1995. John Rude's father, Dwight, was present at the first Griswold Reunion and was 7 years old at the time. John Rude: "Today is dad's birthday. If he were alive today, he would be 96."

The annual superlatives were then determined:

1995 SUPERLATIVES

Oldest family member present at Griswold Reunion: Beatrice Bartholomay, 92; also Alice Curtis Lund, 88; Helen Russell Powell, 82. The oldest members of the family were then given a round of applause by the entire family.

It was reported that Harold Olver (not present) will celebrate his 102nd birthday on September 24th!

Youngest family member present: Kelsey Case, 3 1/2.

Family member who traveled the greatest distance to get to the Reunion: Judy Blair traveled 137 miles to get to the Reunion.

Family member who traveled the shortest distance to get to the Reunion: Dorothy Curtis Hornbeck, 1 mile; John Rude, 1.2 miles.

Family with the most members present: Olga Stiles family, 11 persons.

Robert Powell asked Judy Blair for any news that she might have about Harold Olver. Judy replied: "Harold Olver is in reasonably good health. He'll be 102 in September. He does have some problems hearing and seeing. He's living in an assisted living facility where he has someone to look after him. He can go and get his meals. He does talk with Mother occasionally. It's sad that his hearing is bad and he and my Uncle Fred cannot communicate very well. But, yes, he is well. Uncle Fred, who would like to be here today, is in the Lackawanna County Health Care Center and he's making a very nice adjustment. Out of that family, my mother is the youngest. There were four of them: Harold, John, Fred, and Minna. Uncle John is deceased. Mother is 92, Uncle Fred is 95, and Uncle Harold will be 102."

Francis Curtis III: "In my family a lot of things have happened this past year. Since last year's Reunion, I lost my wife, my brother had a stroke, my sister had a triple by-pass, plus my brother's mother-in-law died, and in the next circle there were three deaths too. Any my brother's wife had her knee operated on the day before yesterday."

Jacqueline Pieszala: "Well, our family had happy news. My daughter Christine had a baby boy on July 4th, 1995. His name is Thomas Jefferson Perlee."

All present were asked to sign the attendance register for the day. Robert Powell asked for help from the group in correcting the addresses of some family members whose announcements of today's Reunion were returned by the Post Office.

The Secretary then asked for all reports of births, deaths, marriages, special achievements, and accomplishments to be added to the Griswold Reunion data bank. The Secretary added that the complete list, revised and updated, of the known descendants of John and Elizabeth Griswold would be available by the time of the Joint Reunion in October 1996.

Treasurer's Report By Donald W. Powell

The balance in the treasury as of last year's Reunion, August 4th, was $222.20. Receipts at the Reunion last year were $123.55. Balance in the treasury at the moment, after the expenses of last year's Reunion were deducted, is $244.88. Expenses between last year's Reunion and this year's: $15 for membership in the Griswold Family Association of America, which was paid on February 6th of this year. We also have the $25 fee to the Moosic Grange for the use of the building and grounds here today. Robert has a paid bill of $19.22 for printing of the 2-page announcement of today's Reunion and the mailing labels to mail out same; also $51.20 for postage to mail out 160 announcements of the Reunion. It was regularly moved (John Rude) and seconded (Jane Shaffer) that we pay our bills. The motion carried.

Donald Powell also reported that he had received checks and/or genealogical information from the following persons: Minna Blair, Mary Zollbrecht, Douglas and Helen Blair, Fred and Dorothy Olver, Pat Peltz, Helen Powell, Esther Brown, Gerald and Marjorie Cook, and Ronald C. Ewing.

A collection was then taken to support the expenses of the Griswold Reunion. At the conclusion of the business meeting, Donald Powell reported: "We collected $86.00 in the basket today. Thank you very much. It's a small crowd this year but you've been generous."

Francis Curtis remarked: "We should have elected new officers last year but didn't. We'll do it now. Nominations are now open for the officers of the Griswold Reunion for the next two years."

The following persons were nominated:

President: John Rude

Vice President: Kathy Forster

Treasurer: Donald W. Powell

Secretary: S. Robert Powell

As there was only one person nominated for each position, the President instructed the Secretary to cast a vote in favor of the slate of candidates as nominated. The slate of officers was then declared elected for 1996-1997.

OLD AND NEW BUSINESS

Francis Curtis: "The main item of old and new business is that we, the Clinton Township Griswold Reunion, are hosting next year the annual meeting of the Griswold Family Association of America. It will be October 4, 5, and 6. At this point, it looks like we'll be holding it at the Bryn Mawr Convention Center which is located five miles out of Honesdale on 191."

Kathryn Forster: "We have met with people and we have come to a temporary agreement. They have sent our contract to the GFA. They have secured the date for us. We have a proposed itinerary. On Friday night, October 4th, arrival night, we're talking about a buffet or a pizza party. There is an Executive Board meeting and the speaker slated is Kurt Reed, who will speak on Dorflinger glass. Saturday morning is a continental breakfast and then there is the general membership meeting. Then there is the tour that we have set up. We thought that perhaps we would start with lunch at the Settlers' Inn and from there to the Dorflinger Glass Museum, from there to the Wayne County Historical Society, where they are going to display the artifacts that were donated by Augusta Curtis. From there we go to the Clinton Baptist Church and then to the site of the Griswold homestead. From there, we're going to go to the Curtis Homestead (the "Cold Water Tavern") and from there to the Sherwood Cemetery up in Maple Grove. And then that night, we have not decided on a banquet or a barbecue, and there will be a musical program. If we go with the barbecue, it might be square dancing." Karen Hornbeck added: "There will be Griswold display." Kathryn Forster: "Sunday morning there's a full breakfast for those who have stayed overnight, and those who have not can come for the meals. Donald suggested that we have a service at the Clinton Center Baptist Church for those who are interested in attending."

Francis Curtis: "We've sorta got things in motion. The convention center invited us up for a gourmet meal. They served each one of us something different. Their facilities are fantastic. Ours will be the only group in there. We think he gave us a very good deal, so we decided to present it to the GFA, and the president of that group seemed enthused about it."

Question from the floor:

"Will there be a caravan of cars to get around or will there be buses?" Francis Curtis: "There will be two buses, and he will schedule them for us and he can do that cheaper than we can get them, and Donald will be a tour guide on one bus and Robert on the other. We'd like to get an idea of the names of people who plan to come to the Joint Reunion. If you know today, tell us. If you stay over, there are regular motel rooms or there are cabins where you can stay if you want to. They have facilities for about 90 people in the motel rooms and about 500 if you use the cabins."

Judy Blair: "We may consider doing a mailing prior to the mailing of the announcement of this Griswold Reunion next year to get a rough idea of how many are going to attend. I would be glad to work on that." Robert Powell: "Maybe at Christmas time, the Joint Reunion Committee could send out a Christmas card with a questionnaire in it--will you attend, will you stay overnight, how many people, etc. At that season of the year, families tend to be together. The Joint Reunion could be easily promoted at family gatherings. I can provide the Committee with an updated mailing list for this Clinton Township Griswold Reunion." Judy Blair: "I have a copy of the Griswold crest and I could make up a nice looking questionnaire and send it out." Francis Curtis: "Great."

Francis Curtis: "Maybe we could put together a Griswold ironware exhibit. My brother has quite a collection. Many of us have pieces. There is a room there that is fairly secure and we could put it in there. I think it would also be nice to have pictures of the Griswolds from this area. We should also have some brochures about activities in this area that visitors to this area might want to participate in while they're here. It would also be nice if a fairly large group of us here went to the GFA Reunion this Fall in Old Lyme, Connecticut."

Alice Curtis Lund: "I don't know if there's anything left of it now, but back a few years ago, you could go right up here on the mountain and find the stones of John Griswold's cabin. It was right up here, half way up the mountain. When I was up there, there were stones, but I don't know or not if they're still up there. That would be something to see. When John Griswold first came into this area in 1819, he built a cabin up there. The site of the cabin is now on the property of the late Alex Grunski. The property belongs to Alex's wife Jean now."

Francis Curtis: "We should also visit the Clinton Center Cemetery. Maybe John Rude can make up a map of the Griswold stones there."

Kathryn Forster: "The whole weekend would cost between $120 and $150 for everything, and that's if you stay there. If you don't stay there, all five meals, including the Saturday banquet, would be $25 for an adult and $18 for a child under 10. This is all tentative, understand. It's an affordable place for most of us to go."

Donald Powell: "Let me read this description of the John Griswold cabin from the account of the Pioneer Day in 1920. 'About 1810 or 11, the family [John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden] left their home in Massachusetts. Their first stop was made at Butternut Plains along the Hudson. After spending some time there, they came to what is now known as Niagara, and later they settled on the old Gaylord place in Clinton and began to clear the land. They were informed that this land belonged to someone else, so they moved on and settled on a farm now owned by Mr. Grunski. They reached here 110 years ago. Their log cabin was built at the foot of the mountain where the old road was situated.' Alice Lund: "That was the road that Anthony Wayne brought his army up during the Revolution."

Robert Powell: "Isn't there a gap in the mountain right in here?" John Rude: "There is one road that goes up over the mountain here, and there is a little gap but not much. The next gap is the Lillie gap which goes in south of the Clinton Center church." Robert Powell: "I'll bet the Griswold cabin is near the gap that goes through up here." Alice Curtis Lund: "The gap is up here." Robert Powell: "OK, the cabin is probably not in the gap."

Donald Powell (continuing to read from the 1920 account):

"... The log cabin was built at the foot of the mountain where the old road was situated. They immediately set to work, clearing the land and settling out an orchard. The old road mentioned was the one traveled by General Wayne. Some years later, John Griswold, with the help of his son Sumner, built a new house."

From the floor: "Robert Edwards now lives in the Sumner [Griswold] house. It became the John Griswold house. Now it belongs to Robert Edwards." [The John Griswold in question is the son of Horace and Louisa Griswold. This John Griswold was born in 1842 and died in 1913; he married Ernestine Wilhelmina Bucklish.]

Francis Curtis: "For the Joint Reunion, we ought to have available as much information as possible about the Clinton Township Griswolds. Remember that the Clinton Township group is actually older than the GFA. We've been around longer. We have a lot of things to be proud of. We've followed the lines down through the females, and they've just started doing that recently. The GFA has tied the known genealogy of the American Griswolds with the English beginnings."

Robert Powell: "Francis, would you repeat what you said earlier about the further research that has been done regarding the Michael Griswold line."

Francis Curtis: "The GFA genealogists have satisfied themselves that Michael Griswold is, in fact, the brother of Thomas, Edward, Francis, and Matthew."

Robert Powell: "For the benefit of those of you who might not be familiar with the question we're discussing, let me review some material for you. George Griswold of Kenilworth, England, had five sons: Thomas, Michael, Edward, Francis, and Matthew. Thomas remained in England. The other four came to this country. It is a well-known fact that the Clinton Township Griswolds descend from a Michael Griswold from Wethersfield, Connecticut. Until recently, there was a question as to whether or not our Michael Griswold ancestor from Wethersfield was, in fact, the brother of Thomas, Edward, Francis, and Matthew. What Francis Curtis is reporting to us is that the GFA genealogists have now satisfied themselves that our Michael Griswold is, in fact, the brother of Thomas, Edward, Francis, and Matthew. This is good news, because it ties us directly to the distinguished Griswold family of England. In that same regard, we have here some brochures about the Michael Griswold house in Wethersfield, Connecticut."

Judy Blair: "That's a wonderful thing to see. You can tour the house."

Francis Curtis: "Anything else that we should talk about concerning the Joint Reunion next year?"

Donald Powell: "I think we're lucky to have all the work done by the Joint Reunion Committee that has already done. We're in pretty good shape, I would say. Good job."

Robert Powell: "Is there any need for a petty cash fund for the Joint Reunion Committee's use?"

Kathryn Forster: "I don't think so."

Francis Curtis: "The contract for the place will be signed by the GFA, the payment to hold the place is going to be paid by them, they also have provided an insurance policy."

Robert Powell: "I have here one of the publications of the Griswold Family of America. This is Volume VII. All of the Clinton Township Griswold information that was published in this issue (Volume II, Number 2) of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA on November 19, 1980 is referenced directly in this Volume VII of THE GRISWOLD FAMILY IN ENGLAND AND AMERICA. This is one of the publications that is available from the Griswold Family of America."

Francis Curtis: "Just a reminder. We will hold our regular Clinton Township Griswold Reunion next August 17th. The Joint Reunion will be in October."

Ray Savokinas: "I think it might be nice to have some publicity on this Joint Reunion in the local media. Something like Mike Stevens' "On the Pennsylvania Road." He might mention the Revolutionary War connection on his July 4th program. We might generate more local interest."

Francis Curtis: "Good idea."

Karen Hornbeck: "The canteen that John Griswold carried in the Revolutionary War is in the Wayne County Historical Society."

John Rude: "Yes, it is. It was donated to the Historical Society by my dad."

Mary Zollbrecht: "Olga Stiles did have some cut glass put in there at one time, too."

Donald Powell: "Alice just filled my ear with Louisa Griswold. A remarkable woman. Augusta Curtis was also a remarkable woman. Louisa was Alice's grandmother and Alice knows a great deal about Louisa's eleven children. She knows about the fact that Louisa planted flax, scuthed it, dyed it, wove it, made linen. She was a doctor. She was an oil painter. She was a remarkable woman in lots of ways and I just now suggested to Alice that she tell us about it on the Friday night of the Joint Reunion. Alice is one of the few who knows about it. Alice is a prime candidate for being the program on Friday night. You've all heard Alice speak. She is a very eloquent and profound speaker and she'd be wonderful at this. So let's ask her if she'll do it."

Alice Curtis Lund: "I think these things should be down in history. They didn't have a store to go to. They were really on their own. My dad made an electric plant. We had electricity long before electricity was available."

Robert Powell: "Alice did speak about the Curtis Homestead at the 1993 Griswold Reunion and what she said is in print here in Volume I, Number 7 of the Clinton Township Griswold Reunion NEWSLETTER. I have a few extra copies here if some of you would like them."

Robert Powell: "The Moosic Grange is coming quite alive again. There has been an increase in membership. The Joint Reunion Committee might want to consider having the tour buses stop here when they come to Clinton Township. The Moosic Grange could be a very interesting place for a stop. Possibly we could have a Griswold display here?"

Francis Curtis: "I guess we've taken care of just about everything. If there's no other business to discuss, I'd like to thank you all for coming. We'll look forward to seeing you here next year."

The meeting, accordingly, was adjourned.

Respectfully submitted.

GRISWOLD REUNION August 20, 1994

The Reunion convened in its usual meeting place, the Moosic Grange Hall on "the North and South" in Clinton Township. The traditional covered-dish dinner was served at noon and thoroughly enjoyed by all. The annual business meeting took place following the covered-dish dinner.

Francis Curtis: "Let's get started. We have what appears to be an unusually large crowd this year. Looks like about 50 people. If you haven't signed the register, please do so."

Francis Curtis: "Can we have a reading of the minutes of the last Griswold Reunion?"

Robert Powell: "The minutes of the 1993 Griswold Reunion are published here in Volume I, Number 7 of the GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER. If you haven't already picked up a copy, we have additional copies here."

Francis Curtis: "Are there any additions or corrections to the minutes as published?"

Robert Powell: "It's an unusual mistake and probably would go unnoticed by the entire world, but I must bring it to your attention. As you can see, the date on the NEWSLETTER is August 20, 1994. When I added the date on the bottom of pages 3, 5, and 7, I typed "04-20-1994" instead of "08-20-1994." The date of the issue is correctly given on the top of page 1, August 20, 1994. Since the pages are stapled together, it shouldn't cause a problem, since most people never read the date in the running heads."

Francis Curtis: "Can we have the Treasurer's report?"

Donald W. Powell: "The Treasurer's report is published in those minutes on page 7. Allow me to highlight for you the main items in that report." Donald Powell then reviewed the primary items in the Treasurer's Report for 1993.

Francis Curtis: "Most of us are wearing name tags, so we all know who's who. But we traditionally ask all present to identify themselves and tell how they tie into the group. I think it's a good idea, so let's do it now."

The group introduced themselves to each other.

Donald W. Powell: "This is a picture of Laura and Louisa Griswold. It's a very nice picture, and I think you should all have a look at it. Laura and Louisa were daughters of Francis Griswold."

Jacqueline Pieszala: "How are they related to Homer Griswold?"

Robert Powell: "John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden had the following children: John, Francis, Orrin, Sumner, Horace, and Sedate . . . Francis and Jane (Loomis) Griswold had the following children: Louis, Alvin, Laura, Louisa, Nathan, and Homer. Homer, then, and Laura and Louisa are siblings. Homer Griswold married Alzena Van Meter and they had the following children: Francis, Charles and Olga Jane (who married Christian Stiles)."

Francis Curtis: "We also have here some information in a blue folder. Does anyone want to tell us what that is?"

Donald Powell: "I can tell you what it is. I compiled it. I've been doing this since 1981 when Robert and I first came to the Griswold Reunion. The 1981 Griswold Reunion photograph is one of the first pictures in this book. To show you how fragile all this is, here is the picture of the 1981 Griswold Reunion. There were 14 of us at the 1981 Reunion, and we stood outside that door there. Seven people in the photograph have since died: Louisa Bayless, Edith Gardner, Gertrude Gardner, Mildred Crossman, Norman Lund, Dwight Rude, Margaret Rude. Since 1981, I have been, more or less, the photographer of this organization, and I have taken lots of pictures, and that's what this is. This is my book of things related to the Griswolds or to Clinton Center."

Francis Curtis: There's also a book over here that you might want to look at. It's of the Griswold Family Association's trip to England last summer. If you remember, some of us got back from England the day before the Griswold Reunion. We also have pictures that were taken there and there are the pictures that Sam and Joan took, because mine didn't come out. Do you have anything that you want to say about them, Sam?"

Sam Curtis: "In one of them, it talks about the origin of the Griswold family in Solihull, England. We visited Saint Alphege's Church in Solihull, England, and the Griswold coat of arms is in one of the windows of that church, and that picture is in one of the albums. One other thing that I had two people ask my about. I have two pictures of a martyrdom of a Thomas Griswold and also of the manor house of Badsley-Clinton [sp. ?], where he was captured by the Cromwell forces and martyred. The picture hangs in a convent there."

Francis Curtis: "We were really some of the few civilians who were allowed into the convent. We got in to see the picture, which wasn't so special. A nun came to the door and let us in. And then they had a little tête-à-tête and they allowed us to meet all of the sisters in the convent, which is really quite a rare occasion. Quite a few of them don't have much contact with the outside world. So if you see the nuns with big smiles, I think it's partly because they were pleased to see someone from outside. We had quite a delightful time with them. Although, while we talked, they stood on one side of a barrier and we stood on the other. They did keep us segregated to that extent. But it was an interesting experience."

Also on the same table where you signed in there are some things from the Griswold Family Association of America. You see what happens. You people make me go down there as a representative of this organization, and they elected me to their Board of Directors. At one of our meetings, they handed out these little brochures about the GFA and this year they are having their annual meeting at Morristown, NJ, and they are going to feature at that meeting the Griswolds' role in the Revolutionary War. One of the Griswolds during the Revolutionary War was hung because he was a Tory, so these Griswolds get on both sides of the fences. We also in-law, Mary Emma Squire Loomis (1854-1948), who married Theron Orsemus Loomis (1848-1911) on 03-24-1880. Their issue: Ora Esmarilda Loomis Russell and Edna Pearl Loomis. It was Laura Griswold Loomis who, at the first Clinton Township Pioneer Day on August 27, 1915, unveiled the EARLY SETTLERS AND MINISTERS MONUMENT in Clinton Cemetery at the formal dedication of the flint memorial. Nearly 400 people were present at those dedication ceremonies.

SOME CURTIS FAMILY MEMBERS WITH TWO GRISWOLD ARTIFACTS: JOHN GRISWOLD'S REVOLUTIONARY WAR CANTEEN AND WINDSOR CHAIR. Photograph by William H. Harrison, 1928; formerly in the collection of the late Lois Norton Curtis, copy print by Donald W. Powell. Photograph inscribed on back in pencil, or oil, in three colors: light pink, in the lips of the women; light olive green, in the foliage and the lawn; light blue, in the water splashing in the pool below the fountain. The photograph was taken at the Curtis Homestead, Curtis Valley. The fountain shown in the photograph is still there, in the back yard. See article on page 9 entitled "Griswold Canteen."

learned that there were Griswolds on both sides of the Civil War. . . If you're interested in attending this GFA fall reunion, you'll find this interesting. The dates are September 30, October 1st and October 2nd. It starts at 2 o'clock on a Friday afternoon. . . This is the group that will meet here in 1996. They seemed very excited about coming here. I told them that it will be a new experience. They're used to meeting in highly populated places with lots of museums and all kinds of things. I said, now you're going to get acquainted with the country. And when you look out your hotel window, you're not going to see city, you're going to see cows. [Francis Curtis then read through the agenda for the 1993 GFA meeting to give the group in Clinton Township an idea of some of the kinds of things that the GFA are expecting to do when they come here to the country.] If you're interested in becoming a member of the group, here's the form. Judy Blair and I belong. Does anyone else here belong?"

Donald W. Powell: "The Clinton Griswold Reunion belongs. And I put on the table here copies of the GFA NEWSLETTER, which we get several times a year. I have here in my hand, two from 1991. We have a complete file of these GFA NEWSLETTERS."

Francis Curtis: "In fact, this is how we made the original contact, through these GFA NEWSLETTERS. Some of you might remember that we had a couple of gentlemen from the GFA come here to our Reunion a few years back... That's how we began to make contact with them. It's proved to be very interesting for us because that's how we ended up going to England. That was the GFA's fourth tour to England, I think. Also, through this, I became acquainted with the Griswold house in Connecticut, and that was mentioned to us earlier in meetings with the Powells, and now I've been there and I've visited it and gotten to know the people who live in it, who are Griswolds."

Another interesting thing, from my perspective, is that one of my wife's original ancestors in America and the Griswold who came to Wethersfield, Connecticut were both in Wethersfield at the same time. My wife's ancestor was a Frisbee, and the Frisbees left, and went down to Branford, Connecticut. I decided it was because they couldn't get along with the Griswolds, and I've suggested to my wife that maybe that's still true... If any of you have any ideas of the kinds of things that the GFA might like to do or see when they come here, please let the Joint Reunion Committee know your ideas. There will probably be sixty to a hundred who come here from the GFA. . . Tentatively, we have reserved the Comfort Inn in Sterling, on I-84, for this group. . . We talked to Camp Lodore down here, but they wanted $2,000 up front, and I'm not sure that we have that kind of money...

Clarence Loomis: "One of the things that interests me is that the glass industry was one of the major industries in Wayne County from about 1870 to 1920, and yet we find no connection between that industry and the Griswold family. I wonder if there is a connection?"

Amy Rude: "That would be interesting to know. It would be good to have someone talk about that. Kurt Reed does programs on that. And there's the Dorflinger Glass Museum in White Mills."

Donald Powell: "They (the GFA) might be interested in visiting the Grace Episcopal Church in Honesdale. There's a stupendous set of stained glass Griswold windows in memory of Jeremiah Clark Gunn, 1804-1889, and his wife Arsa Melissa Griswold, 1812-1891. One of the Griswold windows is an Annunciation. It is one of the main windows in the east end of the church. I photographed them a few years ago. There are four Griswold windows in that church. Some of them are Tiffany glass."

John Rude: "Now, is that Gerald Pratt's mother's family, whose name was Griswold? He confronted me one time on the genealogy, and I said that I had a genealogy, so we met. My wife also has genealogy on the Griswolds back to the New England states. They couldn't connect the two people, and we went down to Gerry Pratt's and Gerry looked at what I had and he said no this is not what I've been looking for. And then he looked at some genealogy that my wife has and he said yes that's what I've been looking for all of my life. The whole thing. And so, he got what he's was after. His ancestors go back to the same town that we do, but until now they have not been able to connect the two. In our genealogy it says so, and in Amy's genealogy it says so."

Joan Curtis: "I thought it would be interesting to display a collection of Griswold ironware. . . There are different trademarks on the backs of the pans, depending on when they were produced. They've changed that trademark over the years, but they always says 'Griswold' and there's always the cross in the center of a circle."

Francis Curtis: "Does anybody else have any?"

Sam Curtis: "There is an antique dealer down in Big Valley that has a large collection. We talked with her, and it's possible that we could get some connection there. We've been buying this ironware and paying $15 or $17 for it or a little more for a Griswold frying pan or a Dutch oven, and all of a sudden the prices have jumped to the $300 or $400 price range. All of a sudden, Griswold ironware has become a very hot collectors' item. We thought it might make an interesting display at the headquarters of the Joint Reunion, wherever we locate. We have about ten pieces."

Joan Curtis: "We don't plan to buy any more at that price. We have the fry pans that start at size 3 up through size 12. We have a Dutch oven. I have a muffin tin and some molds. The trademark is a circle with a cross in it and the word Griswold across the cross in the circle."

Francis Curtis: "You'd better keep them under lock and key at that price."

Sam Curtis: "In some of the early pieces, the words 'Erie Iron Works' are written around the outside."

Francis Curtis: "Mrs. Olver said that she had one, but that she's not sure she can put her hand on it."

Joan Curtis: "There are all sorts of pieces. There's a fish pan, which is shaped like a fish. One of the pieces that we have is called a breakfast pan, which is divided into three sections so that you can do the two eggs and the bacon at the same time. There are all kinds of unique pieces that they put together, and that was made from about 1850 on. In the 1950s, they began making that heavy pounded aluminum, because somebody lent me a piece of that. I was talking about this Reunion and a friend said that her mother had one and she brought it over and it's that old pounded aluminum with the same Griswold sign on the bottom of it, with a cover and a wooden handle. The old iron ones all have iron handles. You just can't make a better pot roast than in one of those old Dutch ovens. We've tried it this winter, and it's just wonderful. The Griswold that went to Erie and founded that ironworks is a brother of the one that came here. That's what we're told. That Erie branch of the Griswolds has never been very involved with the GFA."

Francis Curtis: "Judy, is there anything else from that last GFA Reunion that we should mention?"

Judy Blair: "At the GFA meeting in Connecticut last October there was a display of Griswold ironware. It wasn't a large collection."

Francis Curtis: "Robert has a few things to mention, so I'll turn the meeting over to him for a minute."

Robert Powell then asked for copies of any genealogical material that should be included in the Griswold Reunion databank. Among the materials that Robert received in the mail prior to the Reunion or which were presented at the Reunion included: obituary of Gertrude Gardner Synder; a newspaper clipping about a wedding that took place in 1990, from Mary Zollbrecht; a letter from Mary Theresa Rebernik with information on the family of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph K. Loomis; a letter from Gertrude Schaffer, who sends her regrets about not being able to be here today because she has major surgery coming up in Philadelphia; a Christmas card from Letha and David Griswold of Sweet Valley, PA, who were with us a couple of years ago; a Christmas card from Leona Vaughn; an invitation to the 80th birthday celebration of Esther Forsberg that is being sponsored by Esther's children; a letter from Esther Forsberg in which was enclosed a copy of an obituary of Mabel Louise Haven; a letter from Lois Rose asking for information about the Paynter family (Clarence Loomis said that he could and would answer the letter); a letter from Andrew Clark Pikosky, who is one of the officers of the GFA; a letter from LaVerne Kuhn, who is the daughter of Mildred LaBarre; a note and check from Douglas and Helen Blair; a note and check from Minna Blair; a note from Mrs. Henry Neutts; a note and check from Col. and Mrs. Louis G. Pazel; a letter and check from Ronald Curtis Ewing; a check from Patricia Lawrence. Also, from Gary Ewing, a copy of a booklet for Francis Curtis III, and a generous donation to the Griswold Reunion treasury. The booklet is a substantial list, about 50 pages, of genealogical information which was put together on the 50th anniversary of the wedding of Pearl Curtis Brudos and Ernest Brudos.

Robert then assured all those who ordered a copy of the complete list of the descendants of John and Elizabeth Griswold that they would get a copy as soon as the updating and revising are completed. Robert also asked for all additions or corrections to the mailing list.

1994 SUPERLATIVES

Oldest family member present at Griswold Reunion: Fred Olver, 92 1/2. Harold Olver (not present) will be 101 next month.

Youngest family member present: Mary Tyler's son Aaron, age 4 months.

Family member who traveled the greatest distance to get to the Reunion: Clarence and Ruth Loomis, 250 miles, from Hope Valley, RI. (Clarence Loomis: "On Route 84 in New York state we went through 20 miles of bumper-to-bumper traffic.") Judy Blair traveled 137 miles to get to the Reunion.

Family member who traveled the shortest distance to get to the Reunion: Dorothy Curtis Hornbeck, 1 mile; John and Amy Rude, 1.2 miles.

Family with the most members present: Laura Rude family, 13 persons; Olga Stiles family, 10 persons; John Rude family, 7 persons.

Francis Curtis: "In order to support the organization, we need to see if you have any extra change in your pockets."

Donald W. Powell II walked among the gathered family with the collection pail in hand. As the collection was being taken, Jane Shaffer told a joke dealing with President Clinton and a cat and her kittens. Clarence Loomis remarked: "On the way down here, I happened to notice at Exit 70 on I-95 at Old Saybrook a sign for the Florence Griswold Museum. The Griswold Inn is there too."

Amy Rude: "You might ask the group if there are any more volunteers who might want to put up people at the time of the Joint Reunion in 1996."

Francis Curtis: "Good idea. Also, if anyone here would like to serve on the Joint Reunion Committee, please come forward. Currently the Committee is Judy Blair, Kathy Forster, John and Amy Rude, Karen Hornbeck, and me. Jane Shaffer and Gloria Johnston mentioned today that they would also like to be on the Committee."

Wendy Kille: "Maybe we should put a sign out front to tell people who have never been here that this is where the Griswold Reunion is taking place?"

Francis Curtis: "Good idea. It tells people where we are and it lets the world know what's going on here, and that's not a bad idea."

Mary Zollbrecht: "One of our ancestors, in the Dred Scott decision, voted to let that man be free and not be a slave."

Sam Curtis: "The rector of Saint Alphege's Church in Solihull, from 1589 to 1639, was a Charles Curtis. Maybe the Curtis family came from the same place the Griswold family did?"

Robert Powell: "I think it's a wonderful sign that the Clinton Township Griswold Reunion is getting larger. We have new faces all the time."

Francis Curtis: "If there's nothing else, we'll meet here again on the third Saturday of August in 1995. That would be the 19th."

The meeting, accordingly, was adjourned.

Respectfully submitted,
S. Robert Powell

LOCAL HOSPITALITY

There will be many people from out of town at the Joint Reunion. If you are able to provide accommodations for some of these visiting Griswolds, contact a member of the Joint Reunion committee. Both you and your guests will enjoy the Joint Reunion even more if you serve as host/hostess for our visiting Griswold friends.

OUR LINK TO THE ENGLISH GRISWOLDS

How do we (the Clinton Township Griswolds) connect to the English Griswolds who were established at Solihull, Warwickshire, prior to 1400? Here is the line of descent.

- GEORGE GRISWOLD, Kenilworth, England, had five sons: Thomas (stayed in England); Michael (b. 1597, settled in Wethersfield, CT); Edward (b. 1607, settled in Windsor, CT, 1639); Francis (settled in Cambridge, MA); Matthew (b. 1620, settled in Windsor, Saybrook, and Lyme, CT)

- MICHAEL GRISWOLD (1) (second son of George), b. 1597, d. 09-26-1684; settled in Wethersfield, CT; married Ann. They were the parents of nine children, the oldest of whom was Thomas.

- THOMAS GRISWOLD (2), b. 10-22-1646 in Wethersfield, CT; d. 10-28-1718; married on 11-28-1672 to Mary Howard (d. 10-29-1718, the day following her husband's death). They were the parents of six children, the youngest of whom was Samuel.

- SAMUEL GRISWOLD (16), b. 12-15-1684 in Wethersfield, CT; married on 03-11-1708, in Wethersfield, CT, to Mary Francis (b. 05-26-1689). They were the parents of 15 children, the 11th of whom was John.

- JOHN GRISWOLD (88), b. 06-23-1721. Very little is known of this John Griswold, other than the fact that he had a son John.

- JOHN GRISWOLD (375A), b. 10-15-1754 in Norwich, MA; d. 10-16-1843; married in October 1790 or 1791, in Sandisfield, MA, to Elizabeth Crittenden (d. 09-14-1851, at age 90). At the age of 18, John Griswold served in the Revolutionary War. In 1810 or 1811, John and Elizabeth (Crittenden) Griswold left Massachusetts and came to Wayne County, PA. They were the parents of six sons: John (b. 07-09-1792), Francis (b. 11-14-1793), Orrin (b. 04-19-1796), Sumner (b. 08-20-1798), Horace (b. 11-15-1800), and Sedate (b. 10-01-1802).

Note: The numbers in parentheses after the names of MICHAEL, THOMAS, SAMUEL, JOHN, and JOHN are the numbers that have been assigned to those persons by Glenn E. Griswold in the multivolume history of the Griswold Family.

FROM ESTHER FORSBERG

In her letter to S. R. Powell of August 19, 1994, Esther Forsberg reported the following interesting facts: "... My mother, Amanda Curtis Patey, used to tell about her little brother one night was very sick and her mother went out in the middle of the night and gathered some herbs - Mother never knew what they were. But after giving them to her brother he was well by morning.

Grandma Curtis made a feather tick out of flax she wove into linens. My mother took the feathers out and filled pillows and then cut up the linen and made doilies for each of her children. I have a beautiful doily from the linen tick."

GRISWOLD CANTEEN

The canteen carried by John Griswold in the Revolutionary War was donated to the Wayne County Historical Society in 1950. On August 8, 1992, Donald W. Powell and Donald W. Powell II discovered the canteen there in a glass case in the basement. The label on the canteen read as follows: "This canteen was carried by John Griswold during the Revolutionary War. He was a native of Massachusetts. Donated by: Miss Augusta Curtis and Dwight Rude, descendants of Griswold. November 1950. #644"

John Griswold's chair was a treasured possession of Edith A. Gardner and Gertrude Gardner Snyder, who bequeathed it to their descendants. John Griswold's three-drawer cherry chest, which came to Clinton Township in the ox cart with the Griswolds in 1810 or 1811, was a cherished possession of Alice Curtis Williams at the time of her death.

PLANNING COMMITTEE MEETING, JUNE 1, 1996

On June 1, 1996, at 1:00 P.M., the following persons met at Ridge Farm, the home of John and Amy Rude, in Waymart, to discuss and fine-tune plans for the Joint Reunion on October 4-6, 1996:

John Rude, Amy Rude, Karen Hornbeck, Francis Curtis, Judy Blair, Kathy Forster, Donald W. Powell, Janet Mann, and S. Robert Powell. Janet Mann is one of the co-presidents of the Griswold Family Association of America. She and her husband, Dennis, and their son, Eddie, and the family dogs, Snoopy and Dakota, were the house guests of John and Amy Rude for the weekend.

Karen Hornbeck, as the meeting began, reported that she had one of her colleagues at work translate the Latin inscription on the Griswold coat of arms. The translation is as follows: "I spurn reptiles (crawling animals) by taking flight."

Kathy Forster and Janet Mann led a discussion of the plans for the Joint Reunion, and the details of that discussion are reported on page one of this NEWSLETTER. As the discussion took place, Robert Powell noted

- that it is expected that about 60 people from the GFA National will attend the Joint Reunion;
- that a registration form for the Joint Reunion will be mailed out to all on the Clinton Township Griswold Reunion mailing list when the announcement of the Clinton Township Griswold Reunion is mailed out in July; checks are to be made payable to the Griswold Family Association of America; checks are to be given to Judy Blair, who will coordinate the reservations; the deadline for all reservations for the Joint Reunion is September 3rd;
- that Janet Mann and Kathy Forster will gather together all of the components for the packets of information that will be given to all who attend the Joint Reunion (schedule for the weekend, lunch passes, local brochures, and other items); the packets will be assembled at a Planning Committee meeting at Ridge Farm at 1:00 P.M. on Friday, September 13;
- that Kathy Forster and Robert Powell will make sure that Janet Mann has the necessary "local promotional material" for the Joint Reunion (why Griswolds from out of the area should attend the Joint Reunion in this part of the country) to be included in the GFA NEWSLETTER that will be published before the Joint Reunion; one of the items that Janet believes will be a good item to include is the article given on this page entitled "Our Link to the English Griswolds"

Following the Planning Committee meeting, which took place on the front porch of Ridge Farm, all were treated by Amy Rude to Apple Cake (Margaret Rude's recipe, and a very good one; the exact name of the recipe may not be Apple Cake; John Rude will have to tell us the correct name of the dessert) and lemonade in the dining room at Ridge Farm.

FROM THE SECRETARY

This is not a Griswold Reunion NEWSLETTER. Rather, this is a provisional collection of notes that have been assembled in order to get ready for the 1997 Griswold Reunion.

If you have any genealogical information (births, deaths, marriages, etc.) to be included in the records of the Griswold Reunion, please WRITE DOWN that information and hand it to me. Also put your name on any information that you give me so that I will know who to contact if I have any questions about the data that you have presented.

There are, I'm sure, many names that should be added to the mailing list. If you are not certain whether or not a name is on the list, take a look at my master list. I also have a copy with me today of the complete list of descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden. Take a look at this list, especially the page where you are listed. If there are additions or corrections to be made, please show me where they are to be made in the master list.

FROM THE SECRETARY

This Newsletter contains a lot of information on the Griswolds of northeastern Pennsylvania during the period 1996-1999. I hope that you derive as much pleasure in reading it as I have in bringing it into existence.

Copies will be distributed today to everyone who attends the 93rd reunion. Copies for all other persons on the mailing list will be mailed or distributed next week.

If you have any genealogical information (births, deaths, marriages, etc.) to be included in the records of the Griswold Reunion, please WRITE DOWN that information and hand it to me. Also put your name on any information that you give me so that I will know whom to contact if I have any questions about the data that you have presented.

There are, I'm sure, many names that should be added to the mailing list. There may well be some names that should be deleted. If you are not certain whether or not a name is on the list, take a look at the copy of the master list, as of August 10, 1999, that is given herein on pp. 15-16.

I also have a copy with me today of the complete list of descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden. Take a look at this list, especially the page where you are listed. If there are additions or corrections to be made, please show me where they are to be made in the master list.

As I mentioned in the "Griswold Notes" that I sent to all persons on the mailing list on November 26, 1998, the Northeastern Pennsylvania Griswold Reunion is now on the Internet.

You'll recall that at last year's Reunion, Janet Mann asked us to submit to her some information about the Northeastern Pennsylvania Griswold Reunion to be included on the Griswold Family Association's webpage on the Internet. In the weeks following the Reunion, I submitted information about our Reunion to Janet and her sister, Barbara Ryan, who manages the GFA's website:

<http://www@Griswoldfamily.org>

Before Thanksgiving, the information about our Reunion, together with nine photographs that Janet took at our Reunion last August, was on the Internet. Those photographs are described herein in the reprint of "Griswold Notes" of November 26, 1998.

As you probably know, most webpages are continually revised and updated. Those photographs, I'm happy to report, were on the Internet for about seven months. I have with me today a printout of those photographs if you would like to see them.

A hard copy of most of the material on the GFA webpage as 07-27-1999 is included in this issue of the NEWSLETTER.

Special thanks to Janet Mann and Barbara Ryan for making it possible for the Clinton Township Griswolds to be part of the GFA's website.

Most interestingly, Barbara Ryan (in Singapore, on a business trip) and I (in Scranton, at work at Harcourt Learning Direct) had e-mail correspondence on January 21, 1999 about the material on the Northeastern Pennsylvania Griswolds for the GFA webpage. How small the world has become!

Photographs and reports about the Griswold Reunion here today at the Homestead Golf Course will be published on the GFA's webpage in the weeks ahead, so check out the GFA's website on a regular basis.

NOTES FROM THE 1996 BUSINESS MEETING

August 17, 1996

Moosic Grange Hall, Waymart, PA

Covered-dish dinner served at noon, followed by a business meeting. John Rude, President.

John Rude called the meeting to order and welcomed all to the 90th Griswold Reunion. He remarked that Beatrice Bartholomay, who is here today, has attended every one of these Griswold Reunions in Clinton Township.

The secretary of the Griswold Reunion, S. Robert Powell, reported that the minutes of the 1994 and 1995 reunions are published in Volume I, Number 8 (June 20, 1996) of the Griswold Reunion Newsletter. He stated that there are a couple of errors in that newsletter and distributed an errata sheet on which the necessary corrections are given.

Judy Blair, Katherine Forster, and Karen Hornbeck presented a complete report on the plans for the Joint Reunion this October and reported that the deadline for reservations is September 3rd. Judy, Katherine, and Karen were given a round of applause for all the work they have done/are doing to guarantee the success of the Joint Reunion. Twenty-one of the people present here today plan to attend the October reunion.

Donald Powell gave the treasurer's report. He reported that at present we have over $300 in the treasury and that all of our bills have been paid, including the total cost of printing and mailing Volume I, Number 8 of the Griswold Reunion Newsletter ($532).

Robert asked for all additions and corrections to the mailing list and to the complete list of descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden. Robert said that copies of the complete descendant list were available for $5.00 (the cost of Xeroxing).

Judy Blair showed the group the family history publications that are available from the Griswold Family Association and announced that copies of those publications would be available for purchase at the October reunion.

Clarence Loomis showed the group the black walnut box that he has made in which to store his copy of the monumental Loomis genealogy by Elias Loomis, LL.D. Clarence remarked that during his military career, he was once stationed with a navy captain whose first name was Griswold.

Sam and Joan Curtis spoke on the subject of collecting Griswold ironware. Joan stated that the frying pans range in size from #1-13. The largest one, size 13, sometimes sells for as much as $850.

A very nice display of Griswold ironware was exhibited on the stage of the Moosic Grange Hall. The display included items from the collection of Sam and Joan Curtis, Gordon and Louise Hawley, John and Amy Rude, and Clarence Loomis.

Gordon Hawley told the group to beware of imitations and reproductions when buying Griswold ironware in the antique markets. Gordon reported that at an antique market on Route 20 there was a dealer who had a tripod stand a set of frying pans (#2-13) and he was selling them all for $5,000. The number 2 pan alone sells for $500. Gordon pointed out that there are books on Griswold ironware and that anyone interested in collecting Griswold pieces should study carefully any information available on the subject before buying. (A selected bibliography on Griswold ironware is given herein on page 10.)

The annual "passing of the hat" took place and $164 was added to the treasury.

Karen Hornbeck read a text, written by Augusta Curtis, on the composition of Almost Persuaded by P. P. Bliss. That hymn was written in the Judson Curtis house in Aldenville (later owned by Arch Kennedy and now by Lloyd and Regina Kennedy).

Here is that text by Augusta Curtis:

"Where and How Almost Persuaded Was Composed"

It may be of interest to the readers of this paper to know that the inspiration of that familiar hymn was received at our Clinton Center Baptist Church.

Words and music written by that great composer and sweet singer of sacred son, P. P. Bliss.

Previous to the occasion which called forth this hymn P. P. Bliss held a musical convention in the home of Henry B. Curtis and family.

Music at that time was led or pitched with the tuning fork. At the close of this convention Mr. Bliss presented his tuning fork to Mr. Curtis. This historic relic is now owned and treasured by Mr. Arthur Curtis.

At the time of the inspiration of this hymn a revival meeting was in progress in Clinton Center. And P. P. Bliss was lending a helping voice.

One night Rev. Jones of Wilkesbarre preached a powerful sermon and urged with great fervency his unsaved hearers to accept Jesus Christ as their Savior.

And the spirit of the meeting seemed to say "Almost Persuaded."

That night Mr. Bliss went home with Mr. & Mrs. Judson Curtis. Their home was then north of Aldenville. In the house now occupied by Mr. Arch Kennedy & family.

Mr. Bliss made the remark that he saw depicted on so many faces the feeling of almost persuaded.

Retiring to his room after reaching Mr. Curtis's home, he soon returned to the sitting room with paper in hand on which were written words and music of "Almost Persuaded."

Approaching Mr. & Mrs. Curtis (By the way, Mrs. Curtis is still living), he said "Let us try the new song." Since those three voices set that new song to tune now over half a century ago "Almost Persuaded" has been echoed and re-echoed in thousands & thousands of homes and churches throughout this and other lands."

Robert Powell reported on the visit that was made to what is believed to be the site of the original John Griswold house (up behind the Moosic Grange Hall), in the summer of 1996, by Donald W. Powell I, Donald W. Powell II, Karen Hornbeck, John Munch, and S. Robert Powell. The trip took place following one of the organizational meetings for the October 1996 reunion. Photographs were taken during the walk by Donald W. Powell. At the foundation site, a kind of "refrigerator" has been constructed in the side of the mountain: a box-like structure, made of stone slabs, constructed above a small spring coming out of the mountain. Barberry bushes and very old apple trees were found in the vicinity of a level clearing very near the "refrigerator." Robert: "I don't think we'll ever be able to say with complete assurance that this is the site of John Griswold's original cabin, but based upon what Alice Curtis Lund said and upon the "evidence" that we have located on the site that we believe to be the site described by Alice, I think it is very probable that we have found the site of the original John Griswold cabin."

Donald Powell showed the group the linen coverlet that Louisa Griswold made, circa 1870, having grown the flax, made and dyed the linen threads, and then wove the coverlet. The coverlet was given to the Powells by Gertrude Gardner Snyder on March 7, 1981.

Here is the text of the handwritten note that Gertrude Snyder wrote and attached to the coverlet:

"This coverlet was made by my grandmother, Mrs. Louisa Curtis, who gathered the flax, spun it, and then wove it, completing it about 1870.

"Although she had 11 children, she still had time to study plants and get the necessary ingredients to produce the dyes to color the material she used for rugs, quilts, and clothing she made.

"She also knew the herbs to gather for medicine and used them to doctor her sick neighbors."

Donald then acknowledged the important role that Edith Gardner and Gertrude (Gardner) Snyder played in getting the Powells involved with the Griswold Reunion. Donald: "If it hadn't been for Edith and Gertrude, we would never have learned about the Griswold Reunion and gotten involved." John Rude then added: "And my father, Dwight Rude, said that if the Powells hadn't gotten involved with the Griswold Reunion, it probably would have gone under. At the time the Powells got involved, the Reunion was down to a small handful of senior people. The Powell boys got things going again, and look where we are today—we're going to sponsor a national Griswold meeting this October. The Griswold Reunion owes a lot to Edith and Gertrude and to the Powell boys, and I think they deserve a nice round of applause."

With no further business to conduct the meeting was adjourned. The group then assembled outside the side doors to the Grange Hall and several family members took group photographs.

91st GRISWOLD REUNION

August 16, 1997

The following persons signed the register at the 91st Griswold Reunion, held in the Moosic Grange Hall, R. D., Waymart, PA: Helen R. Powell, Donald W. Powell, Donald W. Powell II, Clarence E. Loomis, Gertrude Loomis Schaffer, Gordon and Louise Hawley, Mary A. Zollbrecht, Kevin Johnston, Gloria Johnston, Ed Teeple, Wendy and Candice Kille, Jane Shaffer, Darwin Brudos, Minna Blair, Dorothy L. Olver, Judith Blair, John and Amy Rude, Eleanor Rude, Dorothy Graham, LaVerne Kuhn, and Bob Kuhn.

Covered-dish dinner served at noon, followed by the annual business meeting, John Rude, President.

NOTES FROM THE 1997 BUSINESS MEETING

The meeting was called to order by John Rude, President. The Secretary, S. Robert Powell, distributed copies of a 3-page text titled Griswold Notes, which contains the highlights of the 1996 reunion. A complete report on the 1996 reunion will be published, said he, in Volume I, Number 9 of the Griswold Reunion Newsletter. Robert indicated that extra copies of Volume I, Number 8 were still available.

The secretary then called for all additions and corrections to the mailing list and to the complete list of the descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden.

Judy Blair offered the following comments on the 1996 Joint Reunion on October 4-6, 1996:

"The Joint Reunion went extremely well. The event with the largest number of people present was the luncheon at The Settlers' Inn, when there were 104 people present. About half the group were from northeastern Pennsylvania and the other half were GFA people.

The reaction by folks from out of the area is that it was one of the nicest reunions they have ever had because of the setting, the Bryn Mawr Convention Center.

There were lots of activities. But the highlight of the entire weekend for me was at the end of the bus tour when we all piled into the Clinton Center Baptist Church and we sang a hymn called Almost Persuaded by P. P. Bliss, with Dorothy Graham at the piano. We sang that hymn and then we sang How Great Thou Art, and others. Every seat was taken—all Griswolds. And then we walked across the road to the cemetery and looked at the Griswold tombstones and then Robert, with the help of his nephew, Donald, released three homing pigeons as a symbolic statement about the power of the attraction of home, of returning to one's roots."

Robert Powell: "I agree with you, Judy, those moments in the Clinton Center Baptist church were just unforgettable. It was filled, as it hasn't been for a long time, and we all started to sing, almost spontaneously. It was an extraordinary experience. Yes, that was surely one of the highlights of the weekend.

I also think that the display of historical Griswold material at the Bryn Mawr was very nice. People lent the most remarkable objects to that display. We had Aunt Augusta's Indian artifacts and the John Griswold Revolutionary War canteen from the Wayne County Historical Society and we had the Griswold chest of drawers that came here in 1810 from Connecticut in an ox cart. The chest of drawers was once owned by Alice Curtis Lund and is now owned by Charles Curtis. The display was beautiful—and it was a larger display than any of us had anticipated. It was very impressive."

Gordon and Louise Hawley then spoke on their recent trip to England. Louise Hawley: "Most of the people who were on the trip to England with the GFA tour were here last October and they—particularly Janet Mann—are still talking about how beautiful the reunion here last October was.

Yes, Gordon and I got back, the day before yesterday, from 10 days in England, where we got steeped in Griswoldology. There were 22 on the trip and we were the only ones from the northeastern Pennsylvania group. The others came from all over the United States.

It was the 3rd Griswold Heritage Tour. Many of the people who are doing Griswold research in England work for the National Trust, and so they have very good access to lots of material.

We visited five different churches. The Griswold crest was everywhere to be seen. We visited two 13th century half-timbered houses that were lived in by Griswolds for several hundred years: the houses of Clement Griswold and his cousin, Robert Griswold. At the time, there was a great deal of conflict between the Protestants and the Catholics, and Robert was ultimately executed for protecting Catholics. A "Blessed Robert Griswold Church" stands there today. It memorializes the martyrdom of Robert Griswold. The Griswold Family Association of America gave 600 pounds sterling and sponsored a memorial window in the church and that window was dedicated the day we came through there. It was a beautiful experience.

Afterwards, the vicar said to us: 'To speed you on your way, the ladies of the church have some sherry and nibbles.' What nice people they were!

We then stopped at a couple of old inns, one at Knowle, still bearing the name of Greswolde, one at Solihull, the Manor House. Both date back to the early fifteenth century.

One of the highlights of the trip was a Sunday visit to Solihull to attend church—an Anglican church. It was a very elegant and lofty experience.

We also visited Malvern Hall.

The last three days of the trip we spent visiting non-Griswold sites, including Chatsworth, the residence of the 11th Duke of Devonshire, and Hardwicke Hall, the residence of Elizabeth of Shrewsbury, who was a very rich and powerful Elizabethan woman.

Every four years the GFA sponsors a tour. The next one will be in 2001. The tours are wonderful. Think about going next time."

Gordon Hawley: "One day my wife asked for pie à la mode, and the English didn't know what she was talking about. We explained what it was, and they served it to us. Some people complain about English food, but we found it to be excellent."

MR. AND MRS. BOB EWING

John Rude remarked that it was very nice to have the Ewings here in Clinton Township at the Reunion and noted that they had traveled a long way to get here. Bob Ewing: "We've come from about as far as you can get in the lower 48, I reckon. We're about a 10-minute walk from the Canadian border and maybe a mile and half from salt water. We call it the fourth corner up there." Robert Ewing reported that they own over 170 pieces of Griswold iron-ware.

REV. GORDON CURTIS

Donald Powell said that he had received in early July a very interesting letter from the Rev. Gordon Curtis in Arizona. Here is the text of that letter:

"Dear Sir,

I've been engaged for some 27 years in researching my CURTIS family, beginning with the emigrant HENRY CURTIS. Then a year ago I was given a copy of your fine work on the Griswold family which included a long line of Curtises. It was a fabulous find for me as you might imagine. Your data starts with the second Henry Curtis; mine starts with the first.

My search took me three generations into England. the emigrant Henry had twelve children, ten of which came here about 1802. My researches covered eight of these children but I was against a wall on the four orphaned children in 1812 when Henry and Alice died in Butternuts. Suddenly, from your work I could identify the youngest child (born within a few months of their sailing) as REV. HENRY CURTIS. From that point, thanks to your work, my Curtis files exploded.

I would like to know if you are interested in those other eleven children of the Curtis line?

The date that you have on the senior Henry is amazingly similar to mine but I would be able to fill in still more if you are interested. Where there are differences you might like to know my procedures and sources.

I have hundreds of parish records from Leicestershire provided by genealogists in England. I visited England in 1971, was within a few miles of their sites (and didn't know it at the time). It was in 1972 that I realized this unfortunate fact. I first discovered it when I found the Prentice Burying Ground in Butternuts in Otsego County, NY. I then pursued the leads that I had in Otsego, Chenango, and Chemung counties. I have court records, census data (the usual) as reliable sources, aided by a remarkable collection of historical sketches of JOHN, the eldest son who was 22 at sailing.

There is one question that I put to you. What was your source for Rev. Henry's birth? My genealogists contacts in England could find no parish records for the last four children. They apparently were not born in Ilston-on-Hill and for years I assumed they were born in R. I., where I found Henry Curtis in the 1810 census. I knew they existed but unnamed.

I would appreciate hearing from you.

Cordially.

Rev. Gordon H. Curtis."

On hearing this letter, Gordon and Louis Hawley offered the following comments:

The town is called Gilbertsville today, not Butternuts. It's on Route 51, out of Mount Upton. It's still called the Butternut Valley, though. We've been to the cemetery and found the stone. We've also found the Curtis home, which we located after some research in Cooperstown. We've camped about two miles south of Gilbertsville and the Curtis farm is about a quarter of a mile away from there and it's taken us two years to find it. It's still standing.

We visited Rev. Gordon Curtis in Arizona, and compared our records to his.

The former Curtis farm in Gilbertsville is on the River Road. The house has been modernized, but you can tell it's an old house even though it's been brought right up to the minute.

Just about a month ago, I (Louise) decided, 'nothing ventured nothing gained,' to knock on the door. We talked to a lady who was 92 years old. She moved there as a young bride in the early days of this century. The Curtises had bought the house and property for $4,000 one hundred years earlier, in 1807 when the oldest son, John preceded his parents here because Mom Curtis had little children.

We also went to Cooperstown and found the guardian ad litem for the four minor children, of which the Rev. Henry was the youngest. There were two girls and two boys I think.

There was a court guardianship appointed when the parents died because the four children were minors. The court order was to make sure that the four minor children got their share of the inheritance.

The two adjacent farms were sold—one bought by a son and another bought by a son-in-law.

We really don't know what happened to those other children, but we do know about the Rev. Henry."

Gordon Hawley: "The courthouse at Cooperstown was a gold mine for us."

Louise Hawley: "Gilbertsville is beautiful. It's almost as if a little chunk of England has been set down in the Otsego Valley. Beautiful."

TREASURER'S REPORT

The balance in the account before this year's Reunion was $523.84. There have been a lot of donations that have been sent in, which will be added to that amount. We have only two expenses today: hall rental from the Moosic Grange, $25; postage and mailing for the 2-page flyer/announcement of today's meeting, $59.60; total expenses: $84.60.

IN ADDITION:

- Mary Zollbrecht read some notes that she had taken while reading Who Was Who in the Civil War by Stewart Sifakis, published in 1988. The book was given to Mary by her sister in 1990. Mary has a special interest in the Civil War and is involved in Civil War re-enactments. Among the names of possible "cousins" that she has found in the Sifakis book are Lewis G. Arnold (1817-1871), John Jordan Crittenden (1787-1863), Thomas Leonidas Crittenden (1819-1893), Benjamin Robbins Curtis (1809-1874), Franklin Gardner (1823-1873), Horatio Gouverneur Wright (1820-1899).
- John Rude read from Glenn Wilmarth's history of Aldenville about the specific place (the Judson Curtis house in Aldenville) where P. P. Bliss wrote "Almost Persuaded." A copy of Wilmarth's history was presented by John Rude to the Griswold Reunion.

- Clarence Loomis showed the fine wooden box that he made to keep his copy of the Loomis genealogy in; he also reported that "the Loomis gang lived in 9-mile swamp"; Clarence reported that he used to know someone whose name was "Van Tassel," which is the middle name of the third child, William, of Louisa Griswold and Henry Banning Curtis.
- Eleanor Rude reported that Naomi Rude had died on March 16, 1997; Eleanor also reported that Mr. and Mrs. Paul Forbes had a son in May 1997.
- Darwin Brudos reported that there is a Griswold Mortuary in Schenectady, NY
- It was reported that "Aunt Augusta Curtis" wanted to go to Africa as a missionary but didn't because she had a heart problem, "a bad heart."

LETTER FROM MARY CHOPAK

When she returned the 1997 Griswold Reunion questionnaire and sent in a generous cash donation to the Reunion, Mary Chopak (40 Palmer Drive, Camp Hill, PA 17011) included the following note:

"I attended the Griswold Reunion for the first time last year and then attended the National Griswold Reunion in October. They were both well organized events and much was learned about our family tree.

"Upon returning home from both reunions, I told my husband of our family heritage and 'distant' connection to the Griswold cast iron name. We started attending auctions, flea markets, yard sales, and antique shops in search of the Griswold products. We joined the Griswold and Cast Iron Cookware Association to learn more and receive a semi-monthly newsletter about cast iron cook ware. We attended the National Convention of the G&CICA Convention held in April in Erie, PA. We went to the convention not knowing anyone. There were many people from as far away as Alaska. They had displays of cast iron set up in a ballroom where one could purchase pieces or just talk to experts and learn more. Seminars were held on Saturday, followed by a dinner dance and meeting. Next year's convention is to be held in St. Louis, Missouri. Our collection now is well over fifty pieces and growing.

"In July of this year, we had a mini Griswold reunion at the home of Marie & Ray Savokinas. In attendance were Jack/Jackie Pieszala, Binghamton, NY; Bea McGurrian, Exeter, PA; Mary Chopak, Harrisburg, PA; Scott/Rachel Savokinas, Budd Lake, NJ; Danny, Davy, and Bobby Stiles. It was a chance to get together and reminisce about the old days in Aldenville."

LETTER FROM GERRY AND MARJORIE COOK

In their letter to the Reunion of August 6, 1997, Marjorie remarks:

"My brother Frederick and I belong to the FLAGON & TRENCHER Descendants of COLONIAL TAVERN-KEEPERS (PRIOR TO 1700). This year the annual luncheon was held at the Griswold Inn in Essex, CT. We thought it would be great fun to go. And it was. We met other "cousins" there. Had a great luncheon and meeting on Saturday. We stayed in Old Saybrook over night and went to the Griswold Inn for their special Sunday brunch the next day.

"On our trip, Gerry and I did genealogy work in Norwich, Hartford, and Windsor. Found some very interesting material. We always enjoy going to the Windsor Historical building. It is such a treat to see the "Bear Claw Bible" again. . .

"My grandmother, Laura Curtis Rude, kept wonderful scrap books which have so much information from newspaper articles. Nothing is dated, but it would be easy to verify the information from material in the Wayne County Historical Genealogy section or in the Wayne County Newspaper archives. . .

"Gerry and I are on e-mail. The address is remrudcook@aol.com. Would enjoy hearing from any of the cousins.

"Whenever I think of the Griswold Reunion, I think of Harriet, Augusta, and Laura Curtis; also Edith and Gertrude. Then too, I think of my parents. They were all such faithful Reunion-ers. And I also think of the Powells."

LETTER FROM GERTRUDE LOOMIS SCHAFFER

August 20, 1997
 Robert,

I think we had a nice reunion. We've lost most of the generation I've always called the Curtis cousins. . . I stopped at Violet Hauenstein's after the Reunion. . . I wish she'd go to the Reunions. She tells about tutoring her grandchildren in math. A violent storm hit at my brother's—they were milking with a generator.

I remember when everybody knew each other and their everyday lives. I leave the reunion wishing I knew more about the ones who go now.

As for me, I guess I'm still a farmer—however, I don't own the dairy that's here and mostly I mow the lawn and berry patch and have a small garden. The blueberries are almost gone but I've picked at least 100 quarts. The wind and lack of rain caused a lot of the green berries to drop.

I guess I should just be thankful that I was able to get back home and be able to get back to independent living. But then, I never thought I wouldn't. . .

It's been 10 years this August since Henry died at age 70. Next month, I will be 76.

The best to you all and your mother. Let's do it again next year!

With memories,

Your Griswold and Loomis cousin, Gertrude L. Schaffer."

Gertrude enclosed a copy of what sounds like a very good recipe:

Blueberry Banana Snackcake

1 ¼ cups sugar

— butter [Gertrude forgot to indicate how much. We'll have to ask her at this year's reunion]

2/3 cup buttermilk

2 eggs

1 tsp. vanilla

3 medium bananas

2 cups all-purpose flour

¼ tsp. baking soda

1/8 tsp. salt

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Combine sugar, butter, buttermilk, eggs, and vanilla. Beat at medium speed until creamy. Add bananas. Mix well. Add flour, baking powder, salt. Mix in blueberries. Spoon into muffin tins lined with paper cups. Bake 25-30 minutes. Remove from pan and sprinkle with confectioner's sugar. Yield: 20.

LETTER FROM RAY AND EILEEN (BRUDOS) WEICK

September 25, 1997

Dear Robert,

We were traveling around in the Midwest again this summer but timing wasn't right to make the Griswold Reunion. Dog Agility Nationals were in Cleveland, OH the 2nd week in July so had to make that with Ray and Meaghan, our dog.

Then attended the Nordic Fest in Decorah, IA (which was wonderful!!) the end of July. I'm ½ Norwegian so doing genealogical research along the Brudos and Peterson lines. Lots of family in WI and Brudos family reunion which I had never attended was the 2nd Sunday in August near Viroqua, WI.

We didn't get back to Tucson until Sept. 10 and been busy trying to catch up with all sorts of things.

Imagine our surprise when we watched PBS last week—we saw a familiar person showing chickens at a PA fair. Ray said: "I know that guy! Right, it's Bob Powell." Certainly didn't know you were an expert on chickens. Anyway it was a very interesting show with some highly unusual chickens. Martha Stewart really has a hand in everything.** Now I'm related to a TV star also. You did a good job!!"

The Weicks live at 2737 East 21st Street, Tucson, AZ 85716.

** Martha Stewart was Robert Powell's guest at the May 3, 1997 Spring Show of the Central Pennsylvania Avian Club in Bloomsburg, PA. During that visit, footage was shot for a 30-minute Martha Stewart Living television show that was originally broadcast on 09-18-1997 and rebroadcast twice thereafter. Four Griswolds (Robert Powell, Donald Powell, Donald Powell II, and Peg Winter), plus a lot of exhibition poultry, appear in this program.

ADDRESSES NEEDED

The announcements of the 1997 Griswold Reunion that were mailed out on July 29, 1997 to the following people were stamped "undeliverable" by the post office and returned to the Secretary:

92nd GRISWOLD REUNION

Moosic Grange Hall, Waymart, PA

The following persons signed the register at the 92nd annual Griswold Reunion, held in the Moosic Grange Hall, R. D., Waymart, PA: Bernice Curtis Dolan, Francis Curtis, Clarence E. Loomis, Gertrude Loomis Schaffer, Carol and Clark Warner, Bea McGurrian, Mary Savokinas, Ray Savokinas, Rachel and Scott Savokinas, Wendy Kille, Candice Kille, David and Deborah Bedey, Mary Zollbrecht, Glen and Sue Johnson, Bob and LaVerne Kuhn, Gloria Johnston, Janet Mann, Jane Shaffer McNulty, Chuck McNulty, Joe Barham, Kathryn Forster, Gordon and Louise Hawley, Doris Howell, Helen Powell, Judy Blair, Minna Blair, John and Amy Rude, S. Robert Powell.

Covered-dish dinner served at noon, followed by annual business meeting, John Rude, President.

NOTES FROM THE 1998 BUSINESS MEETING

Meeting called to order by John Rude, president. Welcome by John

Rude, who asked all to make sure they signed the register.

Robert Powell, secretary, asked for all additions and corrections to the mailing list and the complete list of descendants of John and Elizabeth (Crittenden) Griswold. Robert also made available copies of most of the back issues of the Griswold Reunion Newsletter.

At the secretary's request, Clarence Loomis showed the group the beautiful black walnut box that he made in which to store genealogical papers and his copy of the monumental Loomis genealogy by Elias Loomis, LL.D. (The Descendants of Joseph Loomis, who came from Braintree, England, and settled in Windsor, Connecticut, in 1639. Second Edition. Revised and Enlarged. New Haven: Tuttle, Morehouse and Taylor, 221 State Street, 1875).

Robert introduced and welcomed to the reunion Janet Mann, co-president, together with her sister, Barbara Ryan, of the Griswold Family Association of America.

Janet Mann: "I'm delighted to be here. I've brought with me the GFA website: www.Griswoldfamily.org. My sister, Barbara Ryan, is webmaster.

Janet then showed the group the webpage and invited us to contribute text and photos for the website. Robert said that he would get together some material.

Janet announced that the Michael and Ann Griswold memorial stone was dedicated last October in the Wethersfield (CT) Old Burying Ground. A specific burial site for Michael and Ann Griswold has never been found. Janet showed photos of the memorial headstone, which is of Pennsylvania black slate.

Janet also showed photos that were taken at the GFA reunion last October of the Griswoldville chapel.

At Robert's request, Janet explained to the group the relationship between the Griswold boys (one of whom is Michael, our direct ancestor) who were once thought to be brothers. Janet Mann: "Michael was not a brother. Matthew and Edward are half brothers. Francis was a cousin. Michael is the youngest son of a cousin of Edward and Matthew's father."

Janet added: "We've also learned from our GFA genealogist, Bob French, that Michael's father was religious zealot who believed that any contact with the outside world was dangerous for his family. So he walled up everybody in his house and he had food delivered through a slot in the doorway. Illness eventually struck and several family members died. The town authorities finally broke in and Michael, the youngest, was brought out alive, and fostered with a family nearby—not a Griswold family—and then came to America with that family."

Janet reported that the Michael and Ann Griswold Memorial is about half paid for. Robert commented that the Northeastern Pennsylvania Griswolds had a reasonable amount of money in the treasury and suggested that we donate at least $100 to the Michael and Ann Griswold memorial fund. It was regularly moved (Mary Zollbrecht) and seconded that we donate at least $100 to the Michael and Ann Griswold memorial fund. The motion carried.

Janet announced that the annual meeting of the GFA will be held this year on October 2-4 at Seneca Falls, NY. She went over the schedule for the meeting and invited all to attend. (In even-numbered years, the GFA holds a 3-day reunion; in odd-numbered years, it holds a 1-day reunion in the Wethersfield area.)

Robert: "Maybe we, the Northeastern Pennsylvania Griswolds, should think about sponsoring another national GFA meeting here in Pennsylvania in a few years?"

Janet: We would be delighted to come back here again. The GFA meeting here in 1996 was very nice."

Gordon Hawley reported that he went out to South Dakota in 1937 with his grandfather, Francis Curtis, to visit. Carrie Loomis and Gordon's parents (Clistia Belva Curtis and Gordon Grant Hawley) also went. Gordon has a journal, with photographs, of that trip.

Gordon and Louise Hawley collect Griswold ironware. Louise showed the group an iron mold in the form of a seated lamb. She also showed a breadstick pan, a size "O" frying pan, and a trivet. Gordon Hawley: "Watch out for reproductions of Griswold ironware. There's a lot of it out there. It's made in Taiwan. Sam and Joan Curtis have a fake Griswold frying pan that bought. They keep it as an object lesson.

The annual "passing of the hat" took place under the direction of John Rude and Francis Curtis.

Amy Rude remarked that Robert Powell had done a lot of work to make the reunion a reality this year and suggested that Robert be given a round of applause for his tireless efforts on behalf of the Griswold Reunion. Robert thanked the group for their appreciative applause and invited the Griswold Reunion to meet next year at the Homestead Golf Course, Carbondale. The group accepted the offer.

Next year's Griswold Reunion will be held at the Homestead Golf Course on August 14.

With no further business to conduct, the business meeting was adjourned.

1998 SUPERLATIVES

Oldest Person Present: Minna Blair, 93 8/12ths

Youngest Person Present: Karis Alice Bedey, born 10-03-1995

Family with Most Members Present: Stiles (13 members here)

Traveled Longest Distance to Get to Reunion: Clarence Loomis, 235 miles. Clarence remarked: Deborah, David, and Karis Bedey are here this year from West Point. David is a lieutenant colonel in the army and teaches space physics at West Point. Last year the Bedeys lived in Alaska, and if they had been here then, their distance would have been the greatest." SRP: "Yes, and then we have Gordon and Louise Hawley, who are here from Lillian, Alabama."

Shortest Distance: John and Amy Rude, 1.5 miles

PHYLLIS AND CURTIS BRUDOS

On 07-26-1998, Phyllis and Curtis Brudos sent in the following note to the Secretary:

"We held the first reunion of the family of Pearl Curtis Brudos and Ernest Lewis Brudos on July 4, 1998 at Lake City, South Dakota. There were about 75 people in attendance, coming from Colorado, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Washington, Pennsylvania, Arizona, New York, California, and Massachusetts."

NOVEMBER 1998 LETTER

Here is the text of the letter that was sent by the Secretary to all members on November 26, 1998 (Expenses: printing, $53.70; envelopes, $3.49; postage, $57.60; total, $115.67). We reproduce it here, just for the record.

GRISWOLD NOTES

November 26, 1998

Dear Griswold Cousins:

Thanksgiving. It's one of my favorite holidays, primarily because it makes me feel very connected to the earth and to the colonial Griswolds and to bedrock America.

They were amazing people, those Griswold ancestors of ours, and we should all give thanks, every day of our lives, that those Griswold ancestors of ours, and all the other colonial Americans and pioneers, had the courage, fortitude, compassion, and faith that they did. What a precious legacy they gave us!

It's been a good year for the Clinton Township Griswolds. We had a very enjoyable reunion in the Moosic Grange Hall in Waymart on August 15, and were very pleased that Janet Mann and her family were able to attend. As you will recall, Janet is the president of the Griswold Family Association of America.

During the business meeting following the covered-dish dinner, Janet spoke about the GFA's website on the Internet and invited us, the Clinton Township Griswolds, to submit information to be included there. Accordingly, I got together some information about us and our annual reunions and sent it, electronically, to Janet and her sister, Barbara Ryan, who manages the GFA's website.

To make a long story very short, we're now on the Internet. Go to your computer or to a friend's computer, or to a computer in a public library, and go to the following address on the Internet:

<http://www.Griswoldfamily.org>

The Griswold Family Association's home page will appear before you. Click on and you will see lots of information about and photos of Clinton Township Griswolds! These photos were taken at this year's reunion by Janet Mann. There are nine photographs:

PENNSYLVANIA REUNION

1. The Moosic Grange Hall has been the site of most reunions since March 22, 1906
2. President John Rude discussing the Judson Curtis house in Aldenville where P. Bliss wrote the famous hymn "Almost Persuaded"
3. Minna Olver Blair, age "93 and three-quarters," winner of "oldest person in attendance," and daughter Judy
4. Group Secretary S. Robert Powell displays his listing of all known descendants of John and Elizabeth Griswold
5. Clarence Loomis shows his extensive collection of Loomis genealogical materials and the beautiful wooden box he made to hold his papers
6. S. Robert Powell displays an unusual piece of Griswold Iron Ware collected by Gordon and Louise Hawley
7. Reunion attendees gather for a group picture
8. Moosic Grange Hall, site of the 1988 Reunion
9. Francis Curtis of Northeastern Pennsylvania Griswolds also serves as a Director for the Griswold Family Association

There we are, for the whole world, for anyone with Internet access! It's all quite remarkable.

You'll also recall that at this year's Reunion, we voted to donate "at least $100, more if we can" to the Michael Griswold Memorial Fund. Well, as it turns out, we're in pretty good shape financially, so we donated $200 to the fund on September 15, 1998. In case you've forgotten, it's through Michael Griswold that we connect to the early Griswolds of Wethersfield, CT.

Here is a very informative and useful paragraph of information about those early Griswolds from the GFA webpage:

"The half-brothers Edward and Matthew [Griswold] came to North America in 1639, and settled in Windsor, Connecticut. Francis, who may have been a cousin to Edward, was baptized 10th January, 1605/6 at Henley-in-Arden, Warwickshire. He came to North America in 1636 and settled in Cambridge, Massachusetts. Michael [to whom the Griswolds of Clinton Township, Wayne County, PA trace their line] appears to be a fourth cousin once removed to Edward and half-brothers Matthew and Thomas. Their common ancestor would be John Greswold, Esq., born c. 1440. Research is still in progress. Watch for announcement of a new publication, Ten Generations in England, which is in the final stages of preparation."

The headquarters of the Griswold Family Association of America are located in the Michael Griswold house in Wethersfield, CT. An engraving of the house appears on the GFA webpage. The original part of the house, which dates from the seventeenth century, belonged to Michael and Ann Griswold; significant additions and improvements to the house were made in 1730 by their son Michael, to whom the house and land were left by his father, possession to be taken after the death of his mother.

Here is some background information on the

Michael and Ann Griswold Memorial Stone:

- Michael was one of the three original Griswold emigrants to America and owned property in Wethersfield, CT before 1640. The GFA owns and maintains an historic house in Wethersfield, CT, the original part of which was built in 1630 and once belonged to Michael Griswold. A grave site for Michael and his wife Ann has never been found.
- The GFA Executive Board voted in 1994 to sponsor a memorial headstone project in honor of Michael Griswold (d. 1684) and his wife, Ann. The memorial to be in the Ancient Burying Grounds of the First Church of Christ, Wethersfield, CT. (In 1990 the Griswold Family Association dedicated a memorial headstone in the Indian River Cemetery, Clinton, CT, to Edward Griswold (1607-1690) and his wife, Margaret.)
- Casimir Michalezyk, who designed the Edward Griswold memorial, was commissioned by the GFA to design the Pennsylvania blackslate stone Michael Griswold Memorial, the project to cost $2,200 to $2,500.
- The Michael Griswold Memorial Stone was installed and dedicated at the GFA reunion in October 1997 in Wethersfield, CT. The Reverend John Griswold did the dedication and two children from the Michael Griswold line unveiled the stone. As you will recall, Janet Mann showed us photos at this year's reunion in Clinton Township of the dedication and unveiling of the Michael Griswold Memorial Stone. A memorial publication on Michael Griswold was issued, in which the names of the donors to the memorial fund are listed, including the Clinton Township Griswold Reunion. The total cost of the stone was about $3,200. About two-thirds of the funds have been raised. A report on the fund drive for the Michael Griswold Memorial Stone will be published in the next GFA Bulletin.

A note on this past October's annual meeting of the GFA: In her e-mail to me on October 7th, Barbara Ryan reported: "We had a very nice annual meeting in Seneca Falls and enjoyed John and Amy Rude's company and contributions!"

[On 09-20-98, Janet Mann acknowledged receipt of the $200 donation that the Clinton Township Griswolds gave to the Michael Griswold Memorial Fund. In her e-mail message, Janet states: "Thanks for your very generous donation. I will be sure to announce it at our meeting on October 3, and I hope your group's example inspires some others in the Michael line to contribute..."]

MARK YOUR CALENDARS NOW.

At the head of the third page of photos and text about the northeastern Pennsylvania Griswolds on the GFA webpage is the following announcement:

"The 93rd [Northeastern Pennsylvania] Griswold Reunion will be held at the Homestead Golf Course, Carbondale, PA, on August 14, 1999."

The Homestead Golf Course is owned and operated by Donald W. Powell and his son Donald. At next year's reunion, Donald has announced that there will be a

GRISWOLD GOLF TOURNAMENT.

Details on next August's reunion will be announced on the GFA webpage and through announcements (on paper) from the secretary of the Clinton Township Griswold Reunion, S. Robert Powell.

These are exciting times in which to live. Given the speed and the instantaneity that seem to characterize everything that we do these days, it's really quite wonderful that we, as the Griswold family, can trace our roots back five or six hundred years.

PHILIP P. BLISS

From Glenn Wilmarth's history of Aldenville, we learn that P. P. Bliss composed and wrote the hymn "Almost Persuaded" in the Judson Curtis house (later owned by Arch Kennedy; Lloyd and Regina Kennedy live there now) in Aldenville. This is a fact that Glenn Wilmarth learned from his mother and father, who attended the meetings that P. P. Bliss was holding in the Clinton Center Church at the time. Mrs. Wilmarth heard P. P. Bliss sing "Almost Persuaded" the very night after he composed it.

Glenn Wilmarth remarks on the truthfulness of that assertion as follows: "Mr. Anson Manaton's father, if alive, would tell you this is a fact, because Anson's father, Edmond, was choirmaster. Mr. Manaton had a wonderful tenor voice."

Glenn Wilmarth had the honor of being invited to draw in pastel the picture illustrating the P. P. Bliss hymn "Let the Lower Light Be Burning" at the memorial exercises, attended by 12,000 persons, held at Rome, PA for P. P. Bliss, while Homer Rodeheaver played that hymn on the slide trombone.

P. P. Bliss wrote "Hold the Fort" upon learning about the heroic stand taken by General Corse at Allatoona Pass on October 5, 1864. At that time, General William Tecumseh Sherman, from the top of Kennesaw Mountain, northwest of Atlanta, sent the following message to General John Murray Corse: "Hold out. Relief is coming." General Corse replied: "I am short a cheekbone and an ear, but am able to whip all hell yet."

At the 1998 Griswold Reunion, Gordon and Louise Hawley reported that they attended the 160th annual P. P. Bliss day in Rome, PA, and that there were 300-400 people present. P. P. Bliss, who died at the age of 39, wrote over 300 hymns and other songs. During their day at Rome, the Hawleys heard P. P. Bliss's "Almost Persuaded" played on the composer's own flute, which he received in payment for writing his very first hymn.

REVEREND HENRY CURTIS

For years and years, Alice (Curtis) Lund—and a lot of other family members—sought to answer the question: Where is the Rev. Henry Curtis buried.

Quite a lot was known about his life and ministry but, until recently, no one seemed to know where his earthly remains were interred. And Alice looked and looked: at Clinton Center, at Aldenville, at Bethany, elsewhere. Nothing.

At the time of her death on October 21, 1995, Alice (Curtis) Lund had still not found the grave of her distinguished ancestor—and she never stopped looking.

Alice's earthly remains were interred in the Glen Dyberry Cemetery, Honesdale, in her family plot.

The Rev. Gordon H. Curtis (Box 2327, Arizona City, AZ 85223) was also looking. In July 1997, he wrote to Donald and Robert Powell. Here are the first two paragraphs of his letter:

"I've been engaged for some 27 years in researching my Curtis family, beginning with the emigrant Henry Curtis. Then a year ago, I was given a copy of your fine work on the Griswold family, which included a long line of Curtises. It was a fabulous find for me, as you might imagine. Your data starts with the second Henry Curtis; mine starts with the first.

"My search took me three generations into England. The emigrant Henry had twelve children, ten of which came here about 1802. My researches covered eight of these children, but I was against a wall on the four orphaned children in 1812, when Henry and Alice died in Butternuts. Suddenly, from your work I could identify the youngest child (born within a few months of their sailing) as REV. HENRY CURTIS. From that point, thanks to your work, my Curtis files exploded. . ."

The search continued. On Labor Day in 1997, the Rev. Gordon Curtis was roaming the Wayne County countryside, looking for his ancestor's gravestone. With unimaginable good fortune, he happened upon the stone in the Glen Dyberry cemetery which, MOST IRONICALLY, is the very cemetery in which the earthly remains of Alice (Curtis) Lund are interred!

In death, then, Alice found her long-lost ancestor, the Rev. Henry Curtis. It's a wonderful story.

At the 1998 Griswold Reunion, John Rude reported that during the winter of 1997-1998, he and Amy went with Ray and Eileen Weick to see the Rev. Gordon Curtis and spent a very pleasant day visiting with him. On January 26, 1998, John Rude phoned the Powells and shared the news about the discovery of the burial site of the Rev. Henry Curtis.

Gordon and Louise Hawley provided this background information at the 1998 Griswold Reunion on the Rev. Henry Curtis: "The two oldest sons of Alice and Henry Curtis, the parents of the Rev. Henry Curtis, came to the United States in 1807, with $4,000 cash in hand, and bought property in the Butternuts Valley, NY. In 1810, Alice and Henry Curtis and the rest of the family came to America. A few months of each other, Alice and Henry Curtis died, in 1812, and are buried in Gilbertsville, NY. They were survived by four minor children, the youngest of whom was the Rev. Henry Curtis."

This discovery of the Rev. Henry Curtis's grave site by the Rev. Gordon Curtis became the subject of a full-page article ("Reverend finds Curtis link in Wayne" by Peter Becker) in the Thursday, April 16, 1998 issue (p. 5) of The Wayne Independent.

The article, which is reprinted in this issue of the Griswold Reunion Newsletter on page 14, is filled with interesting Curtis information. The 3 photos in the article (a likeness of Rev. Henry Curtis and a photograph of his tombstone; also a photo of the Rev. Gordon Curtis) are not reprinted herein.

If you would like to visit the Rev. Henry Curtis's grave, it is located, we learn from John Rude, near the Cliff Street entrance (usually locked) to the Glen Dyberry cemetery in Honesdale.

GREETINGS FROM INDIA

Dorothy Graham, like her parents before her, is a seasoned international traveler. I'm not exactly sure where she is at present, but I do know (from e-mail messages received) that a year or so ago she was traveling in Central America—and then to India.

At the Joint Reunion in 1996, Dorothy and her first cousin, Eleanor Rude (daughter of Laura A. Loomis and Walter F. Rude), and the Powell family had a grand visit. It would be very nice to have Dorothy speak about her recent travels at an upcoming Griswold Reunion.

Dorothy is the daughter of Nettie E. Loomis and Dr. John Edgar Graham, both of whom were missionaries to China. Dorothy's mother's paternal grandmother was Laura Griswold, who married Hiram Pease Loomis on May 20, 1846 in Aldenville, PA.

GERMAINE ENDRES

We have had many interesting communications with Germaine DeWolfe Endres in the course of the past year about Griswold history.

Germaine's paternal grandmother was Grace Isabella Corey (m. John Lewis DeWolfe), who was the youngest of the five children of Elizabeth Jane Curtis (1852-1913) and Albert Corey.

Elizabeth Jane Curtis was Edith

Gardner's mother's sister, and Edith Gardner frequently spoke of how much she and her sister Gertrude enjoyed going up to "Aunt Lizzie's," in Union Dale, especially on the Fourth of July, "to get away from all the commotion and whistle blowing in the Carbondale rail yard on America's birthday."

Germaine and her husband Timothy Endres live at 7723 Chatfield Lane, Ellicott, City, MD 21043. We are pleased to welcome Germaine and Tim (if he can get off from work) and Germaine's parents, James and Agnes DeWolfe, to the reunion here today at the Homestead Golf Course.

CLAUDE MANATON

On July 12, 1999, Claude Manaton sent in the 1999 Griswold Reunion questionnaire with updated information about the Manaton family.

He also sent an "11 generation set of pedigree charts, beginning with our ancestor, Michael Griswold, and extending back to Radolphus Greswold of Solihull, Warwick, England, who was born approximately 1279."

If you would like to get a copy of these charts, contact either (1) Claude Manaton at 2965 N.W. 154th Avenue, Beaverton, OR 97006. or (2) S. Robert Powell at R. D. 1, Box 40, Carbondale, PA 18407-9706.

Claude's maternal grandmother was Leah Stiles, who married Ira Charles Wright.

These genealogical discoveries by Claude Manaton trace the line back over 150 years further than the GFA has traced the line. GFA records trace the family line back to John Greswold, Esq., who was born c. 1440.

E-Mail from S. Robert Powell to Claude Manaton, 07-22-1999:

Dear Claude:

This morning I sent you a thank-you note, by surface mail, for your check to the Griswold Reunion and for the eleven-generation set of pedigree charts.

This afternoon, as I continue to prepare for this year's Griswold Reunion, I came across a reference in a text [Glenn Wilmarth's "History of Aldenville"] to Anson and Edmond Manaton of Aldenville (PA). [See the article on P. P. Bliss on page 8 in this issue of the Griswold Reunion Newsletter.] I will send a copy of that text to you this afternoon by surface mail.

E-Mail from Claude Manaton to S. Robert Powell, 07-30-1999:

Dear Robert

I received the information you sent me regarding Anson and Edmond Manaton. They are related to me as every Manaton who ever lived in Wayne County is. They all descend from Charles Manaton who arrived from Helland, Cornwall, England on July 4, 1835, and settled on property near Haines and bordering what is now Long Pond. The last known owner of the remaining property was the Sligh family. Charles was accompanied by his family including his father-in-law Henry Hawken who is buried in the old glass factory cemetery on Dyberry hill. The Edmond Manaton mentioned in Glenn Wilmarth's account is Charles Manaton's third son and a brother to William Manaton who is my great grandfather. It is worthy to note that William Manaton was instrumental in building the Aldenville Methodist Church and there is a large stained glass window on the North side with a memorial insert containing his name. Thanks for the information. I am preparing the family group sheets for the Griswolds and will send them by separate cover when completed.

Regards
Claude

FAMILY GROUP SHEETS

On July 31, 1999, Claude Manaton sent the family group sheets for our Griswold ancestors in the ten generations before Michael Griswold—from George Griswold back to Radolphus Greswold. These data sheets contain a lot of genealogical information about our Griswold ancestors and we are very pleased to have these sheets for our archives.

CLINTON CENTER PIONEER DAY 1992

The last of the Clinton Center Pioneer Days celebrations organized by the late Alice Curtis Lund and by Donald and Robert Powell took place on August 23, 1992. The celebration was an integral component of the morning worship service in the Clinton Center Baptist Church, the Rev. Richard R. Thomas, pastor.

During the "historical" portion of the service, Donald W. Powell presented a brief history of the Clinton Center Baptist Church and the Pioneer Days celebrations that have been held in Clinton Township. Alice Curtis Lund spoke on her ancestor, Rev. Henry Curtis. S. Robert Powell spoke on John Griswold.

Following the singing of "The Church's One Foundation" by the congregation, Alice Lund closed the historical section of the service with some "Sense and Nonsense," wise and witty observations about a wide variety of topics.

MEDIEVAL ENGLISH TITHE BARN

The barn on the hill at the Russell Homestead, Carbondale, is the only remaining barn on the property, where, at one time, there were four. It's also a very old peg barn, the interior of which is very cathedral-like. It seems very similar in construction to—but surely is not—a tithe barn, such as the English built in the Medieval period.

To learn more about old barns, I recently purchased a copy of a very interesting 96-page book by James W.

Griswold titled Medieval English Tithe Barns. James Griswold is now retired, after serving as an administrator at both the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston and the Phillips Exeter Academy. The book costs $15 and can be ordered from Peter E. Randall, publisher, Box 4726, Portsmouth, NH 03802.

There was a small yellow post-it sticker attached to the order form that bore the following message: "If you will attach this sticker to your check, we will also send you a copy of our booklet Our Griswold Family in England before 1639 at no extra charge."

I attached the sticker to my order and now I have a copy of Our Griswold Family in England before 1639, a 43-page publication that appears to be very interesting (although I have not yet had the time to examine it in detail).

INA SQUIRE

Doris Howell phoned the Powells on May 9, 1999 to say that Ken and Jean Morse (5267 Hilltop Drive, Villa Risn, GA 30180 770-836-0403) had been in Clinton Township and attended the morning worship service in the Clinton Center Baptist Church and that they were interested in information on the Squire/Woodmansee families.

Robert Powell sent some family history information by "snail" mail (as mail delivered by the U. S. Postal Service is called these days) on July 23rd. On July 29, Jean Morse sent an e-mail (pk Morse@avana.net) response.

What a pleasant surprise to learn that Jean Morse is a granddaughter of Ina Squire! Helen Powell's mother, Ora Loomis Russell, and Jean Morse's grandmother, Ina Squire Birdsong, were first cousins.

What does this have to do with the Griswolds? Well, as it turns out, Ora Loomis Russell's paternal grandmother was Laura Griswold, who married Hiram Pease Loomis.

Ina Squire's father, Hilon Deroy Squire, and Ora Russell's mother, Mary Emma Squire, were two of the children of Alvin R. Squire and Amy Susan Woodmansee.

About fifteen years ago, Robert Powell made quite a number of inquiries in the Saint Louis, Missouri area, where Hilon Deroy Squire settled, in an effort to locate a descendant of Hilon Deroy Squire who was interested in family history. No luck.

Jean Morse is very interested in Squire/Woodmansee family history and already we have learned a lot of new information. We look forward to sharing family information.

The moral of the story, I guess, is this: When it comes to doing family history—or anything, for that matter—hang in there, and never give up hope!

POETIC INTERLUDE

Andrew Marvell 1621-1678

TO HIS COY MISTRESS

Had we but world enough, and time,
This coyness, lady, were no crime
We would sit down and think which way
To walk, and pass our long love's day.
Thou by the Indian Ganges' side
Shouldst rubies find: I by the tide
Of Humber would complain. I would Love you ten years before the Flood,
And you should, if you please, refuse
Till the conversion of the Jews:
My vegetable love should grow
Vaster than empires, and more slow;
An hundred years should go to praise
Thine eyes and on thy forehead gaze;
Two hundred to adore each breast,
But thirty thousand to the rest;
An age at least to every part,
And the last age should show your heart.
For, lady, you deserve this state,
Nor would I love at lower rate.

But at my back I always hear Time's wingèd chariot hurrying near;
And yonder all before us lie
Deserts of vast eternity.
Thy beauty shall no more be found,
Nor, in thy marble vault, shall sound
My echoing song: then worms shall try
That long preserved virginity,
And your quaint honor turn to dust,
And into ashes all my lust:

The grave's a fine and private place,
But none, I think, do there embrace.
Now therefore, while the youthful hue
Sits on thy skin like morning dew,
And while thy willing soul transpires
At every pore with instant fires,
Now let us sport us while we may,
And now, like amorous birds of prey,
Rather at once our time devour
Than languish in his slow-chapt power.
Let us roll all our strength and all
Our sweetness up into one ball,
And tear our pleasures with rough strife
Thorough the iron gates of life:
Thus, though we cannot make our sun
Stand still, yet we will make him run.
[posthumous, 1681]

Early History of the Griswolds in England and North America

The half-brothers Edward and Matthew came to North America in 1639, and settled in Windsor, Connecticut. Francis, who may have been a cousin to Edward, was baptized 10th January, 1605/6 at Henley-in-Arden, Warwickshire. He came to North America in 1636 and settled in Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Michael appears to be a fourth cousin once removed to Edward and half brothers Matthew and Thomas. Their common ancestor would be John Greswold, Esq., born c. 1440. Research is still in progress. Watch for announcement of a new publication, Ten Generations in England, which is planned publication in late 1999.

The Lady Tafel Project

Tracing the female line

In 1991 members of the GFA developed a format to trace genealogical information on the female Griswold line. We know that there are 70 sets of third generation parents (i.e. the grandchildren of the four original immigrants) whose mothers were born Griswolds, but whose names are no longer Griswold. Many of these lines are followed in other family genealogies such as the Parmalee, Phelps, and Colton families. The GFA format is called a Lady Tafel, adapted from the ahnentafel form produced by NEHGS (The New England Historic Genealogical Society). The Lady Tafel lists only the names in the direct line to the Griswold ancestor given in the GFA publication The Griswold Family - The First Five Generations in America

A Movie Connection

Major Richard S. Griswold: featured character

A movie company is researching Major Richard Sill Griswold of Company C, 9th Infantry, who was killed during the Philippine insurgency on Sept. 28, 1901, in the Balangiga Incident.

Visit the Balangiga website at:
<http://www.newprint.com/balangiga.htm>

The movie production is delayed, but still in the works; watch for further updates

The producer's original query was posted on our website last year. We received a response from a gentleman who is researching a book on the Balangiga incident; he has a fascinating story to tell. He is also looking for information on Major Richard Griswold's descendants through his siblings, since the major never married. He was the son of Richard S. and Rosa E. Griswold of Old Lyme, CT, and was one of seven siblings.

Another researcher has information about the commotion concerning the Balangiga event in Cheyenne, Wyoming, in connection with church bells brought back to Fort Russell; this was featured in the NY Times and Wall St. Journal.

Another correspondent told us about Daniel Griswold who was also killed in the Philippines during the same time period. He was a POW, rank First Lt., promoted to Major and declared missing in action. Daniel was a graduate of Oklahoma State Univ. and was stationed at Fort Sill, OK and Fort Benning, GA, before being sent to the pacific.

If you have information concerning this historical period, we will share it with these correspondents!

Reverend finds Curtis link in Wayne

Cemetery marker opens chapter of family history

By PETER BECKER
Independent County Editor

CURTIS VALLEY—There is a hamlet in Clinton Township by the name of Curtis Valley, an appellation honoring a 19th Century minister of the Gospel and his family of hard laboring farmers, in both cases who tilled their respective harvest fields of Wayne. Lately, a distant cousin who is also a minister by the name of Curtis, revealed at finding another branch of his genealogy, that planted in Wayne County.

Rev. Gordon Curtis, who will be 80 on May 1, lives in Arizona City, AZ, with his wife Noreen. He was born in Binghamton, NY, and attained a college education in chemical engineering, and built aircraft engines during World War II. In 1956 he answered the call to the ministry and served churches in New Jersey, New York City and Rochester, NY.

Since retiring in 1984, he has concentrated more on his love for his family, extending his known roots as far back as possibly 1640 in England. His travels and correspondence has been enriching indeed, discovering his family legacy which he hopes to pass on to his four children and four grandchildren, and his "couple hundred relations" he said he has found, all distant but nevertheless actual, cousins.

He said he plans to write a book on the family. "I'm interested in how Wayne County and New York State farmers lived," he added, "We had some outstanding, fine people. No presidents- that's maybe good."

He stated, "My family may one day be interested, and this will be the only record they'll have."

Stumbled upon grave stone

Last September on Labor Day, Rev. Curtis was roaming the Wayne County countryside looking for his ancestor's gravestone, and with unimaginable good fortune, happened upon the stone, belonging to Rev. Henry Curtis (1801-1867), in Glen Dyberry Cemetery, Honesdale. The discovery opened up several new chapters of family history extending far back in Clinton Township. The late reverend was a pioneer Baptist minister in several local churches. In finding the gravestone, Rev. Gordon Curtis said he has been able to link the family in Wayne County to his family line in New York State, all descendants of an English family.

In the 1600s, the Curtises were shepherds in the fields of Leicestershire, about 70 miles northeast of London. The story begins with the marriage of Thomas Curtis and Mary Heiffer on October 22, 1699. Thomas was 22 and a farm laborer; he prospered greatly, eventually owning his farm and being labeled as a gentleman, a man of wealth.

He bequeathed his farm, to his son Joseph Curtis, who went on to own several farms and a lime kiln, making plaster for the estates of English nobles.

Came to America in 1802

One of his farms was passed on to his youngest son, Henry, born January 5, 1754 at Ilston-on-Hill. In 1779, Henry married Alice Broughton, daughter of a wealthy sheep farmer. they had 12 children baptized in the Anglican Church, which still stands. Although Henry owned productive farms, at the age of 48 in 1802, he left behind what appears to have been a secure life, and took his family to the wilderness of a new nation, the United States, braving an eight week voyage by sea.

Of his 12 children, two daughters remained in England and married, the other 10 children ranged from 22 years to an infant of one year. Where they landed is not clear, but the 1810 Census shows that Henry was living on a farm, in Northeast Providence County, Rhode Island.

Oldest son John, 22, was sent on ahead to establish a home for the large family, migrating to New York State. On the way he married Amy Stillman. In 1810, John was raising a farm with younger brother William in Otsego County, NY. About 1811, the elder Henry with the youngest of his 10 children left Rhode Island and joined the Curtis farm in New York. John deeded the farm to his father, and built a second farmstead.

Tragedy struck

Tragedy struck in 1812, when both parents died suddenly, leaving their 10 children orphaned, four of them minors. The infant that arrived in America was Henry Curtis; he remained unidentified until our present day Curtis discovered him in the 1830 Census, as living in Broome County, NY.

Before 1850, this Henry Curtis- the youngest of the 12 born in England- moved to Wayne County, Pennsylvania, and was a Baptist minister.

The eldest- John Curtis, is the great-great-great-great grandfather of Rev. Gordon Curtis, of Arizona. It is therefore through the little brother of this ancestor that Rev. Gordon Curtis found his link to Wayne County's large Curtis progeny.

Saw a revival in Wayne

Rev. Henry Curtis, whose grave stone is in Glen Dyberry, assisted in establishing many churches in Wayne County. He first took the ministry of Bethany Church and established his farm nearby in Dyberry Township. He served both the Clinton Center and Aldenville churches till his death in 1867. In his obituary, it states, "Although of English birth, his attachment to the country of his adoption and his sympathy for our Republican institutions, was of the most thorough and decided character. For nearly 44 years he had been a faithful and successful minister of the gospel of Christ. His conceptions of domestic life were exalted, yet tender, and fully exemplified in the relations of a father."

A life sketch provided by a grandson, G. P. Knapp of Aldenville, recalls that Rev. Henry Curtis was influenced in the love of Jesus by his devoted mother, and at the age of 16, made his own decision to follow Christ. Although apprenticed to be a cabinet maker, in 1824, he became licensed to preach. That year he also married Eliza Banning and lived on a Broome County farm. They had eight children.

A thousand souls baptized

Of his ministry in Wayne County, from 1839 to 1849 he preached half his time in Damascus; from 1845 to 1857 he chiefly labored for the Lord in Clinton Township. He also preached at Carbondale part of the time during 1849-51 and went back to Bethany, 1853-55. He baptized over 1,000 professed believers. During these years, 75 were added by baptism to the various churches, and in 1854 his four younger children were baptized at the Bethany church.

At Clinton he labored 14 years and enjoyed three general spiritual revivals.

He also preached at Lebanon, Berlin, Ashland, Aldenville, Palmyra, Hawley, Lackawaxen, Barryville and Shohola. In the days of torturous roads, traveled only by horse or on foot, he would cover 35 miles to preach the Gospel. His first sermon in Wayne County was in Clinton.

His last illness was linked to excessive labor and exposure. In his illness, he regretted only that he could no longer labor for Christ; among his last words were, "The first I wish to greet is Jesus, the next day is my mother for she led me to Christ."

The minister willed the farm to his son Eugene. Another son was Dr. George Boardman Curtis, a well known physician in Hawley in his time. A third son, John Judson Curtis, was Wayne County prothonotary, a teacher and manager of a book store. Eugene Kincaid Curtis took over management of the family farm at Edenville in Clinton Township, a hamlet now inundated by the waters of Prompton Reservoir.

Sketch of Eugene Curtis

The Wayne Independent for Dec. 15, 1911, provided a life sketch of the recently deceased Eugene Curtis. We learn that his father, the minister, baptized Eugene in Glass Factory Pond near Bethany during the winter of 1854; he went on to be deacon in the Baptist Church over 30 years. Her overcame early hardships of palsy, leaving him partially crippled in his feet, and losing one eye to an accident.

He had a remarkable tenor singing voice, conducting singing schools and entertainments in the County. He was also prominent in the temperance movement for many years, and was active in the Prohibition Party, an early attempt to ban liquor production and sales by legislation. Eugene taught about 20 terms of school.

His first wife, Irene Clift, died in 1872 after bearing two children, James and Emma; he remarried to May Stevens, who gave him a son Henry Percy and Bessie May.

Eugene respected his father's wishes in keeping the farm; when he died in 1911, he willed the farm to his son Percy Curtis; Percy kept the farm only a short time before moving to Bethlehem. The property passed out of Curtis hands at about the time the land was condemned for the reservoir.

Hallmarks seen

The first son of Rev. Henry and Eliza Curtis was Henry Banning Curtis, who was deeded his first farm by his parents and later acquired other lands in Curtis Valley. He became a successful Wayne County farmer, able to give financial aid to his five sons and four daughters for their education. Some descendants of this family still farm in the area. "This family's hallmark was their devotion to church and family," the Arizona descendant penned recently. "The Clinton Center Church was one of their grandfather's parishes and the family carried on that connection to the present time."

When Henry Banning Curtis died in 1907, his property was willed to his wife Louisa; she died in 1912, when the estate was divided among the children. The Curtis homestead went to his youngest daughter Dorothy.

The Curtises were great lovers of music; many were accomplished instrumentalists and vocalists. the later generations of these pioneers have engaged in computer technology and some have pursued graduate college work.

Like a detective

Rev. Gordon Curtis of Arizona said he has spent 27 years tracing his New York families unaware of the many Curtis families that have farmed in Wayne County until he discovered the identity of the Honesdale graves.

His genealogical attempts have been his own initiative, he said, having no family history work passed on to him already completed. There were no oral histories and no living, older relatives to consult. A few fortunate breaks along the way have contributed to what amounts to a detective's trail of hunches, clues and evidence. Two years ago he was researching the 1850 Census data in Broome County, and on a tip, rediscovered the Rev. Henry Curtis who moved to Wayne County, confirming this with a look at Census records at the Wayne County Historical Society. Now he's trying to establish his family connections in England, and was recently mailed photographs of the church his ancestors attended in the 1600's.

He noted that by coincidence, he was ordained to the ministry and was preaching in Rochester, NY, exactly 100 years after Rev. Henry Curtis was stationed behind the pulpit at the Clinton Baptist Church.

Lost grandma, Flood of '42

He was in Wayne County once before, to see his step-grandfather, Frank Stephenson, who had a coal distributorship in Hawley. Gordon's grandmother, Mrs. Frank Stephenson, and great grandmother Mrs. Ida Cook, lived on Welwood Avenue in Hawley, and both perished in the Flood of 1942.

Anyone with questions or information may contact Rev. Gordon Curtis at P.O. Box 2327, Arizona City, AZ 85223.

Rev. Gordon Curtis said he intends to be in New Jersey this July for a family wedding, and hopes to be able to visit the new correspondents he has made, distant Curtis cousins living in Wayne County.

The Homestead Golf Course, site of today's Griswold Open, is located on Route 106, three miles west of Carbondale. It was designed and constructed by Walter Silas Powell (01-12-1913–04-20-1994) and Russell Thomas Powell (07-22-1946–01-02-1985), son of Walter and Helen (Russell) Powell. It is situated on the James and Margaret (Gillespie) Russell homestead, which was established in 1841 and which has been in the family ever since. In the late 1980s, through the efforts of S. Robert Powell, son of Walter and Helen Powell, the Russell Homestead was officially recognized by the commonwealth of Pennsylvania as a Century Farm.

The Homestead Golf Course opened on May 20, 1962. It was operated by Walter and Helen Powell and Russell Powell until 1987, when it was closed. For the period 1962–1972, there were 9 holes; 1973–1974, 14 holes; 1975 on, 18 holes. On April 27, 1998, Donald W. Powell, son of Walter and Helen Powell, and Donald's son, Donald, reopened the Homestead Golf Course. It is fitting that today's Griswold Open, the first ever, should take place on a golf course with direct Griswold connections.

2006

The centennial reunion of the descendants of John and Elizabeth (Crittenden) Griswold of Clinton Township, Wayne County, PA took place on Saturday, August 19, 2006.

The organizers of the reunion were John and Amy Rude, Gordon and Louise Hawley, and S. Robert Powell.

The day-long celebration began at 9 A.M., with a coffee hour and reception at the Presbyterian Chapel on Tenth Street in Honesdale.

The Northeastern Pennsylvania Griswolds were very pleased to welcome Sara L. French, president of the Griswold Family Association of America, Inc. to the Northeastern Pennsylvania Griswold Reunion.

The following family members signed the guest register: Sara L. French, Darwin Brudos, Eleanor Brudos, Millie Helt, Edward Helt, Sally Helt Ostrom, Judy Margarum, Mary Schermerhorn, Bill Schermerhorn, Jill Linko, Sarah Linko, Greg Linko, Elaine Quigley, Judith Blair, Donna Stiles, Robert Stiles, Craig Stiles, Billy Stiles, Mary Chopak, Andy Chopak, Robert Geuther, Becky Geuther, S. Robert Powell, Marie Savokinas, Ray Savokinas, John Rude, Amy Rude, Patricia Peltz, Marjorie Wildenberg, Doris Howell Crossman, George Crossman, Dr. Dwight Rude, Linda Rude, Laura Rude, and Philip Rude. Special thanks to Darwin and Eleanor Brudos for taking charge of the sign-in process and for making sure that everyone signed the register.

Welcome folders, prepared by Gordon and Louise Hawley, were distributed to all at the morning reception. Included in the folder were a program of the day's activities and copies of a wide range of interesting Griswold documents and photographs, including, (1) an Edward Griswold descendant chart: Edward-Michael [came to America as a very young boy in a party led by the vicar of St. Peter's Church, Rev. Charles Chauncey]-Thomas-Samuel-John-John-Francis, (2) a map and photographs of important Griswold landmarks in England, (3) historical notes about John Griswold, 1754-1843, and about the 1920 Clinton Township Griswold Pioneer Day celebration, (4) the Elizabeth Griswold pension application, (5) a chart of the descendants of Henry Banning Curtis and Louisa Griswold and a photograph of them and their descendants that was taken in 1906, (6) a photograph of the Griswold/Curtis Homestead at Curtis Valley, (7) copies of photo copy prints by Donald W. Powell of daguerreotypes of Francis J. Griswold and Jane Loomis, and (8) a photograph by Gordon Hawley of the Louisa Griswold Curtis linen coverlet, which was presented to "the Powell boys" by Edith and Gertrude (Gardner) Snyder, and which was displayed for this photograph at a Northeastern Pennsylvania Griswold Reunion, circa 1999, by Donald W. Powell I and II and Amy Rude. Special thanks to Gordon and Louise Hawley for preparing these beautiful and very informative welcome folders for the family.

Following the morning reception, the family then boarded a bus (some members of the group followed along in their own cars), and headed West on Route 6.

As the bus traveled West on Route 6 from Honesdale to Waymart, S. Robert Powell spoke about the celebrated Delaware and Hudson Canal Company's Gravity Railroad from Carbondale to Honesdale, and pointed out portions of that transportation system (which opened on October 9, 1829) which can be seen at the present time from Route 6. At Honesdale the anthracite coal from the Lackawanna Valley and other products were loaded into boats on the D&H Canal, which ran from Honesdale to Rondout on the Hudson River.

Robert pointed out that Locks 13 and 14 on the D&H Canal were named GRISWOLD. Those two locks (Pennsylvania Section, Lackawaxen Division) were 19 miles East of Honesdale in Pike County. The telegraph call for these two locks was "GD." It is not yet known whether or not there is a family connection between the Griswolds who operated these two locks and the Griswold family of Clinton Township. Chances are good, however, that there is a family connection between the two Griswold groups.

(For detailed information on these two locks, see David G. Barber's "A Guide to the Delaware & Hudson Canal, pp. 144, 151-152. The Grinnell family, like the Griswolds, were among the pioneer settlers of Clinton Township. Lock 28 on the New York Section of the D&H Canal, between Port Hyxson and Ellenville, was named "Chris Grinnel's" (see Barber's book, pp. 58, 62-63). Is there a connection between Chris Grinnel--whose surname is probably a spelling variation of "Grinnell"--and the Clinton Township Grinnells?)

As the bus neared Waymart, the 43 windmills (213 feet tall, each with three blades 110 feet long, each windmill equipped with a 1.5 megawatt GE wind turbine that weighs 190 tons and is designed to operate in winds up to 56 mph.) in the Waymart Wind Energy Center (Florida Power and Light Energy) at the summit of the Moosic Mountain came into view.

The first stop on the Griswold bus tour was at the Delaware and Hudson Railroad's steam station in Waymart. Jane Varcoe, the president of the Waymart Area Historical Society, welcomed the Griswold tour to the station, which is located in the back yard of Ms. Varcoe's property. A very interesting and informative tour of the station was given by Ms. Varcoe.

The second stop on the Griswold tour was at the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company's depot in Waymart. Many members of the reunion group walked the two blocks to this second rail station, which is the only extant station on the D&H Gravity system. Jane Varcoe welcomed the tour group to the station, which has recently been beautifully restored, and gave a very interesting talk about the station and the rail system that passed through Waymart in the period 1829-1931.

The bus then headed North on Route 296, the former "Belmont and Easton Turnpike," which is known by many Griswolds as "the North and South."

The third stop by the Griswold Centennial bus was at the Clinton Center Baptist Church Cemetery, where many Griswolds, including John and Elizabeth (Crittenden) Griswold, and a large number of their descendants and their families are interred.

Among the stones visited in the cemetery was the large flint conglomerate stone at the entrance to the cemetery. On this stone, which was unveiled by Laura (Griswold) Loomis and dedicated on August 27, 1915, are given the names of the early settlers of Clinton Township (the name Griswold is the sixth one in the list of 14 names) and the founders and ministers of the Clinton Center Baptist Church. Present at those dedication ceremonies were nearly 400 persons.

The group then visited the two stones on the site where the earthly remains of John and Elizabeth (Crittenden) Griswold are interred: the stone marking the graves of John and Elizabeth, as well as the commemorative flint conglomerate stone, with bronze plaque attached, that was erected in 1920 and dedicated on the Clinton Center Pioneer Day that was celebrated on September 4, 1922.

Everywhere in the cemetery were groups of 21st century Griswolds who were visiting the burial sites of members of their particular branch of the larger Griswold family. It was observed that in the Clinton Cemetery, unlike many cemeteries, there is not "an old section" and "a new section." Rather, interments in many of the family plots span the time period from the 1840s to the present, making the Clinton Cemetery very much a "living" cemetery. The Clinton Cemetery is carefully looked after by Stuart Terrel (president and caretaker) and John Rude (secretary/treasurer).

At about noon, the Centennial Griswold group repaired to the hall on the ground floor of the Clinton Center Church, where turkey, ham, and tuna sandwiches and desserts were served. Arrangements for these refreshments, which were thoroughly enjoyed by all, were made in advance by the Reunion Committee at the Waymart Deli on Route 6 and the refreshments were picked up before the Griswold bus left Waymart on its way to the Clinton Center Cemetery.

Following the luncheon, family members boarded the bus, which continued North on Route 296. As the bus passed the former Moosic Grange 1041 building, Robert pointed to the site at the foot of the mountain up behind the Moosic Grange Hall, where the old road was situated, where the original John and Elizabeth Griswold log cabin was erected following their arrival in Clinton Township about 1810 or 1811.

At Curtis Valley, the bus stopped for a few minutes in front of the Griswold/Curtis Homestead at Curtis Valley. This Homestead was the former Cold Water Tavern, which was constructed in 1819 by Levi Bennett for John Griswold.

The tour then continued North on Route 296 in the direction of Pleasant Mount to the Sherwood Cemetery, which has been beautifully cleaned up and which is maintained by Dwight Hauenstein of Pleasant Mount. Many, but not all, members of the Griswold tour trekked down the dirt road and through the woods to the Sherwood Cemetery, where Orrin and Lois (Deming) Griswold and many members of that branch of the Griswold family are interred.

Many new and important discoveries of Griswold burial sites were made in the course of this visit to the Sherwood Cemetery.

For the record, here are the inscriptions on the stones visited by the Griswold tour:

The Griswold centennial group then journeyed, via White's Valley and Bethany, to Honesdale, where they visited the Glen Dyberry Cemetery, which is very large, very old, and very beautiful. Not far from the entrance to the Cemetery, John Rude pointed out the tombstone of Rev. James R. Remsen, who was one of the pioneer ministers of the Clinton Center Baptist Church and whose name is listed on the bronze plaque on the flint conglomerate stone (unveiled and dedicated on August 27, 1915) at the entrance to the Clinton Cemetery.

As the bus continued into the Cemetery, Robert Powell pointed out the location of the tombstone that marks the grave of Alice (Curtis) Lund, who was a very enthusiastic supporter and promoter for many years of Griswold and Clinton Township genealogical and historical activities and programs.

Far into the Cemetery, the bus transporting the centennial Griswold group arrived at the tombstones that mark the graves of Rev. Henry Curtis and Eliza Banning. Robert noted that Edith Gardner and Gertrude (Gardner) Snyder and Alice (Curtis) Lund--and other very dedicated and conscientious Griswolds, now deceased--searched and searched for many years, unsuccessfully, for the burial sites of Rev. Henry Curtis and Eliza Banning. In 1999, Rev. Gordon H. Curtis (Arizona City, AZ) discovered their burial sites in the Glen Dyberry Cemetery, Honesdale. Ironically, Alice (Curtis) Lund died, not knowing that the long-sought-after earthly remains of her ancestors, Rev. Henry and Eliza (Banning) Curtis, are not only interred in Glen Dyberry but also are not far from where the earthly remains of Alice herself were interred following her death on October 21, 1995.

Here are the inscriptions on the Rev. Henry Curtis and Eliza Banning tombstones:

The Griswold tour bus then returned to the Presbyterian Chapel in Honesdale, where the bus tour ended. The "Big Bus" that was chartered for the day for the Griswold tour was provided by Walter J. and Nancy J. Garing, Honesdale. The driver for the tour was Amy Savitz, who thoroughly enjoyed her day with the Griswolds and noted on several occasions how interesting and informative the day had been.

Griswold family members then got into their automobiles and traveled to the Fireside Restaurant in Dyberry, where they enjoyed a beautiful dinner buffet (stuffed chicken breast, baked ham).

Before the dinner was served, it was brought to the attention of the Reunion that three members of the group were celebrating their birthdays: Donna (Arnold) Stiles (August 19), Mary (Gustitus) Chopak (August 18), and Marie (Gustitus) Savokinas (August 18). The group sang Happy Birthday to the three birthday celebrants as birthday cupcakes were presented to them. Following the birthday cupcake presentations, Sara French, on behalf of the Griswold Family Association of America, presented to the Northeastern Pennsylvania Griswold Reunion a beautifully decorated and delicious "Griswold Centennial Birthday Cake."

Following the dinner, an historical program, under the direction of S. Robert Powell, was presented. To begin the program, Sara French, on behalf of the Griswold Family Association of America, presented the group with a handsome plaque to commemorate the day. Here is the text on the plaque:

In Honor of the 100th ANNIVERSARY of the NORTHEAST PENNSYLVANIA
GRISWOLD REUNION
Descendants of John and Elizabeth (Crittenden) Griswold
Wayne County, Pennsylvania Pioneers
1906-2006

Presented by the GRISWOLD FAMILY ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA, INC.

Following the plaque presentation, Robert Powell read to the group the minutes of the first Griswold Reunion on March 21, 1906. Those minutes are given above as the opening paragraphs of this report.

Robert brought to the attention of the centennial group the fact that the minutes of that first Griswold Reunion (which include the names and ages of the 77 persons in attendance at that organizational meeting) and all of the Reunions since then have been recorded by nine secretaries: Theron Orsemus Loomis, Arthur Hamblin Curtis, Claude Fay Arnold, Flora Lillian (Loomis) Brown, Edith A. Gardner, Rena (Griswold) Cowperthwaite, Carrie Inez (Curtis) Loomis, Margaret (Remsen) Rude, and S. Robert Powell.

"The Griswold name is everywhere, it seems," said Robert. Everyone knows about--and many people collect--Griswold ironware, and there are communities and streets with the name Griswold in many communities in America. Not too long ago, I finished reading Kenneth Silverman's 2003 biography of Samuel F. B. Morse, titled Lightning Man. Therein, on page 296, we read the following brief newspaper notice: 'Professor Morse, the lightning man, as he is called, was married on Thursday last, to Miss Sarah E. Griswold, of Louisiana.' "

Darwin Brudos, Schenectady, NY, then read to the group an account, titled "Shredded Wheat Anyone?," that was written by his mother, Pearl Evelyn Curtis, about the family's automobile trip from South Dakota to Clinton Township, Wayne County, Pennsylvania to visit the family "back home" at Curtis Valley. This very interesting and entertaining account about the Curtis family's automobile journey in two Model T. Fords, will soon be published along with additional Curtis family recollections. In the meantime, Darwin Brudos has graciously provided the Northeastern Pennsylvania Griswold Reunion with a copy of the complete text for our archives.

Jeff, from the Fireside Restaurant, then took a photograph of the Griswold Centennial group and provided the Reunion with a paper copy of the photograph. He will do some fine tuning of the original digital photograph and then e-mail an electronic copy of the photograph to the secretary of the Reunion. At that time, electronic and/or paper copies of the group photograph will be available to all interested persons. Copies will also be sent to newspapers and other media along with an account of the Centennial Griswold Reunion in Wayne County, Pennsylvania.

The Secretary noted that many members of the centennial Griswold tour took photographs in the course of the day and asked that family members share their photos of this historic Griswold event. "Perhaps there is a member, either someone who is here today or a Griswold out there in America," said Robert, "who would be interested in coordinating and making available to all interested family members the photographic record of the day's events and activities"?

The Secretary, on behalf of the entire Griswold family, then thanked John and Amy Rude, in particular, for their dedicated and conscientious work in planning the Centennial Reunion. John and Amy Rude were then warmly applauded by all present for all that they did to make the day the wonderful success that it was.

The Secretary reported that all of the Northeastern Pennsylvania Griswold Reunion's bills and expenses, including all those relating to the centennial reunion, had been paid and that the balance in the organization's bank account is $244.73. "With that balance in the account," said Robert, "it will be possible (1) to produce and mail copies of the minutes of the Centennial Reunion to all Griswolds on the mailing list, and (2) to make plans for and announce the 101st Northeastern Pennsylvania Griswold Reunion."

It was unanimously agreed that the descendants of John and Elizabeth (Crittenden) Griswold would hold their 101st reunion at noon on the third Saturday of August 2007.

With no additional business to conduct, it was regularly moved (John Rude) and seconded (Pat Peltz) that the Centennial Reunion of the Descendants of John and Elizabeth (Crittenden) Griswold, Wayne County, PA be adjourned. The motion carried.

Respectfully submitted,

S. Robert Powell
Secretary

MAPLEWOOD CEMETERY, CARBONDALE, PENNSYLVANIA (Part I)

Maplewood Cemetery was established, we learn from 1880* (p. 445), when the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company deeded, in 1831, land on the bluff above its shops (see the map on page 2) to J. W. Burnham, D. B. Blanchard, Lathrop Burgess, Bonaparte Baker, John Bowen 2nd, and R. E. Marvin, as trustees for a Protestant cemetery. Subscriptions were raised to improve the ground, and lots were sold by auction on April 27, 1833. The deed for the first eight lots sold in Maplewood Cemetery was displayed in the Carbondale Loan Exhibition that was held in the City Hall, Carbondale, PA, February 1879. In that exhibition that deed was item number 12 in "J. M. Poore's Collection." From a copy of the catalogue of this exhibition in the document archive of Mr. Kurt A. Reed of Lake Ariel, PA, we learn that this exhibition was under the direction of the following persons: President--E. E. Hendrick. Vice-President--J. W. Aitken. Sec.--J. E. Burr. Cor. Sec.--S. S. Benedict. Executive Committee--J. F. Kinback, T. R. Lathrope, J. B. Van Bergen, Mrs. A. Watt, Mrs. E. E. Hendrick, Mrs. E. M. Peck. Finance Committee--E. E. Hendrick, J. F. Kinback, E. M. Peck. Paintings--T. R. Lathrope, J. W. Aitken, A. Perkins, J. E. Burr, E. M. Peck, Pierce Butler, R. Manville. Ceramics, &c.--J. W. Aitken, J. B. Van Bergen, A. C. Hall, Mrs. E. E. Hendrick, Mrs. J. W. Marcy, Mrs. A. Watt, Miss Maggie Love, Mr. G. S. Kimball. Manuscripts, &c.--Rev. C. W. Smith, D. N. Lathrope, S. S. Benedict, P. S. Joslin, S. E. Raynor. Home Arts--Mrs. E. E. Hendrick, Mrs. Rollin Smith, Mrs. Chas. Mellen, Mrs. E. M. Peck, Mrs. Van Bergen. Entertainments--Geo. Burrell, Wm. Evans, J. W. Aitken. More of the particulars of this extraordinary exhibition will be reported in forthcoming issues of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

From its establishment in 1831 up to 1884, Maplewood Cemetery was a Protestant cemetery. When the Cemetery was incorporated, on November 12, 1884, however, the sectarian nature of Maplewood Cemetery was done away with. Article 4 of the By-Laws and Rules and Regulations of the Maplewood Cemetery Association (adopted November 12, 1884) states: "No lot shall be held in said Cemetery except for the purpose of sepulture, and shall be transferable only with the consent of the Board of Directors, and no person shall be a member of the Association unless he or she is a lot holder. No distinction of person, party or sect shall be allowed in the disposal of lots, and lots may be sold to individuals, societies or congregations under such rules and regulations as the Directors may adopt." Whether or not any non-Protestants were interred in Maplewood Cemetery in the period 1831-1884, it is not known. No indication of religion is given in the interment records, be it known, for any of those persons interred in Maplewood Cemetery in the entire history of the Cemetery.

Mrs. Evans, a Welshwoman, was the first person interred in Maplewood Cemetery. She died at the age of 73 on October 29, 1832, and was interred on October 31, 1832. In 1880 (p. 445) the following information about the first burial in Maplewood Cemetery is given: "The first burial was that of a William Evans, who died October 29th, 1832, aged 75 years." It is the author's belief that the person who consulted the interment records of Maplewood Cemetery in preparing the statement here reported regarding the first burial in Maplewood Cemetery mis-read the data presented in the interment records. The author's reading of the first entry in the interment records is confirmed by the reading of the Honorable Thomas Voyle, who audited the books of Maplewood Cemetery that were kept by Raymond W. Graves for the period October 25, 1869--October 20, 1881. In the margin on page 76 of his report,** the Honorable Thomas Voyle noted: "No. of Death Buried from Oct. 29, 1832 to Oct. 20, 1881 2431 persons First person Buried was Mrs. Evans a Welchwoman age 73 years Oct. 29, 1832." In the 149 years following the burial of Mrs. Evans on October 31, 1832, over seven thousand additional interments were made in Maplewood Cemetery. Listed in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA on pages 4-10 and 15-21 are the names of the 3,445 persons who were interred in Maplewood Cemetery in the period 1831-1892. The following data are also given about those 3,445 persons: age, cause of death, date of death, date of burial, and nationality. Note: the interment records for Maplewood Cemetery in the period 1892-1982 will be presented in Volume III, Number 3 (February 17, 1982) of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

The nationalities of those persons interred in Maplewood Cemetery in the period 1831-1892 are as follows: American, Dutch, English, French, German, Hungarian, Irish, Norwegian, Prussian, Scottish, Swedish, Swiss, and Welsh. The majority of those 3,445 persons are of the following nationalities: American, English, Scottish, and Welsh.

Acknowledgments

The author, S. Robert Powell, would like, first of all, to thank all of those record keepers, most of whose names have not yet been learned by him, who put to paper the extraordinary fund of information that they did about Maplewood Cemetery in the period 1831-1892. Without their records, this history could not have been written. Hopefully, their names will be learned before Part II of this history is completed, so that their names can be reported in this quarterly.

Secondly, the author would like to thank Mr. W. LaVerne ("Pat") Carter, the present Superintendent of Maplewood Cemetery, for graciously making available to him all of the records of Maplewood Cemetery.

Finally, the author would like to thank Miss Edith A. Gardner of Carbondale, PA, and Mr. Donald W. Powell of Carbondale and Chester, PA, for their enthusiastic and indefatigable assistance in gathering the data that constitute the foundation of this history of Maplewood Cemetery.

From the Editor:

The present issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA contains Part I of the history of Maplewood Cemetery, the oldest extant cemetery in Carbondale, PA. Given the fact that in the years 1831-1892, the time period covered in Part I of this history, Carbondale was among the most important cities in northeastern Pennsylvania, Maplewood Cemetery is, therefore, from the perspective of the historian, the genealogist, and the social scientist, among the most important cemeteries in northeastern Pennsylvania.

In Part I of this history, the author, S. Robert Powell, presents not only the external history of Maplewood Cemetery, but also gives the following data about the 3,445 persons interred in Maplewood Cemetery in the period 1831-1892: name, age, cause of death, date of death, date of burial, and nationality. Part II of this history of Maplewood Cemetery will be published in Volume III, Number 3 (February 17, 1982) of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, and will contain not only the external history of the Cemetery in the period 1892-1982, but also an interment list--giving name, age, cause of death, date of death, date of burial, and nationality, of the over 3,500 persons interred in Maplewood Cemetery in the period 1892-1982.

Also contained in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA are Genealogical and Local History Notes. These notes, from various sources, are textual and photographic data about the eleven counties of northeastern Pennsylvania and, it is our opinion, are potentially useful to those persons who are engaged in research on (1) individuals or families from northeastern Pennsylvania, and (2) the history of northeastern Pennsylvania. Future issues of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA will also contain Genealogical and Local History Notes on the eleven counties of northeastern Pennsylvania.

The next issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA (Volume II, Number 4) will contain the history of the schools of northeastern Pennsylvania in the period 1895-1981, plus Genealogical and Local History Notes. It will be written by S. Robert Powell and will be published on May 20, 1981.

CARBONDALE

CARBONDALE, PA. Scale: 20 rods to the inch. Detail of the map of Carbondale that is given on pages 46-47 of D. G. Beers' Atlas of Luzerne County Pennsylvania From actual surveys by and under the Direction of D. G. Beers. Engraved by Worley & Bracher, 320 Chestnut St. Printed by E. Bourquin, 320 Chestnut St. (Philadelphia: A. Pomeroy and Co., 320 Chestnut St., 1873). The cemetery that is identified on the map as "PROTESTANT CEM" is Maplewood Cemetery. The street that is identified as "BLUFF ST." is presently called Cemetery Street. The street that is identified as "CEMETERY ST." is presently called Robinson Avenue. The five streets between what is named "BLUFF ST." on the map and "BELMONT ST." are presently named: Robinson Avenue, Maple Avenue, Oak Avenue, Cherry Avenue, and Chestnut Avenue.

In 1880 (p. 445) it is stated: "The grounds [of Maplewood Cemetery] have been enlarged three times and are surrounded by a strong stone wall." Maplewood Cemetery was established in 1831. This map was drawn in 1873. 1880 was published in 1880. It seems likely that the size of Maplewood Cemetery as shown on this map reflects at least one--perhaps all three--of the enlargements referred to in the statement from 1880. Whatever the case, Maplewood Cemetery presently occupies the entire bluff between present-day Cemetery Street and the Lackawanna River and extends north to a point about midway between present-day Cherry and Chestnut Avenues.

Note on this map the numerous data about the Delaware & Hudson Canal Company's Rail Road. At the top center is Coal Brook Breaker; near Dundaff Road is a Car House; in the center are two Passenger Depots, Miners Houses, and a Round House; at the lower left are Car House, Car Shop, Machine Shop; at the lower right is [Stationary] Engine No. 1 on the D. & H. C. Co.'s Gravity Rail Road.

The property owners listed on "BLUFF ST." (starting at the bottom of the map) are: S. Thompson, Jno Nichols, J. Garrard, I. Robbins, Jas Mc M, Thos Morgan, S. Lester, T. H. White, J. Kirkbride, J. Kirkbride, J. Mark, W. H. Richmond. The property owners listed on the left side (facing the map and starting at the bottom of the map) of "BELMONT ST." are: Mrs. McLant, Wm Allen, J. B. Hamlin, A. Wyllie, E. Wells, Wm Boyd, Thos Harvey, Wm Harvey, Wm H[arvey], F. Klutz, Jos Birkett, G. L. Yarns, A. Yarns, E. Y. Davies, J. Ames, J. McMinn, J. Stuart, J. R. Shepherd, W. H. Richmond. The property owners on the right side of "BELMONT ST." are: Rowley & Foster, G. Burrell, J. Copeland, J. Alexander, J. B. Varnan, W. Gathercoal, A. Wyllie, W. Boyd, Mrs. Godding, R. J. Holland, Benj M Kibbe, Mrs. Yarns, H. Lowrie, H. Lowrie, Chas S Lowrie, Clarks Mine, E. Palmer, L. Garner, J. Thompson, A. Dilts, J. Birkett, J. Bryant, Peck, F. Taylor, J. Flood, J. Peck, W. Bowers, T. Morrison, J. Drennang. The property owners along the north side of "CANAN ST." are: L. Bunnett, S. Grenell, J. Love, J. Watt & Sons, F. Blanchard, J. Stuart, G. H. Squier, Mrs. McQuade, A. Mitchell. The property owners along the south side of "CANAN ST." are: Mrs. Hunter, L. G. Blair, Bagley, L. Barber, D. & H. C. Co., T. Hart, D. Barrett. The property owners along the right side of that portion of "DUNDAFF ROAD" that is shown on the map are (starting at the top of the map): P. Hart, J. Corrigan, M. Brown, Mrs. Melville, P. Kennedy, J. Oscar, P. Lynch, J. Flanley, P. Haley, W. McKale, Nealon, J. Moran, Miss Flanigan, W. McMyne, W. Connor, Mrs. Kennedy, P. Giblin, P. Bridget.

The cemetery that is marked "CATHOLIC CEM" on the map no longer exists. The remains of those persons interred therein have been removed to other cemeteries in the Carbondale area.

It is not only residents of the city of Carbondale who are buried in Maplewood Cemetery. The interment records indicate that citizens of the following communities, among others, are buried in Maplewood Cemetery: Archbald, Blakely, Camp McLare, Canaan, Carbondale Township, Clifford, Dickson, Dundaff, Fell Township, Forest City, Hawley, Honesdale, Hyde Park, Narrowsburg, Olyphant, Pittston, Providence, Scott, Scranton, Waymart, Wilkes-Barre.

Some of the interments in Maplewood Cemetery, in addition, are removals from other cemeteries, either in Carbondale or elsewhere in northeastern Pennsylvania. In the interment records we find the following notations: "Removed from Yard," "From Old Yard," "Removed from Scranton," "Remains brought from Dundaff," "Removed from Hyde Park," "Bones removed from under Presbyterian Church, Supposed to be an Irish woman from Shanty hill, buried about fifty years ago," "Removed from Bradford," "Removed from Clifford," "Brought from Wayne County," "Removed from Peckville," "These children were removed from South Canaan in 1861 & 1865."

The scribes who kept the interment records of Maplewood Cemetery, 1831-1892:

Each of the pages in the interment records of Maplewood Cemetery in the period 1831-1892 is headed: "Record of Interments, &c., Maplewood Cemetery, Carbondale, Lackawanna Co., Pa." (see facsimile of that heading at the top of page 4). Given that heading, we know that the present record books of Maplewood Cemetery are not the original records that were kept by the Cemetery record keepers. This is true because Lackawanna County was not established until August 13, 1878, which means that the interment records for the Cemetery that were kept from 1831 up to and perhaps after August 13, 1878 were copied into the present interment records from the original records. What probably happened is this: After Maplewood Cemetery was incorporated on November 12, 1884, the Cemetery officers had printed the present record books. At that time, it is our supposition, the Cemetery interment records were copied over.

On the basis of graphological evidence, the author has concluded that the interment records, 1831-1892, were copied into the present record books by three scribes:

Entry Numbers	Time Period	Scribe Number
1 - 371	Oct. 1832 - June 1845	1
372 - 1301	June 1845 - Dec. 1863	2
1302 - 1451	Dec. 1863 - Dec. 1864	1
1452 - 2990	Dec. 1864 - Dec. 1888	3
2991 - 3445	Dec. 1888 - Dec. 1892 and up to Oct. 1894	2

The recopying of the records must have been done as a group project. Scribe number 1 copied numbers 1-371 and numbers 1302-1451; scribe number 2 copied numbers 372-1301 and numbers 2991-3445 (and up to Oct. 1894); scribe number 3 copied numbers 1452-2990. If the original records are still extant, and if they someday come to light, perhaps it will be possible to be more specific about the scribes who kept the burial records of Maplewood Cemetery in the period 1831-1892.

Whose duty was it to keep the interment records of the Cemetery in the period 1831-1884? The Superintendent? The Secretary? After the Cemetery was incorporated in 1884, it was the duty of the Secretary to keep the interment records--see Article 18 of the By-Laws and Rules and Regulations.

Regarding the names of the Superintendents of Maplewood Cemetery and the officers of the Maplewood Cemetery Association in the period 1831-1892, the following information is presently known:

1. J. W. Burnham was Superintendent in 1832, and Raymond W. Graves was Superintendent in 1862 (1880, p. 445).
2. From a newspaper clipping that is pasted onto page 5 of Thomas Voyle's audit of the records of R. W. Graves of the Cemetery in the years 1869-1881 (see the second footnote on page 1), we learn that at the annual meeting of the lot owners of Maple Grove Cemetery on Tuesday evening, October 19, 1869, in the City Hall in Carbondale, that Elias E. Thomas was elected President and I. D. Richards was elected Secretary. At that same meeting, the following were elected as Trustees for the ensuing year: S. S. Benedict, R. W. Graves, Elias E. Thomas, I. D. Richards, J. B. Van Bergen, and A. O. Hanford. Note: In this newspaper clipping about the annual lot owners meeting, Maplewood Cemetery is referred to as Maple Grove Cemetery. This is the only instance in which the author has seen Maplewood Cemetery referred to as Maple Grove Cemetery. When was the name Maple Grove first used? When was the name Maplewood first used? On the map that is given on page 2, Maplewood Cemetery is identified as "PROTESTANT CEM." When that map was drawn, in 1873, the name Maple Grove was in use (see clipping about October 19, 1869 annual lot owners meeting). When 1880 was published, in 1880, the name Maplewood was used.
3. From Thomas Voyle's audit of the records of R. W. Graves of the Cemetery in the years 1869-1881, we learn that Raymond W. Graves' tenure as Superintendent came to and end on October 20, 1881, 3 days before his death from paralysis at the age of 69. He was interred in Maplewood Cemetery on October 25, 1881 (see entry number 2444, below, in the record of interments).
4. From a newspaper clipping that is pasted onto page 75 of Thomas Voyle's audit of the records of R. W. Graves of the Cemetery in the years 1869-1881, we learn a great deal about the Cemetery in 1881. The text of that clipping is as follows:

Cemetery Meeting.

Agreeably to a petition signed by prominent citizens and lot owners in Maplewood Cemetery, and notice given, a meeting of the Trustees of said Cemetery was held at the ADVANCE office, on Saturday evening, Oct. 22, 1881, at 7 1/2 o'clock p. m. The members of the Board were all in attendance except R. W. Graves, Trustee and Superintendent, who was confined to his home by illness, and was believed to be at the point of death.

On motion of Hon. J. B. Van Bergen, A. O. Hanford was elected President; S. S. Benedict, Secretary; and Henry Johnson, Treasurer.

Hon. Thomas Voyle was present, and on behalf of R. W. Graves, Sup't, presented his report of the amount received and expended by him as Superintendent since 1869. It was as follows:

The number of lots sold since 1869 is reported at 1,346.
Total value of said lots, $3,720.68.
Average rate per lot, $2.76.
Cash received by Sup't. for lots sold, $3,082.37.
Yet due from lots sold, (mostly good) $663.94.
Paid for labor, &c., $1,934.52.
Services of Superintendent, $1,200.
Making three maps, $15.00.
Total expenses, labor, salary, &c., $3,149.52.
Balance in hands of Superintendent at former settlement, $40.35.
Balance now due the Sup't., R. W. Graves, $26.43.

On motion it was agreed to call a meeting of the lot owners, to be held at half-past seven o'clock at the City Hall, on Tuesday evening, November 1st, 1881, for the election of Trustees, and transacting any other necessary business.

On motion J. H. Bagley was appointed Superintendent, to act until his successor be elected and qualified.

5. From the 6-page booklet published in 1884 (a typescript of the entire booklet is given herein on page 22), we learn that at the meeting of the Board of Maplewood Cemetery called for the purpose of incorporating the Cemetery under the laws of the state of Pennsylvania, that S. A. Dilts was the President of the Board meeting and that H. B. Wilbur was the Secretary.

Given below is a copy, 64% full size, of a deed for a lot in Maplewood Cemetery, Carbondale, PA.

The causes of death of those persons interred in Maplewood Cemetery, 1831-1892:

In the period 1831-1892, infant deaths and deaths of mothers at childbirth were rather common. Deaths of children, in addition, from the following diseases were rather frequent: cholera infantum, cholera morbus, croup, diphtheria, fever, fits, infantile fever, measles, small pox, spotted fever, typhoid fever, whooping cough. Many of the victims of the spotted fever epidemic of 1863-1864 were children. Regarding that epidemic, the following information is given in 1880 (p. 445): "Carbondale has been visited with some severe epidemics. The spotted fever broke out in the city in the fall of 1863. By the beginning of 1864 it had increased to an epidemic, and continued its ravages until near the end of May. One hundred and one of its victims were buried in the Protestant Cemetery [Maplewood Cemetery], among whom was Rev. T. S. Ward, of the Presbyterian church. It is not known how many were buried in the Catholic cemetery, but probably fifty or sixty."

Deaths related to the coal industry, including railroad accidents, were not uncommon. We find in the interment records the following causes of death, among others: "Killed in Mines," "Killed by Cars," "Killed on R.R.," "Fire damp explosion," "Killed by cars at foot of No. 2," "Killed at No. 3 Breaker," "Killed by locomotive blowing up near Wilkes-Barre," "Hurt in Mines," "Burned in Mines," "Killed by cars on No. 1 Plane," "Killed in John Williams mines," "High Work blowing down at Breaker," "Killed by cars near Honesdale," "Died from injuries received in No. 3 Shaft," "Hurt at foot, plane No. 28," "Died as effect of hurt by cars at Lookout," "Killed by cars at No. 7," "killed at North Western Mine," "Killed by Rail Road Gate," "Killed in Mine at Forest City."

Soldiers killed during the Civil War or who died as a consequence of injuries received during the Civil War are among the persons buried in Maplewood Cemetery. Among the causes of death reported in the interment records are the following: "Chronic Diarrhea caused by starvation at Andersonville prison," "Chronic Diarrhea - just returned from the army," "Pa. Vol.," "He was a prisoner - death caused by starvation and suffering," "He died of wounds received near Petersburg," "Old age - and wound Recd in war of 61 to 65."

Among the causes of death reported in the interment records are a few maladies from which people rarely, if at all, die at the present time: "Ship Fever," "Summer Complaint," "Croup," "Teething," "Mortification."

In reading through the interment records, one can not help but notice the violent causes of death that are occasionally reported: "Killed, by being pushed off stoop," "Shot by J. Cahoon," "Blown up," "Hanged herself," "Wrong Medicine," "Killed by cannon on 4th," "Killed in Rail Road Collision at Long Island," "Kicked and pounded by her husband which caused her death," "Suicide at No. 4," "Shot," "Killed in Explosion at Simpson." Similarly, entries such as No. 658 are outstanding. From that entry we learn that Mary Evans, aged 1 year and 5 months, "pined away." From entries Nos. 1315, 1317, 1318, 1319, 1323, 1324, and 1326, we learn that six of the children of J. B. Hamlin died in the period January 17, 1864--January 19, 1864, and that Mrs. J. B. Hamlin died on January 20, 1864--all from the spotted fever. Finally, deaths caused by human excesses are outstanding: "Intemperance," "Consumption by Intemperance," "Whiskey Consumption," "Drunk at Keystone Hotel," "Intemperance & Whoring," "Died in a drunken fit."

What emerges as one reads through this record of interments is a portrait of a social order, situated at particular spatiotemporal coordinates, going about the business of living and dying. The realities of life in the period 1831-1892 are, to be sure, not identical to the realities of life at the present time, which does not mean, it must be understood, that those persons who lived in that period were better or worse off than we are, nor does it mean that they were better or worse than we are. But it does mean that the stage upon which they played their parts/lived their lives is a different stage from the one upon which we play our parts/live our lives. Because of the differences of those stages, they are interesting, and so are we.

Given below (on pages 4-10, 15-21) are the interment records of Maplewood Cemetery, Carbondale, PA, from 1831 to 1892. Reproduced at the top of page 4 is a facsimile of the heading that appears at the top of each page in the interment records for the period 1831-1892. Reproduced below that heading are the column headings as they appear in the interment records. The spelling and punctuation in the data presented in the interment records are given as in the original, except in the columns in which date of death and date of burial are reported. In those two columns, the dates have been put into a fixed form by the author; instead of writing, for example, June 12, 1872, the author has written 06-12-1872. The two columns of numbers under the heading "AGE" refer to years and months, respectively.

GENEALOGICAL AND LOCAL HISTORY NOTES

Given on this page and on pages 12, 13, 14, and 24 are data about the eleven counties of northeastern Pennsylvania. These data, it is our opinion, are potentially useful to genealogists, historians, and social scientists who are engaged in research on either individuals and families from northeastern Pennsylvania or the history of northeastern Pennsylvania. These data, in addition, are intrinsically interesting, and can, therefore, be regarded as ends unto themselves. Among these data are (1) nine post card views of northeastern Pennsylvania during the late-nineteenth and early-twentieth centuries, and (2) six photographs from Stoddard of prominent men from northeastern Pennsylvania during the first decade of the twentieth century (see page 24, column 2, for the complete reference to Stoddard's extraordinary book). Note: Genealogical and Local History Notes will be included in all future issues of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

THE TINKER FAMILY OF SUSQUEHANNA COUNTY

JOHN TINKER (deceased) needs no special introduction to the readers of this volume, for no man in Susquehanna county was more prominently identified with its business and agricultural interests, or took a more active part in its upbuilding and progress. He cheerfully gave his support to those enterprises that tend to public development, and his name was a synonym for honorable business dealing.

Mr. Tinker was born in Falkirk, Scotland, May 11, 1799, a son of William and May (Anderson) Tinker, natives of the same place. In 1817 the parents brought their family to the New World so that their three sons might avoid serving in the British Army. After spending the winter in New York City, they removed to Little Britain, Orange Co., New York, where the father purchased a loom and engaged in the manufacture of cotton cloth and stockings for two years, his sons doing the work while he lived practically retired after coming to this country. After two years spent in Little Britain he came to Susquehanna county, Penn., and purchased the farm now occupied by his grandson, Robert Tinker, it still being known as the old William Tinker farm. His first purchase consisted of 103 acres, on which stood a little log cabin, but only a small tract had been cleared. To the work of improvement and cultivation the family have since devoted their energies, until to-day it is one of the most desirable farms in Clifford township. The father died December 29, 1835, aged seventy-six years, the mother May 27, 1852, at the same age, and their remains were interred in the Tinker cemetery. They were consistent members of the Reformed Presbyterian Church, and most estimable people. They had four children: William, born February 20, 1797, married Louise Catlin, and engaged in farming in Greenfield township, Lackawanna Co., Penn., where he died October 16, 1881; John, our subject, is next in the order of birth; James, born September 2, 1801, married Polly M. Dunn, and was a wealthy, prominent and charitable farmer, residing on the old homestead, where he died June 3, 1884; and Fleming died in Scotland at an early age.

The boyhood of our subject was spent upon his father's farm, and he was provided with good educational privileges, attending college in his native land. In early life he worked in his father's stocking factory, but after coming to Susquehanna county his time was devoted mainly to agricultural pursuits and speculating. He was a large land owner in Susquehanna county, and was a noted speculator, stock farmer and money lender. In the spring of 1830 he removed to the farm in Clifford township which has since been the homestead of the family.

While doctoring a cut foot, when a young man, the physician advised Mr. Tinker to be near salt water, and as his mother had some business to transact in Scotland he decided to try an ocean voyage. He remained in Scotland one year, and while there met his future wife. At Silverwood, Scotland, he was married, March 18, 1829, to Miss Agnes Stevenson, who was born at that place, in Ayrshire, a daughter of Thomas and Agnes (Templeton) Stevenson, farming people, who spent their entire lives in Scotland. She was the younger in a family of two children, the other being Robert Stevenson. By a former marriage, with Mary Barr, the father had eight children, namely: Thomas, Andrew, Jean, David, John, William, Mary and Janet. The mother was also married twice, her first husband being William Steele, by whom she had one son, William Steele, Jr., who became a noted minister in Scotland. Mr. and Mrs. Tinker became the parents of six children: William, a retired farmer of Clifford township, who was born February 20, 1830, and married Rebecca Carr; Agnes, born January 24, 1832, died January 17, 1864, unmarried; May, born August 1, 1835, lives on the old homestead; John, an extensive farmer of Clifford township, was born June 2, 1839, and married Margaret Bruce; Robert, born September 19, 1842, wedded Mary Tralles, and operates the old homestead; and Janet S. S., born October 14, 1846, lives with her sister upon the home farm. They have displayed excellent business ability in the management of their financial affairs since their father's death, each having been left a fair competence. They have an elegant home, which stands about an eighth of a mile back from the road, and are surrounded with all the comforts and many of the luxuries of life.

Mr. Tinker died upon his farm, September 29, 1891, and his wife passed away October 31, 1873, at the age of sixty-three years, the remains of both being interred in the Tinker cemetery upon his father's farm. They were earnest and faithful members of the Reformed Presbyterian Church and were held in high regard by all who had the pleasure of their acquaintance. Mr. Tinker was independent in his political views, and was a man of no little prominence and influence in the community where he so long made his home and where he was highly respected.

The preceding information about John Tinker is from COMMEMORATIVE BIOGRAPHICAL RECORD OF NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA INCLUDING THE COUNTIES OF SUSQUEHANNA, WAYNE, PIKE AND MONROE, CONTAINING BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES OF PROMINENT AND REPRESENTATIVE CITIZENS, AND MANY OF THE EARLY SETTLED FAMILIES. ILLUSTRATED. (Chicago: J. H. Beers and Co., 1900, p. 424).

WILLIAM TINKER, a prominent retired farmer and highly esteemed citizen of Clifford township, Susquehanna county, was born on his grandfather's old homestead in that township, February 20, 1830, a son of John and Agnes (Stevenson) Tinker.

John Tinker, father of our subject, was born in Falkirk, Scotland, May 11, 1799, and in 1817 came to America with his parents, William and May (Anderson) Tinker, also natives of Falkirk. They spent the first winter in New York City, then removed to Little Britain, Orange Co., N. Y., and two years later came to Susquehanna county, Penn., locating on a farm in Clifford township where our subject's brother Robert now resides. There the grandfather died June 29, 1835, aged seventy-six years, the grandmother on May 27, 1852, at the same age, and their remains were interred in the Tinker cemetery upon their farm. They were members of the Reformed Presbyterian Church. They had four children: William, born February 20, 1797, married Louise Catlin, and engaged in farming in Greenfield township, Lackawanna Co., Penn., where he died October 16, 1881; John, father of our subject, is next in the order of birth; James, born September 2, 1801, married Polly M. Dunn, and was a wealthy, prominent, and charitable farmer residing on the old homestead, where he died June 3, 1884; and Fleming died in Scotland at an early age. During his youth the father of our subject worked in his father's stocking factory, but after coming to Susquehanna county followed agricultural pursuits chiefly. He was a large land owner in Susquehanna county, and became a noted speculator, stock farmer and money lender. In the spring of 1830 he removed to the farm in Clifford township, where his daughters now reside. Returning to Scotland, he was married in Silverwood, Ayrshire, March 18, 1829, to Miss Agnes Stevenson, a native of that place and a daughter of Thomas and Agnes (Templeton) Stevenson. Six children blessed this union: William, our subject; Agnes, born January 24, 1832, died unmarried January 17, 1864; May, born August 1, 1835, lives on the old homestead; John, an extensive farmer of Clifford township, was born June 2, 1839, and married Margaret Bruce; Robert, born September 19, 1842, wedded Mary Trallis, and operates his grandfather's farm; and Janet S. S., born October 14, 1846, lives with her sister on their father's farm. The father died September 29, 1891, the mother on October 31, 1873, aged sixty-three years, and both were laid to rest in the Tinker cemetery. They were consistent members of the Reformed Presbyterian Church, and were highly respected by all who knew them.

William Tinker, of this review, remained under the parental roof until he was married at Carbondale, Penn., April 20, 1869, to Miss Rebecca M. Carr, who was born in Brownloe Hill, England, July 29, 1844, a daughter of Henry and Ann (Carter) Carr. After his marriage Mr. Tinker located upon his present fine farm of eighty-five acres in Clifford township, which has been in his possession for some years, and has been operated by him. He is a thorough and systematic agriculturist, and has met with most excellent success in his farming operations. He is also an able business man of known reliability, and has always rejected public office, preferring to give his individual attention to business interests. Politically he is a Republican, and he belongs to the Junior Order United American Mechanics. He is a faithful member of the Presbyterian Church, and has served as trustee of the same for the past four years. He and his wife are widely known and highly respected.

Mrs. Tinker's parents, Henry and Ann (Carter) Carr, were born in Brownloe Hill, England, and on coming to America in 1866 located in Carbondale, Penn., where the father died March 8, 1868, aged seventy years. In his native land, he followed the occupation of farming, but here he lived retired from active labor. He traveled quite extensively in the Old World, and was a well-informed and highly respected man. He was in the British Army under Wellington at the Battle of Waterloo, and lost the middle finger of his right hand in that engagement. He was a sincere and consistent Christian and a local member of the Episcopal Church, to which his wife also belonged. She departed this life January 27, 1885, at the age of seventy-five years, and was laid to rest by his side in the Carbondale cemetery.

The preceding information about William Tinker is from COMMEMORATIVE BIOGRAPHICAL RECORD OF NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA INCLUDING THE COUNTIES OF SUSQUEHANNA, WAYNE, PIKE AND MONROE, CONTAINING BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES OF PROMINENT AND REPRESENTATIVE CITIZENS, AND MANY OF THE EARLY SETTLED FAMILIES. ILLUSTRATED. (Chicago: J. H. Beers and Co., 1900, pp. 1008-1009).

JOHN K. TINKER, a prominent representative of the agricultural interests of Clifford township, Susquehanna county, was born there June 2, 1839, on his father's old homestead, a son of John and Agnes (Stevenson) Tinker.

John Tinker, the father, was born in Falkirk, Scotland, May 11, 1799, and in 1817 came to America with his parents, William and May (Anderson) Tinker, also natives of Falkirk. They spent the first winter in New York City, then moved to Little Britain, Orange Co., N. Y., and two years later came to Susquehanna county, Penn., locating on the farm in Clifford township where our subject's brother now resides. There the grandfather died June 29, 1835, aged seventy-six years, the grandmother May 27, 1852, at the same age, and their remains were interred in the Tinker cemetery, upon their farm. They were members of the Reformed Presbyterian Church. They had four children: William, born February 20, 1797, married Louise Catlin, and engaged in farming in Greenfield township, Lackawanna Co., Penn., where he died October 16, 1881; John, father of our subject, was next in the order of birth; James, born September 2, 1801, married Polly M. Dunn, and was a wealthy, prominent and charitable farmer, residing on the old homestead, where he died June 3, 1884; and Fleming died in Scotland at an early age.

During his youth the father of our subject worked in his father's stocking factory, but after coming to Susquehanna county he followed agricultural pursuits chiefly. He was one of the large land owners in Susquehanna county, and became a noted speculator, stock farmer and money lender. In the spring of 1830 he removed to the farm in Clifford township where his daughters now reside. Returning to Scotland, he married, in Silverwood, Ayrshire, March 18, 1829, to Miss Agnes Stevenson, a native of that place, and a daughter of Thomas and Agnes (Templeton) Stevenson. Six children blessed this union: William, now a retired farmer of Clifford township, was born February 20, 1830, and married Rebecca Carr; Agnes, born January 24, 1832, died January 17, 1864, unmarried; May, born August 1, 1835, lives on the old homestead; John K., our subject, is next in the order of birth; Robert, born September 19, 1842, wedded Mary A. Tralles, and operates his grandfather's farm; and Janet S. S., born October 14, 1846, lives with her sister on their father's farm. The father died September 29, 1891, the mother October 31, 1873, aged sixty-three years, and both were laid to rest in the Tinker cemetery. They were consistent members of the Reformed Presbyterian Church, and were highly respected by all who knew them.

The boyhood and youth of our subject were spent in the usual manner of farmer lads, and he remained with his parents until his marriage. On December 5, 1872, in Wooster, Ohio, Mr. Tinker wedded Miss Margaret Bruce, and to them were born five children, namely: Jean, graduated from the preparatory department of Wooster University, and has taught school, but is now at home; John S. attended the same institution for six years, graduating; Agnes M. (who was also a student at the Wooster University for two years) and W. A. Bruce are now attending the Westminster College, being in their second year; and Margaret R. is at home. Mrs. Tinker was born in Stirlingshire, Scotland, July 18, 1840, and died January 11, 1896, her remains being interred at Uniondale, Penn. Her parents, William and Jean (Russell) Bruce, were also natives of Scotland, and on their emigration to America located in Wooster, Ohio, where the father, who was an agriculturist, died at a ripe old age. His children were Christina A., wife of Daniel Byall, of Garnett, Kans.; Margaret, deceased wife of our subject; Martha, an invalid, who lives with her sister in Garnett, Kans.; William A., a farmer of Wooster, Ohio; and James H., of the same place.

After his marriage Mr. Tinker located upon a farm of 101 acres in Clifford township, given him by his father, and later moved to his present farm, in the same township. He now operates both with good success, being one of the most extensive and prosperous agriculturists of his community. He takes an active and commendable interest in educational affairs, and gives his support to every enterprise which he believes calculated to advance the moral, intellectual or material welfare of his township or country. At the polls he endeavors to support the best man for the office, usually voting the Republican or the Prohibition ticket, and, though he has never cared for official honors, he has served as auditor and as school director for two years, to fill a vacancy. He is an earnest member of the Presbyterian Church. Upright and honorable in all things, he commands the respect and confidence of those with whom he comes in contact, in either business or social life.

The preceding information about John K. Tinker is from COMMEMORATIVE BIOGRAPHICAL RECORD OF NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA INCLUDING THE COUNTIES OF SUSQUEHANNA, WAYNE, PIKE AND MONROE, CONTAINING BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES OF PROMINENT AND REPRESENTATIVE CITIZENS, AND MANY OF THE EARLY SETTLED FAMILIES. ILLUSTRATED. (Chicago: J. H. Beers and Co., 1900, p. 512).

ROBERT TINKER, a well-known extensive farmer of Clifford township, Susquehanna county, was born September 19, 1842, in the same township, on the farm where his sisters now reside, a son of John and Agnes (Stevenson) Tinker, who are represented elsewhere in this volume.

Mr. Tinker remained at home with his parents until two years after his marriage, and then located on what was known as the old Simeon Burdick farm, in the same township. After residing there for nineteen years he removed, in January, 1895, to his grandfather's farm, making that his home at the present time. On September 16, 1874, in Carbondale, Penn., Mr. Tinker was united in marriage with Mary A. Tralles, and to them have been born eight children, namely: John R., who died December 28, 1892, while attending college; Agnes, who is a graduate of the Susquehanna Collegiate Institute, and has taught school for the past five years; and Anna H. (who also attended the Susquehanna Collegiate Institute), James, Janet S., Rose L., William E. and Irving B., all at home. Mrs. Tinker was born in Breslau, Germany, March 25, 1848, a daughter of John R. and Rosalie (Cleint) Tralles, who were born, reared and married in that place, and came to the United States in 1851. They spent the first winter in New York, and from there moved to Honesdale, Penn., and later to Carbondale, where the father died in 1890, aged seventy-four years, and where his remains were interred. He was a gentleman of considerable prominence in Germany, and quite an extensive farmer; in this country he was engaged as a bookkeeper and later as a gardener, having lost his property before leaving his native land. He was a member of the Lutheran Church, as is also his widow, who still resides in Carbondale at the age of eighty-six years. Of their children, three died in infancy; Paul served as a soldier and musician throughout the Civil war, and is now a photographer in Washington, D. C.; Robert, who was also a soldier in the Civil war, is now a merchant in Carbondale; Mary A. is the wife of our subject; Rosa (first) married William Rosser and (second) George Herbert, of Carbondale; Ella is the wife of Thomas Smith, general freight agent for the Delaware & Hudson Railroad Co., at Carbondale; and Annie and Jennie died when young ladies.

Mr. Tinker has even taken quite an active and prominent part in public affairs, and has most creditably filled the offices of school director, supervisor and poor master for three years each. His political support is always given to the men and measures of the Republican party, and he and his wife are consistent members of the Presbyterian Church.

The preceding information about Robert Tinker is from COMMEMORATIVE BIOGRAPHICAL RECORD OF NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA INCLUDING THE COUNTIES OF SUSQUEHANNA, WAYNE, PIKE AND MONROE, CONTAINING BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES OF PROMINENT AND REPRESENTATIVE CITIZENS, AND MANY OF THE EARLY SETTLED FAMILIES. ILLUSTRATED. (Chicago: J. H. Beers and Co., 1900, p. 520).

ART. 3. The Board of Directors shall fill all vacancies which may occur in their own body, until the next annual meeting, from the lot holders in the Association. They shall choose their own presiding officer, who shall be President of the Board, and such other officers and agents as they may deem necessary or expedient. They shall have power to make all needful rules and regulations for laying out and ornamenting the grounds of the cemetery, and or the erection of buildings, transfer of lots, and in general everything necessary for the proper conduct of the affairs of the Association.

ART. 4. No lot shall be held in said cemetery except for the purpose of sepulture, and shall be transferable only with the consent of the Board of Directors, and no person shall be a member of the Association unless he or she is a lot holder. No distinction of person, party or sect shall be allowed in the disposal of lots, and lots may be sold to individuals, societies or congregations, under such rules and regulations as the Directors may adopt.

ART. 5. All lot holders in said cemetery shall be considered members of the Association, and they shall each be entitled to one vote at any meeting of the Corporation, except when a lot is held by two or more persons they are regarded as but one owner and will have but one vote.

ART. 6. These by-laws may be amended at any regular meeting, notice of such proposed amendment to be filed with the Secretary at least one month before the same is to be acted upon.

ART. 7. No lot holder shall be permitted to cut down or destroy any tree within the limits of his lot without the consent of the Board given through the superintendent.

ART. 8. The proprietor of any lot may erect proper monument stones or other sepulchral structures and may ornament the lot with flowers, provided that no injury be inflicted on adjoining lots. No fence or enclosure of any kind will be permitted on burial lots hereafter.

ART. 9. The Superintendent is directed not to permit monuments or other material to enter the cemetery unless accompanied by workmen for the purpose of erecting the same in their proper places. Persons engaged in erecting monuments or other structures are prohibited from attaching ropes to trees or shrubs, and from scattering their material over adjoining lots or leaving same on grounds any longer than is absolutely necessary, but in all cases to proceed and act in accordance with the rules under the direction of the Superintendent. Contractors will be held strictly accountable for any damage to avenues or lots in erecting work, and must provide planks for the rolling of stones over paths, gutters or grass.

ART. 10. ART. 12. Mausoleums and vaults may be permitted, provided a design of the same be first submitted to the board of trustees, with plans and specifications, and as their durability depends mainly on the mode of construction, they must be approved before work is commenced and must in all cases be furnished with catacombs where interments can be made separately and hermetically sealed at the time of interment. All work of this kind must be done in the most substantial manner, and under the rules and general supervision of the Superintendent of the cemetery. Anyone failing to comply will be excluded from work within the grounds.

ART. 13. All excavations for vaults, graves and foundations, or any other work must be done by the employees of the Corporation, subject to the approval of the Superintendent or Board of Trustees, moderate estimates for which will be given by the Superintendent.

ART. 14. No monument, construction or inscription offensive to decency or propriety, shall be placed on any lot, and if so placed thereon, the same may be removed by the Superintendent, at the cost of the person violating this rule.

ART. 15. Whenever interments are to be made, at least ten working hours previous notice thereof must be given to the Superintendent to prepare the grave, and be accompanied by a burial permit issued by the proper health officer, and at the same time the size of the coffin measured on the top or if in a box the size of the box should be mentioned. The following particulars are required for the record: Name of deceased, color, nativity, age, disease, date of death, whether married, widow or single. No burials will be allowed without such permit and proper information.

ART. 16. If order for interment is for deceased not of the immediate family of lot owner, permission in writing from such owner must be filed and recorded on the cemetery books. The Superintendent cannot be held responsible for any mistake occurring from the want of precise instructions for the particular space in a lot where an interment is wanted. Undertakers making arrangements for the burial of a body will be held responsible for charges if parties fail to pay.

ART. 17. Interments are subject to the following charges and must be paid to the Superintendent before or at the time of interment. Namely: Opening, closing and sodding an ordinary grave of an adult person shall be eight dollars ($8.00) and children in proportion to the size of the grave.

ART. 18. It shall be the duty of the Superintendent to cause the leaves and rubbish to be removed from all the lots, and the grass and weeds growing thereon to be cut down and removed from the cemetery grounds at least three times each year, between the 20th of May and the 1st of September, the cost of the same not to exceed fifteen cents per lot, payable by the owner, and on refusal may be collected according to law.

ART. 19. No sale or transfer of a burial lot shall be valid without the permission and approval of the Directors, duly attested by the Secretary, an entry whereof shall be made on the books of the Association.

ART. 20. All admissions to the cemetery of visitors shall be subject to such rules as the Superintendent shall be charged with by the Directors from time to time.

From the Editor:

This issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA is Part II of the two-part history of the schools of northeastern Pennsylvania written by Silas Robert Powell for publication in the pages of this historical quarterly. In Part II of this history, Powell presents a history of the schools of northeastern Pennsylvania in the period 1895-1981. In addition, he presents a large quantity of information that is intended to supplement the information presented in Part I of this history, which was published in Volume I, Number 3, February 20, 1980, of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

Like the last issue of this quarterly, the present issue contains Genealogical and Local History Notes. These data, from various sources, are potentially useful to genealogists, historians and social scientists who are engaged in research on either individuals and families from northeastern Pennsylvania or the history of northeastern Pennsylvania. These data, in addition, are intrinsically interesting and can, therefore, be regarded as ends unto themselves.

Included in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, and to be included in all future issues of this quarterly, is a Letters Received column. It is hoped that this new column will become a forum where you, the readers of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, can make known to all of the readers of this historical quarterly not only your thoughts on previous issues of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, but also your questions about specific families and topics on which the editor does not have sufficient information in order to answer completely those questions.

In the November 19, 1980 issue of this quarterly, we brought to your attention the fact that the Torrey Land Office in Honesdale would be torn down unless sufficient funds were raised to move and renovate this architecturally important building--the first commercial brick building in Honesdale and one of that city's oldest structures. It is with great pleasure that we here report that the officers of the Wayne County Historical Society have recently announced that they are making plans to move the Torrey Land Office to the Society's property on Main Street in Honesdale. Sufficient funds have been raised to move the building (more than $20,000), but additional funds are needed to complete the renovation once the building has been moved. To raise those funds, an auction will be held at the Wayne County Historical Society on May 23, 1981.

The next issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA will be Part III of the history of studio photography in northeastern Pennsylvania. It will be written by Donald Walter Powell, and published on August 19, 1981.

In Volume I, Number 3 (February 20, 1980) of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA the first part of this two-part history of the schools of northeastern Pennsylvania (entitled, "The Schools of Northeastern Pennsylvania 1681-1895") was published. This is the second part of that two-part history. Herein we will not only examine the schools of northeastern Pennsylvania in the period 1895-1981, but also present supplementary information on the schools of northeastern Pennsylvania in the period 1681-1895 that has been learned since the publication of the first part of this history on February 20, 1980.

IMPORTANT SCHOOL LEGISLATION ENACTED IN PENNSYLVANIA IN THE PERIOD 1895-1930

1901 An act was passed authorizing the centralization of township schools, the establishment of township high schools, and the transportation of pupils to these schools.

1903 On April 9, 1903, Governor Pennypacker signed the first Minimum Salary Law for teachers. From Superintendent Dr. Nathan C. Schaffer's Report of 1902 on the schools of Pennsylvania, we learn that the average monthly wage for male teachers in the state was $44.92, for female teachers $33.78. The corresponding salaries for teachers in Philadelphia were $173.10 for men and $63.00 for women. Section I of the 1903 Minimum Salary Law states: "That on and after the first day of June, one thousand nine hundred and four, the minimum salary of school teachers teaching in the public schools of this Commonwealth, shall be thirty-five dollars per month."

1905 High School Act of 1905 (Laws of 1905, Act No. 23). This law required that school districts not maintaining a high school to pay tuition and textbook fees of qualified pupils at the high school of some other district. This law was interpreted in such a way that, unfortunately, any district that maintained a high school of the third grade was under no obligation to pay tuition in a high school of the first or second grade. The consequences of this interpretation of the High School Act of 1905 are described by Louise G. and Matthew J. Walsh on page 251 of their History and Organization of Education in Pennsylvania (see complete reference in Volume I, Number 3 of this quarterly) as follows: "This naturally led to the establishment of many high schools that were such in name only but were cheaper than the tuition of pupils in real high schools."

- 1907 Formation of the State Education Commission (Act No. 140). A committee of seven was appointed by the Governor "to revise, collate, and digest all the acts and statutes relating to or touching the laws of the public schools of the Commonwealth." James M. Coughlin of Wilkes-Barre was one of the members of this committee.
- 1907 Second Minimum Salary Law (Act No. 244, signed by Governor Stuart on May 31, 1907). Section I of this law provided that "the salary of common school teachers in districts in this Commonwealth receiving State appropriation shall be no less than fifty dollars per month in all cases where the teacher holds a professional, permanent, or normal school certificate, and has had two years' practice and presents a certificate of proficiency in said practice for said time from the superintendent in charge of said teacher." The second section of this law provided that "the minimum salary shall be forty dollars for all teachers holding certificates of less grade than required under section I of this act." This law went into effect on June 1, 1907.
- 1911 Code of 1911. Signed by Governor John K. Tener on May 18, 1911, and hailed as the most important piece of school legislation ever passed by any legislature, it repealed practically every school law passed for over a century and substituted a unified school code that covered every phase of public education. The 12 major points of this law, which contains 28 articles and takes up 154 pages in the pamphlet laws, are summarized in Walsh on pages 255-256 as follows:
1. Every school district in the state was classified under the following arrangement and control:
    - a. First Class Districts, those having a population of more than 500,000. Board of Directors to have 15 members approved by the judges of the Courts of Common Pleas.
    - b. Second Class, those having a population of between 30,000 and 500,000. Board to have nine members elected by qualified voters.
    - c. Third Class, those between 5,000 and 30,000. Board to have seven members, elected by qualified voters.
    - d. Fourth Class, those with less than 5,000. Board to have five members elected by qualified voters.
  2. A State Board of Education of six members was provided and its powers and duties carefully enumerated.
  3. Powers and duties of the State Superintendent, County Superintendent, and District and Assistant County Superintendents were given in detail.
  4. The county organization was made more compact and unified by the organization of the school directors of each county into a School Directors Association which should meet at least once a year.
  5. Qualifications and certification of teachers of every type were carefully specified and minimum salaries were fixed according to the kinds of certificates. [There were two types of local certificates (provisional and professional) and five kinds of State Certificates (Permanent State Certificate, State Normal School Certificates, State Normal School Diplomas, Provisional College Certificates, Permanent College Certificates).]
  6. Such matters as attendance, medical inspection, vocational education, length of term, and many other matters were carefully worked out.
  7. Minimum school terms were fixed as follows: For districts of the first and second class, nine months, for districts of the third class, eight months, and for those of the fourth class, seven months.
  8. The previous laws in regard to Normal Schools were reenacted with the additional provision that the State Board of Education might purchase these schools under certain conditions. [All of the state Normal Schools were bought by the State in the period 1911-1920 for more than $1,640,688.]
  9. School boards must assess upon every male inhabitant an occupation tax of not less than one dollar.
  10. High schools were classified and the requirements for each class were carefully stated.
  11. Teachers were to receive three dollars a day while attending institutes.
  12. Boards in all districts were permitted to establish teachers' retirement funds.

1913 The Legislature of Pennsylvania passed a law (Laws of 1913, Act No. 159, p. 226) requiring that the Bible should be read without comment at the opening of every session of every public school in the Commonwealth.

1913 An act defining vocational education and providing for the establishment and regulation of vocational schools and state aid for them was passed.

1917 Act No. 343, Teachers' Retirement System. A 7-member board was established to look after the system as a whole, to invest surplus funds, and to grant retirement allowances. The retirement age was fixed at 62 for voluntary and 70 for compulsory retirement. It was expected that the fund would so work out that the yearly allowance upon retirement would amount to approximately one-eighth of the average salary of the previous 10 years multiplied by the number of years of teaching service.

1917 Instruction for the blind provided by law.

1917 Salary Laws of 1917. This law guaranteed $45, $55, and $65 per month for the different types of certificates.

1919 Salary Laws of 1919 (Woodruff Salary Act). This law guaranteed $60, $70, and $80 per month for the different types of certificates. If the salary of any teacher holding other than a provisional certificate and receiving less than $100 per month were not increased 25% by this Act, this salary should be increased by that amount. In the same way, those receiving between $100 and $150 must receive at least a 20% increase, those receiving between $150 and $200 must receive at least a 10% increase.

1921 Edmonds Act. This bill embodies 72 specific laws. It provided state reimbursement contingent upon the maintenance of certain minimum standards, a minimum salary schedule for teachers, and authority for the State Council of Education to prescribe uniform regulations for the certification of teachers. In Walsh (p. 267) this Act is described as "probably the most important piece of public school legislation ever passed by any legislative body in America in one session."

The salary provisions of the Edmonds Act are as follows:

Elementary School Teachers

In 4th Class districts--$100/month
In 3rd Class districts--$1000/year with yearly increments of at least $100 until minimum maximum of $1400 is reached
In 2nd Class districts--$1000/year, with a yearly increment of at least $100 until $1800 is reached
In 1st Class districts--$1200/year, with an annual increment of at least $100 until $2200 is reached

High School Teachers

In 4th Class districts--$130/month
In 3rd Class districts--$1200/year with yearly increments until $1600 is reached
In 2nd Class districts--$1400/year with yearly increments until $2200 is reached
In 1st Class districts--$1900/year with yearly increments until $3600 is reached

The Edmonds Act fixed the minimum school term at 8 months. The minimum school term in 1834 was 3 months, in 1849 it was 4 months, in 1851 it was 3 months, in 1854 it was 4 months, in 1872 it was 5 months, in 1887 it was 6 months, in 1899 it was 7 months.

1921 An act was passed that recognized the junior high school as a part of the secondary scheme of education in the state.

1921 The teaching of music and art were required by law.

1926 The State Normal Schools were changed into State Teachers Colleges, and their functions enlarged so as to include a four-year course leading to the degree of Bachelor of Science in Education.

THE SCHOOLS OF WILKES-BARRE, 1869-1880

The following information about the schools of Wilkes-Barre, from 1869 to 1880, is here reprinted from History of Luzerne, Lackawanna, and Wyoming Counties, Pa. With Illustrations, and Biographical Sketches of Some of Their Prominent Men and Pioneers. (New York: W. W. Munsell & Co., 36 Vesey Street, 1880), pp. 200-203:

EDUCATIONAL HISTORY.

The educational history of Wilkes-Barre begins with the arrival of the emigrants from Connecticut in 1769, under the auspices of the Susquehanna Land Company. This company granted to the first settlers of Wyoming large bodies of land in each township as an incentive to immigration. This land was designated as a foundation for a permanent school fund for all time to come. If the school fund had been properly managed the citizens of the township would undoubtedly have long since been free from taxation for educational purposes. The town of Wilkes-Barre has no separate school history from old Westmoreland until 1773, when an effort was made to support the schools by taxation; but it was a failure, and if there were any schools in Wilkes-Barre at that period they must have been supported by private subscriptions or tuition fees up to the time when the borough accepted the provisions of the common school law.

Early Schools.

On the organization of Luzerne county Wilkes-Barre had her school-houses, which had previously been built by the proprietors as the trustees of the bounty of the Susquehanna Land Company, but no free school was ever based upon this educational fund.

As early as 1790 there was a school-house--the only one in the town plot--standing upon the east side of the public square just in front of where now is William H. Spurling's grocery store, which was usually occupied about nine months during the year. At a later period there was another on the plains near the residence of Henry Courtright, and another on the hill, on Dr. Covell's farm, just below the site of the depot of the passenger railroad in South Wilkes-Barre.

Among early teachers was Godlove Nicholas Lutyens, a graduate of Göttingen University. He was succeeded in 1802 by Asher Miner, the printer and editor of the Wilkes-Barre Gazette and afterwards of the Luzerne Federalist. Previous to 1806 or 1807 several select schools were opened at various times, among which was one by a Mr. Parmaly, a regular Yankee schoolmaster, in the old still-house on Main street, just at the foot of Bowman hill. There was another on East Union street, conducted for many years by William Wright, an educated Irishman. This school had a high reputation, and continued to flourish up to the time of Mr. Wright's death in 1816. There were also summer schools under the lead of old-fashioned schoolmistresses, and a Mrs. Jabez Fish's juvenile academy on the bank of the river, at the lower end of the Common, where was taught for years the Westminster Catechism from the John Rogers primer.

The Constitution of 1790 required legislative provisions for the education of the poor; and in pursuance thereof, by the act of 1809 and its supplement, the assessors of every township were required to make return of all children whose parents were unable to pay for their tuition to the county commissioners, who were required to pay the respective teachers their bills for these charity scholars. This law was a dead letter practically. Very few parents cared to put their children on the list of paupers, even for the purposes of education, and for ten years after 1824 but $3,500 was paid by the county on that account, and Wilkes-Barre's was the least amount in proportion to its population...

The Wilkes-Barre Public Schools.

The public schools of the city of Wilkes-Barre are embraced in three districts. The provisions of the new constitution applying to cities of the fourth class having never been adopted by this city, the government of the schools remains the same as when the city was incorporated, and the three school districts erected under an act of Assembly approved May 24th, 1871. These districts are under the supervision of the county superintendent, and are entirely independent of one another, being each governed by a separate board of directors.

The first school district is made up of the first, second, third, sixth and ninth wards of the city, and the remaining portion of the north district of Wilkes-Barre township not included within the city limits at the time of incorporation. The school board consists of six members, one from each of the wards and one from the township. The board is now (1880) organized as follows: President, George N. Reichard; secretary, J. C. Williamson; treasurer, Fred Roth. The statement of the school board of this district for 1878 was as follows: Whole number of schools, 19; number of months taught, 10; number of male teachers, 5; number of female teachers, 14; average salary of males per month, $65; average salary of females per month, $40; whole number of scholars, 2,072; average number attending school, 949; percentage of attendance, 79; tax levy (number of mills) 20. Under the present principal, T. J. McConnor, the schools have been carefully graded, and now possess primary and grammar grades corresponding to a considerable extent to the same grades in the third district, to be described hereafter.

The second school district comprises the thirteenth and fourteenth wards of the city and the south district of Wilkes-Barre township, less what was taken into the city limits at the time of incorporation. There are five members in the school board--two from each of the wards and one from the township. The organization is as follows: President, A. H. Van Horn; secretary, Michael Gibbons; treasurer, Joseph Hendler. The report for 1878 gives the following showing: Whole number of schools, 10; number of months taught, 9; number of male teachers, 6; number of female teachers, 4; average salary of males per month, $63.33; average salary of females per month, $40; whole number of scholars, 893; average number attending school, 525; percentage of attendance, 83; tax levy (number of mills) 18. Under the direction of Henry A. Reid as principal until within two years, and more recently of J. C. Bell, these schools have been partially graded.

The third school district is essentially the old borough of Wilkes-Barre. It embraces the fourth, fifth, seventh, eighth, tenth, eleventh, twelfth and fifteenth wards of the city.

The history of the old borough schools is really the history of the schools of this district. In 1834 this district in common with nearly all the districts of Luzerne county approved of the provisions of the common school law, and the school board levied a school tax and set the school in operation. For over thirty years the schools were devoid of anything to distinguish them--unless it might have been their general inefficiency. Teachers were paid very poor salaries; the school term was very short; the buildings were either miserable old frame huts, or rooms rented here and there over the town as necessity might determine for the accommodation of pupils. In the year 1850-51 there were nine teachers employed at an average salary of $23.11 per month, and the length of the school term was five months. Nor did this state of things improve in some particulars for many years later. The statement of the school board for 1865-6 reveals the following facts: number of schools, 11; number of months taught, 4; number of female teachers, 14; male teachers, 3; average salary of male teachers per month, $50; average salary of female teachers per month, $35; whole number of pupils attending school, 187. It is to be wondered at that private and select schools were in a flourishing condition? An old settlement like Wilkes-Barre, possessed of a high degree of culture, demanded education for its children, and the private schools furnished what the public schools could not. But a new era was dawning even in 1865. The revival of business and increase of values that followed the close of the war, with the free distribution of money that attended it, made it possible for better things in the way of education. As early as November 28th, 1863, at an adjourned meeting of the board over which C. F. Reets presided, L. C. Paine offered the following resolution, which was adopted: "Resolved that the president be and is hereby directed and requested to enter into a contract with Ziba Bennett, Esq., for the purchase of a lot at the corner of Washington street and Butler alley, at a price not to exceed $1,800. * * * and that he report his action on the same at the next meeting." At the next meeting, held December 5th, Mr. Reets reported that he had made the contract as directed; the report was accepted and adopted and an order drawn for the purchase money. At a meeting held March 19th, 1864, presided over by the same gentlemen, the building committee was authorized to advertise for proposals for the new school building ("excavating cellar, building brick and stone walls, &c., &c."). This motion was renewed and carried at a meeting held June 12th, 1865, over which Rev. George D. Miles presided. At a meeting August 1st, 1865 (Mr. Miles presiding), the size of the building was determined upon and a building committee appointed. September 19th, 1865, it was decided that the new building should be three stories high and that an addition three stories high should be added to the rear for recitation rooms. December 26, 1865, a contract was made with bricklayers for raising the walls of the building. The work of erection went on apace during the winter of 1865-6 and the spring and summer following.

The organization of the new board June 5th, 1866 was signalized by the appearance of two new members, his excellency Governor Henry M. Hoyt and Attorney General Henry W. Palmer, both elected for three years.

The new brick building was now completed. It was capable of accommodating ten schools, and had six recitation rooms besides that could be used for school rooms if required. The minutes of a meeting of the board held November 6th, 1866, contain the following: "On motion of Henry M. Hoyt it was resolved that the board do hereby employ Charles J. Collins as superintendent of the public schools of the borough of Wilkes-Barre during the balance of the current school year ending June 1, 1877, at a salary at the rate of $1,000 per year--his engagement to commence at this date." Mr. Collins accepted this appointment; at once entered into the work with enthusiasm; visited the schools of Philadelphia, New York and Boston; became familiar with their best features; returned, and on December 10th, 1866, entered upon his work as principal and superintendent of the Wilkes-Barre schools. How well he succeeded during this first year is indicated by the report of the board for this year: "The board in the most emphatic manner, desire to recognize their obligations to Rev. Charles J. Collins. To him as principal and superintendent of all the schools we attribute whatever success we have achieved. From a chaos of unclassified elements he has wrought order; he has adjusted conflicting views, and from inharmonious materials has produced an evenly balanced, perfect working machine. The amount of labor, time, well directed skill, energy and conscience which he put into his work is best known to your board. Himself a mature scholar and experienced educator, he quickly apprehended the wants of our locality, and rapidly impressed upon the crude materials before him the best features of our best schools, worked out of the latest experience. His enthusiasm was at all times unabated; his interest in the cause of education was the result of a conviction of its utility, and he most conscientiously met every responsibility before him."

This term was a short one, though longer than that of the year preceding, being five months in duration. The whole number of pupils increased from 187 to 676. The names of the members of the board on the tablet of this new building are as follows: President, George D. Miles; secretary, Charles F. Reets; treasurer, Moses D. Wilson; George B. Kulp, D. L. Rhone, Charles Roth, Samuel S. Weller, Dennis McQuillin, Lee W. Stewart.

At this time the borough contained three wards, each having three members in the board. Mr. Collins' plan embodied several distinct principles. One of these was an accurate system of grading, fixing the starting point and the limit of each branch to be studied in any particular grade. Another was the introduction of the object system of teaching in the primary grades, together with calisthenics and music. Still another and a corollary to the first two was the employment of professional teachers--those especially prepared for the work in the normal schools of the county. June 18th, 1867, the committee on teachers were instructed and authorized to employ six female teachers, "educated to teach," from abroad at a salary not exceeding $500 for nine months. The schools were opened in September with the corps reinforced by six trained teachers from the Philadelphia, Albany and Oswego normal schools. The work of this year was an improvement over the last: the number of schools increased from ten to eighteen, the number of months taught from five to eight and a half and the whole number of pupils from 676 to 817. At the beginning of the year 1868-9 the teaching force contained a still larger percentage of trained teachers from the normal schools named above and from the Pennsylvania State Normal school at Millersville, employed at better salaries and for a term of ten months. The number of pupils also increased from 817 to 943. During this year the advanced class of the grammar department (the highest grade, thus far, in the school) finished three or four of the branches of study and were prepared for advancement. But the schools still suffered one serious drawback. The large building on Washington street was not sufficient to accommodate all the schools, consequently the board was compelled to continue the occupation of the miserable old buildings heretofore described. This difficulty was met, however, by the purchase of a suitable lot and the erection thereon of the elegant and commodious brick building on Franklin street near Academy. June 8th, 1868 the purchase of the lot was authorized; January 25th, 1869, it was reported and approved; shortly after the contract was given, and before the year had ended the building was completed. It is capable of accommodating twelve grades or classes. A marble tablet in the building contains the following names of members composing the school board at that time: President, Charles Roth; treasurer, Charles F. Reets; secretary, Henry W. Palmer; Henry M. Hoyt, George B. Kulp, Philip Steinhaur, Samuel S. Weller, Dennis McQuillin and Philip Banker. Accommodations were now furnished for all the pupils of the district. The year 1869-70 was characterized by the establishment of the high school department and the election of Mr. Collins borough superintendent, with powers co-ordinate with the county superintendent. Early in 1870 the borough was declared a separate district, and January 17th Mr. Collins was duly elected and shortly afterward was commissioned borough superintendent. This position he held until August 1st, 1874, when, owing to ill health, he resigned. The system of grading adopted by Mr. Collins extended over a period of twelve years' tuition, four in the primary grades, four in the grammar and four in the high school. Later the high school course was shortened to three years, but in other respects the course of instruction, grading, rules of order and government and methods of discipline and instruction remain materially the same as when they came from the hands of Mr. Collins in 1874.

In 1873-4 the elegant new building on St. Clement's street was erected and named the Conyngham graded school building. It was rendered necessary by the rapid increase in the population of the lower parts of the city at that time. The following named gentlemen composed the board at the time of its completion: President, H. H. Derr; secretary, Dr. G. W. Guthrie; George B. Kulp, S. S. Weller, George M. Nagle, Jacob Schmitt and C. F. Reets. A few years later a fine building for the accommodation of colored children was erected at the corner of Washington and South streets.

The statement made by the board for the year ending on the first Monday of June, 1879, embodies the following facts:

Whole number of schools, 30; number of months taught, 10; number of male teachers, 7; number of female teachers, 25; average salary of males per month, $74.50; average salary of females per month, $45.60; whole number of scholars, 1,677; average number attending school, 1,316; percentage of attendance, 92; tax levy (number of mills), 10.

The board (April, 1880,) is composed as follows: President, William J. Harvey; secretary, Dr. G. W. Guthrie; Martin Frey, George S. Bennett, Dr. O. F. Harvey, J. W. Driesbach and S. H. Sturdevant.

Thus we have a brief picture of the marvelous growth of the schools of Wilkes-Barre in efficiency and general popularity. From being what the board in their report for 1866-7 pronounced them--"utterly useless, if not actually vicious"--they have become one of the chief attractive features of the city. Already there is a clamor for still better things. The first new building erected, the Washington street grammar and high school, has in it some serious defects, and the public demands a better building. There is reason to believe that still another new edifice will be erected that will be a crowning glory to the already famous schools of Wilkes-Barre.

THE SCHOOLS OF WILKES-BARRE by MRS. LESTER E. KELLEY OF HOLLAND, PA.

Following the publication of the first part of the author's history of the schools of northeastern Pennsylvania in this historical quarterly, the author received a large quantity of information about the early schools of northeastern Pennsylvania from readers of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

From Helen E. Kelley (Mrs. Lester E. Kelley) of Holland, PA, the author learned a great deal about the early schools of Wilkes-Barre, PA. Mrs. Kelley, who was born and reared in Wilkes-Barre, has graciously presented to the author copies of photographs that she has taken of twenty of the early schools of Wilkes-Barre and vicinity. Some of those photographs are reproduced in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

Given below is a list of those twenty schools and the information about those schools that Mrs. Kelley has forwarded to the author during the past year. Photographs of the first nineteen schools in the list were included in Mrs. Kelley's letter to the author of May 2, 1980; the photograph of the twentieth school in the list was included in Mrs. Kelley's letter to the author of June 6, 1980. The information about these schools that is here reported is quoted directly from the letters of Mrs. Helen E. Kelley to the author. Any information by the author, S. Robert Powell, this is inserted in Mrs. Kelley's list is given in brackets ("[" ]").

Rolling Mill Hill Section & South Wilkes-Barre

1. Henry W. Palmer School, New Grove Street; photograph taken April 23, 1975. I attended this school during my 4th (the school opened that year), 5th, 6th and 8th grades. My 7th grade was spent at the Parrish Street school. The Palmer School, I believe, is still in existence, but no longer utilized as a school.
2. Franklin Street School, South Franklin Street; photograph taken April 23, 1975.
3. Henry M. Hoyt School, Sturdevant Street off Carey Avenue; photograph taken April 23, 1975.
4. South Main Street School, South Main Street near Blackman Street. This school was razed some years ago and another structure built on the school foundation. My mother attended first year high school in this building around the turn of the century. Evidently the high school curriculum was then discontinued and the Union Street building was built.
5. Hazle Street School, Hazle Street; built about 1891; photograph taken September 18, 1978. As you can see, this venerable old structure has really been changed, and not for the better.
6. Carey Avenue School, 89 Carey Avenue; photograph taken September 21, 1978. This school is now the Iona Apartments.

Carey Avenue School, Wilkes-Barre, PA. Color photograph, 3 1/2" X 3 3/8", taken by Mrs. Lester E. Kelley, of Holland, PA, on September 21, 1978; reproduced here from a print from the original negative. See story this page.

NOTE: Those schools that were in this area that I have no photos of are the Parrish Street School, Parrish Street, and the Moyallen Street School, Moyallen Street. Both schools were razed some years ago. I attended the Parrish Street School from first grade through third grade, and then seventh grade. A public swimming pool was erected on the site of the Parrish Street School after razing and the attached news clippings ["Parrish Street pool cost too much to run," The Times Leader, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Saturday, April 26, 1980, p. 4A; "Parrish Street pool closing," The Times Leader, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Saturday, April 26, 1980, p. 9A] explain what is happening to the pool. The site of the Moyallen Street School is now used as a parking lot for the Homeopathic Hospital, which is nearby on Dana Street. My mother attended the Parrish Street School. A new school, the Dodson School was built at Airy and Jones Streets to accommodate the students from the Parrish Street, Moyallen Street, etc. area of this part of South Wilkes-Barre.

Heights Section

7. William G. Weaver School, South Hancock Street; photograph taken April 21, 1975.
8. Meade Street School, South Meade Street; built about 1884; photograph taken April 22, 1975.

Meade Street School, Wilkes-Barre, PA. Color photograph, 3 1/2" X 3 3/8", taken by Mrs. Lester E. Kelley of Holland, PA, on April 22, 1975; reproduced here from a print from the original negative. See story this page.

9. Grant Street School, South Grant Street; photograph taken April 24, 1975.
10. Dana Street School, Dana Street; built about 1910; photograph taken April 24, 1975.
11. Custer Street School, Custer Street; built about 1889; photograph taken April 24, 1975.

NOTE: Most of these Heights schools have been closed and/or razed and other arrangements have been made for the pupils. A new large school has been erected in the Heights section recently to accommodate the school population but I do not know its name.

Public High Schools

12. James M. Coughlin High School, 81 North Washington Street; photograph taken April 4, 1962. I graduated from here in 1926, at which time it was the only high school in Wilkes-Barre. In this photo of the Coughlin High School, the extension at the left did not exist when I attended school there. In 1927, the G.A.R. Memorial High School at Grant and Lehigh Streets (Heights Section) was opened. I do not have a photo of the G.A.R. School. [The photograph of the G.A.R. Memorial Junior High School that is given on this page is from a post card in the Homestead Photograph Archive, Carbondale, PA.]
13. Elmer L. Meyers High School, Carey Avenue and Hanover Streets; third high school opened in Wilkes-Barre; photograph taken April 4, 1962.

Catholic Schools

14. St. Nicholas School, 240 South Washington Street; German Catholic; photograph taken April 3, 1962. At the right in this photograph (St. Nicholas Church adjoins it on the left). I believe this is only the grammar school--and high school students now attend the new Bishop Hoban High School in Wilkes-Barre.

NOTE: There are a few parochial schools (early) which are also known to me--St. Boniface, Blackman Street; St. Nicholas (German Catholic, and has always been a grammar school to my knowledge); St. Mary's High School. These last two schools were located on South Washington Street, but only the St. Nicholas School is still operating. Saint Mary's High School has been razed, and it is my understanding that those Catholic students of high school age now attend the new Bishop Hoban High School in Wilkes-Barre. I believe that St. Boniface (German Catholic) Grammar School is still operating also. It is a grade school, and is located at 221 Blackman Street in the Rolling Mill Hill Section. I do not have a photo.

Miscellaneous

15. An early school, Main Street, Ashley, Pa.; built about 1874, rebuilt 1895; photograph taken September 18, 1978. I was always under the impression that this was St. Leo's Catholic School, but am not sure, and there is no name on it.

[In Mrs. Kelley's letter to the author of August 16, 1980, she supplemented the information about this school that she reported in her letter to the author of May 2, 1980. The following two paragraphs are from Mrs. Kelley's August 16, 1980 letter:]

I am enclosing copies of two items relative to the early schools in Wilkes-Barre which you may find of interest--they appeared in recent issues of The Times Leader ("White School, 106-year-old landmark of its day, is gone," August 11, 1980; "New club flies historic flag," August 2, 1980).

The articles in question, I believe, are self-explanatory, except that I would like to add (relative to the White School in Ashley) that I am not sure BUT BELIEVE THE WHITE SCHOOL is photo #15 sent to you under date of May 2, 1980. At that time I did not know any more about this school than the data that are visible over its front entrance--"1874--rebuilt 1895." The fact that this building was white in color, was of a very attractive design, and had the "1874" date on its facade, leads me to believe that the photo I sent you is a photo of the White School mentioned in the Times-Leader article. If you desire, you could easily confirm this fact with the Supt. of the Ashley School Board. It is unfortunate that the paper did not print a photo of this school along with its item.

16. Ashley Public School, Main Street, Ashley, Pa.; built about 1893; photograph taken September 18, 1978. I believe this school has been closed and razed since my photo.

17. Sugar Notch Public School, Main Street, Sugar Notch, Pa.; built about 1892; photograph taken September 18, 1978. This building has been closed for some time.
18. Nuangola Public School, Nuangola (Lake), Pa.; photograph taken September 20, 1978. Found this by accident some time ago.
19. Easton High School, Easton, Pa. Two copies of a postcard of Easton High School which I have. I am sorry they are not clearer. This card was made in Germany and has a postmark of August 19th but no year.
20. St. Anne's Academy (Sisters of Christian Charity); corner of Lehigh and South Meade Streets; photograph taken May 15, 1962. Catholic girls' school in the Heights Section of Wilkes-Barre. I believe this school has been closed for some years now.

NOTE: Miscellaneous relative to Wilkes-Barre Schools

- a. The Wilkes-Barre Area School District Office at 730 South Main Street (Phone: 717-825-6881) I am sure would be cooperative concerning the confirmation of the data I have listed about the early public schools of Wilkes-Barre.
- b. Other early schools in the City were the Westminster Street School, South Washington Street School, North Street School, and Union Street School. The Union Street School was, I believe, the earliest high school in Wilkes-Barre, and was located across from the James M. Coughlin High School at the corner of North Washington and Union Streets. All of the foregoing were public schools, and I have no photos of any of them. When I attended Coughlin High School, I took commercial subjects, which were given in the Union Street School (which we called "the Commercial Building"). Even though those of us who took commercial courses took them in the Union Street School, we were graduated from Coughlin High School.
- c. There was a Dickerson Street School in Laurel Run Borough (adjacent to the Heights Section), but it was razed long ago.
- d. The Toll-Gate School was built on East Northampton Street in Georgetown (one goes through Georgetown before getting into Laurel Run Borough) to take the place of the Dickerson Street School. I believe it too has been closed or razed.
- e. The Wilkes-Barre Business College (from which I graduated in 1927) used to have a small building on West Northampton Street, but it was razed in recent years.

[In Mrs. Kelley's letter to the author of October 10, 1980, was included an article from the Times-Leader of September 5, 1980, entitled "Guthrie School declared national historic place." The complete text of that article is given below.]

Guthrie School declared national historic place

HARRISBURG - The George W. Guthrie School, 643 N. Washington St., Wilkes-Barre, has been placed on the National Register of Historic Places. William J. Wewer, executive director of the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission (PHMC), announced the selection.

The National Register, maintained by the U. S. Department of the Interior in Washington, is the official list of the nation's cultural resources, and includes properties significant in American history, architecture and archaeology.

The Guthrie School, a 1915 state-of-art representation in school building design, is one of the more than 1,100 Pennsylvania properties listed.

Built of stone, terra-cotta ornament and trim, the four-story school has a slate sloped roof with a single block-like mass. Windows cover 60 percent of the building, including six large skylights.

The Luzerne County property, designed by architect Robert Ireland, was the first school building in Wilkes-Barre designed to include particular facilities such as manual and home economics, and cooking and dressing areas. A room for special education children, a distinctive innovation of the time, is among its nineteen classrooms.

A prominent landmark, the school is located on a hill, which makes it a clearly visible monument in the community.

[As a conclusion to this most informative report by Mrs. Lester E. Kelley on the early schools of Wilkes-Barre, we will quote passages from three of her letters to S. Robert Powell.]

"All of these old schools (Parrish Street, Moyallen Street, Hazle Street, South Main Street, Union Street) must have been built just before the turn of the century. They were more or less of the same design and size (eight rooms), and were constructed mostly of brick and a dark, reddish stone. Anyway, to me as a child, they looked pretty sturdy, and created the impression then that they would last forever... I must confess that old school buildings have an attraction for me--perhaps at my stage in life they symbolize many of the things which once were very familiar to me. I can honestly say that the schools I attended provided one with an excellent basic education." [Letter of April 4, 1980]

"... for some reason, the early schools of Wilkes-Barre attract me. Possibly it is the fact (frankly) that I just hate to see them disappear without some record of their existence, and the excellent role they played in educating those of my generation." [Letter of June 6, 1980]

"It gives me a rather warm feeling to learn that someone besides myself finds the material on Wilkes-Barre's early schools of interest, and I assure you that Part II of your history of the schools of northeastern Pennsylvania will be awaited by me with keen anticipation." [Letter of June 28, 1980]

EAST STROUDSBURG STATE COLLEGE, 1870-1970

The following information about East Stroudsburg State College is from pages 68-77 of a book that was published on the occasion of the centennial of East Stroudsburg, entitled "East Stroudsburg Centennial 1870-1970 June 6 thru June 13, 1970" (author's name not given on book, which was printed at Sun Litho-Print, Inc., East Stroudsburg, PA):

OUR COLLEGE ON THE HILL
by Dr. LeRoy J. Koehler

In 1857, the General Assembly of the Commonwealth divided the State into thirteen districts to encourage the establishment of Normal Schools for the training of teachers. In 1862, County Superintendent John B. Storm called a meeting of leading educators in order to promote interest in establishing such a school in our area, district four. A committee was later appointed to discuss the problem but decided that promotion to extend the Wind Gap railroad to Stroudsburg would be more beneficial to the community. In 1870, Reverend Schoedler established the Wickersham German-English Normal School at Brodheads ville with the anticipation of becoming the Normal School in the fourth district. The State refused to recognize the institution since Reverend Schoedler refused to change the language of instruction from German to English. In 1891, Reverend Chandler Oaks conferred with Seeley Rosenkrans in regard to establishing a Normal School in our locality. At that time, the education of teachers was largely in the hands of the Academies: Fairview at Brodheadsville, Polytechnic at Gilbert and the Academy on the hill in Stroudsburg. Mr. Rosenkrans interested other citizens in the community in the Normal School project and ultimately secured one hundred and ten subscribers to a stock company with 315 1/2 shares of stock. Albert W. Knapp granted eleven acres of land located on the hill in East Stroudsburg which later became the site of the Normal School in spite of bitter opposition from Scranton also in the fourth district.

In 1892, the erection of the main building (later called Stroud) was begun and the cornerstone was laid on July 4th. Stroud Hall was completed at a cost of $100,000 and was accepted by the State on March 22, 1893. The Board of Trustees of the East Stroudsburg State Normal School was organized in 1892 and Seeley Rosenkrans was elected president of the Board. From 1892 to 1920, Mr. Rosenkrans continued to serve on the Board, five years as president, two years as vice-president and eleven years as secretary. Some idea of the contribution of the original Board members can be estimated from the thirty-three meetings held in 1892. In spite of a state appropriation of $35,000, the trustees were compelled to borrow $25,000 to place the normal school in operation on September 4, 1893.

On May 26, George P. Bible was elected principal of the Normal School at a salary of $1500. His arrival on campus must have caused some interest since the front steps were not completed and his wife had to be carried up a plank to the entrance of Stroud Hall. The following month, the applications for faculty members and staff were carried to the Board in market baskets. Among the new faculty members was Dr. E. L. Kemp who later was to succeed Mr. Bible as principal of the institution. Considerable time was devoted to furnishing the new building with gas lights, heat, dining facilities and furniture for living quarters as well as classroom purposes. In September, the Normal School opened its doors with three hundred and twenty students enrolled at a cost of $4.00 a week which included board, furnished room, heat, light and laundry service. This low charge per week was possible since the education of teachers provided no tuition charges for the student. The institution offered a two-year course of study leading to a Bachelor of Pedagogy degree. If a student attended an extra year with scholastic success, the award was a Master of Pedagogy degree. All graduates were examined by a State board of examiners and the diploma conferred the right to teach in any public school of the state.

The entire activity of the Normal School was conducted in Stroud Hall. Men had rooms in the North Wing and women were located in the South Wing. The school had rigid rules for the conduct of students. No loud talking or shuffling of feet in the halls, and tobacco and alcoholic beverages in any form were banned from the building. Ladies and gentlemen were not allowed to associate together except such times as designated by the principal. In spite of such restrictions, the students conducted literary and debating clubs, and the entire student body, faculty and trustees participated in a sleigh ride to Delaware Water Gap. The first class to be graduated from the Normal School in 1894 consisted of seventy-four men and women.

The first year of operation convinced the Board of Trustees that additional space was needed for an adequate program. In 1894, the annex was added to Stroud Hall and a kitchen was erected behind the South Wing while a two-story porch graced the entrance to the building. In 1896, an appropriation from the State enabled the Board of Trustees to beautify the campus by planting about one hundred and fifty trees. A new gymnasium was dedicated the same year, at a cost of $10,000, and the Normal School proudly proclaimed Wayne Gym the largest in the State. By 1901, the School had over five hundred students in attendance which clearly indicated the need for a classroom building. The recitation hall, named in honor of Reverend Oaks, was made of brick and trimmed in cut stone at a cost of $27,000.

In 1902, George B. Bible resigned as principal and the Board elected Dr. Elwood L. Kemp who headed the institution for the next 18 years. By 1907, the Trustees appreciated that a larger campus was required as the western boundary only extended to Ransberry Avenue. The campus was extended to include a section bordering on Prospect Street and an area on the South side of Stroud Hall to an extension of Center Street. The newly acquired land was swampy and Dr. Kemp and some students cleared the area. The glacier-scarred rock which now graces the campus was found in this area and mounted on a concrete platform. The purpose of the land acquisition was to clear a site for Shawnee Hall, a four story building with additional dormitory and classroom space.

In 1913, a campus military company was organized due to the difficulties on the Mexican border. The training in military discipline proved advantageous since many of the students and faculty were called to service in 1917. The Normal School furnished 198 recruits to the U.S. Army during World War I. The death of Captain George N. Kemp in action in the Argonne Forest brought sad news to the campus for he had attended the institution as a student and also served on the faculty. The Alumni purchased a memorial to honor the graduates, students and faculty of the School who had served their country during the War. The statue was erected on the main walk and dedicated to "These have nobly served" in 1919. The statue soon became a central point of interest on the campus and students soon became attached to the landmark. Since they were engaged in studying Julius Caesar, the student body soon repeated the phrase "Meet me by Julia," which became popular usage for the area.

In 1920, Dr. Kemp retired as principal of the Normal School and his services have never been forgotten by our Normal School graduates. The State had purchased the school from the stockholders for $4,762 and assumed the indebtedness of $100,000. A new Board of Trustees assumed control and the State appropriated $600,000 for improvement of the institution. Dr. Frank E. Baker was chosen as principal and numerous changes in personnel were made on the campus. Dr. Thomas Finnegan was Superintendent of Public Instruction and the State was planning an elaborate expansion in both curricula and financial expenditures for the State Normal Schools. Salaries of teachers were raised and additional work was required of teachers in service. This promoted the first summer schools to be held on the campus and ultimately caused a tent colony to be erected on back campus. A new three-year course was added in Health Education which soon became the special curriculum for the Normal School. All the buildings on campus were given definite names and ivy was planted to cover the walls of each building. Unfortunately, the elaborate plans for State improvement fell by the wayside for the farmers were up in arms about the enormous expenditures of Superintendent Finnegan. The election for Governor was pending and Gifford Pinchot was chosen to head the affairs of State. After due consideration, Governor Pinchot removed Superintendent Finnegan and Normal Schools received notice that cuts in expenditures were in the offing. Under these circumstances, Dr. Baker, who had really made a determined effort to improve the institution, resigned as principal and became principal of the Milwaukee Normal School.

In 1924, Dr. T. Allen was elected to fill the vacancy in the principalship. The Normal School increased its enrollment to seven hundred and all men were moved off campus. In 1926, the Board of Trustees purchased sixteen acres of land from the Roop estate along Centre Street and bordered on East Brown Street. Since the Board was requesting seven new buildings to provide for the influx of students, there was a real need for the 43 acre campus. In 1926, the State Council of Education authorized the Normal School to confer two four-year degrees; Bachelor of Science in Education and Bachelor of Science in Health Education. The following year, the official name of the institution was changed to "The State Teachers College at East Stroudsburg." A new auditorium was dedicated in 1927 "To the True, the Beautiful and the Good." With increased enrollment and new buildings pending, the outlook for the institution appeared bright until the depression arrived in 1929. A new residence for the principal was completed in 1930 but the State now proceeded to follow a starvation policy for State Teachers Colleges. Appropriations were cut to the bone with the hope that about four of the institutions would voluntarily close their doors. The depression finally benefitted the institution, for the public works program produced a new gym, the Monroe Dormitory, the Dining Hall, the Laboratory School and a new athletic field. The faculty and employees, however, received a ten percent cut in 1932 which was not restored until 1939. Dr. T. T. Allen resigned in 1939 and was succeeded by Dr. Joseph F. Noonan.

Dr. Noonan had considerable experience as an administrator, having served as City Superintendent, and, also, as President of Mansfield State Teachers College. His first step was a needed purchase of visual aid equipment, maps and charts for classroom use. The administration of the College proved more efficient and discipline for both faculty and students improved under definite established guidelines. Unfortunately, within several years we were again involved in World War II and the student body finally reached a low of 219. The entire faculty was assigned to interview prospective students in our service area and keep the institution operating. With the end of the War, a large group of veterans enrolled under the G.I. Bill and the student body increased to over 900. The need for housing for men caused the erection of Shawnee Hall but only with the understanding that old Shawnee had to be demolished. For the first time, the East Stroudsburg State Teachers College was accredited by N.C.A.T.E. and the Middle States Associations. In the summer of 1955, a disastrous flood caused the closing of summer school and the fall term was delayed until October. The facilities of the institution were utilized to provide rooms and meals for working crews in the area. Dr. Noonan, after sixteen years of service, resigned as President, and the Board of Trustees elected Dr. LeRoy J. Koehler as President of the College.

The primary problems of the new administration were the large number of applications for admission and the overcrowding of the physical facilities of the institution. The creation of an admissions office and college boards soon proved desirable although, ultimately, six out of seven applicants were refused admission. A State inspection team recommended the demolition of Stroud Hall, Oaks Hall and the Wayne gymnasium and the addition of at least 100 acres of land to the campus. Four new dormitories, Laurel, Hawthorn, Linden and Minsi were erected to provide rooms for students. A Student Commuting Center replaced Wayne gym and a large classroom building. New Stroud was erected after the demolition of Stroud Hall. Kemp Library, the Rosenkrans Administration building, LaRue Hall and a Science Hall were constructed to alleviate crowding in other areas. The addition of about 100 acres to our campus provided space for additional playing fields, tennis courts and the erection of the Koehler Field House. The planning stages were completed for a 1000 unit dining room, another dormitory, infirmary and improvements to the athletic field. The Student Activities Association also purchased "Stony Acres", a 116 acre tract in the foothills of the Poconos.

The Administration also broadened the educational opportunity of the institution by transforming the State Teachers College into a State College, with a wider range of programs leading to a Liberal Arts degree. The State Council granted the East Stroudsburg State College the right to confer graduate degrees in Elementary Education, Health and Physical Education, Biological Science, General Science and Social Studies. The institution was twice re-accredited by N.C.A.T.E. and once by the Middle States Association. The faculty was increased from 67 to 169 members with much improvement in the salary schedule as well as quality of the instructional staff. The growth of the undergraduate student body from 1040 in 1956 to 2250 in 1968 necessitated the introduction of data processing to modernize college operations. In June, 1968, Dr. Koehler, after 46 years of service to the College, retired and Dr. Frank D. Sills was elected by the Board of Trustees to fill the Presidency.

In 1969, the college administration was made more efficient by establishing a School of Arts and Sciences, a School of Health Services and Physical Education and a Graduate School. Students were placed on faculty committees and given representation on the Board of Trustees. Masters degrees have been added in History, Political Science and Mathematics, making a total of seven master's degrees now being offered by the College. About three thousand undergraduate and graduate students attend the College and the faculty has increased to two hundred and eight. A dining hall, dormitory and wings to the Recitation Hall are in the process of construction. Twenty-six million dollar capital budget has been recommended by the State Planning Board for the period 1969-1974. A new administration building, infirmary, fine arts building, science building, educational development center, library, and several dormitories are listed in the planning stage. There is every indication that the East Stroudsburg State College can look forward to a period of rapid growth both in size and quality.

ST. THOMAS COLLEGE, 1888-1928

The following information about St. Thomas College from its founding up to 1928 is here reprinted from Volume I of Thomas Murphy's Jubilee History Commemorative of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Creation of Lackawanna County (see complete reference in Volume II, Number 1 of this quarterly), pp. 212-214:

St. Thomas College.

(By Professor Francis E. Fitzgerald.)

On Aug. 12, 1888, the corner-stone of Saint Thomas College was laid by the first Bishop of Scranton, Rt. Rev. William O'Hara, D. D. The building of a college for men had been a project close to the bishop's heart and as soon as his diocese was sufficiently organized to warrant it, he began building operations. The new college for men was formally opened with a solemn high mass with the bishop as celebrant in the chapel on Sept. 8, 1892. When the plans were made for the college Bishop O'Hara expected to be able to secure the Brothers of the Christian Schools to conduct it. The Superior of the Christian Brothers was unable to furnish enough Brothers to form a faculty, so recourse was had to a faculty organized from the local clergy. Rev. J. J. Mangan was appointed the first president of St. Thomas. The first graduating class was sent out from the college in 1896 during Rev. D. J. McGoldrick's term as president. In the fall of 1896, the Xaverian Brothers came to take charge, but remained only until the following June. Negotiations were resumed with the Brothers of the Christian Schools to come to Scranton to direct the work of the struggling college.

The Rt. Rev. Bishop Michael J. Hoban, having been appointed coadjutor to Bishop O'Hara, was on the point of departing for Rome when he instructed Father McGoldrick to write to the Provincial of the Christian Brothers calling the needs of the new college to their attention once more, and to state that on his return from Rome he would call upon them in regard to the matter. In his letter, dated July 27th, 1897, Father McGoldrick urged the charge upon the Provincial, Rev. Brother Edward of Mary. He stated that as it was the original intention of the founder to place the new college under their direction, that the Christian Brothers should feel bound to make every effort to send a community. Bishop Hoban called on the brothers in Philadelphia and secured the acceptance of the charge and the assurance that a community would be formed and to Scranton, Bishop Hoban sent a letter stating the time when preparation would be completed for receiving the Brothers.

The small community of the Brothers of the Christian Schools, under the leadership of Rev. Brother Candidian, the first president of St. Thomas in its new capacity as a college conducted by this renowned order, arrived in Scranton, Tuesday, Sept. 14, 1897 and were received by Bishop Hoban. Brother Candidian found but a small group of eighteen students assembled for classes. Within one month after his arrival he was able to report to Bishop Hoban on November 18, that the number of students had increased to fifty-three in the day school and one-hundred and two in the evening classes. Bishop Hoban was in active charge in great part of the work of the diocese on account of the increasing infirmities of Bishop O'Hara and he was especially concerned in all matters pertaining to the college. Among the early instructors up to this time were--Rev. J. J. Mangan, Rev. P. F. Quinnan, Rev. P. J. Gough, Rev. D. J. Bustin, Rev. J. W. Malone, Rev. T. J. Carmody, Rev. A. J. Brennan, Rev. D. J. McGoldrick, Rev. T. J. McGourty, Rev. J. J. Hurst, Rev. E. J. Flood, Rev. John J. O'Neill and Major Richard J. Bourke.

Under the second president, Rev. Brother F. Andrew, the college was enabled to offer courses for which the degree of Bachelor of Arts was conferred for successful completion. Under the next president, Rev. Brother E. Lewis, who remained nine years, the three story brick residence of the Brothers was erected through the special co-operation of Rev. Dr. W. J. Malone. In 1913 Brother Abdas succeeded Brother E. Lewis. The elementary classes were eliminated during his term and the high school was placed on the accredited list by the state in 1915. Students were admitted from the college to leading graduate and professional schools. In September, 1913, the enrollment had increased to 267. Rev. Brother E. Alban became the fifth president in 1916.

Rev. Brother Alban applied to the War Department for a unit of the Student Army Training Corps, but on account of lack of facilities this request was denied. The college classes were forced to discontinue until 1918, but the high school was maintained as usual. In 1919 Rev. Brother G. Philip was appointed president. The problem of reorganizing the college was undertaken by Brother Philip by establishing St. Thomas as a junior college offering two years work consisting of preparatory studies for entrance into schools of medicine, dentistry, law, engineering and theology. By 1921 Brother Philip had brought the enrollment to 450 as a result of his strenuous efforts. During his term of office, the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the coming of the Christian Brothers took place. In 1922 Rev. Brother F. Edward became president.

Soon after his appointment, Brother Edward laid plans for an endowment campaign. Through the purchase of the Throop property adjoining the college property, however, a temporary adjustment was made to care for the steadily increasing student body which in September, 1925, numbered 500. Brother Edward made application to the courts of Lackawanna County for the Charter. This was granted on Jan. 12, 1923, by Judge Maxey. In this Charter was conferred the right to grant the degrees of Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Science. By an amendment to the Charter, granted by Judge Edwards in July, 1923, the college was empowered to grant the higher degree of Master of Arts. After careful inspection by a committee from the Council of Higher Education of the Pennsylvania State Department of Education, St. Thomas was accredited and the department agreed to recognize its degrees commencing in December, 1924. Up to this time the degrees were conferred through an affiliated college--St. John's College, Washington, D.C.

Under the leadership of the present president, Rev. Brother George Lewis, the eighth since the coming of the Christian Brothers, the college was admitted to the Association of American Colleges in January, 1925. On Nov. 25, 1925, St. Thomas was placed on the accredited list by the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the Middle States and Maryland. To secure this coveted rating, Brother Lewis had to meet the exacting requirements which up to his time had not been fulfilled. In 1925 the report of the Association recommended enlarging the equipment of the library and the appointment of a trained librarian and assistant; the enlarging of the science laboratories; the limitation of the hours of employment of the professors; the securing of Doctors of Philosophy to head the departments; the raising of the salary level to conform to that of other institutions of equal rating; and, finally, the raising of an endowment fund of $500,000. This report which was made by Prof. George Gailey Chambers of the University of Pennsylvania, stated that means should be taken at once to enlarge the buildings, that the work of the college was of very high grade, but that the buildings were not commensurate with this work.

“Died November 28th 1868, aged 13 years 10 months, and 17 days. In descending the stairs from the third to the second story of the “Home” with a kerchief slung in hand, she made a misstep, fell and broke the lamp. Her clothes became saturated with the oil, and before assistance could reach her and the flames be extinguished, she was so burned as to cause her death, after week of suffering. She died happy, trusting in the Saviour, whom she had embraced some weeks before the accident.” (Extract from Prof. Walker's report.

THE INTERNATIONAL CORRESPONDENCE
SCHOOL, 1891-1928

The Colliery Engineer Company had previously been incorporated on June 18, 1890, to take care of the publishing business, and on September 24, 1901, the charter was amended to provide for the wider field of activities, and the business came under the control of the new corporation, the International Textbook Company, which today owns and controls the International Correspondence Schools, and controls or is interested in many subsidiary and allied corporations.

The college offers exceptional facilities for scholarly and moral attainment. Practical and efficient work is done in every department and no means are neglected to produce the best results. The teachers are thoroughly trained specialists with degrees from various universities. The libraries contain over 32,000 volumes; the laboratories are furnished with complete chemical, physical and biological apparatus.

The curriculum at Marywood covers a wide and deep field. The representative departments are those leading to the degrees in the college and the teachers' college certificates which entitle successful candidates to the college graduate professional certificate, which has the approval of the Pennsylvania state superintendent of public instruction. The college offers the following general courses: Religion, sacred scripture, church history, mathematics, history, philosophy, Latin, Greek, Italian, economics, sociology, biology, botany, chemistry, physics and astronomy.

In the school of music the college course extends over four years. All musical literature of value is taught. The degree of bachelor of music is given for the fulfillment of the prescribed requirements. The school of dramatic expression offers attractive courses for the development of its difficult art.

The secretarial course offers the best methods of business practice and procedure. The school of home economics supplies the knowledge needed by young women in preparing themselves for household responsibilities or for fitness as instructors or directors in this department of educational work. The department of physical training is both extensive and intensive.

The first of a group of new buildings at Marywood was opened in 1925 and is a model of modern art and efficiency in college building. It has a frontage of two hundred and eighty feet. It has floor space to meet the needs of twelve hundred students. The center entrance is an imposing orthostyle with four columns and an inviting approach of long continuous steps and checks. An open loggia at the entrance of the building rises to the height of two stories and carries a large entablature frieze bearing inscriptions of letters, science, philosophy and art. The main entrance admits to a large vestibule and thence to a spacious foyer. On either side are the offices of the registrar and the dean and telephone booths and parlors for visitors. A large rotunda seventy-two feet in diameter takes up the height of both stories and rises for proper proportion. Across the rotunda is the library with a capacity for thousands of volumes and spacious floor area and reading tables. On the first floor is a large assembly hall, society rooms, class rooms and other rooms designed for student and faculty requirements. Many laboratories and work rooms are housed in the main building until new buildings can be provided to take them in. A new science building houses science laboratories and lecture rooms. On both ends of the arts building are fine towers and stairs between the basement and the roof and entrances and stairs are provided on both sides of the building as well as in the center. In the basement a book bindery, printing room, store rooms and lockers and meter room are located. On the second floor a general kitchen, a diet kitchen, a home nursing department, a model dining room, a bed room, a pantry and a laundry occupy a whole wing. Lecture rooms, sewing and millinery rooms are located in the front of the building on the second floor.

An entire story out of the ground on the first floor results from the contour of the land and opens from a grade entrance. The floor length of this story on the right side of the dome is occupied by a large cafeteria, kitchens, locker rooms and an exchange for the day students' use.

The exterior of the building is of tapestry brick with Indiana limestone trimmings. The interior is of oak finish with terrazzo floors and include the latest equipment for college purposes. The second building, a residence hall is now (1928) under construction. The new residence hall is a four story building with accommodations for two hundred and fifty students. It will be ready for occupancy in the present year. It conforms in general design to the first building of the group, the arts building, erected in 1925 and all the buildings on the campus are built in the style of the Mother-house, and original buildings erected twenty-five years ago.

The college was built by the Sisters Servants of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, from Marywood Seminary which was opened twenty-five years ago. It is a great gain to Scranton. It has attracted many students from other cities and as the first college for women in Northeastern Pennsylvania it has drawn numbers of students from the vicinity of Scranton. It is a big moral and intellectual force that can give purpose to the intelligent moral and intellectual activity of young women and keep the present generation sane, healthy, intellectually alert and religious.

Marywood College was opened Sept. 8, 1915. It was chartered by the State, May 23, 1917. The first class--seventeen in number--were graduated in June, 1919. At the request of the Department of Public Instruction Marywood opened a summer school and Extension Courses for Teachers in 1920. Over a thousand teachers are now enrolled in these courses.

Marywood Seminary, originally called Mount Saint Mary's Seminary, which is allied with the college, is also an approved institute and a first class high school accredited by the Pennsylvania State Board, the Board of Regents and the Catholic University. Besides a high school department the seminary has intermediate, primary and commercial departments, and courses in expression, art, music and domestic science. It was opened Sept. 8, 1902. It has well appointed, commodious buildings, an attractive campus and special advantages of location, healthfulness, religious culture and discipline. It enjoys an excellent reputation and has extended its advantages to many thousands of young girls. The alumnae association of Marywood Seminary is connected with that of St. Cecilia Academy which is the first school of the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart of Mary established in Scranton seventy-five years ago. The Marywood College Alumnae membership, in the thirteenth year of its existence, the present year of 1927, is 470.

And so they have made their mark in office or factory. A number have "Gone On," and we cherish their memory.

The teacher hasn't changed much, although her hair is gray;
She has the same cheery smile, with the same pleasing way.

To honor that teacher is the reason we are here.
Miss Giles is now Mrs. Foster, whom we hold quite dear

So to our former teacher, before we depart;
We want to leave a remembrance; a symbol of a heart.

The Curtis Valley School, of nearly half a century ago;
Its pupils have recalled their school days, and want you to know

Our Best Wishes are with you, as you travel on your way;
Hoping that we will again meet, on some future day.

May 31, 1951. Written by Verna (Curtis) Varcoe.

In presenting the heart made of coal with a "coal diamond" in the center to Grace (Giles) Foster, I used the following:

To Grace Giles Foster:

This heart is made of coal found under Pennsylvania soil;
 It was mined, ground and polished requiring many to toil.
 The center is "a diamond of the coal mines"
 they say.
 It is from former pupils on this thirty-first of May.

Curtis Valley School 1951. V. C. V.

When I attended school at Curtis Valley, the term was seven months. (One summer, and perhaps more, we had school for a few weeks taught by Aunt Augusta Gertrude Curtis, 06-01-1862--07-13-1956, who was on furlough from Missionary work.) What I remember most of her teaching is her reciting poems with eloquence and having us memorize scripture. This may be one reason why I like poems, and have collected and written some.

The school building still stands, but has been made into a dwelling. In September 1955, I was notified to have the Sunday school vacate the school building. A new building was built across the road. From 1955 on, I have quite a complete record of the Curtis Valley Sunday school, including pictures that were taken as the new building was being built. I also have a snap shot of my first Sunday School class in front of the old school house, but it doesn't show all of the building. At that time the school was called a Common School--now Elementary.

Inside the old school building was a hall the entire length of the front, with doors at each end to enter the one room. We left our wraps on nails in the hall. The boys wore caps. Our dinner pails were left on the floor in the hall. In the winter we brought them inside, so they wouldn't freeze. On a bench in the north corner of the hall was a pail of good spring water, with only one dipper for all to use. Later there was a water cooler with faucet at bottom. Violet, my daughter, said these were purchased when she went to the school--starting in 1928. Also individual drinking cups hung on the wall with their number above. Miss Harriet Grunski was a teacher at Curtis Valley School during the time Violet went there to school. She taught at Browndale for a number of years and then at Aldenville (two-room school; my other daughter, Eunice, taught in the other room) before retiring. Miss Grunski made a career of teaching. She now lives next to the Moosic Grange Hall. Back to my school days--the boys would usually carry the water up to the school from the corner, i.e., the Curtis Homestead.

The teacher opened the school with singing. Next there was a reading from the Bible, after which all repeated the Lord's Prayer. On the walls hung a large heavy paper with the Ten Commandments on it; also picture of George Washington and other historic pictures and scenes. Slate blackboards were across the front, with one large one between the windows in back. On the north side was what looked like a painted blackboard. In the northeast corner was a cupboard, where books and supplies were kept. Next to the cupboard, on the north, was a large dictionary. A large scroll of maps, used in teaching, was near by. Later a clock hung on the wall above the dictionary, and a large globe was purchased with money made from socials. The stove was located in the northwest side of the room. There was a large metal shield around the stove. We would sometimes gather around this to get warm. The pupils' desks and seats were double, with higher ones in the back of the room for larger pupils, while ones in front were lower for small pupils. As pupils could choose their seats, some came early the first day to get the one they wanted. The teacher's desk was up front, in the western part of the room. Among books, and other things on her desk, was a small desk bell to call up the class to recite. The pupils would then be seated on a long recitation bench in front of the teacher. This bench is now in the new Curtis Valley Sunday School building. One teacher taught all eight grades. When one class was up to recite, the other pupils in the room would sometimes listen to them instead of studying their own lessons. On Friday afternoon, we had Art and sometimes a spelling bee.

I have several of my report cards. When I was in the first grade, 1905-1906, my teacher at the Curtis Valley School was Mrs. E. B. Oliver. We were taught, and given numerical grades for, the following subjects: Reading, Spelling, Writing, Phys. and Hygiene, and Arithmetic. Alphabetical grades were given for Application, Behavior, Punctuality, Politeness, Neatness, Care of Books. In second grade, 1906-1907, my teacher was Grace A. Giles. We were taught, and given numerical grades for, the following subjects: Reading, Spelling, Writing, Language or Gram., Phys. and Hygiene, Arithmetic. As in first grade, we were graded for Application, Behavior, Punctuality, Politeness, Neatness, Care of Books. In third grade, 1907-1908, my teacher was Warren P. Norton, who taught us the following subjects: Reading, Spelling, Writing, Language, Phys. and Hygiene, Arithmetic, U. S. History and Geography. Alphabetical grades were given for Neatness, Behavior, and Politeness. In the sixth grade, 1910-1911, Miss Edna P. Hauenstein taught us all of the following subjects: Reading, Spelling, Writing, Drawing, Language or Grammar, Physiology and Hygiene, Arithmetic, Geography, History. We were also graded for Effort and Deportment. Our grades in the sixth grade were all numerical. In the seventh grade, 1911-1912, we were taught the same subjects that we were taught in the sixth grade. We were also graded for Effort and Deportment. After receiving our report cards, we would always compare our marks to see who ranked the highest.

In the Curtis Valley School, as in other one-room schools, the teacher was her own janitor: sweeping the floor, cleaning blackboards (sometimes the pupils helped in this), building the fire when needed. In the winter that meant getting to school earlier than the pupils so that the building would be warm when the pupils arrived. There was only one stove; the board floor was quite cold. The teacher usually boarded at the Curtis Homestead, as it was near and there was plenty of room. If the teacher lived within a few miles of the school, she or he would have someone bring them. The pupils walked, some of them quite a distance. By going cross-lots they would shorten the distance. I had two brothers and an older sister who went to school, and I would sometimes go for a day to visit. At that time there were some quite old pupils--around 16 years old--as some pupils did not go on to high school.

The winters were long and cold, so we had to dress warm. I think all wore long underwear. The men wore coon-tail boots (these were thick felt-like material with stripes around the top, which gave them the name) with rubber arctics. The boys wore knicker-bockers, as the boys did not wear long pants until they were young men. They also wore a heavy legging that pulled over their stockings, with a rubber arctic. My mother knit, with steel needles, long black woolen stockings for me. She also knit mittens, black with red stripes, for many. I have a pair that she gave to Ensign Varcoe. She also made heavy wool scarves, which we could wrap over our tams and around our neck. When the wind was biting cold, it could be drawn over the face. I also wore leggings (bought) with buttons up the one side. These I wore over high shoes with arctics on them. Of course, all wore heavy coats. Going to school we had to tramp through snow drifts. The roads were not plowed. (No autos then.) If the roads were blocked with snow, the driver of a sleigh would go into the field to get around the snow drift. The sleigh driver would always carry a shovel, and if the horses got down in the snow and couldn't get up, he would unhitch the horse and shovel out the sleigh. When a road had to be opened, when drifted full, several men would get together to shovel it out.

Back to the school house. There were two small out-buildings outside: one for girls and one for boys. There was also a good-sized coal house, with some wood inside for starting a fire.

Games: The coal house was used for the game of "Hallie-over," where two leaders chose sides, then one would toss the ball over the building to the other side. The one catching the ball would try to touch someone from the other side, as they all exchanged sides. The one tagged would then belong to the opposite side. The winner, when all got on one side, or if the bell rang, then the side having the larger number would be the winner. Other games: Ball, Pump-pump-pull a-way, etc. We sometimes went down to the corner [the Curtis Homestead], where there was a nice swing, between two large trees. In the winter, there was sleigh riding. If the road or crust were good enough for our sleighs, we could ride part way to school on the crust, that is, if we lived on a hill, as most of us did. One year the boys fixed a toboggan from two of their sleds with a board fastened between. This would carry about six at a time. The boys made a track down the school yard through the pasture and across the creek. (They made a bridge over the creek.) Then they put water on the track and let it freeze, which made the toboggan go faster. The boys also made snowballs and forts made of snow, making a game with two sides. They liked to tease the girls by trying to wash the girls' faces with snow. Inside, we played games like Tic-tac-toe on the blackboard. Another game we played at the blackboard was to see who could do the multiplication tables the fastest. The 2's were a favorite.

Punishment: stand in the corner; ruler on the palm of the hand; stay after school; 15 minutes to stay in for whispering; write an assignment a number of times on the blackboard.

It was a custom to visit another school once a year. We enjoyed this outing. The teacher would get someone to take us in a bob-sleigh. The driver would sit up front and drive the horses, while the pupils would sit on blankets over straw in the back, with blankets over our feet. We usually had a spelling bee with the other school, to see which school would win. Then the other school would return the visit. We visited the Farno School (located just below the Clinton Baptist Church) the most often.

We didn't have all the "shots" before entering school, but we were vaccinated against small-pox. The doctor came to the school and would vaccinate the pupils that needed it. If the vaccination didn't take, we would have the ordeal again, or watch others getting it. We had practically all the children's diseases. We were quarantened at home if we had one of the diseases--there was a sign on the door telling of the disease. This meant that the other children in the family had to stay at home too. In spite of this precaution, the disease usually went through the whole school.

Socials and Programs: Box and Pie socials were held to raise money, as well as a social time. The girls brought the pies or boxes (very nicely decorated having a good lunch inside). They were auctioned off to the highest bidder. Some pies or boxes would go quite high, if others noticed that the boy was after a special box. That meant he knew whose box or pie it belonged to. How did he know? The girl only had to give him a look or a smile. The teacher's box or pie would bring a top price. Sometimes the teacher would be invited to spend a night at the home of one of her pupils. The mothers, or other interested persons in the community, could visit the school at any time. At Christmas or a holiday, when a program was given, they were invited to come.

After finishing the eighth grade, and wanting to go to high school, a common school examination was held at Clinton High School at Aldenville. I took mine in the spring of 1912. I have a good snap shot of this building--which is no longer there. This building was two stories high. There was a basement, and at election time the voting was conducted there. Grades one through eight were on the first floor. The one-room high school, with only one teacher, was on the second floor. In 1912-1913 Edna P. Havenstein taught the high school; in 1913-1915, I. B. Sluman taught the high school. The picture does not show a bell, but one of my classmates in High School (who had gone to the Grades at Aldenville) said he gave .05¢ to help purchase the bell. I don't know exactly when Clinton High School was torn down. In 1970 a Clinton High School Alumni Reunion was held. As you can see from the invitation to the Reunion [invitation is reproduced below], the school was in operation from 1906 to 1944. Alice C. Williams was the secretary of the Reunion, which was held in the Grange Hall located on Route 191, 7 miles north of Honesdale.

Invitation to the Clinton High School Reunion,
August 22, 1970. Reproduced here, 64% full size, from the copy of this invitation in the collection of Verna A. (Curtis) Varcoe, Waymart, PA.

My sister Carrie (04-13-1893--03-16-1975; graduated from Clinton High School on June 2, 1910; married on 11-01-1917 to Mervin Henry Loomis) taught the grade school there the first year I went to high school. The first year there my teacher was Edna P. Hauenstein. I had her as a teacher at Curtis Valley School when I was in sixth grade. She was a good teacher. In grade school I had seven different teachers: three men (two of whom only graduated from Aldenville before teaching) and four women (who had more education and experience than the men). Aldenville was a three-year high school. In 1914-1915 at Clinton High School in Aldenville I studied Algebra, Caesar, Agriculture, Rhetoric, and Civics. Some of the pupils would go to another high school to get their four years. I went to Wayne Commercial School at Honesdale. Roy V. Stanton (my cousin) started the Wayne Commercial School the fall of 1915. I graduated in the first class, in 1916. Roy V. Stanton kept the Wayne Commercial School going for 60 years. The Honesdale photographer, Stan Pratt, is a grandson of Roy V. Stanton.

Dwight Rude (08-18-1899--02-14-1981; married on 07-12-1922 to Margaret Abbie Remsen), Beatrice Curtis (b. 04-12-1903; married in 1930 to Henry William Bartholomay), Alice Curtis (b. 05-14-1907; married on 03-16-1935 to Raymond Peter Williams; married, second, on 02-09-1979 to Norman Lund) all attended Curtis Valley School. Beatrice (Curtis) Bartholomay also taught there. She was the last teacher at Curtis Valley School before the school closed. She was also the last teacher at the Farno School, and I think at South Clinton, too. I think the school buses started at Curtis Valley around 1947. Bernice Curtis (b. 12-06-1926; married in 1948 to James Dolan) teaches at Hamlin. Her father, Francis Henry Curtis, Jr. (11-24-1891--07-10-1969; married on 06-12-1915 to Letha Crossman, who died 01-03-1953), and her mother were both teachers. Francis Henry Curtis, Jr. was my oldest brother.

I think there are two two-room schools left in Wayne County. My daughter Eunice (b. 07-11-1927; married on 10-01-1949 in Clinton Center Baptist Church to Dwight Franklin Hauenstein, who was born 07-17-1922) teaches third and fourth grades in the Aldenville Elementary School; another teacher has the first and second grades in that school.

The one-room school is no more. With its passing, a vacant spot has been left in the community.

In her letter of March 4, 1981 to S. Robert Powell, Verna A. (Curtis) Varcoe reports the following information about (1) books used in the Curtis Valley School, (2) the Pennsylvania grange, and (3) an old book that belonged to her grandfather, Henry Banning Curtis:

I have found several more books that were in the Curtis Valley school library, and presume I have more. I remember reading "Uncle Tom's Cabin" by Harriet Beecher Stowe. I have the "Keeper of the Bees" by Gene Stratton-Porter. The one of most interest in past history is Halleck's American History Series - "Our Nation's Heritage" (what the old world contributed to the new) by Halleck and Frantz, copyrighted 1925, 1931 by American Book Co. (Curtis Valley School 9-5-34).

I have a small hard-cover Souvenir Book - Commemorative of the Meetings of the State Grange of Pa. and of the National Grange... held Nov. 1897 at Harrisburg, Pa. Pa. State Grange was organized 9-18-1873. Some of the advertisements are the following: Indiana Normal School of Pa. First Pa. State Normal School of Millersville, Pa., West Chester State Normal School. There are also some old pictures of churches 1725, 1740, 1780, as well as old buildings of Harrisburg. There is also quite a history of Pa. before 1897. I see The Wayne Independent has had some of this in it recently.

Yesterday I ran across an old book, I believe belonged to my grandfather Curtis. The first few pages have poems pasted in, I think by Aunt Augusta. I suppose the reason why I kept it. This book contains the "28th Annual Report of the Superintendents of Common Schools." The date mentioned 1861. It gives a description of School Houses, number in county, furniture and apparatus, schools - graded - Teachers, numbers, and professional or with certificate, etc., Moral instruction, Visitation, Institutes, Progress, Public Sentiment, Plans for next year, etc. This gives this information for each County in Pennsylvania. There is a lot of data contained in this old book. You may be able to get the information you desire elsewhere, but if you care to borrow any of these books, you are welcome to use them...

4. In her letter of March 1, 1981 to Edith A. Gardner, Louise Gladys (Curtis) McCue states the following information about education in general, and about the Curtis Valley School in particular:

[Lillian] Beatrice [(Curtis) Bartholomay] probably knows more about the country schools of Wayne County than any one alive today. She had real experience. I do think that in the early days Penna. was quite advanced in development. It was one of the original Common Wealths (there are 5 in the 48 + 2 states). From the start more concerned about common good than those states that just grew. As long as I can remember the country school had an annual visit by a doctor, and by the County Supt. of Schools. Now Penna. is as political as any of the states.

I well remember my first day in school. Rose [Olive (Curtis) Wihtol] took me as a visitor for the Christmas party. The teacher wore a dark dress with a little white apron. I was, maybe 4. I just wouldn't keep quiet, so the teacher put me on a stool by the window. I had a lovely view of the harness and sleighs, with sleigh bells going up the opposite hill. I didn't know that it was supposed to be punishment until I got home. My husband [James P. McCue] always spoke about the country school as being the original progressive education. I guess my father [George Augustus Curtis] was my first real teacher. He introduced me to the "golden age" of American literature (the 18 hundreds). He did continuously seek knowledge and passed it along. I learned to tell time by the sun when I was a wee child. He was never too busy to answer any of my questions. One of the really fine teachers we had was Cousin Carrie [Inez (Curtis) Loomis]. She taught at Curtis Valley when Norvelle [Elliott (Curtis) Kern] and I were in the 7th grade. She tutored us in 8th grade work. We took the Common School exam and passed. It was a pride to her, all her life, that all of her students passed. Juanita [(Curtis) Gelder] and Beatrice 8th grade, and Norvelle and I 7th.

The Curtis Valley School was built by Grandfather [Henry Banning] Curtis, so that his grandchildren would have a school close at hand. It always remained a part of the Curtis estate. Grandfather was President of the School Board. This I found out when I got some of the old letters. There was an application for a job by [Emily Irene] Rena (Stanton) Curtis. This I turned over to Carrie.

SOME TYPICAL RECITATION REQUIREMENTS OF BY-GONE DAYS

Some Typical Recitation Requirements of By-Gone Days

Reading: The pupil must stand squarely on both feet, holding the book in the left hand with thumb and little finger in front, the other three at the back. At pauses the reader must count silently, one at a comma; two at a semicolon; four at a colon; six at a period, question, or exclamation mark. When finished, up would go a row of hands. The teacher might call upon "Mary" for corrections, and the response would likely be, "She held the book in her right hand, and she didn't stop long enough after the word 'tree' to count one." Others would make similar corrections, and the pupil's effort was listed "imperfect."

A mental arithmetic exercise: The teacher might read the question, "If two and one-fourth bushels of apples cost $1.80, what will be the cost of five and one-half bushels of apples?"

Pupil, standing: "If two and one-fourth bushels of apples cost $1.80, what will be the cost of five and one-half bushels? Two and one-fourth equals nine-fourths. If nine-fourths bushels cost one dollar and eighty cents, one fourth bushel of apples will cost one-ninth of one dollar eighty cents or twenty cents; and four-fourths or one bushel will cost four times twenty cents, or eighty cents. If one bushel of apples cost eighty cents, five and one-half bushels of apples will cost five and one-half times eighty cents, or four dollars and forty cents. Therefore, if two and one-fourth bushels of apples cost one dollar and eighty cents, five and one-half bushels will cost four dollars and forty cents." Any omission or mistake in the exact wording would be pounced upon by other members of the class.

Grammar exercise: teacher would announce, "Mary Jones, analyze the third sentence." Mary: "The lady who lives in the next house has a very large dog." This is a complex declarative sentence. It is a complex sentence because it is made up of an independent and a dependent clause, of which 'the lady has a very large dog' is the independent clause and 'who lives in the next house' is an adjective clause modifying lady. 'Lady' is the subject of the independent clause and is modified by the adjective 'the.' 'Has' is the predicate of the independent clause because it affirms a fact. 'Dog' is the object complement of the verb 'has' because it receives the act. It is modified by the adjective 'large.'

And thus the pupil would proceed with each word, always giving the "why" and "wherefore" of its office in the sentence.

Teacher: "John, parse the word 'lady.'"

John: "The word 'lady' is a noun because it is the name of a person or thing. It is a common noun because it is common to all things of a class. It is feminine gender denoting female sex; third person, denoting one spoken of; singular number, denoting but one of a class; nominative case, subject of the verb 'has.' The subject of a finite verb is in the nominative case." Here again the one reciting was subject to class criticism of any variation from the prescribed form of presentation.

Geography: The early books were made up of questions and answers. Question: "What is an isthmus?" Answer: "An isthmus is a narrow strip of land connecting two larger bodies of land." And so on, with every type of land and water. "What are the leading industries of Pennsylvania?" "The leading industries of Pennsylvania are mining, manufacturing, lumbering, and agriculture." A long list of map questions, the answers required being the location. "Where is Boston?" "Boston is in the eastern part of Massachusetts on Massachusetts Bay." The teacher often had one finger on the question while looking on the map to verify the answer.

History, too, was largely a memory subject, often verbatim.

Spelling required first the pronunciation of the word, then each syllable, with the previous syllables pronounced again. Teacher: "attitude." Pupil: "attitude at, a-t at; ti, t-i ti, at ti; tude, t-u-d-e tude, attitude." Spelling was always oral, and "going above" and "leaving off head" were accomplishments devoutly to be wished.

For a time class books were kept and each pupil was marked from "10," perfect to "0," failure. The writer recalls an experience with the first Normal School graduate teacher in the community. Eye trouble prevented her coming for two or three weeks, and a capable substitute filled the place. In history the latter followed largely the lecture plan of teaching, asking just enough questions to give the required mark in the record book. His marks were excellent, mostly 10.

The first day the new teacher appeared, she stood before the class without a book. (An amazing thing to the class.) She began, "Mr Jones, recite." The title of "Mr." was surprising, but her general poise and attitude forbade any external expression of amusement. But poor "Mr." Jones, with a blank expression mumbled, "Recite what?" Teacher: "The first paragraph." Jones could not give it. She called on each member of the class with the result of "0" for all. "Take the same lesson tomorrow." Jones was ready the next day, the lesson passed off with about the usual number of 8's, 9's, and 10's in the record book, and the pupils admired her ability to teach "without the book."

XI. WOOD'S BUSINESS COLLEGE

Reproduced on this and the following three pages is a full-size facsimile of the September, 1895, issue of Wood's Business College Journal. Professor F. E. Wood, whose photograph is given on the second page of this issue of Wood's Business College Journal, was the President and Manager of Wood's Business Colleges in Carbondale, Scranton and Wilkes-Barre. The same course of study and methods of teaching were employed in all three schools. In the collection of Kurt A. Reed of Lake Ariel, PA, is a volume that was printed for use in the Carbondale College of Wood's Business College. On the cover of that volume is the following information: "Wood's Business College Practical Grammar and Correspondence Carbondale, Pa. W. P. Gregory, Prin." On the fly leaf is the following information: "Manton Abbey, Carbondale, Pa." The title page of this volume bears the following information: "New Practical English Grammar for use in Business Colleges, Academies, Normal and High Schools, and Advanced Classes in Public Schools. Williams & Rogers, Publishers, Rochester, N.Y. Chicago, Ill. 1896."

CARBONDALE, PA.. SEPTEMBER, 1895.

Carbondale College.

The Burke Block was fitted up especially for our work and is a most imposing structure. The front of the building is of pressed brick, trimmed with stone, and the effect is beautiful.

The college is situated on the second floor, is lighted by both electricity and gas, heated with steam and is one of the neatest and most attractive school buildings in this country.

The organization and opening of the school was so eminently successful that its magnitude and growth were beyond the most sanguine expectations of the management and its ardent supporters.

We are elated over the success of our Carbondale school, it is one of the brightest and most aggressive business colleges in this country, and Professors Gregory and Doty with their assistants are to be congratulated as their lines have fallen in pleasant places.

Why Attend the Carbondale College?

The college has recently been opened and the enrollment of between 300 and 400 thoughtful, earnest young men and ladies should have some weight. Not only have we the above number on our rolls, but we are adding to the number daily. Students are coming to us not only from Carbondale, but every near by town is represented. Recently several from a distance have registered. Some of the causes which have led to the large attendance are: Prof. Wood, who has greater facilities and experience in organizing and equipping Business Colleges than any person in America, has spared neither time nor money in giving to the Carbondale college every new equipment known and endorsed by successful college men. The course of study is new, practical and entirely up to date. He could as easily introduce in a new school the best and

Ladies.

There is an increasing demand for young ladies as stenographers and accountants. The following statistics give some idea of the increasing demand. The ratio of increase from 1890 to the present writing has been fully up to the following:

In 1870 there were seven ladies employed in the United States as stenographers and typewriters; in 1890, 21,185. In 1879, 8,016 were employed as book-keepers and office assistants; in 1890, 91,825. More than sixty (60) ladies are with us in the various departments.

Individual Instruction.

Each student receives such individual attention from the teachers in the various departments as will enable him to pursue his course as rapidly as his ability will permit.

Young Man

Could you take and hold a first class position at good salary if offered you? Our course of study and methods of placing the subjects before you will interest and fit you for such work as will command for you big pay.

most thoroughly practical course, as some time-worn out of date affair. Colleges in operation find it extremely difficult to change their course of study, even though some other course is known to be better. He has given this school only the best. The heads of the various departments were selected by him after months of careful consideration and from hundreds of well known commercial teachers.

When to Enter.

As we have no vacations, and consequently no term divisions, students may enter at any time, and with equal advantage.

WOOD'S BUSINESS COLLEGE JOURNAL.

W. P. GREGORY,
Resident Principal of the College, comes from Newark, N. J., with an experience of twenty-two (22) years. He is highly spoken of as a commercial educator. The Newark papers say: "Mr. Gregory, the professional teacher of business studies, in addition to the natural affinity between the young man and a Business College course, is a devotee in his profession. He is a companion and friend of young men. Certain it is there is a feeling of sympathy between him and his pupils which secures for them his best services and from them their most earnest efforts. This is as it should be, and it is a thing which even one not a close observer would notice in his classes. He is too well known in Newark, both as to character and qualifications for the important position he holds, to make it needful to say anything further on that point." Flattering notices have been extended Prof. Gregory and his system of imparting a thorough and practical knowledge of business affairs by nearly every paper in New Jersey, and very many in Southern and Western States.

FRED. H. CRIGER.

A Pleasant Sight.

Persons who desire to witness one of the pleasantest and most suggestive evening sights in Carbondale are urged to call at the college rooms. There are gathered nearly 200 young men and ladies securing for themselves a practical knowledge of such things as they must use in the future. How much better than to spend time and money on the streets or in worse places. It is easy to tell where these young people will be a few years from now. They are willing to deny themselves the glittering baubles which lure so many on to destruction, for the purpose of securing that knowledge which is power and success in life and will make them valuable to themselves and the State. The evening sessions are open from Sept. 1 to July 1—four evenings a week. Students admitted any evening during the year and with equal advantage.

F. E. WOOD.

Province of Our College Work.

The Business College is a modern product; until a few years ago the youth seeking knowledge of mercantile usages entered an office and by tedious labors for years acquired that familiarity with some particular line of trade which justified his entering upon it.

To-day our youths are vastly more favored; they enter a well equipped Business College and learn business in general, paying special attention if they wish to such branch of trade as they think to make a life work.

The Business College is fully prepared to perform its part and therefore makes all forms of book-keeping, the laws of commerce, the mathematics of the counting room and the penmanship of the accountant, specialties, while many other studies, such as commercial history and geography, stenography, typewriting, spelling, grammar and civil government, etc., etc., are thoroughly taught, thus giving academic culture to such as desire it.

PROF. C. L. DOTY,

In charge of the Shorthand and Typewriting Department, is an instructor of long experience as well as a practical reporter and court stenographer. Hence the tuition in his department is of such a character as to prepare and fit the learners to satisfactorily hold any position they might accept. He is not only held in high esteem by our students and patrons, but a few clippings given add to his reputation as a successful teacher and thorough gentleman in other fields as well as his Carbondale home.

"Mr. Doty is not only a thorough shorthand reporter but a teacher of ability as well."—Prof. R. E. Morgan, President Kokomo, Ind. Business University.

"I consider Prof. Doty a practical first-class instructor of stenography and a gentleman in every respect,"—Prof. C. W. Wales, President Marion, Ind. Business Institute.

"Mr. Doty is a thorough stenographer, an excellent penman and a teacher of ability, while his private character is above reproach."—Prof. C.

HON. O. F. WILLIAMS.

WOOD'S BUSINESS COLLEGE JOURNAL.

F. Compton, President Michigan City, Ind. Commercial College.

"An accomplished Graham shorthand writer and teacher." — Penman's Art Journal, N. Y. City.

"Mr. Doty is a thoroughly competent stenographic instructor and has done good work in this department." — Managing Principal Lima, Ohio, Business College.

"A talented young artist of experience and capability, who is considered by Prof. Wood as among the best of his large force in three cities." — Carbondale Leader.

PENMANSHIP.

We consider ourselves fortunate in securing the services of C. M. LESHER, a penman of rare ability, to take charge of the Penmanship Department. Mr. Leshar is an experienced teacher and secures the very best results. The improvement of his students is phenomenal. Public school teachers desirous of presenting this subject in the most approved manner should attend our night school, where they will receive individual instruction and learn the best and latest methods.

To Business Men.

It is unnecessary for us to request of you the opportunity for our graduates to compete for the vacancies that may occur. We have had more applications for book-keepers and shorthand writers during the past than we were able to supply. We keep in view the interests of our students, the college and our patrons, hence we are extremely careful and recommend only such persons as we are confident can and will fill the position with credit to themselves and the college.

Lectures.

During the course frequent lectures on leading topics and receptions are given, thus rendering the time spent pleasant as well as profitable.

Inferior men beg for situations. The best situations beg for competent men.

A practical age demands practical methods—A Business College employ such, hence their popularity.

Wood's Carbondale College.

It is natural to infer that the young men and ladies as well as the thousands of readers of the Journal who have sons and daughters to educate would like to know something of it. The College Building is admirably adapted to the various needs of an institution which aims to afford young men and ladies, in the shortest possible space of time, the best facilities for obtaining a knowledge by Theory and Practice of the branches of education acknowledged by all to be more essential or practical equipments for young men and women who have their own way to make in the world, or desire to make themselves more proficient in a short time at a small expense, than they could attain in long years of hard experience by ordinary methods. Wood's Business College is a means by which young men and young women may gain certain positions in life in less time than without it.

The principal branches—graded in the departments of Business, Shorthand and Normal—are Business Forms, Customs and Habits, Business Arithmetic, Penmanship, Theory and Practice of Book-keeping, Actual Business Practice, Business Law, Business Letter Writing, Spelling, Grammar, Typewriting, Arrangement and Filing of Letters, Punctuation, Invoices, Letter-Press Copying, Practical Office Work, History, Reading, Algebra, Rhetoric, Geography, Physiology, Geometry, etc., etc. The Normal Department gives necessary help to all who are deficient in common school branches, and the instruction is largely individual—as well as lending valuable and rapid assistance to prospective teachers. In the Business and Shorthand Departments there is no waste—nothing purely ornamental—all these things are practical and in daily use to a large extent in every day life. Wood's College makes these things a specialty. Instructors and students are mutually interested in the most rapid progress that can be secured, consistent with thoroughness. The student knows he will need to use these things—there is no doubt about it. He feels a direct personal interest not usually secured to a young man in an ordinary school, where many studies are forced upon him, without reference to his own tastes, and for which he cannot see any practical future good, and because the "American Boy" is so practical he often shirks the duty assigned him and wastes time in evolving schemes to thwart the objects of those who consulted themselves more than his tastes or desires in sending him to school. It is rarely the case that a student fails to become really interested in this college.

One School in Three Cities.

The Carbondale College is under the same general management as Wood's Scranton and Wood's Wilkes-Barre Colleges. Professor F. E. Wood, President and Manager of all. The same course of study, methods of teaching, &c., are employed here as in the colleges in the cities named.

A young man hesitating about getting a good business education on account of the cost of it, is like a farmer hesitating about planting his fields on account of the expense of the seed.

Hon. O. F. Williams,

Special Lecturer on Civil Government, Business Law, Business Ethics, etc. For 14 years Principal of Rochester Business University. Recognized as authority on Commercial Publications. One of the most widely and favorably known lecturers on Business Topics in the world.

Prof. Thomas Martin,

Registrar, known throughout the United States as one of the most wide-awake, best qualified, all around Business College men to be found in the work. His 32 years of experience have been crowned with abundant success.

Few young men or women who have carefully pursued either the full course work or that in stenography or typewriting in any of Wood's Business Colleges have failed to find early and profitable employment, while nearly all have been able to earn a good living and lay aside during the first year the full cost of their education. This pays.

It is plain that a setting hen sits; that is, she sets if you sit her, and she sometimes sits when you don't set her. But the question which has puzzled the world is, whether a hen sets on a setting of eggs, or whether she sits on a sitting. But, does she sit sitting, or set setting? And if she sits on a sitting and the hatch is bad, why not set her on a setting.

S. L. OLVER.

The experience gained by Mr. S. L. Olver as teacher in Public Schools, together with his training at Wyoming Seminary, aided by the practical methods employed in Business College work, render him a valuable assistant in our English Training and Normal Departments. Many of our readers know him personally and will endorse him as being competent, reliable and a young man of most excellent character.

The difference between long and short hours, low and high wages; between drudgery and dignified employment is mainly a difference in education. Young man which road will you take?

WOOD'S BUSINESS COLLEGE JOURNAL.

To Farmers.

(From Moore's Rural New Yorker.)

It is timely to urge that each farmer in the country prepare to keep an account with his farm the coming season—with each crop and class of stock on it. If your fingers are stiff and not used to writing, and you are ignorant of the method of keeping accounts accurately, send your son or daughter where a thorough knowledge of business may be obtained, and let him or her learn what you do not know. Do not deprive your children of privileges to obtain a practical education because these did not exist in your younger days, and thereby cause them to labor under the very same disadvantages that you have for years. Let them spend six months in this way, and when he or she returns to the farm, require of him or her to open a set of books for you, and you will have a book-keeper of your own, whose business education and practical knowledge will command for him or her a good position among business men at any time. It is a great deal better that your son or daughter should spend a winter in this manner, than in solving algebraic problems or committing geometric propositions.

Just as we go to press letters were received from the following former students now successfully at work, not only in responsible positions, but demanding and securing excellent salaries: Harvey E. Lerch, with Shoemaker & Busch, wholesale druggists, Phila. J. J. Fraunfelter, with National Gas Co. Lima, O. John A. White, chief accountant for Bixler & Carrell, jobbers, Easton, Pa. C.A. Godfrey, book-keeper for Jno. T. Porter, wholesale grocer, Scranton. H. C. Bixler, discount clerk Easton National Bank, Easton, Pa. We have hundreds of letters from former pupils now filling responsible positions at more than ordinary salaries. Personal notification of very recent date to the effect that Mr. Howard E. Foster had accepted a position as stenographer at Hendricks Mfg. Co., and Frank Schoonover as stenographer and billing clerk with Erie R. R. Co., both in this city.

Situations.

Probably no person in America can point to so many young men and ladies assisted to lucrative positions as can Prof. Wood. Applications are daily received by him for competent young persons for honorable positions at liberal salaries. It is his constant aim to assist all worthy students in securing positions in keeping with the careful preparation given at this college for, not only accepting such positions, but holding them as well. Our opportunities in this direction are extensive and we will do all for you possible for any one to do.

The Demand for Shorthand.

The art of Shorthand seems to have been designed especially for young men who are struggling to make a good living. It has been aptly called "The Young Man's Friend." It holds out a hand and invites him to a good position. Besides bringing him in contact with men of refinement and education, it places him upon a level with those he is working for, wins from them respect and admiration, and, best of all, places him in the line of rapid promotion.

The day is not far distant when shorthand will be taught in the public schools, and the time

Positions for Graduates.

Don't come to the school for a position.

Come for the purpose of preparing for the position.

For nearly seventeen years I have been in the college work and during that time several thousand young men and women have taken the course and gone out into the activities of business life. I wish to say to all young people that I cannot recall a single instance where a young man or woman who completed the course well did not very soon after graduating secure a good place. We help scores every year, and do everything in our power to place every student who becomes competent.

It is very plain to us that if a student enters the college and accepts a good position at graduation, that it is very helpful to us and is a great business bringer. We regard every student placed worth at least $100 to us as a practical illustration of our work. So we had rather place a student than secure a new one.

We have over 8,000 old students in Pennsylvania alone, who work for us. One firm in Philadelphia says: "Send us twelve competent young men each month."

Daily Sessions.

The hours for work are 9 a. m. to 11:30 a. m.—1:30 to 4 p. m. Night School from 7 to 9 p. m.

Time is Money.

If you can thoroughly equip yourself for office work, get a knowledge of Commercial Law and the usages of trade by taking a six months' course in Wood's College at an outlay of about $100, and then be placed at office work where in six months you can deposit $100 in a savings bank, thus paying for your education; is this not far cheaper and better for you than to waste four or five years, as used to be done, in acquiring knowledge of business customs by tedious drill in an office?

At Wood's College you learn general work and become prepared to do all kinds of office work, while after years of drill in some office you have only learned the routine of that particular office.

Students coming from a distance are provided with comfortable quarters during the intermissions in the daily sessions and for those so desiring, we secure good, homelike boarding places at from $3 to $5 per week, as desired.

Remember that we are the only school in Northeastern Pennsylvania having a continuous history of a fifth of a century.

WOOD'S WILKES-BARRE COLLEGE.

is now when every person who is competent, can earn more salary by teaching stenography and typewriting than is possible in the public schools.

Stenography for Young Ladies.

Young ladies who aspire to pleasant, congenial and lucrative positions in comfortable business offices should note the signs of the times, and equip themselves with a knowledge of shorthand and typewriting.

During the next two or three years in this part of Pennsylvania every young lady or gentleman who becomes proficient in stenography can find a remunerative place in the counting-rooms, offices and different places of business.

XII. EDNA LOOMIS, TEACHER

Edna Pearl Loomis, High School Graduation. Studio photograph, 2 7/8" X 5 1/2", by Foster Art Gallery, Carbondale, Pa., in the collection of Margaret L. Winter, Jermyn, Pa.; copy print by Donald W. Powell. Original photograph is inscribed on the back, in the hand of Ora Esmarilda (Loomis) Russell, as follows: "June 1904."

Beginning around 1900, increasingly larger numbers of students annually attended, and graduated from, the high schools of the Commonwealth. It soon became the custom to have one's graduation photograph taken. One such photograph is the one given above of Edna Pearl Loomis, who was graduated from the Carbondale High School on June 24, 1904. Published in the Carbondale Leader (afternoon edition, June 25, 1904, p. 7) was the following article about the 1904 commencement exercises at the Carbondale High School:

HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT.
A Pleasing Program Was Carried Out Last Evening—Eloquent Address by Mayor O'Neill.

The twenty-third annual commencement exercises of the Carbondale High school held last evening in the assembly room of the Central school building were carried out in a successful manner. While the program was not as elaborate, perhaps, as that of last year, the exercises were of a thoroughly enjoyable nature and reflected creditably upon the young folks who participated.

The Assembly room was filled to its capacity and all present showed commendable interest in the efforts of the young graduates. The decorations were beautiful. Flags were artistically draped about the walls. An evergreen fence along the front of the platform was studded with red and white electric bulbs and from the ceiling was suspended in red and white the class colors, the motto, "Gradatim." A corps of young ladies from the junior class acted as ushers.

The first number was a march, during which the graduates thirty-one in number, marched from the recitation rooms to the platform in the assembly room. They were given a hearty ovation.

Miss Ruth Bailey, the salutatorian, gave the audience a most gracious welcome. Her essay was one of the real treats of the evening. Beautifully worded, and delivered in a faultless manner, it won most favorable attention.

The next number was a character study of "Portia" from the "Merchant of Venice," given by Miss Edna Loomis. The young lady showed a familiarity with her subject which denoted close application to her study of Shakespeare's works.

Miss Grace Stone sang a solo in a very pleasing manner and won hearty applause. The next number was a paper on "Japan" by Miss Jessie Reese. It was a comprehensive description of the national character, resources and accomplishments of the residents of the eastern empire and well merited the hearty applause it received. The next number was the class song.

The address of the evening was delivered by Hon. J. J. O'Neill, who spoke in his usual eloquent manner. He congratulated the graduates upon their success in this important educational epoch of their lives and then gave an address, the salient feature of which was an emphasis of the value of time. Success is gained only through constant effort. No one, however great, can live on past achievements. Even virtue may not seek remuneration for its past.

Mayor O'Neill said he hoped there would never come a time when the members of the class of 1904 would say their work is done; their education finished. It matters not how great our feats in the past, if we stop we begin to decay. As long as life shall last the struggle must go on. There is no way to succeed except by work, tireless, sometimes thankless work. Into whatever walk of life we may enter, the same tireless struggle must be fought. Mr. O'Neill advised the graduates to abandon hope of success at once if they are not willing to pay the price of constant work. Success cannot be attained without it.

THE ACADEMIES OF SUSQUEHANNA COUNTY

Given below is a facsimile, 64% full size, of the information on the academies of Susquehanna County that is given on pages 32-46 of The Schools of Susquehanna County Pennsylvania 1795-1945. Compiled by George A. Stearns. (Published by the Susquehanna County Historical Society and Free Library Association, Montrose, Pa., 1947; Montrose Publishing Co., Montrose, Pa.). This information is here reprinted with the gracious permission of the Susquehanna County Historical Society and Free Library Association, Montrose, Pa., Marion F. Baker, Librarian.

ACADEMIES.

The Neighborhood and the early Common Schools, teaching little more than the "Three R's," played an important part in the educational development of the pioneer communities; but the academies of those days have carried over to the present time a seemingly greater historical significance. Many of the professional people of seventy-five and one hundred years ago prepared for life's work in the academies. Most of such schools in the state were founded through church influence and support, as were also many of the colleges. However, most of the academies in Susquehanna county were organized and carried on through community rather than church inspiration, or through the personality of individual teachers.

Susquehanna Academy.

In 1816 a charter was granted to an academy to be conducted in Montrose. The Legislature appropriated $2,000 as a contribution towards the erection of the building, the balance being contributed by subscription, as the following from the Montrose Sentinel in May 9, 1818, indicates: "Subscribers to the Susquehanna Academy are notified that they must call and pay their respective subscriptions to the treasurer immediately, or prosecution will be commenced against all delinquents."

By order of the trustees. Justin Clark, Treasurer."

A similar notice appeared in the September 12 issue.

The building was completed for occupancy in the fall of 1818. The following notice appeared several times in the Montrose Gazette: "Public notice is hereby given that the Susquehanna Academy in the village of Montrose is now open for the reception of scholars from abroad. The Trustees, having completed the building for the accommodation of a number of scholars and obtained a number of competent teachers the principal of whom is William Jessup, a graduate of Yale College, assisted by Bela Jones, Esq., flatter themselves that from the healthy situation of the village, the moderate price of board and tuition, and the attention that will be paid to the morals of these young ladies and gentlemen whose education shall be entrusted to this Seminary, it will receive a liberal patronage from an enlightened and intelligent public.

"The price of tuition for the higher branches of the mathematics and the learned languages, four dollars per quarter; for English grammar and geography, three dollars, do.; for reading, writing, and common arithmetic, two dollars, do.; and for reading and spelling, $1.50cts. By order of the Pres., J. W. Raynsford, Secy."

J. W. Ryansford taught a part of the year above advertised. It would seem that the first floor had two or more rooms, and these were occupied by those pursuing the elementary branches; while the second floor was one large room where the classical subjects were taught. For succeeding years the following teachers are given:—

- 1819, Samuel Barnard and daughter Catherine.
- 1820, Ralph H. Read and Walter Woodhouse.
- 1821-24, Albert Bingham, David Benedict, P. Wright.
- 1825-28, Eli Meeker, Sloan Hamilton, Franklin Lusk, Benjamin and D. Dimock, Jr.
- 1829-31, Seth T. Rogers, P. Richardson, S. S. Stebbins, Rufus Gregory.
- 1833-36, B. S. Bentley.
- 1837-42, L. H. Woodruff (?), H. S. Fairchild, Payne, Rev. S. Manning.
- 1843-44, Z. L. Beebe, Lafayette G. Dimock.
- 1845-47, C. C. Halsey.
- 1848-49, A. J. Buel.

In 1832 the building was thoroughly repaired and an orrery and other apparatus were added. In the 30's the state contributed to the expenses, sometimes as much as $2,000. These contributions were usually made on behalf of certain pupils who were not able to pay their own tuition expenses. This building was first located on the hill above the present jail, but in 1828 it was moved to the location now occupied by the public school. It was used for several years for church services.

34

SCHOOLS OF SUSQUEHANNA COUNTY

In 1850 a new building was completed at a cost of $4,200. It was fifty by sixty feet. In 1863 it was taken over by the school board for public school use.

Principals after the new building was completed were Lemuel H. Waters, Rev. Isaac Gray, Rufus Crampton, William H. Richmond, John L. Mills, and Hartshorne. These were college men.

Preceptresses were Miss Mary J. Crawford, Bessie Hunting, Caroline Bush, Frances J. Woolworth and Brown.

William H. Jessup and Miss A. A. P. Rogers were assistants, and Miss Caroline Bowman was superintendent of the primary department. Miss Emily C. Blackman, teacher of music; and Gustave H. Walter, teacher of German.

In the fall of 1857 it became a normal school under the direction of Prof. John F. Stoddard, at the time a popular author of a series of arithmetics. He was followed by H. Brodhead, B. A., and S. S. Hartwell, B. A. Under the principalship of these men its success from year to year was somewhat deviating, and in 1863 the school board took over the building and established the Montrose Public Graded School, under the principalship of Prof. F. D. Hunt. For forty-five years it served this part of the county efficiently, and many of its students became leading business and professional people of the communities in which their life's lot was cast.

Montrose Female Seminary.

A charter for this Seminary was granted in 1839 with the expectation that it was to receive $300 per year for ten years from the state; but in 1843 the state found it necessary to cut all such appropriations one-half, and the next year, 1844, the payments were eliminated entirely. It evidently occupied the lower room or rooms of the academy building during the few years of its independent existence. The teachers were:

- 1839, Miss Elizabeth Wood.
- 1840-41, Preceptress, Mrs. Elizabeth H. Stone. Miss Theo-

A flute duet by Theodore Bauschmann and Edward Mills formed a pleasing diversion after which Lasley Lee gave the valedictory oration. The ability demonstrated by the young man showed that he had rightfully won the honor of valedictorian. He made an earnest appeal for good books and in closing paid the usual tributes to the school directors, parents, superintendent and faculty and bade a graceful farewell to them and to his classmates.

One of the real pleasures of the evening was the brief address of Prof. W. D. Bryden, principal of the high school. His chief thought was that the vital issue with the graduates is not what they know but what they are. In behalf of the school board he then presented the diplomas, the "sign and seal of work well done." The exercises were closed by the singing of a parting song by the graduates. The words of the two class songs were composed by Miss Mabel Lowry and the music by Leon L. Bly.

Following are the members of the class of 1904: Ruth C. Bailey, Catherine Fineran, Bridget Howard, Katherine Kirkwood, Edna Loomis, Susan McMinn, Gertrude Powell, Jessie Reese, Grace Stone, Margaret Boland, Hazel Gardner, Edith Jones, Gertrude Linnen, Mabel Lowry, Margaret O'Boyle, Anna Pengelly, Marjorie Spencer, Lois Tryon, Mattie Thomas, Mary Wade, Helen Watkins, Mary Williams, Otto Brunner, Will Davis, Frank Duffy, Ridgeway Lathrope, Will Glennon, Lasley Lee, Fred Lewis, Edward Mills, Raymond Ward.

Edna Pearl Loomis was born on December 29, 1885 in Clinton Township, Wayne County, PA. She is the daughter of Theron Orsemus Loomis and Mary Emma Squire, portraits of whom are presented in Volume I, Number 1 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA. Following her graduation from Carbondale High School, on June 24, 1904, Edna Pearl Loomis began, in the fall of 1904, her 34-year teaching career in the public schools of northeastern Pennsylvania: 1904-1906, Preston Township, Wayne County; 1906-1907, Scott, Wayne County; 1907-1908, South Canaan, Wayne County; 1908-1915, Jermyon Borough, Lackawanna County; 1915-1927, Carbondale High School, Carbondale, Lackawanna County; 1927-1938, Central High School, Scranton, Lackawanna County.

When Edna Pearl Loomis resigned her position on the faculty of Carbondale High School and accepted a position on the faculty of Central High School of Scranton, the following notice was published in one of the Carbondale newspapers, probably the Leader:

CARBONDALE LOSES VALUED TEACHER FROM HIGH SCHOOL

Miss Edna Loomis, Teacher of English, Appointed to Staff of Scranton Central High School.

Miss Edna Loomis, one of the teachers of English in the Carbondale High School has been engaged by the Scranton School district to teach English and Mathematics in the Central High school Scranton.

Miss Loomis of course will assume her new position with the opening of the Fall term of school and with her mother will take up her residence in Scranton.

Probably no teacher in Carbondale is more highly esteemed than Miss Loomis because of her many fine qualities and charms of personality and because of her conscientious and capable work as a teacher.

There are rumors that other teachers are very close to the point of severing relations with the Carbondale district and the reason in some cases is given that they cannot afford to work without stated paydays. Other teachers say that they'd leave too if they had positions as they have apprehensions that their positions are becoming too much the football of politics.

In February, 1927, Edna Pearl Loomis was awarded a Bachelor of Arts degree from Pennsylvania State College; in August, 1932, she was awarded a Master of Arts degree in English from that same college. Edna Pearl Loomis' Master's Thesis is entitled A Comparison of Lord Chesterfield's Letters to His Son with the Conduct Books of the Sixteenth Century. A bound copy of that thesis, which was typed by Edna Pearl Loomis' niece, Helen Loomis (Russell) Powell, is in the Russell Homestead Library, Carbondale, PA.

On July 20, 1938, at Ocean Park, Maine, Edna Pearl Loomis was married to LeRoy Besley Loomis of Detroit, Michigan. Published in a Scranton newspaper, probably The Scranton Tribune, was the following announcement of the wedding of Edna Pearl Loomis and LeRoy Besley Loomis:

MISS EDNA LOOMIS WEDS IN MAINE

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Edna P. Loomis, Clay Avenue, to L. B. Loomis, Detroit, which took place in the Summer home of Rev. W. D. Golightly, pastor of the Immanuel Baptist Church, at Ocean Park, Me., at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning.

The bride has been a member of the faculty of Central High School for 11 years. Previous to coming to Scranton, she taught for a number of years in the Carbondale High School. The groom is safety director in the Ternstedt Division of the General Motors Corporation. The couple will live at 188 Buena Vista, West, Detroit.

The following information about the wedding of Edna Pearl Loomis and LeRoy Besley Loomis is from a letter written on March 19, 1971 by Edna P. (Loomis) Loomis to her niece, Helen Loomis (Russell) Powell:

"... I received a most delightful letter from Dr. Golightly... I was greatly pleased. His letter recalled memories that had lain dormant many years. I lived over some of those eventful times. One memory was our getting the marriage license just as the office was being closed! Roy and I arrived five minutes to six in Saco at the office, and the office closed at six! Probably Dr. Golightly didn't tell you that he and his wife went to the woods, got evergreen branches and had their fireplace filled with the lovely green branches and flowers here and there in their home. It looked so lovely and Mrs. Golightly and their son were our only witnesses. The Golightlys went with us after the ceremony for a beautiful drive along the coast of Maine and we had dinner at a magnificent place on a bluff looking out on the ocean. Dr. Golightly had quite a bit of correspondence for some time before the event took place as Dr. G. had to get the Maine license with Roy's help. Glad they made it and we made it too on time!"

Edna Loomis was an ardent genealogist and author of several family histories, including her monumental Loomis genealogy, Ancestry of Ora Loomis Russell [and] Edna Loomis Loomis Descendants of Ora Loomis Russell, which was published in 1955. Were it not for the enthusiasm for and commitment to local history on the part of Edna Pearl (Loomis) Loomis, among others, NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, be it known, would not have been created by S. Robert Powell and Donald W. Powell.

On July 4, 1976, Edna Pearl (Loomis) Loomis died, aged 90, at Highland Park, Michigan. On Wednesday, July 7, 1976, at 1:00 P.M., memorial services for Edna Pearl (Loomis) Loomis were held by the Rev. Dr. Hale Thornberry in the Seven Mile Memorial Chapel, Harper-Mulligan Funeral Home. The earthly remains of Edna Pearl (Loomis) Loomis were, on that day, interred in Woodlawn Cemetery, wherein her husband, LeRoy Besley Loomis (b. 10-21-1887, Hicks, NY, d. 12-25-1958, Highland Park, MI) is also interred.

The following obituary of Edna Pearl (Loomis) Loomis was written by her niece, Helen Loomis (Russell) Powell, and published in a Scranton newspaper:

MRS. EDNA L. LOOMIS

Mrs. Edna L. Loomis, 90, of Highland Park, Mich., born in Clinton Township, Wayne County, and formerly of Scranton and Carbondale, died on July 4, 1976. She was the widow of Leroy B. Loomis and the daughter of the late Mary Emma Squire and Theron O. Loomis of Carbondale.

Mrs. Loomis received her Bachelor of Arts and Master of Arts degrees at Pennsylvania State University and was a teacher in Pennsylvania for 34 years, having taught in Carbondale, Jermyon and Central High School, Scranton. She was a direct descendant of Priscilla Mullins and John Alden, a member of Pennsylvania State University Women's Club of Detroit and Fort Ponchartrain Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

She is survived by one niece, Helen R. Powell, Carbondale; two grandnieces, three grandnephews and a step-daughter, Fra Loomis, New Mexico.

Services were held in Detroit, Mich., on July 7.

dosia A. Catlin taught a large class in music, though there were then but three pianos in the town.

1841-42. Miss Mariana Read was preceptress. Her services seem to have terminated the Seminary activities, as such, but select schools were taught in the lower rooms for three or four years by former teachers.

In 1847 Miss F. L. Willard began teaching in the Academy building, but afterwards kept a BOARDING SCHOOL for young ladies. Miss Emily C. Blackman and Mrs. Theo. Smith were her assistants.

She also kept a day school for young lads. Pupils came from all parts of the county and from other counties. This school was located first in the building given on the County Atlas as George C. Hill. This was the second house from High Street on Maple Street. Later it occupied the old Post house, and a Miss Totten was an assistant. It seems unfortunate that no information is available regarding the duration of this school. Nothing is available regarding any relationship that may have existed between this school and the academy.

Dundaff Academy.

In the early days Dundaff was a very enterprising settlement on the Milford and Owego Turnpike with a flattering future in anticipation. The Dundaff Academy was chartered in 1828 and occupied a two-room two-story building.

It aimed to teach algebra, geometry, mensuration, surveying, civil engineering, natural philosophy, moral philosophy, evidences of christianity, rhetoric, logic, geology, mineralogy, chemistry, and astronomy; also political economy and the art of teaching if desired.

This seems like a very inclusive scientific course for its "woody" surroundings, but we must remember that at that time Dundaff vied with Montrose for civic and commercial preferment. In fact, a scheme was promoted for this section of the county to secede and rejoin with Luzerne; or, with the more ambitious vision, to become the county seat of a new county. However, the development of the coal industry in the Carbondale area was a fatal blow to the growing aspirations of Dundaff, and the academy was but a memory.

SCHOOLS OF SUSQUEHANNA COUNTY

Some of the prominent teachers in the days of its prosperity were Rev. E. O. Ward, Rev. Allen, Miss Farrar, and later Samuel Crittenden. The building became public property and housed the borough school under the direction of the schoolboard.

The Classical and Agricultural School of Susquehanna County.

An academy bearing this attractive and inclusive title was chartered by the Legislature in 1828, and the following trustees were named in the act. Dr. Thomas C. Jones and Robert Vaux, Philadelphia; Reuben Haines, Germantown; Edward White, Moses Tiffany, William Justus, Robert Rose, Susquehanna County. (See P. L. 1828-29, page 305.) It was re-chartered in 1838 with these trustees: William Hartley, William Jessup, Hiram Finch, C. L. Ward, M. C. Tyler, James C. Biddle, Joshua W. Raynsford, Joseph Williams, Charles Avery, Bela Jones and Asa Dimock. (P. L. 1838-39, page 391.)

So far as is now known, this proposed school never came into physical reality. It is of interesting significance, however, to note that the word "Agriculture" in the title is indicative of a generally prevailing sentiment in those days in favor of agricultural schools. One wonders if Dr. Rose's gift of ten acres north of Montrose for school purposes had any relation to this proposed school.

Franklin Academy.

The actual beginning of this school is somewhat hazy. In 1817 Lyman Richardson taught academic subjects in the Center schoolhouse in Harford village. Later his brother Preston taught similarly in that vicinity, but Preston entered college. However, in 1829 his health became impaired to the extent that he gave up his college work and returned to Harford. His father, Caleb Richardson, had built a house on his farm on the west side of the road some twenty or thirty rods south of the later academy buildings, the location of which is indicated by the stone marker for the Soldiers' Orphans' School.

Preston began teaching the year of his return in a second floor bedroom of that house; but the school soon outgrew the capacity of the bedroom, and the father built what, at the time, was considered a commodious building, and named it Franklin Hall. The school grew rapidly, and in 1836 it received a charter from the state as Franklin Academy, and eventually several more buildings were added.

ACADEMIES

That year, 1836, Preston died, and his nephew, Willard Richardson, became the principal until the spring of 1840. He had been identified with the school through his uncle. Rev. Nathan Leighton finished that school term, and in the fall Rev. Lyman Richardson became its guiding spirit and remained as such until its close, although Willard assumed the principalship for a time; also Rev. Edward Allen. In 1850 it assumed the more pretentious title of Harford University, and was authorized as such to grant degrees. However, later generations always refer to it as Franklin Academy.

At its peak of prosperity it enrolled from one hundred fifty to one hundred seventy-five students, and they came from all parts of northeastern Pennsylvania. Men who later became prominent in the professions and in state and national political affairs attended this institution. The list included Cyrus C. Carpenter, a governor of Iowa; C. R. Buckalew, of Columbia County, a one time United States Senator, and one who played a prominent part in the preparation of the State Constitution which was adopted in 1874; Galusha A. Grow, a member of Congress for many years and Speaker of the House of Representatives, 1861-63; Rienzi Streeter, one time Speaker of the House of Representatives of Colorado; John Guernsey, a State Senator in a western state; John D. Stiles, a member of Congress from Carbon County; Stewart Pierce, prominent in our State Legislature; Judges of our county, Ferris B. Streeter and J. B. McCollum; Judge Paul D. Morrow and Judge Mercur, of Bradford County; Judge Henry W. Williams, of Tioga County (A Harford boy). Judges Williams and McCollum became Justices of the State Supreme Court, the latter being Chief Justice at the time of his death.

The catalogue of 1851 lists the following subjects: Classic Department—Latin: Grammar, Reader, Cicero, Virgil, Horace, Livy, Tacitus.

Greek: Grammar, Reader, Xenophon, Homer, (Iliad and Odyssey), Demosthenes, select tragedies.

XIV. THE STONE SCHOOL, MOUNT PLEASANT TOWNSHIP, WAYNE COUNTY

Stone School, Mount Pleasant Township, Wayne County, Pa., in 1911, 1912 or 1913. Photograph in the collection of Rev. G. Fay Crossman, Pleasant Mount, Wayne County, Pa.; copy print by Donald W. Powell. On October 4, 1980, Rev. and Mrs. G. Fay Crossman conducted a tour of some of the historical sites of Mount Pleasant Township, Wayne County. The following persons were members of the tour group: Miss Edith A. Gardner, Miss Honey Jane Rodgers, Mr. and Mrs. Milo Crossman and daughter, Mr. Donald W. Powell, and the author. The Stone School was one of the sites visited by the Crossman tour group on October 4, 1980. On that day, the author, S. Robert Powell, learned the following information about the Stone School from Rev. G. Fay Crossman:

--the school was opened in 1840 and closed in 1929; in 1878 the school was re-done (at that time, a stone with the year 1878 painted on it was placed in the front wall of the school, to the right of the front door as one faced the school; this stone can be seen in the photograph of the students and teacher in front of the school that is given below)

--in the period 1878-1929, there were windows on six of the eight sides of the school; in the middle of the front side was the entrance door; there was no window in the side of the octagon directly opposite the front door; the upper half of the window in each side contained 12 panes of glass (3 panes vertically and 4 panes horizontally), the lower half of the window in each side contained 8 panes of glass (2 panes vertically and 4 panes horizontally)

--in the 1800s, the students' desks were arranged around the outside of the single-room school and the teacher's desk was in the middle of the room; at that time as many as 60 students per year attended the Stone School; there were, at one time, fourteen one-room schools in Mount Pleasant Township: Brick, Gates, Fulkerson, Monroe, Deming, Meridith, Vasbinder, Stone, Egypt, Pleasant Mount, Whites Valley, Abbott, Red, and Rock Lake

--when G. Fay Crossman attended this school, from the winter of 1905-1906 to 1913, the teacher's desk was situated in the middle of the back wall (the wall opposite the front door), and the students' desks were arranged in four rows that were perpendicular to the teacher's desk (the two rows of desks for the boys were on the left as one faced the teacher's desk, and the two rows of desks for the girls were on the right as one faced the teacher's desk); the four-row arrangement of students' desks was instituted, Rev. Crossman hypothesizes, when the school was re-done in 1878; in his letter to the author of March 5, 1981, Rev. Crossman states: "Too, between the four rows of pupils and the teacher's desk, was a 'class bench' where each class went at its given time (all eight grades were together). Very interesting, yet educational. As an example: The teacher would ask any pupil the question she desired pertaining to the lesson. My best subject was spelling, and one day in class, I had spelled my word, the next word was 'PLEASANT,' it went to each pupil until it was my turn which never came. We had to take our spelling over! I could have spelled the word, and perhaps the teacher knew it."

--during the years that G. Fay Crossman was a student at the Stone School, 30-35 students per year attended this school; a pot-bellied stove was located in the center of the classroom; drinking water was carried in a single pail from the house to the right of the school in the photograph given above--there was just one dipper and all students drank from that one dipper

--four of the teachers who taught in this school are (1) Bertha Conlogue (see photo of Stone School that is given below), (2) Mabel Peck, (3) May Glover, and (4) William O'Hara (who told Rev. Crossman that he was the last teacher to teach in the Stone School before it closed in 1929)

--in 1976, the Wayne County Bicentennial Committee drew up a list of historical sites and buildings in Wayne County (the list was published in THE WAYNE INDEPENDENT of July 4, 1976); at the site of the Stone School (on PA Route 670), the Wayne County Bicentennial Committee placed a marker on which is given the following information: "Dix School Wayne County Bicentennial Committee 77" [the number "77" refers to item number 77 in the list drawn up by the Wayne County Bicentennial Committee]; on March 5, 1981, Rev. G. Fay Crossman spoke with Mrs. Stark, who presently lives next to where the Stone School stood; Mrs. Stark explained to Rev. Crossman that when the historical marker was placed at the site of the Stone School in 1976 that she noticed that the name of the school, as given on the marker, was in error, and informed a member of the Bicentennial Committee of the error; the marker was removed from the site, but later returned. In his letter to the author of March 5, 1981, Rev. Crossman reported the following information about the Dix School: "I made a phone call to Mr. David Dix to ask about a Dix School. Yes, there was a Dix School, farther north in Preston Township, Wayne County, where his grandfather had lived. My wife and I had looked at a map made in 1872, Atlas of Wayne County, Pa. We have a copy published in 1977, and we found the location of the Dix School far to the northwest. Mr. Dix is a long-time friend, and would be willing for you to come in for any further information, now or in the future."

SCHOOLS OF SUSQUEHANNA COUNTY

Mathematical Department—Algebra, Geometry, Surveying, Mathematics, Conic Sections, Spherical Trigonometry, Calculus.

Scientific Department—Philosophy, Chemistry, Astronomy, Physiology, Botany, Intellectual Philosophy, Moral Philosophy, Logic, Rhetoric, Elocution.

Some years French and German were taught, and classes were held in the common branches each year. Music was also taught.

The year was divided into three terms of thirteen weeks each, closing the first Wednesday in July with an exhibition. This exhibition came to be the great annual event for the public for miles around. Plays were written by the students and usually given in the open air. Speakers of national prominence addressed the school and visitors on some of the occasions.

Expenses were listed as follows: Board per week, $1.38; room, $.50; Common English branches, $.30; Scientific Department, $.40; Mathematical and Classical, $.50. Students can board themselves for from $.50 to $1.00 per week and conveniences furnished. The rooms have stoves, the rest each student furnishes. A number of students live with farmers and work for their board.

All are required to attend exercises in composition and speaking each Wednesday afternoon. There are three literary societies, two for men, one for ladies. They meet Monday evenings, and each has a good library. A flourishing temperance society and an anti-tobacco society are connected with the institution. Students are required to attend the Sunday worship service. Piano and vocal music are taught, and a teachers' course is included.

Three things led to its final closing: The Civil War greatly diminished the enrollment; the public school system was providing local facilities; Lyman Richardson was reaching the time of senile debility. In 1865 the property was sold to Charles W. Dean, and it became the Harford Soldiers' Orphan School. At this time there were six "Halls" and the principal's residence. The "Halls" were Franklin, Columbia, Bradford, Susquehanna, Newark, and Luzerne. The residence is the only building of the group still standing, and the marker for the Orphan School is the only thing indicative of the location of the once-famous academy.

Mannington Academy.

"The Susquehanna Register and Northern Pennsylvanian" in its issue of December 12, 1833, contained the following advertisement:

CHOCOENUT BOARDING SCHOOL

"The subscriber has opened a Boarding School for young Men and Boys, at his residence in Chocoonut, Susquehanna County, wherein he is prepared to teach the following branches, viz.: Reading, writing, arithmetic, English grammar, composition, natural philosophy, history, algebra, geometry, trigonometry, mensuration, surveying, and in short, the rudiments of a substantial English education.

Terms—Eight dollars per month, including washing. Stationery furnished at the lowest retail prices.

Dated November 21, 1833. John Mann."

Mr. Mann was a highly-educated Quaker. His residence was at the present location of St. Joseph's. The popularity of his school soon necessitated the erection of more building accommodations, and for a time the enrollment numbered approximately one hundred. In 1839 it was granted a charter as MANNINGTON ACADEMY. However, the Quaker population in this area began to wane, and in 1842 the school was closed and Mr. Mann went to Great Bend Village (Hallstead) and identified himself with a similar school there for a short time.

Gibson Academy.

From 1820 to 1855 turnpikes afforded the principal arteries of commerce, and villages of considerable importance sprang up along these routes. Kennedy Hill, on the Newburg Turnpike, was one of these prosperous communities. It was located on the highest point of the hills between Gibson and Smiley. Of its one-time prosperity nothing now remains unless it be some pits in the ground and remains of cellar walls.

Mainly through the efforts and influence of Joseph Washburn an academy was chartered in 1840 known as GIBSON ACADEMY. A building was erected on this Kennedy Hill, and for a short time it served the local community; but its attendance was small, and as an academy it soon became only a memory. Select schools of some importance were conducted in the building from time to time.

Friendsville Academy.

Following the closing of the Mannington Academy, Rev. Richard B. Thurston conducted a school of academic grade at Friendsville. A building was provided, but its life was short. While it was generally referred to as "Friendsville Academy," it was never chartered as such. It seems to have been supported and encouraged largely through Presbyterian influence.

A Female Seminary.

Great Bend Village. (Hallstead)

In 1831 a man named Strails conducted a select school in the Bowes Mansion. It was located on the north side of Pine Street, probably facing the river. The Ralph Hinkley home now occupies this site.

The following year, 1832, James Catlin and Miss Lucretia Loomis conducted this school under the pretentious name of "Female Seminary."

The Susquehanna Register and Northern Pennsylvanian of May 29, 1834, (probably earlier issues also) contained the following advertisement:

GREAT BEND ACADEMY.

"This institution will be opened Monday, May 19, 1834. The Trustees have procured for the school the elegant and commodious building recently occupied as a Female Seminary. Rev. Jason Corwin, as principal, and William Gates as instructor. Both are very highly recommended.

Board will be furnished in the family of the principal or other private families at $1.25 per week. Tuition, $3 to $5 per quarter of twelve weeks, graduating the price according to advance of pupils.

Special care in manners and morals and proficiency in Literature.

Trustees: Putnam Catlin, Chas. Dimon, Daniel Lyon, Abraham DuBois, Thomas Williams, John McKinney and Chas. Hatch."

When Mr. Mann took charge about 1842 or 1843, it assumed

Fay Crossman, Pleasant Mount, Wayne County, Pa.; copy print by Donald W. Powell. In his letter of November 3, 1980 to Donald W. Powell, Rev. G. Fay Crossman identified the pupils and teacher shown here in front of the Stone School. Following the name of those persons who are deceased, Rev. Crossman placed the following sign: "X"; following the name of those persons who are rumored to be dead, Rev. Crossman placed the following sign: "?". In the front row, from left to right, are the following persons: Dewey Miller, Adam Nebzydoski *, Alex Cimochowski, M.D. *, Earl Bryant, Stephen Gill *, Ethel O'Dell *, Marion McClosky *, Anna Cimochowski *, James Martin *, Vivien Miller, Stanley Cimochowski *, Rose Gill, Ina Crossman *, Anna Nebzydoski. In the second row, from left to right, are the following persons: Bertha Conlogue (Teacher) *, Margaret Martin *, Olive Allen, Mildred Miller, Jennie Glover *, Thelma Horton *, Maude Allen, pupil whose name is not known to Rev. Crossman, Howard O'Dell *, G. Fay Crossman, Raymond Nebzydoski *, Mark Fisher. In the doorway, from left to right, are the following persons: Marie Conlogue *, Regina Gill. Rev. G. Fay Crossman owns, in addition, a Souvenir Card that was presented by Bertha F. Conlogue to her students at the Stone School in 1910. At the top of that card is the following information: "Stone School District No. 7 Mt. Pleasant Township, Wayne County, Pa. Bertha F. Conlogue, Teacher." The pupils in 1910 in the Stone School are listed on that card: Regina Gill, Albert Miller, Olive Allen, Jennie Glover, Reed Bryant, Walter Conlogue, Michael McCloskey, Thelma Horton, Dewey Miller, Fay Crossman, Frank Miller, Clara Fisher, Vivien Miller, Marion McCloskey, Ethel Miller, Lonnell Stark, Owens Stark, Marie Conlogue, Elsworth Odell, Maud Allen, Mildred Miller, Mark Fisher, Lennace Miller, Howard Odell, Stephen Gill, Earl Bryant, Charles Donohue, Claude Miller, Edna Clift, Ethel Odell, Ina Crossman, Anna Cimochowski, Hilda Stark, Alex Cimochowski. Also given on that Souvenir Card is the following information: J. J. Kohler, Supt. School Board--N. R. Buller, S. B. Doyle, Frank Hauenstein, John Perham, Peter Conlogue, T. H. Dunn. On October 4, 1980, Rev. Crossman told the author that the Peter Conlogue who was on the school board in 1910 is the father of Bertha, Marie, and Walter Conlogue--Bertha and Marie Conlogue are in the group, here pictured, taken in front of the Stone School.

The roof and some of the walls of the Stone School have fallen down. On October 4, 1980, when the tour group (members listed in the caption to the photograph of the Stone School given on page 19) led by Rev. and Mrs. G. Fay Crossman visited the site of the Stone School, the fallen stone walls could easily be identified in the woodland where they fell following the fire in which the building was destroyed. Large trees are presently growing on the site on which once stood the Stone School.

the title of Academy, and only males attended. There is no evidence of a charter having been granted this academy. Its duration is unknown, though it may have occupied a building on Main Street near the long-known Hanrahan store, as this building was often referred to as the Academy Building.

Newtonville Institute.

In 1839 Samuel Allen Newton, a highly-educated person, opened a select school in his house. Its location on the County Atlas is the farm there designated as the James Newton farm in the northwestern part of Brooklyn township on the road leading to Watrous Corners and Montrose.

In 1840 he built a new house and conducted a well attended private school for a number of years. It became known for a number of years as NEWTONVILLE INSTITUTE, but it was never chartered. His pupils boarded here and with near-by farmers. They regarded him with the highest respect and carried his inspiration and teachings into their everyday lives.

St. Joseph's College.

Northwestern Susquehanna County was first settled by a colony of Quakers from the southeastern part of the state. However, after the first influx, remoteness from kin and the hardships of the wilderness life cooled their pioneer ardor, and most of them either returned to their former communities or moved elsewhere.

The construction of the canal at Binghamton and vicinity induced the immigration of many Irish. Upon the completion of this project, Dr. Rose and his representatives persuaded a considerable number of these people to take up land in this part of the county. By 1850 there were scattered through the forests many of these families, and, of course, they brought with them their Catholic faith.

Rev. John Vincent O'Reilly was the designated representative of that church for a large portion of this part of the state, and he established churches and missions throughout this wilderness country. It is of interest to allow one's imagination to revert in retrospect to the scenes and conditions of those days and to try to feel the faith and enthusiasm necessary to establish a college in a community where, but fifty years before, roamed the red man; and even at that time the hills echoed to the howl of the wolf and the cry of the panther. Yet Father O'Reilly had those qualities necessary to surmount all pioneer obstacles. He selected as the site of his undertaking the upper Choconut Valley where but a short time before the Mannington Academy had experienced a briefly prosperous career.

He purchased of Jane Rose the lands formerly owned by the Mann brothers in 1848. After the burning of the college in 1864 he deeded the farm to Terrence O'Reilly, reserving to others that part occupied by the college, the church, and the Female Academy. The third generation of this O'Reilly family now occupies this place, and it is claimed that some part of the present residence was included in the Mannington building as dormitories and classrooms of that academy building.

Father O'Reilly erected other buildings, not using the Mann buildings, and in the autumn of 1852 in this secluded place he opened St. Joseph's College. It was granted a charter by the state with authority to grant degrees. Four regular professors were employed, assisted by four clergymen and several subordinate teachers.

The college seems to have been closely affiliated with the Fathers of the Holy Cross of St. Mary's, Indiana, at first. In 1858 these professors were recalled, and Father O'Reilly found others qualified to take their place. Father Hugh Managhan had direct charge after the reorganization.

On the night of January 1, 1864, the building burned with all of its valuable records. It was attributed to the act of an incendiary, but the culprit was never apprehended. Most of the students were home for the Christmas vacation hence no lives were lost; but their books and other personal property were all destroyed.

The building had been erected at a cost of approximately $5,000 and was insured; but war conditions, the coming of railroads, and the changing living conditions resulted in an adverse decision to rebuild. Thus, after twelve years of notable success in its particular field, the second school of consequence in this community passed into oblivion except as a memory of those who knew it well for the time it was in existence. It is of interest to note that the first three bishops of the Harrisburg diocese were graduates of this college--Bishops Jeremiah Shanahan, Thomas McGovern, and John Shanahan. The Shanahans were natives of Silver Lake; McGovern, of Bradford county.

St. Joseph's Seminary, or Academy.

According to statements found in Volume 31, page 301, "American Catholic Historical Society," Sisters of the Holy Cross came to St. Joseph's October 7, 1856, to take charge of the domestic department of St. Joseph's College. Father O'Reilly received approval of his recommendation that a Female Seminary be established there and erected a suitable three story building, and several of these Sisters, who had come from Notre Dame, Indiana, opened a school for girls November 3, 1856. At first it was known as St. Mary's Seminary, but on May 1, 1861, it was chartered by the state thus: "ST. JOSEPH'S FEMALE ACADEMY, within the limits of Choconut Township, Susquehanna County, in which are to be taught the elementary branches of education, together with the sciences and ancient and modern languages."

The trustees appointed were James Wood, Thomas Kane, John V. O'Reilly, John Monaghan, T. O'Reilly, P. McManus, and John Laughran (Lonergan).

The convent was built in 1855-56, and occupied by the Sisters who came when it was completed. These Sisters, however, were recalled in 1858, and Father O'Reilly then applied to the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, Monroe, Michigan, for a complement of Sisters. The following came under the temporary direction of Mother Teresa: Sister M. Magdalena Martin, Superior; Sister M. Aloysius Walters, Sister M. Agnes Moran, Sister M. Clara Eubring, a novice. Later Sister M. Stanislaus came as a music teacher. An addition was made for the accommodation of novitiates, and primary and elementary instruction was included in the school program. Novitiates of many vocations came from Philadelphia and elsewhere. The studies of the novitiates were directed by the Reverend Professors of the college and the academy. This became the center of high Christian, moral, and intellectual culture.

The burning of the college was a serious blow to the prestige of the academy, and in 1867 the Sisters and the equipment were joined with a similar school at Reading, Pa. Some went to Laurel Hill Academy, Susquehanna.

The early advanced school at Friendsville, the Mannington Academy, St. Joseph's College and the Academy, and later the renowned select school conducted by the Chamberlain sisters, gave to the Choconut Valley marked educational preeminence.

Laurel Hill Academy.

Stocker states that the Catholics, under the guidance of Father O'Reilly, obtained possession of the Scoville Hotel, known generally as "The Half Way House." Its location was at the south-eastern line of Susquehanna borough on the Harmony Turnpike.

The available Catholic records state that in 1860 Father O'Reilly established a school for girls and applied to the Court for a charter under the name, Saint Alphonsus Academy. For some unexplained reason the charter was granted April 19, 1862, with the name, Laurel Hill Seminary. It became known, however, as "Academy."

The old hotel building was remodeled, and a number of classrooms accommodated an enrollment of about one hundred fifty students. Its early organization and administration was under the direction of Sister M. Teresa, with the assistance of six other Sisters. This building served the school until 1923 when, under the leadership of Father D. J. Bustin, a modern and commodious brick building was completed at Grand and Broad streets.

Principals of the school following Mother Teresa have been Mother DeChantal, Sister Anastasia, Sister Xavier, Sister Benedict, Sister Boniface, Mother Casimir, Sister M. Dolorosa, Sister M. De Ricci, Sister M. Irma, Sister M. Enda, and Sister Marie Elise, the present principal.

In addition to the regular academic subjects, the school has emphasized music, painting, needle work, etc. In 1903 the school was recognized by the Board of Regents of New York State, and in 1916 it was approved by the Pennsylvania Bureau of Professional Education. In 1917 it became affiliated with the Catholic University of America as maintaining a first-class high school. It has since become affiliated with Marywood College, Scranton, Pa., the first Catholic Women's College in Pennsylvania.

With the passing of Rev. O'Reilly, the following priests have exerted a guiding influence throughout its career: Rev. John Slatterly, Rev. P. F. Broderick, Rev. D. J. Bustin, Rev. H. A. Reap, Very Rev. James W. Walsh, and Very Rev. Martin J. Maher, the present pastor.

The first regular graduating exercises took place in 1890, and an alumni association was organized the following year. This association is active in maintaining the traditions of the school.

ST. JOHN'S PAROCHIAL SCHOOL was established in 1874 and accommodates about two hundred primary and elementary pupils. It is located near St. John's church.

Dimock Academy.

Some time prior to 1850 L. H. Woodruff erected a building at Dimock Corners and conducted a so-called academy, though it never held a state charter. After his retirement as its teacher, several young college men continued it, the last of these being a son of Mr. Woodruff.

Soon after its discontinuance, The Literary Society of Dimock was organized, and fifty-six members took shares at five dollars each, thus raising sufficient funds to erect a two-story building, one room of which was used for school purposes. A school of advanced grade was conducted here for a few years. B. M. Stone, William H. Baker, and H. V. Thompson are given as teachers, and others are said to have taught.

Stocker says, "It is probable that these schools were at least the indirect means which led many of the young men of this township to engage in professional occupations; and, as a result, Dimock has furnished a larger number of lawyers and doctors, in proportion to its population, than any other township in the county." He gives the names of fifteen doctors and eight lawyers whose "ground roots" received nourishment from these two schools.

Montrose School for Girls.

The last school of academic grade was opened in Montrose in 1935 by Rev. John H. Bowman, M.A., B.D., as president; his sister, Mrs. Marion W. Stoughton, M.A., Ph.D., as principal, and Miss Ernestine Fisher as dean. It was called "The Montrose School for Girls."

The special purpose of the school was careful preparation for college, together with Christian evangelism as a living faith, based on devout Bible study, and thus to make a true contribution to the field of education of high-school-age girls.

The buildings of the Montrose Conference were rented, which included the fine property known as "The Torrey Lodge" on Lake Avenue. The school was entirely separate from the Bible Conference organization.

Students represented many of our states, and daughters of missionaries from Africa, Argentina, Burma, Columbia, Cuba, Ecuador, Haiti, Iran, and Siam were enrolled. Graduates have entered no less than twenty-five institutions of higher learning in various parts of the country. For the last six years of its eight-year existence, it was an accredited school by the State Department of Public Instruction.

Owing to war conditions and to restricted travel conditions to Montrose, the management felt the necessity of transferring the school to Essex Fells, New Jersey, under the name of "Montrose School of Essex Fells." As its enrollment was principally from outside the county, the loss of the school might not be considered a great direct misfortune; but its community influence can not well be measured or replaced.

XVI. HARFORD SOLDIERS' ORPHANS SCHOOL, SUSQUEHANNA COUNTY

The nine paragraphs of information about the Harford Soldiers' Orphans School that are given below are from a printed information sheet--available to visitors at the First Congregational United Church of Christ in Harford--that was picked up by Donald W. Powell on July 12, 1980.

The Soldiers Orphans School

The story is told that on Thanksgiving Day in 1863 a little girl and boy, orphaned by the War between the States, came to the door of Governor Curtin's mansion in Harrisburg begging for food. From that moment the Governor saw it as the responsibility of the State to care for the children who were homeless or orphaned because of the war. He started the machinery moving that was to result in 44 Soldiers Orphans Schools in Pennsylvania, the only one of the 34 states then in the Union to do this for her bereft children.

The Harford Soldiers Orphans School was placed on a campus that had been in use for something like 50 years as Franklin Academy, later called Harford University. This school had produced some fine men and women in many walks of life, but in May of 1865 its last students were graduated and the day of Harford's University was over.

Here then was a ready-made campus, and on November 7, 1865, the Harford Soldiers Orphans School began its first term. The State never owned the property but leased it, and supervised the school through a ten-member commission.

When the Harford School was opened it had 18 children enrolled, but this number soon increased to 100. As time went on a yearly average of 200 orphans lived and studied here. There were at one time eight or more buildings as part of the Academy and then of the Orphans School. One still stands; what was once Susquehanna Hall, built in 1842. It held the chapel, which also was used as a recitation room, above which were meeting rooms and dormitory space.

Children from the ages of four to sixteen were eligible to attend the school if the father had been killed in the war or was physically unable to support his family. Each child had chores to do. Much of the food was raised on the farm and the youngsters helped the supervisors who were in charge of these operations. Blackman's History says that in 1870 "there are 300 acres in the farm, and 50 cows are in the dairy. The farm is expected to produce 5000 bushels of potatoes, 1000 bushels of oats, and other crops in proportion. The children took cheerful and healthy. They are dressed in uniform--the boys in dark blue jackets, light blue pants, and military caps, the girls in checked gingham."

Stocker states that "in 1877 there were 18 employees, including superintendents, teachers, seamstresses, farmers, etc. There were 221 pupils that year. The better students were encouraged to become teachers and many were successful in that profession.["]

Besides academic training, the children received vocal and religious training, practical experience in cooking, cleaning and sewing for the girls, and military drills for the boys. On many Sundays the whole student body marched the mile and a half to the village for church services, part of them to the Methodist Church and part to the Congregational Church. At other times a minister from Harford held services in the Chapel and was available for spiritual guidance at any time.

Saturday was "bath day." All the girls were required to bathe during the morning--one pail of water was allotted to each. The boys had their baths in the afternoon. Each pupil had a complete change into clean garments. The laundry was done beside a dam in the nearby creek.

Naturally the enrollment dwindled with time, and there was a gradual consolidation of the many Orphans Schools in the state until only three were left, including the one in Harford, which had always a very high rating. Finally, even this one was closed in 1901, and the 60 pupils were sent to Scotland, Pennsylvania. Thus ended an interesting chapter in the annals of the little village of Harford.

On July 12, 1980, Donald W. Powell spoke with Prudence Clark of New Milford, PA, and one of her friends in the First Congregational United Church of Christ in Harford. At that time, Donald W. Powell learned that when the orphans attended services in the First Congregational United Church of Christ that they sat in the balcony. Prudence Clark, be it known, owns an autograph book in which orphans from the Harford Soldiers' Orphans School signed their names.

Given below is a facsimile, 64% full size, of the information on the Harford Soldiers' Orphans School that is given on pages 184-185 of The Schools of Susquehanna County Pennsylvania 1795-1945. Compiled by George A. Stearns (the complete reference is given at the top of column 2 on page 17 in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA). This information is here reproduced with the gracious permission of Marion F. Baker, Librarian, Susquehanna County Historical Society and Free Library Association, Montrose, Pa.

HARFORD SOLDIERS' ORPHAN SCHOOL

In 1865 Pennsylvania did what no other state has ever done--assumed the guardianship of the children of her citizens who had sacrificed their lives that "this nation might endure." It provided food, clothing, education, and medical care for all such who were under sixteen years of age.

That year Franklin Academy was sold to Charles W. Dean, then of West Chester but a native of Dimock, and he became principal of the Harford Orphan School. On November 7, 1865, eighteen such children appeared for registration; in a short time the number reached one hundred.

The following year it was purchased by Henry S. Sweet, a prominent citizen and teacher in Harford. The enrollment soon averaged about 175. In 1886 James M. Clark, of Mansfield, Pa., purchased the school and assumed the management in September. About 1895 the State Orphan School Commission purchased the personal property and leased the farm and buildings. Mr. Clark was transferred to the Scotland, Pa., School, and James Matthews of Mansfield became manager.

About this time the school at Mansfield was closed and the children there were brought to Harford, bringing the enrollment to over two hundred.

The boys were attired in the blue uniform of the Civil War soldiers. Military drill which was required daily, was an inspiring sight, frequently a special attraction at the Harford Fair. The children occasionally marched to the village to attend Sunday worship, although the Harford ministers held monthly services at the school.

About five teachers were employed. The work covered the eight elementary grades, with civics, algebra and Latin sometimes taught. The teaching term was ten months, at the expiration of which, examinations were conducted by the State Commission and the County Superintendent.

The school was divided into four details or groups, each detail having certain hours for work on the farm or in the kitchen, dormitory, or sewing room.

One might ask, "Why, if sixteen years (maximum age) was the limit for children attending the school, did the school not close within at least sixteen years after the end of the war?" The terms of admission were extended to pensioners, which, in a few years, included nearly all veterans.

The school closed in 1902, having served as a home for many hundreds of the state's handicapped children. Today nothing is left of this famous institution except a stone marker erected by those who had attended the Orphan School.

XVII. SQUIRREL ACADEMY, FELL TOWNSHIP, LACKAWANNA COUNTY

Ed Lavin and His Students at Squirrel Academy, Fell Township, Lackawanna County, in 1919 or 1920. Copy print by Donald W. Powell from the mounted photograph, 4 5/8" X 6 9/16", by The Artcraft Studio, Carbondale, PA, in the collection of Margaret L. Winter of Jermyn, PA. On July 3, 1979, Helen Loomis (Russell) Powell and Louis Rehkop told Donald W. Powell that this photograph was taken of the group assembled at the back of the school building. HLRP and LR, on July 3, 1979, identified the 20 people in this photograph as follows: back row, left to right: Bill Parks, Louis Rehkop, Bill Shust. Second row from back, left to right: Margaret Williams, Louise Russell, Helen Urda, Emma Parks, Ed Lavin. Second row from front, left to right: Vina Whitmore, Elsie Parks, a Kutch girl, Helen Russell, Thelma Kutch, Martha Williams, Ellen Parks. Front row, left to right: Andrew Coskio, Lois Jacoby, Kathryn Williams, Niles Robbins, unidentified.

The following history of Squirrel Academy (see map of Fell Township on page 14 of Volume I, Number 3, February 20, 1980, of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA) was learned by Donald W. Powell in the period 1977-1980, and communicated to S. Robert Powell in April, 1981:

Squirrel Academy did not exist in 1873. It is not shown on the map of Fell Township, that appears on page 67 of D. G. Beers' Atlas of Luzerne County, Pennsylvania (see complete reference in Volume II, Number 1 of this historical quarterly). One of the schools that is shown on that map, the Russell School, was moved to the site of and, in fact, became Squirrel Academy. It is not known when the building was moved.

This school, which is affectionately referred to by local residents as Squirrel Academy, is called the "Falls School" by Louis Rehkop.

The year when the school was started has not yet been learned, nor has the date when the school was closed. On July 3, 1979, George Wallis told Helen Powell that the building was torn down in the mid-1940s. Helen Powell says that she can recall seeing George and Joe Wallis walking through the fields to get to the school in 1939 or later, so Squirrel Academy was in operation until at least 1939.

On April 8, 1977, Helen Powell—who attended Squirrel Academy from 1919 to 1925—told S. Robert Powell the following information about Squirrel Academy: "It was the coldest place in Lackawanna County. The reason the school was so cold is that the heating systems were, in effect, useless. Initially, there was an asbestos-lined iron furnace with a tin cover in one corner. The heat went right up to the roof and did not heat the lower part of the room. Then they took that out and put in a pipeless furnace. To keep the students from getting burned, they put a pipe on it and the heat all went up to the roof."

There were usually 25-30 students who attended Squirrel Academy per year. One teacher taught all seven grades. On July 3, 1979, Louis Rehkop named the following teachers who taught, over the years, at Squirrel Academy.

Miss Murphy: she taught at Squirrel Academy before Louis Rehkop's time; on September 13, 1979, May and Joe Wallis told Donald W. Powell that they both had Miss Murphy as a teacher at Squirrel Academy.

Miss May Ward: she taught at Squirrel Academy when Louis Rehkop was a student there; on September 13, 1979, May Wallis reported that "May Ward was talking about the schools out here." On May 6, 1980, Louis Rehkop told Donald W. Powell that May Ward is married and lives in the highrise at 60 South Main Street, Carbondale. On April 18, 1981, S. Robert Powell and Donald W. Powell attempted to make the acquaintance of May Ward. In the lobby of 60 South Main Street, SRP and DWP made the acquaintance of Mrs. Sheran, who told them that Mrs. Tracy (nee Jane Ward) might be the lady they are looking for. SRP and DWP checked out this lead from Mrs. Sheran, and concluded, having talked with Mrs. Tracy, that she is not the Miss Ward who taught at Squirrel Academy. SRP and DWP then spoke with Mrs. Sheran again, and she told them that the lady they are looking for is perhaps Leo Murray's sister, Helen, who married a Mr. Moody. Mrs. Moody, unfortunately, Mrs. Sheran added, died about two years ago. Mrs. Moody, Mrs. Sheran reported, used to teach in the country (Fell Township) and in Simpson. Mrs. Sheran next suggested that perhaps Mrs. John Caviston (nee Helen Kelley) might be of help. Together with Mrs. Sheran, SRP and DWP paid a visit to Mrs. Caviston, who reported that she had never taught at Squirrel Academy. Mrs. Caviston reported that she graduated from East Stroudsburg State College in 1925 and then took advanced work at Marwood College; from 1925 to 1930 she was the Supervisor of Art in the schools of Carbondale. Mrs. Caviston spoke very highly of two teachers who used to teach at Carbondale High School: Edna Loomis (see this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, pp. 17-18) and Dwight Rude (see Volume II, Number 2, p. 9, col. 2 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA). However rewarding their trip to 60 South Main Street on April 18, 1981, SRP and DWP were not, alas, able to make the acquaintance of May Ward.

Miss Clune: she taught at Squirrel Academy when Louis Rehkop was a student there; another Clune, Hortense Clune, was, according to Louis Rehkop, a substitute teacher at Squirrel Academy. Helen Powell reports that Hortense Clune was her first grade teacher at Squirrel Academy in 1919; in 1919, Helen Powell did both first and second grades.

Ed Lavin: he was one of Louis Rehkop's teachers at Squirrel Academy; he ultimately became a teacher; he is the brother of Frank Lavin.

Florence J. Russell: this is the daughter of Angus Cameron Russell (b. 07-26-1864, d. 12-25-1941) and Mary "Mamie" Griffiths (b. 08-12-1870); Florence J. Russell was born 04-30-1897 and became the wife of Dr. D. W. Lowery of Carbondale; she died 02-29-1936. Helen Powell reports that "Florence Russell was one of my last teachers at Squirrel Academy. She was there in 1925, for sure, and maybe for a few years before."

Mr. Mudrick: on July 4, 1979, Helen Powell reported that "Mr. Mudrick was not a teacher at Squirrel Academy in my day [1919-1925]. His father worked on the road—the township truck." On June 7, 1979, Mr. Mudrick spoke with Russell T. Powell as he worked at one of the ponds on the Homestead Golf Course, Carbondale. Mr. Mudrick reported to Russell T. Powell that he was a teacher at the Falls School (Squirrel Academy), and that he was presently living out of the Carbondale area, but visiting in the area and staying with relatives. Donald W. Powell was not able to talk with Mr. Mudrick at that time, and was not able to get in touch with Mr. Mudrick later on.

Three teachers at Squirrel Academy whose names were not mentioned by Louis Rehkop on July 3, 1979.

Gertrude Finnegan: she was one of Helen Powell's teachers at Squirrel Academy.

Margaret (Russell) MacMillan: this is the daughter of George McClelland Russell (b. 02-21-1862, d. 04-30-1926) and Lydia Spencer (b. 04-03-1864, d. 10-27-1953); Margaret Russell (b. 06-19-1886, d. 09-23-1973) married Robert Maxwell MacMillan (b. 06-16-1874, d. 09-25-1929). Margaret (Russell) MacMillan and both of her parents are interred in Maplewood Cemetery, Carbondale. On May 27, 1979, Walter George Russell (nephew of Margaret MacMillan) told Donald W. Powell that "they always said that Margaret MacMillan said that she taught at two log schools, the one at Angus Russell's [the Mount Hope School, see map on page 14 of Volume I, Number 3 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA], and the one at the Reservoir [Squirrel Academy]." Walter George Russell presently owns the bell that Margaret MacMillan used when she taught at Squirrel Academy. Louis Rehkop told Donald W. Powell that he never heard that Margaret MacMillan taught at one time at Squirrel Academy. On September 13, 1979, Joe Wallis reported to Donald W. Powell that Margaret MacMillan was one of his teachers at Squirrel Academy; Joe Wallis also told Donald W. Powell on that day that Margaret MacMillan was one of the teachers of Lulu at Squirrel Academy. Joe Wallis also reported that Margaret MacMillan walked out to the school from her residence on Belmont Street in Carbondale. Helen Powell recalls having heard Margaret MacMillan say that she walked out from Carbondale to teach in the country. It is Helen Powell's guess that Margaret MacMillan taught at the Russell School, which became Squirrel Academy after it was moved down by the Reservoir. Margaret MacMillan was graduated from Bloomsburg Normal School in 1906.

Mary Thomas: on September 13, 1979, May Wallis told Donald W. Powell that one of her teachers at Squirrel Academy was Mary Thomas.

Some of the families whose children attended Squirrel Academy are: Berdine, Brucher, Cosklo, Jacoby, Kutch, Malia, Parks, Rehkop, Robbins, Rodzinski, Russell, Samson, Shust, Trotter, Urda, Whitmore, Wilbur, Williams.

Before 1926, the kids who lived in the country in Fell Township who went on to high school went either to Carbondale High School or Fell Township High School. In 1925, Helen Powell reports, she went "down town" (Carbondale) to Carbondale High School, from which she was graduated in 1930. When Helen Powell went "down town" in 1925, she went to the Roosevelt School on Salem Avenue. A photograph of the class in the Roosevelt School that Helen Powell became a member of when she went "down town" was published in the rotogravure section of The Scrantonian in mid-April 1978. The caption on that photograph reads as follows: "The fifth grade class of 1923 poses in front of Carbondale Public School No. 1, which stood on the site of the playground facilities directly across the street from the present Roosevelt School. Students in the photo are: Chuck Healey, Walter Lewis, Donald Cornell, William M. McDonough, Francis Mulholland, Harold Pierson, Harry Timmons, James Calligan, John Andrews, Ivan Cobb, Nina Andrews, Verna Christian, Carl Cramer, Hazel Peters, Grant Evans, Art Cramer, Hollis Leonard, Jack Quinn, Fred Colligan, Maxine Sheppard, Irene Griffiths, Marion Buchert, Ruth Brunner, Lois Scurry, Helen Price, Ida Goldman, Lillian Corey, Frances Bill, Clara Bonacci, Mary Malone, Thelma Monroe, Muriel Humphrey, Marian Wheeler, Lucy McDonough, Isadore Shearer, Marian Jones, Geraldine Frisbie, Florence Quinn, Joe Beucher, George Nichols, Charlotte Patten, Victor Harrison, Mary Nichols, Katherine Knox, Florence Levine, Marion Ward, Walter Lenox, Duane Burnard, Ernest Wood, Winfred Miller, Frank Burnett, Burr Jenkins, Ken Brannan, Millard Stackhouse, Lee Clark, and Dorr Niles. In addition to the photograph given above of Ed Lavin and his students at Squirrel Academy in 1919 or 1920, the following photographs of Squirrel Academy and/or students who attended Squirrel Academy are known to exist:

1. The Foundation of Squirrel Academy, May 5, 1979. Color photograph, 4 7/8" X 3 7/8", taken by Donald W. Powell on May 5, 1979; foundation is overgrown with small trees and shrubs. On May 21, 1977, Donald W. Powell identified five varieties of wildflowers growing on the site of Squirrel Academy: Trientalis borealis - the star-flower, Fragaria vesca - the wood strawberry, Maianthemum canadense - the wild lily-of-the-valley, Tiarella cordifolia - the foamflower, Viola cucullata - the marsh blue violet. On May 21, 1977, Helen Powell told S. Robert Powell that "there used to be lots of Trilium and Dutchman's breeches--we used to call them 'boys and girls'--and Spring Beauties in the woods around the school."
2. Miss May Ward and 21 of Her Students at Squirrel Academy in 1917 or 1918. Snap shot, approximately 3" X 4", in the collection of Louis Rehkop, Carbondale, PA; enlarged copy print made by Donald W. Powell from the original photograph. Standing at the far left in this photograph, and holding a pole to which is attached a 48-star flag, is May (Cosklo) Wallis. Standing at the far right and holding the end of the flag is May Ward. Grouped in front of the outstretched flag are 21 students, among whom are a Shust boy, Marion Williams, Sam or Fred Cosklo, Marjorie Samson, Helen Urda, Margaret Williams, Johnny Robbins, Kenneth Russell, a Williams girl, Louise Russell, Viola Rehkop, Amber Rehkop, Margaret Williams, Louis Rehkop, Isabelle Samson.
3. Four Men Standing in Williams' Field Across from Squirrel Academy, May 26, 1921. Snap shot, 4 3/16" X 2 7/16", in the Russell Homestead Photograph Archive, Carbondale, PA. Written at the base of the front of this photograph is the following: "May 26, 1921." The third person from the left is identified as "Mr. Lavin teacher." The identity of the other three persons in the photograph has not yet been learned.
4. Ed Lavin and His Students at Squirrel Academy in 1922. Snap shot, 4 3/16" X 2 7/16", in the Russell Homestead Photograph Archive, Carbondale, PA; enlarged copy print by Donald W. Powell from the original photograph. Back row, left to right: Kenneth Russell, Margaret Williams, Thelma Kutch, Julia Kutch, Ed Lavin, Libby Rozdinski, Emma Parks, Helen Urda, Margaret Louise Russell, Louis Rehkop. Middle row, left to right: Andy Shust, Sam Cosklo, unidentified, Helen Rozdinski, Lucy Whitmore, Stasia Rozdinski, Elsie Parks, Helen Loomis Russell, Tony Malia, Lorraine Trotter, Bill Shust. Seated on the ground, left to right: Robert Parks, Alice Trotter, Irene Brucher, unidentified, Kathryn Williams, Vina Whitmore, Lois Jacoby, Martha Williams, Andy Cosklo. This photograph was taken in Williams' field, across from Squirrel Academy. The barn in the background is Williams' barn. This barn was purchased, ultimately, by William Anderson Russell, and dismantled and moved to the Russell Homestead, Fell Township, where it was re-assembled, and where it was referred to as "the grey barn." The barn is no longer standing, but the foundation is still intact, and can be seen to the right of the fairway of the tenth hole at the Homestead Golf Course. On September 13, 1979, Louis Rehkop pointed out to Donald W. Powell that the Crystal Lake Road is visible in this photograph, in the upper left-hand corner. On July 3, 1979, Helen Powell told Donald W. Powell that the school picnics at Squirrel Academy were usually held on the Williams place, across the road from the school.
5. Fifth Grade, Squirrel Academy, May 26, 1922. Snap shot, 4 3/16" X 2 7/16", in the Russell Homestead Photograph Archive, Carbondale; enlarged copy print made by Donald W. Powell from the original photograph. The six students standing in front of Ed Lavin in this photograph, taken on May 26, 1922, were identified on July 4, 1979 by Helen Powell as follows: left to right, Martha Williams, Bill Shust, Elsie Parks, Lorraine Trotter, Anastasia Rozdinski, Helen Russell. At the base of the original photograph, Helen Powell has written the following: "5th grade May 26, 1922."
6. Squirrel Academy, 1925. Snap shot, 3 15/16" X 2 1/4", in the collection of Louis Rehkop, Carbondale; enlarged copy print made by Donald W. Powell from the original photograph. Written at the base of the front of the original photograph, taken by the side of Squirrel Academy, is the following: "School 1925." There are 24 students in this photograph. Louis Rehkop and May (Cosklo) Wallis identified the following: a Robbins boy, a Cosklo boy, Kathryn Williams, Niles Robbins, Peter Rozdinski, Ellen Parks, Helen Rozdinski, Lucy Whitmore, Stasia Rozdinski, a Kutch, Elsie Parks.
7. Milk Wagon on the Road in Front of Squirrel Academy, 18 Persons Seated on the Wagon. Snap shot, 4 3/16" X 2 7/16", in the Russell Homestead Photograph Archive, Carbondale; enlarged copy print made by Donald W. Powell from the original photograph. Louis Rehkop, Joe Wallis, Lorraine Lynch, and Helen Powell have, at various times, looked at this photograph, and have identified the following persons in this photograph: Margaret Williams, a Whitmore girl, May Wallis, Lorraine Lynch, Marjorie Samson, Helen Powell, Louise Winter, a Parks girl, Isabelle Samson, a Cosklo, a Rozdinski, Julia Kutch. On September 13, 1979, Joe Wallis remarked that the team of horses that is pulling the milk wagon in this photograph belonged to Harry Kenyon, who is in this photograph in the back row, third from the left. On August 18, 1978, Lorraine Lynch remarked that the animals pulling the milk wagon in this photograph are mules.

On March 29, 1981, Donald W. Powell wrote the following text:

"No more buildings, an occasional teacher, a smattering of students, and an occasional book or report card.

The present status of the one-room wooden country schools of northeastern Pennsylvania.

Were we to characterize the status of the one-room wooden country school of northeastern Pennsylvania today, March 1981, we might say the following. The buildings are for the most part gone completely out of sight--very few schools remain standing, many more exist only in piles of rubble, and even more exist only as sunken foundations of the school building and out houses, and almost gone completely out of mind--an occasional teacher, now in her seventies or eighties or older, still survives, and the pupils from the last classes to attend the one-room schools are now celebrating their 50th or more class reunions, and an occasional text book or teacher's class book or a student report card surfaces among the memorabilia and family treasures of the old settled families. In a few years, surely by the turn of the millenia, all those who had any direct contact with the buildings--teachers, students, and school supervisors--will be gone."

Three additional one-room country schools in Fell Township, Lackawanna County, PA

1. MOUNT HOPE SCHOOL

For the exact position of this school, see the map of Fell Township, Lackawanna County, that is reproduced on page 14 of Volume I, Number 3 of this historical quarterly, wherein this school can be seen on the Crystal Lake Road at the intersection of the driveway leading to a building marked "H. Wedeman" (presently occupied by the Lott family) and the Crystal Lake Road. At the present time, a mobile trailer is situated more or less at the site on which once stood the Mount Hope School. On July 3, 1979, Donald W. Powell asked Louis Rehkop about this school, and he replied that he never knew a school was built on this site. On September 13, 1979, May and Joe Wallis told Donald W. Powell that the only thing they knew about the Mount Hope School is that it was situated where the mobile home at the Lott driveway is presently situated.

2. CRYSTAL LAKE SCHOOL

For the exact position of this school, see the map of Fell Township, Lackawanna County, that is reproduced on page 14 of Volume I, Number 3 of this historical quarterly, wherein this school can be seen on the Crystal Lake Road not far from the point where it intersects with the road that branches off the Crystal Lake Road above the "Jno Russell Res." On July 3, 1979, Louis Rehkop referred to this school as "the red school house up by John Russell's." Louis Rehkop also pointed out that "Angus Russell substituted at the Little Red Schoolhouse and delivered mail." On September 13, 1979, May and Joe Wallis reported to Donald W. Powell: "Margaret Boland taught at the Little Red School House at the 'Y' [in the road]. Florence Russell taught at the Little Red School House and at Squirrel Academy."

3. RUSSELL SCHOOL

For the exact position of this school, see the map of Fell Township, Lackawanna County, that is reproduced on page 14 of Volume I, Number 3 of this historical quarterly, wherein this school can be seen a short distance to the east of the building identified as "Jas Russell" (this school was situated more or less on the site now occupied by the 18th tee at the Homestead Golf Course; the Louis Rehkop residence is on the opposite side of PA Route 106 from where the Russell School once stood).

On pages 14 and 27 of Volume I, Number 3 of this historical quarterly, some information about the Russell School is presented. As we reported in that issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, the Russell School was established by James Russell for the education of his children, as well as other children in the neighborhood (the names of the ten children of James Russell and Margaret Gillespie Locke are given on page 27 of Volume I, Number 3 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA).

It is possible that Margaret (Russell) MacMillan taught at the Russell School. On April 19, 1978, Helen Powell told S. Robert Powell the following: "I don't know if Margaret MacMillan taught at the Russell School or down at Squirrel Academy. I know that when the weather was bad, she used to stay at the Russell Homestead, so she may have taught out here at the Russell School."

In the Document Archive of the Russell Homestead, there is a letter that was written on December 14, 1941 to Eleanor Pritchard Jones (b. 03-04-1883, d. 02-06-1970) by Isabel E. Wedeman, the wife of the oldest child of James Russell and Margaret Gillespie Locke. Two paragraphs of that letter contain valuable information about not only some of the students who attended the Russell School but also the moving of the Russell School building to a new site. Those two paragraphs are as follows:

"On October 25, 1882, Johnny<sup>1</sup> and I<sup>2</sup> were married and went to Ohio to visit his cousins there as he had always replied to their invitations years before, 'I'll make that my wedding trip.' Therefore it was arranged between us to go there and Johnny had your mother<sup>3</sup> write them that we would be there.--The family consisted of James A. Bruce<sup>4</sup> and wife<sup>5</sup> Christina,<sup>6</sup> Maggie<sup>7</sup> & Mina,<sup>8</sup>--his sisters.

I had met Maggie<sup>9</sup> and Jenny Bruce<sup>10</sup> several times when they had visited at the Russell House. Also Mrs. Byall<sup>11</sup> who visited there some years later--Had also met Will Liddell<sup>12</sup> there when I was quite young going to school with Maggie<sup>13</sup> & Teana Russell<sup>14</sup> John<sup>15</sup> & Jim<sup>16</sup> at the Russell School house down across the bridge from the Russell house; later moved down near the forks of the road.<sup>17</sup>"

The only child of Martha Russell and Alexander Bruce who is not mentioned by name in this letter from Isabel E. Wedeman to Eleanor Pritchard Jones is Martha Russell Bruce, who was born on September 22, 1845 and died in July 1880.
- 11 Mrs. Byall is Christina Anderson Bruce (oldest of the six children of James Russell's sister, Jean Russell, who was born on 04-14-1812 in Glasgow, Scotland, and who died on 07-02-1879 in Wooster, OH; on 02-18-1838 she was married to William Bruce in Falkirk, Scotland, by Rev. William Anderson, D. D. William Bruce, the son of James Bruce and Margaret Hendrie, was born on 03-25-1793 in Airth, Scotland, and died on 09-01-1868 in Wooster, OH, from a fall from a horse at age 75; William Bruce and Jean Russell are both interred in Wooster, OH. - 15 John Russell (see note number 1) is the oldest of the ten children of James Russell and Margaret Gillespie Locke.
- 16 James A. Russell is one of the children of James Russell and Margaret Gillespie Locke. He was born 04-29-1853 and died on 07-13-1929; he married Viola Kenyon Rivenburg, who was born on 10-17-1857 and who died in 1955. The couple are both buried in Clifford, PA. James A. Russell was the twentieth mayor of the city of Carbondale; he served as mayor in the years 1884-1885.
- 17 On April 19, 1978, Helen Powell told S. Robert Powell the following when he asked her about the meaning of the last part of this sentence: "The forks of the road, that's what we always called the Crystal Lake Road... the intersection of the Crystal Lake Road and the road to Carbondale [present-day PA Route 106]. The school that she's [Isabel E. Wedeman] talking about down near the forks of the road is the one I went to, Squirrel Academy."

The founder of the Russell School, James Russell, is the son of John Russell and Christina Anderson. John Russell was born in Scotland and so was his wife, Christina Anderson. The couple came to America about October 1, 1840, their ultimate destination being Wooster, OH. On their way there, they stopped at McAlla City (present-day Elkdale) to visit Martha Anderson (Christina Anderson's sister) and her husband, Archibald McAlla. Six weeks after the arrival of John Russell and Christina Anderson in Elkdale, John Russell died, and his wife, therefore, decided to settle in Elkdale with their children, and not to proceed to Wooster, OH.

XVIII. FLOOR PLANS: SQUIRREL ACADEMY and CARBONDALE AREA JUNIOR-SENIOR HIGH SCHOOL

Floor Plan of Squirrel Academy, Fell Township, Lackawanna County

On the basis of Helen Loomis (Russell) Powell's recollections of Squirrel Academy, articulated on May 21, 1977, SRP set down the floor plan that is given at right. - 1 entrance, double doors, porch and 4-6 steps
- 2 entrance hall
- 3 cloak room
- 4 teacher's desk
- 5 jacket (coal) stove, asbestos-lined tin outer covering
- 6 7-8 rows of seats

WILKES-BARRE ACADEMY. -- Opened 1878. Chartered 1881.

A necessity for the establishment, within the valley, of a higher school for boys was apparent, and in the autumn of 1878 the Wilkes-Barre Academy was opened, with James C. McKenzie, A.M., as Principal. It has been generously endowed, and therefore can maintain a more numerous and efficient corps of instructors in proportion to the number of pupils that can any school that depends solely upon tuition. The Wilkes-Barre Academy was incorporated in February last, at the application of the following distinguished citizens: Charles Parrish, Esq., E. P. Darling, Esq., W. L. Conyngham, Esq., R. J. Flick, Esq., E. H. Chase, Esq., H. B. Hillman, Esq., J. W. Hollenback, Esq., Hon. C. A. Miner, I. P. Hand, Esq., Hon. L. D. Shoemaker. Comprehensively, there are two departments: Grammar Department, in which boys are thoroughly drilled in the common English branches--reading, writing, spelling, geography and arithmetic. The special commendation of this department is that the youngest boy is under the same teachers as the oldest and most advanced pupil of the school; Classical Department, in which boys and young men are prepared for Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Lafayette, and similar institutions, and for the National schools of West Point and Annapolis. It is sufficient recommendation of this Department that nearly all the graduates of it have entered college without conditions, and are taking the highest rank in their classes. Latin, Greek, Mathematics, French, German and the higher English are carefully and systematically taught. Any special information may be obtained upon application to the Principal.

FACULTY--James C. Mackenzie, A.M., Principal, (Lafayette); William A. Peters, A.B., (Yale); Edwin L. Scott, A.B., (Lafayette); Willis L. Dean, Esq., (Penman).

TRUSTEES--Hon. Charles A. Miner, President; Reuben J. Flick, Vice-President; Isaac P. Hand, Secretary and Treasurer; E. P. Darling, W. L. Conyngham, H. B. Hillman, E. H. Chase, P. W. Hollenbeck.

The information given above about the Wilkes-Barre Academy is from Wilkesbarre, Scranton, Pittston, Plymouth, Carbondale, Kingston. Statistical and Trade Review. (Philadelphia: Richard Edwards, Editor and Publisher, 1881, p. 235).

THE STONE JUG SCHOOL, SOUTH CANAAN TOWNSHIP, WAYNE COUNTY

The information that is here reported on the Stone Jug School, South Canaan Township, supplements the information reported on this school in Volume I, Number 3 (February 20, 1980), pp. 4, 26 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

On April 18, 1981, Kurt A. Reed of Lake Ariel, PA, told S. Robert Powell that he had recently discovered, in the March 13, 1890 issue of The Wayne County Herald, the obituary of Clarinda (Burleigh) Keen, the first teacher in the Stone Jug School, which was built on the farm of her father, John Burleigh. From that obituary, Kurt A. Reed learned that Clarinda Keen was born in February 1820, and that she was the oldest daughter of John Burleigh, who is a descendant of the Burleighs of Lincolnshire, England, the Schaffers of Saxe-Coburg, and the Swiss reformer, Zwingli. At the age of 18 (in 1838), Clarinda Keen began her teaching career in the Stone Jug School, in which she was the first teacher--which means that the Stone Jug School was built in 1837 or in early 1838. In 1846, Clarinda Burleigh married James R. Keen, who, in the 1840s, was the Register and Recorder of Deeds in Honesdale. In 1851, the couple moved to Honesdale. On March 6, 1890, Clarinda Keen died, and was interred in Glen Dyberry Cemetery, Honesdale.

On April 18, 1981, Kurt A. Reed also reported that:

- the Stone Jug School was placed on the Pennsylvania Inventory of Historic Places on August 25, 1976; in 1977 it was placed on the National Register (it was the third Wayne County building to be placed on the National Register);
  - the Stone Arch Bridge, Starrucca, was placed on the National Register in November, 1977;
  - the Wayne County Stone Jail, built in 1858, was placed on the Pennsylvania Inventory of Historic Places on March 21, 1980.
- three of the textbooks used at the Stone Jug School are

THE TEACHING CAREER OF LILLIAN BEATRICE (CURTIS) BARTHOLOMAY

In her letter of March 10, 1981 to S. Robert Powell, Mrs. Beatrice Bartholomay of Waymart, PA, reports the following information about her teaching career:

- I taught in one-room schools 23 yrs. The larger desks were in the back & smaller ones in front. The children helped with certain chores like washing blackboards and dusting the erasers.
- The drinking water was carried from a near-by farm house. Kept in a stone drinking fountain with a spigot.
- Of course there were two outside toilets (girls & boys). These outhouses usually got tipped over at Halloween.
- One was hired as a teacher but you were also the janitor, play ground supervisor, and practical nurse.

Enclosed in Mrs. Bartholomay's letter of March 10, 1981 to S. Robert Powell was a copy of a letter that she received from Dr. John P. Sutton, District Superintendent, Wayne Highlands School District, 474 Grove Street, Honesdale, Pennsylvania 18431 Telephone 717-253-4661. The letter is dated December 6, 1978. The text of that letter is as follows:

Mrs. Beatrice Bartholomay
Waymart, Pennsylvania 18472

Dear Mrs. Bartholomay:

Mrs. Marie Sheard, former secretary to the County Superintendent of Schools, has reviewed the historical records of the schools of Wayne County, and has confirmed that you have the distinction of having been the last teacher in three one-room schools:

You were the last teacher at the Farno School, Clinton Center, which closed its doors for good on May 26, 1944 [see photograph of this school in Volume I, Number 3 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA].

You were the last teacher at the Curtis Valley School, Clinton Township, which closed its doors for good on June 2, 1947.

You were the last teacher at the South Clinton School, Clinton Township, which closed its doors for good on June 7, 1962.

All three of these schools were operating as one-room schools at the time of their closing, and their attendance areas are now part of the Western Wayne School District.

Sincerely,

[signed] John P. Sutton
District Superintendent

THE HARFORD CEMETERY, Susquehanna County, PA

The seven paragraphs of information about the Harford Cemetery that are given below are from a printed information sheet--available to visitors at the First Congregational United Church of Christ in Harford--that was picked up by Donald W. Powell on July 12, 1980.

The Harford Cemetery

The first acre in the Harford Cemetery was given to the settlement in 1803 by the land speculator, Henry Drinker, who had sold the Nine Partners their tract of land in 1790. In 1824 Hosea Tiffany (one of the Nine Partners) and his son Amos deeded an adjacent 75 perches to be added to this acre. Hosea himself is buried near the front of the Cemetery in what was once his vegetable garden.

The first graves were marked with flagstone (?) slabs (more durable than marble), perhaps brought in from Southern New York State. Styles change even in gravestones. Exact ages were once common, sometimes in rhyme, concerning the deceased. Some stones in the cemetery also bear designs cut into the stone as decorations and as symbols. (e.g., the tree of life is represented by a stylized tree.) As tastes in such matters changed and the cost of the lettering increased, long inscriptions went out of fashion.

Six of the Nine Partners who settled Harford are buried in this Cemetery. Most of the Seven Founders of the Congregational Church lie here. There are also the graves of several ministers from both the Methodist and the Congregational Churches. Note the grave of Rev. Adam Miller, pastor of the latter Church for 53 years.

Hon. Galusha A. Grow, who lived in Glenwood but attended the Franklin Academy two miles west of Harford, is buried here. Grow was a member of the House of Representatives for a number of terms, Speaker of the House under Abraham Lincoln, and "Father" of the Homestead Act opening western lands to free settlement. A native politician, Hon. E. E. Jones was a member of the State Senate and a Treasurer of the United States. These two rose higher in the political world than other area residents.

Soldiers from major United States Wars are buried here. Their graves are marked by American Flags.

Eight small slabs mark the graves of children who died when they were students of the Soldiers Orphan School--a remarkably small number in relation to the hundreds of youngsters who lived and studied here (on the site of the Franklin Academy) during the approximately 35 years of the existence of that school.

Every Cemetery contains historical records and this one is no exception. A walk through our "Silent City" will give you a glimpse into the past of this little community, founded 190 years ago by Nine Partners from Attleborough, Massachusetts.

BEECH WOODS ACADEMY, Bethany Borough, Wayne County, PA

The following information about Beech Woods Academy is from the article, "Ned Buntline, Beech Woods Academy: names of the past in Bethany Borough," that was published in The Wayne Independent of February 24, 1981 (p. 12)

Ned Buntline and the Beech Woods Academy are two names from out of the past that were familiar in the early days of Bethany borough.

Ned Buntline, whose real name was Edward Carroll Judson, died July 16, 1886 in Stamford, N.Y. but the Beech Woods Academy building still is in Bethany. It is now the property of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Carpenter, Sr.

Beech Woods Academy was incorporated May 4, 1813. Bethany School Society, according to records of the Bethany Woman's Club, conveyed five lots to the Academy May 13, 1817 and the Academy was finally completed in 1820 and opened that same year. April 2, 1850, school was closed and the property was conveyed to the University of Northern Pennsylvania. It was used then as a residence for the headmaster of the university. It was sold Jan. 21, 1851 to Charlotte Cutler, who conveyed it the same year to William Weston. The 1872 Atlas of Wayne County shows W. W. Weston as the owner.

During the 1920s, it was acquired by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Barklow, who owned it for several decades. A later owner was Henry Von Stemm of Dyberry, who sold it to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kessler in 1955. Mr. and Mrs. Paul Carpenter acquired the property in June 1972.

The Bethany Woman's Club booklet for Bethany Home Day contains this information: the structure is built on a stone foundation. First floor walls are 16" thick; second floor, 12" thick and gable ends are 8" thick. The first floor joists and overlay 4 X 10 hemlock, one piece stretched from wall to wall and fitted into pockets in the brick wall. Rafters are 4 X 4 hemlock; cross brace halfway down and pinned together with wood dowels. The ceiling to the floor at ground level is 12 feet, the second floor, eight feet. There is a fireplace on a stone foundation with one built on top of it on the second floor. The windows are framed with 5 X 5 hemlock, mortised and pinned in all corners....

The history of Wayne, Pike and Monroe Counties reports that in 1816 the Beech Woods Academy was erected on the school lots that had been set apart for the purpose by the county trustees. The walls of the brick building were erected to the height of the first story that year but the academy was not ready for occupancy until the winter of 1820 when Ephraim Torrey was elected as the first principal. After the removal of the county seat to Honesdale in 1841, the court house was used as an academy until 1848, when the legislature chartered the University of Northern Pennsylvania. This building on the town square was burned to the ground April 18, 1857.

During Bethany Home Day in July, 1966, the former Beech Woods Academy was listed as one of the 17 old and historical buildings in the borough. It also was listed thus at the time of the national Bicentennial in 1976.

LETTERS RECEIVED

Letter, dated February 19, 1981, from George Ehle of Lancaster, PA, to Donald W. and S. Robert Powell:

Dear Messrs. Powell:

I enjoy reading Northeastern Pennsylvania very much, especially those topics relating to Scranton and vicinity. I was born in Scranton (Hyde Park) in 1913 and was graduated from Scranton Central in 1932 (Edna Loomis taught there at that time, but my memory of her is dim--I was more interested in science and math).

My father came to Scranton at the turn of the century, drawn to the prosperity of hard coal (many young men did so). The Ehle genealogy in the Utica, Johnstown, N. Y. area (Mohawk Valley) is well documented.

My maternal grandfather was a Welsh immigrant and died long before I was born. According to my mother's cryptic accounts, he was an iron monger, making wrought iron fences, the rage at that time. He is said to have worked a forge down valley toward Taylor. By the time of my childhood, the coal industry had drastically altered the landscape and wiped out most valley landmarks.

Being a chemist (Penn State '36), I have always been interested more in industry and transportation than in the social and political aspects of the region. As a child I often rode the quaint D & H branch passenger train to visit my aunt in Honesdale, or the equally quaint Erie train. I regret I was too young to have ridden the Gravity RR, but my Aunt Lizzie told me all about it many times. We often walked way uptown for a glimpse of the moldering Stourbridge Lion (now in the Smithsonian, I believe). That list of Hensel stereographs of the Gravity RR [see Volume II, Number 4 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA] is certainly tantalizing! I wish you could publish more such photographs!

Then, there were the "DL," the pride and joy of the region, the ill-fated O & W, the quaint Wilkes-Barre and Eastern, and many more. And the inter-urban lines: the Laurel Line to Wilkes-Barre, the ambling Northern Electric to Montrose, and The Scranton Traction Line to Forest City via Carbondale. Before the onslaught of the automobile, these public transportation services were vitally important to Lackawanna countians and their neighbors. Together, or singly, they would make interesting and informative topics for Northeastern Pennsylvania.

I greatly enjoy the various post cards you have reproduced, especially of Scranton. They seem to be significant documentaries of the turn of the century, especially of the trolley car and automobile. In addition to nicely illustrating various topics, they might well constitute a subject for publication in their own right.

Sincerely yours,

Excerpts from a letter, dated February 19, 1981, from Margaret L. Winter of Jermy, PA, to S. Robert Powell:

Dear Bob,

Thought I'd tell you how much I enjoyed the latest "N'East Pennsylvania" [Volume II, Number 3]. Started out just scanning the list looking for relatives but I was soon fascinated with checking causes of death and the ages of the people... One of the kids from the neighborhood, Ken, was equally fascinated and spent quite a bit of time looking through it. It's quite a commentary on life in the nineteenth century. GOOD JOB!...

Your cousin,

Excerpts from a letter, dated February 23, 1981, from Mrs. Shirley (Ferry) Bell of Sacramento, CA, to S. Robert Powell:

Dear Mr. Powell,

Thank you so much for this current issue containing names of persons interred at Maplewood Cemetery [Volume II, Number 3]. When the subjects of forthcoming issues were announced in the August 1980 issue, I could hardly wait for this issue. I felt my gr-grandmother Elizabeth Rust/Russ Ferry would be buried there--and she was! So now, thanks to you I have her date of death, -- other than the year 1861. I'm really thrilled. Her father Salomon Russ/Rust died at Waymart & her mother Betsey at Poughkeepsie & I assumed they were buried there. Not so--they're also at Maplewood.

My great grandfather Charles Marsh Ferry has an aunt & uncle - Stephen & Mercy Marsh & their son Oscar buried there, also. (Mercy Stuart Marsh was a sister to Ruth Stuart Ferry, Charles' mother. Ruth married Luman Ferry in 1805 in VT. In 1816, they were in Montrose. By 1820, they were at Tunkhannock, where they lived 15-20 years before going to Ohio. We believe Charles was b. there, Tunkhannock.) After Elizabeth died Charles went to Cadiz, OH & married, later went to Iowa, then Nebraska where he died. He became a physician after he left Carbondale.

You featured Charles in your Volume II, Number 1 issue on p. 7 as one of the first daguerreotypists in Tunkhannock & Carbondale. It's too bad - I don't have - or know of - a single picture of him &/or Elizabeth. By 1860 census of Carbondale, he's listed as a wagon maker.

Elizabeth's brother Isaac Russ/Rust was also buried at Maplewood, along with 2 of his children. Isaac was a dentist in Carbondale.

Now - thanks to you - I know all of my ancestors who are buried at Maplewood...

Sincerely,

Excerpts from a letter, dated March 1, 1981, from Mrs. Lester E. Kelley of Holland, PA, to S. Robert Powell:

Dear Mr. Powell:

It was a very pleasant surprise to receive the copy of your publication [Volume II, Number 3] dealing with a bit of Wilkes-Barre history, on which I will comment further on in my letter. However, the time and research which has been put into the history of the Maplewood Cemetery in Carbondale, Penn. is fantastic...

One recollection came back to me while noting "the various causes of death" listed. Back in my day in my neighborhood, "cholera morbus" was referred to as "cholery marbles". I never really knew what it was and still don't, even with the correct designation of "cholera morbus."

In the centerfold, Pages 12 and 13, the identities of the gentlemen pictured "do not ring a bell" but the two early postcards shown on Page 13 do. The one of "Court House Square" (Wilkes-Barre's first Court House was located on Public Square and the trolleys for years, were stationed around same) shows a large corner building which I am sure (and was for many years during my youth and later) was the establishment of Benesche & Sons, a well-known furniture store in Wilkes-Barre. Also on Page 14 where the early "Merchants of Wilkes-Barre" are listed, "Z. Bennett & Co. was known for years and years as the Lewis & Bennett Hardware Store" and was located just around the corner (on N. Main Street as listed) from Benesche's. No doubt the "Bennett" of Lewis & Bennett's store was a descendant of the original Z. Bennett.

In addition I have a similar old postcard (packed away somewhere) of the old Jonas Long's store (Page 14) at the corner of West Market Street and Public Square. I remember visiting it as a small child. Later it was taken over by the "McWilliams" organization and then by Pomeroy's, who are still in business in that same location. In fact in my youth, Jonas Long's, the Boston Store (now Boscov's) on South Main Street and Coon's Dept. Store (corner of East Market Street and Public Square) were the three well-known emporiums in Wilkes-Barre. Oh yes, "Lazarus" too, on S. Main Street was the fourth member in this category, way-back-when.

There was also Simon Long's Sons, 106 S. Main Street (listed), a men's furnishings store (during my early years and for many years after) and Isaac Long's (not listed) on the west side of Public Square, which I recall as being "the exclusive ladies' wear shop" in town--and for many years. The Agnes Flood, I believe, put both of these establishments out of business.

Yes, I remember especially, one visit to Coon's store--I must have been about 7 years old and my mother purchased a pretty brown beaver hat for me, with wide brim and brown ribbon streamer at the back.

The early Lazarus Dept. Store I recall as being long and narrow and the mechanical contraption overhead which carried one's cash to the cashier at the rear of the store (in a raised booth) always fascinated me.

Well, so much for reminiscences....

Again, I have enjoyed "talking with you" and am most appreciative of your kindness.

Sincerely yours,

(Mrs. Lester E. Kelley)

Excerpts from a letter, dated March 15, 1981, from Mrs. Lester E. Kelley of Holland, PA, to S. Robert Powell, in which Mrs. Kelley reports the following information of Wilkes-Barre's Public Square and the early theatres of Wilkes-Barre:

Dear Mr. Powell:

... for many years during my youth, a large fountain occupied the center of Public Square Park, and in the center of the fountain was a statue of an Indian maiden, "Kankakee" by name.

In addition, you might perhaps like to learn of a few more business establishments which I recall, some being located on the easterly and southerly sides of Public Square. On the east side, there was the Fort Durkee Hotel for many years and at an early date (when movies were getting started), the Alhambra Theatre was near by.

However, the south side of Public Square is the area I remember the best (the reason for this, follows). The Coon's Dept. Store [referred to in Mrs. Kelley's letter of March 1, 1981, and cited above] was at the southeast corner of Public Square and East Market Street. Then proceeding westward around the "Square" towards South Main Street, was "Breslin's" (or "Brislin's," I believe), a bar. (This may not have been the exact title of this establishment, but when small, I always used to admire the shining mirrors and fancy different-colored bottles???? on display. Next to this "saloon" was the Savoy Theatre, Wilkes-Barre's largest movie-house at the time--and my mother sold tickets there when I was about five or six years old! A bank building followed the theatre. Near to the Bank was a narrow passage (called an alley in those days) leading from the Square to the rear of these buildings. On the corner of this alley (on the Square and opposite the Bank), was the Globe Store (Duncan & Homer, another smaller dry-goods and clothing store), followed by an additional store. Then one more alley, on the corner of which (on the Square) was The Boston Candy Kitchen (ice cream and confectionery), followed by J. D. Williams who made and sold delicious fudge in several varieties. Next to this shop I am sure was the Bijou Theatre, another movie house which I attended from time-to-time. A cigar shop was at the corner of the Square and South Main Street.

Perhaps a few words relative to the early theatres existing in Wilkes-Barre during this period--and which I remember--might be of interest for some future project that you may have in mind. The Alhambra, Savoy and Bijou movie-houses, I have already mentioned. Then there was "The Sun," another movie-house opposite the Coon's Store on East Market Street. Going down South Main Street on the right-hand side, was the Poli Theatre (movies and vaudeville), and just below that, the Orpheum Theatre was located--movies also. On the left-hand side of South Main Street--between Northampton and South Streets, were, first, the Family Theatre (movies) and then the Nesbitt Theatre, which held forth with burlesque, I believe. I often wonder if it was named for Evelyn Nesbitt Thaw, the showgirl and wife of Harry Thaw. Below South Street, was the Majestic Theatre (its first title as I knew it) but later there were some name changes as well as the type of theatrical offerings.

The foregoing theatre data may not be terribly important, but it is fun to talk about that era, and I guess having had early access to the movies because of my mother's occupation, the names of these places remain with me after all these years....

Most sincerely yours,

THE PENNSYLVANIA TERCENTENARY

In 1680, William Penn--the son of Sir William Penn, an admiral in the royal navy who at his death left a claim of 16,000 pounds against the government of Great Britain--petitioned Charles II of England for a grant of a tract of land, west from the Delaware River, in liquidation of the claim he had inherited from his father. In 1681, on March 4 (presently March 14th, due to calendar changes), Charles II signed the charter granting to William Penn the following tract of land (present-day Pennsylvania): three degrees of latitude in breadth by five degrees of longitude in length, the eastern boundary to be the Delaware River, the northern boundary to begin on the three and fortieth degree of north latitude.

On the 300th anniversary of the granting of that charter, an 18-month-long celebration, entitled "Celebration of Friends," began in Pennsylvania. It is altogether fitting and proper that during these tercentenary celebrations, we, as citizens of Northeastern Pennsylvania, and, therefore, in the broadest sense of the term, legatees of William Penn, not only think about the material and nonmaterial inheritance that is ours, but also examine our state and ourselves, and ask ourselves the following questions:

What is the physical state of the Commonwealth, in general, and of Northeastern Pennsylvania, in particular? In what condition is our land? our air? our water? Will the physical environment that we bequeath to our children be equal to/better than/worse than the one that we inherited from our parents? What is the quality of life in our towns? in our cities? on our farms? Is Northeastern Pennsylvania a better place in which to live now than it was in the past?

What is the mental state of the Commonwealth, in general, and of Northeastern Pennsylvania, in particular? Are we, as a social order, optimistic? complacent? self-righteous? altruistic? pioneering? tolerant? honest? What are the principles in which we presently believe? What are the principles in which we no longer believe? What is the state of health of our social institutions? our religious institutions? our economic institutions? our political institutions?

What do we know of ourselves? What would our ancestors think of us? What will our grandchildren think of us? What do we know of our world? What would our ancestors think of our world? What will our grandchildren think of our world? What have we learned about ourselves and our world in the past three hundred years? What have we forgotten about ourselves and our world in the past three hundred years?

Those are the questions that we as citizens of Northeastern Pennsylvania must ask ourselves on this the occasion of the tercentenary of the establishment of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Those are the questions that we as citizens of Northeastern Pennsylvania must continually ask ourselves.

NOTES

From the Editor:

This issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA is Part III of the three-part history of studio photography in northeastern Pennsylvania, 1839-1900, written by Donald Walter Powell, for publication in this historical quarterly. The first two parts of this history were published in Volume I, Number 4 and Volume II, Number 1 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA. In Part III, Powell presents an update of the alphabetically arranged, county-by-county, biographical directory of studio photographers active in the region. In addition, he presents a large quantity of reproductions of studio photographs by these photographers, as well as a wide variety of the cases in which they were housed and the backs of the cards on which they were mounted.

Like the last two issues of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, this issue contains "Genealogical and Local History Notes" that are not only intrinsically interesting but also potentially useful to genealogists, historians, and social scientists who are engaged in research on either individuals and families from northeastern Pennsylvania or the history of northeastern Pennsylvania. The featured component of these Notes in this issue is an account of the anthracite mining village of Underwood, Lackawanna County, based on an interview with Walter Silas Powell of Carbondale, PA.

In the November 18, 1981 issue (Volume III, Number 2) of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, detailed information on some of the pioneer families of Wayne County will be presented. Among the families whose early history will be presented are the following families from Clinton Township: Norton, Grennell, North, West, Gaylord, Peck, McMullen, Loomis, Ledyard, Bunting, Saunders, Davenport, Arnold. Information will also be presented on the following pioneer ministers of the Clinton Center Baptist Church: Elijah Peck, John Smitzer, Horace Jones, Chas. H. Hubbard, Alex. Smith, Charles A. Fox, Henry Curtis, Geo. V. Walling, Joseph Curren, James Spencer, D. P. Purdon, B. B. Bunting, J. R. Remsen, James Rainey.

Picture of Capt. Michael Flynn (ordered first shot fired at Battle of Gettysburg. Ambrotype on deep purple-red glass, by an unidentified American photographer, possibly one from northeastern Pennsylvania; collection of Carbondale Public Library, Carbondale, PA; copy print by Donald W. Powell. Image, 2" X 2 3/8", contained in a hinged case (now detached), each wing of case 2 3/8" X 2 7/8". Surface of image hand painted in two different colors: orange-yellow (buttons) and light rose (stripes on collar and sleeve, edging on front of jacket). The sword hilt, to the lower left of Captain Flynn's hands, is handcolored with a combination of the same orange-yellow and light rose. The painted studio landscape behind Captain Flynn shows, on the left, a church or castle on a hill (looking for all the world like the Chateau de Chillon on Lac Lemane) and on the right, four pine trees by a lake. The identity of the sitter in this ambrotype is known from the hand written information (underlined title above) on the index card which was folded around the image when it was donated to the Carbondale Public Library by Mary Thomas, Carbondale, on the occasion of the Bicentennial celebrations in 1976. A photograph of Captain Flynn's tombstone in Saint Rose Cemetery, Pearl Street, Carbondale, PA, is given in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA on page 20, column 2. The name of Captain Flynn is given in the list of Civil War veterans interred in the New Catholic Cemetery (Saint Rose Cemetery, Pearl Street) in Carbondale, PA, that is given in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA on page 25, column 3.

The photographers included in this directory are arranged alphabetically according to the county in which they worked. This is the identical format used in the first two parts of this directory, which appeared in Volume I, Number 4, and Volume II, Number 1 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA. Unlike Parts I and II, Part III does not give an entry for every photographer known to have been active in the region in the period. Part III is an update, a supplement, to the information given in Parts I and II, and therefore the only photographers given in Part III are these: (1) those whose presence has been discovered subsequent to the publication of Parts I and II, (2) those about whom new documentary information has been discovered since the publication of Parts I and II. For the new photographers listed in Part III, all the information about them is here given. For the photographers about whom new documentary information has been discovered since the publication of Parts I and II, only the newly discovered information about them is given in Part III. Therefore, for the photographers given in Part III whose entry is not preceded by the standard catalogue format (first documented record, last documented record, location of studio), the reader must himself refer back to Parts I and II and find the main reference, and with that main reference and the supplementary information given here, synthesize the two entries. Such a mechanism might at first seem a bit cumbersome to use, but any other solution would have necessitated substantial republication of previously published material.

The following abbreviation is used in Part III of this directory: "IMP/GEH, Eskind letter with microfiche, 27 June 80." This abbreviation refers to a geographical index of all known studio photographers that is kept by the International Museum of Photography at George Eastman House, 900 East Avenue, Rochester, NY, 14607, telephone 716-271-3361. In exchange for copies of Parts I and II of this history of studio photography, Andrew Eskind, Assistant Director, Curatorial, at the IMP/GEH, sent the author microfiche which cover the geographical area included in NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA. When given here, citations from those microfiche are preceded by the abbreviation cited above. In citations from those microfiche, the abbreviations "CDV" and "CABINET" are used; they refer, respectively, to "carte de visite" and "cabinet photograph."

For their deep-rooted interest in collecting and preserving primary source materials on studio photography in northeastern Pennsylvania, the author is indebted to the following history-minded citizens, many of whose names have appeared repeatedly in the acknowledgements in this historical quarterly: (1) Mrs. Verna C. Varcoe, for permission to publish her family photographs, (2) Mr. Kurt A. Reed and Mr. Burlin Abbey, for their continued help in locating original photographs, (3) Rev. William P. Lewis, for his good natured and generous permission to use the historical materials under his care at the Lackawanna Historical Society, Scranton, (4) Mr. Andrew Eskind, International Museum of Photography, George Eastman House, for making available to me the microfiche of the IMP/GEH of the geographical index of studio photographers, (5) Miss Anne Muldoon, and her staff at the Carbondale Public Library, for allowing me the continued use of the rich archive of primary source material at the Library.

Luzerne County

PLYMOUTH

1. Beckwith, E. W.

first documented record:
last documented record:
location of studio:

The identity of this Plymouth photographer is preserved in the following printed address, on the back of a carte de visite portrait of an unidentified young man (seated, half-length, facing the right), in the collection of the author:

E. W. Beckwith
PLYMOUTH,
Luzerne Co.,
PA.

In an undated but apparently (on the basis of internal evidence) recent (1970s) essay entitled ONE PICTURE WORTH A THOUSAND WORDS, the Wilkes-Barre photographer, Harold Gittins, mentions the photographer Beckwith.

We got interested in historical photographs over forty years ago when we came into possession of a series of 5 X 8 stereo wet plates. These were made nearly one hundred years ago by a man named Beckwith. I know there is no man alive today who knew Mr. Beckwith and I doubt if a picture of him is in existence, but by making this series of photographs I doubt if he will ever be forgotten. It is known by local historians as the "Beckwith Series" and fills a gap in our history we would never have known, at least, not pictorially.

We have a permanent display in our studio of 20 X 24 prints made from some of these plates. They are 'needle sharp' and the print quality is excellent, which speaks well of the craftsmanship of that era.

What is not clear from this essay is whether Beckwith actually had a studio in Wilkes-Barre. If his only studio were in Plymouth, then it would be not unreasonable to assume that his work could be well known in nearby Wilkes-Barre.

2. Corwin, W. S.

first documented record:
last documented record:
location of studio:

The identity of W. S. Corwin has surfaced via the printed photographer's identification on the back of a carte de visite portrait of a young woman, in the collection of the author. The back of the card reads:

W. S. Corwin,
Plymouth
Luzerne Co., Pa.

At the moment, it is not clear whether Beckwith had a studio in Wilkes-Barre. He did have one in Plymouth, and his work was well-known in Wilkes-Barre. See his name under Plymouth.

L. S. Bennett was one of the pioneer photographers in Wilkes-Barre; he was in 1851 located in the Hollenback Block. It would not be unusual if further research on Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bennett revealed a connection between Mr. W. H. Bennett and L. S. Bennett, since, as we have seen, a photography business is not infrequently passed on from one generation to the next.

6. Collamer & Stearns

first documented record: 1873
last documented record:
location of studio:

A carte de visite portrait in the collection of the Russell Homestead, Carbondale, is inscribed at the base of the front -
Jim Nov 18, 1877

and printed on the back - Lee Stearns,
No. 26 Public Square,
Wilkes-Barre
Pa

Successor to Collamer & Stearns

L. E. Stearns was in business by himself in Wilkes-Barre from at least 1875, and Collamer - if this Collamer is George W. Collamer - was in business in Wilkes-Barre in 1867 with Condit - Condit & Collamer.

Edward Phillips, "History of Wilkes-Barre, Luzerne County, Pa.," Vol. 2, pt. 1, p. 168 (photographers)

OGILVIE, W.

1866 -- W. Ogilvie was located at 14 Public Square where now (1937) part of the Weitzenkorn Building stands. He succeeded S. S. Hull.

1867 -- Collamer & Condit bought the studio.

1873 -- Leland E. Stearns bought a 1/2 interest in the Collamer & Condit studio at 104 Public Square

-- He bought the entire business.

-- Moved to the Osterhout Building on the south corner of the Square and East Market and formed the firm of Stearns & Wildermuth.

1915 -- He retired from business and was succeeded by his son, Joseph Stearns and M. S. Wildermuth.

1937 -- Business still conducted by Joseph Stearns.

1944 -- Joseph Stearns alone was conducting the business at 51 Public Square.

Phillips says that in 1873 Leland E. Stearns bought a half interest in the firm of Collamer & Condit. Are we to interpret this to mean that there was a partnership by the name of Stearns, Collamer & Condit?

Carte de visite portraits, printed with the firm name, Collamer & Stearns, are known in three formats:

1. (at base of front): COLLAMER & STEARNS
Wilkes Barre, Pa.

(back): (blank)

2. (at base of front): (blank)

(back): Lee Stearns,
No. 26 Public Square,

Successor to Collamer & Stearns

3. (at base of front): (blank)

WILKESBARRE, PA.

7. Condit & Hull

first documented record:
last documented record: before 1875
location of studio:

Carte de visite portraits by the firm of Condit & Hull are known with the following printed addresses in the center of the back:

1. CONDIT & HULL'S
Gallery of Art.
Wilkes-Barre, Penna.

2. CONDIT & HULL'S (in a crescent-shaped line, bottom center being at the "&")

GALLERY OF ART,
WILKES-BARRE, (in a crescent-shaped line, top center being at the "-") Pennsylvania. (a crescent-shaped line concentric with the topmost line of this address)

3. In the surface of an easel, which is superimposed on the side of a studio camera, is the following address:

GALLERY OF ART
Wilkes-Barre
Pa.

Webb's Scranton City Directory, 1875-facing p. 120, display ad for S. S. Hull, 209 Lackawanna Avenue, Scranton, Pa. Beneath the name of S. S. Hull at the top of the ad is the following:

(Successor to Frank Jewell, and formerly of Hull & Condit, Wilkes-Barre.)

See also Hull & Condit, Wilkes-Barre
See also Hull, Sedgwick S., Wilkes-Barre
See also Hull, Sedgwick S., Carbondale
See also Condit & Collamer, Wilkes-Barre
See also Collamer & Condit, Honesdale

Three different photographer's logos for the firm of Condit & Hull, Wilkes-Barre are preserved on the back of three different carte de visite portraits, and since in all three logos the firm name is given as Condit & Hull, we may assume that Hull, when he placed the display ad for his business in 1875 Scranton directory, was acting from a purely personal point of view in his listing of the firm name as Hull & Condit.

All three of these logos follow the name of the partnership, Condit & Hull, with a name for the studio, Gallery of Art. Since there is in a private collection in Scranton a full-length portrait of an unidentified couple (man seated, woman standing alongside him) printed in the center of the back, surrounded by an elaborate cartouche, with the following photographer's logo

From
GALLERY OF ART
Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

this would suggest that S. S. Hull was at one time the sole owner/proprietor of the Gallery of Art. Was Hull in business by himself in Wilkes-Barre before his partnership with Condit there, or after his partnership with Condit there?

E. B. HEADLEY.--Artist-Photographer, 23 E. side Public Square.

Mr. E. B. Headley is conceded to be one of the best Photographers in Luzerne county. He possesses that love for his art characteristic of the true artist, together with the nice perceptions and exquisite taste, implanted by nature and developed by culture, which are so eminently essential to success in this profession. The skill and taste of this gentleman are recognized in a practical manner by the people of Wilkes-Barre, who gave him a very liberal patronage. Mr. Headley was born near Fallsington, Bucks county, but commenced business at his present stand some ten years ago, and has been uniformly successful. His establishment is fitted up with all the necessary paraphernalia, of most modern and improved description, and occupies a space of 22 X 65 feet. Devoted to his art, Mr. Headley mingles but little in public matters, contented with his profession and satisfied to possess the esteem of those who know him.

The difficulty with the establishment of a certain identity for "J. B. Wright" comes from the fact that the middle initial "B." is partially obscured on the above carte de visite portrait. The the first initial is "J" is unquestionable.

WYALUSING

1. Porter & Nichols

first documented record:
last documented record:
location of studio:

Carte de visite portraits by the firm of Porter & Nichols are known in two different formats:

1. plain format back, the following photographer's logo printed in the center:

PORTER & NICHOLS'
PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY,
Wyalusing, Pa.

2. plain front back, the same text as in the above format, but here surrounded by a cartouche which has at the top a frequently-used commercially-available photographer's logo--two cupids at a studio camera on a tripod: one stands behind the lens of the camera, the other kneels in front of the tripod on one knee and holds in his (? its) hand a photograph (which looks to be of the proportion of a cabinet card).

MONTROSE

1. Lyons, B. R.

first documented record:
last documented record:
location of studio:

Two mounted studio portraits by Lyons are known to this author:

1. an unusually large (7 3/8" X 5 3/8") cabinet photograph of a group of 9 people (7 women, 1 young girl, 1 young boy; back of the mount is inscribed "Frances Tanner Jones"--presumably one of the seven women) and embossed at the base of the front in the following wise:

LYONS MONTROSE
PA

2. a cabinet photograph of an elderly man, inscribed on the back "Mordecai C Tanner/Grandfather" and stamped in the upper left on the back:

B. R. Lyons, Photographer.

SUSQUEHANNA

1. Kirby, J. B.

first documented record:
last documented record:
location of studio:

The fact of J. B. Kirby's existence is known through the following entry on the geographical index of the International Museum of Photography at the George Eastman House:

KIRBY, J B US, PA, SUSQUEHANNA A CDV

(A = 1-10 photographs)

Such documentation of a photographer in the town of Susquehanna by the name of J. B. Kirby is extremely interesting, since the 1881 biography of W. E. Kirby, published in Part II, page 9, records that W. E. Kirby "is originally from Orange county, N.Y., and came to Carbondale in 1865, at which time he conducted a photographic art gallery, which he relinquished to engage in his present enterprise [Manufacturer and Dealer in Furniture]. He was also at one time in business at Montrose, Susquehanna Co., Penna..."

We do not know if J. B. and W. E. Kirby are related. Might they be father and son, or brothers? J. B. worked at Susquehanna and W. E. worked at Montrose.

As we have reported in Part II, page 9, there are carte de visite portraits printed on the back with the following address:

KIRBY & BROTHERS, Fine
ART GALLERY,
Carbondale, Penn.

Apparently there are at least three Kirby brothers, and as we see from the 1872 atlas classified business directory, cited in Part II, page 9, one of them was almost certainly John B. Kirby, who in 1872 was a merchant living in Carbondale. Precisely what he was merchandizing in 1872 in Carbondale we are not told.

It would be extremely interesting to discover that the pencil inscription ("P. J. Kirty") on the back of the large photograph of John Gillespie Murray, cited in Part II, page 9, should in fact read "J. B. Kirby."

SUSQUEHANNA DEPOT

1. Sweet and Harding

first documented record:
last documented record:
location of studio:

As we reported in the Susquehanna County section, Part I, page 19, there were two separate Hardings active as photographers in the town of Susquehanna--A. D. and D. L.--and one partnership in Susquehanna Depot in which one partner was a Harding--Harner & Harding.

The following entry, from the geographical register of American nineteenth-century studio photographers, at the International Museum of Photography at the George Eastman House, adds still another facet to our knowledge of the photographic activity in Susquehanna Depot of a photographer named Harding:

TUNKHANNOCK

1. Doolittle, G. W.

first documented record:
last documented record:
location of studio:

The identity of the Tunkhannock photographer G. W. Doolittle is known to this author on the basis of the following entry from the geographical register of studio photographers, at the George Eastman House:

DOOLITTLE, G W US, PA, TUNKHANNOCK A CDV

(A = 1-10 photographs)

Note: Although this author is not absolutely positive that his reading of the middle initial of Doolittle on the IMP/GEH register is correct, he is virtually certain that he is correct, and that Doolittle's middle initial should not be read as "M."

2. Ferry, C. M.

first documented record:
last documented record:
location of studio:
In S. Stark's New Building, below the American Hotel

We know of Charles Marsh Ferry's presence in Tunkhannock in the Spring of 1854 from a display ad which he placed in the Tunkhannock, Pa. newspaper, the North Branch Democrat, on Wednesday, May 17, 1854, p. 3, col. 4. Since this display ad (text given in Part II of this history of studio photography) is internally dated March 8, 1854, we may assume that the ad was first run on that day, and from the opening words of the text of the ad we may safely say that Ferry first opened his doors in Tunkhannock for business on March 8, 1854.

By September 15, 1854, Charles Marsh Ferry had opened "Daguerrean Rooms" in Carbondale, Pa., and had presumably abandoned his Tunkhannock Gallery by that time. For more on Ferry's Carbondale career, see Part II, page 7.

3. Heermans, L. W.

first documented record:
last documented record:
location of studio:

We have noted in Part I, pp. 21-22, that there was a photographic partnership in Tunkhannock by the name of Hermans & Cullingworth, and there we raised the question whether the Hermans of the partnership was L. W. Heermans or Eugene A. Heermans, two studio photographers who are recorded in Scranton, Pa. On the basis of the following entry in the geographical register of studio photographers at the International Museum of Photography at the George Eastman House, we may speculate that the Hermans in question is L. W.:

HERMANS, L W US, PA, TUNKHANNOCK A CDV

Stereographers

LUZERNE COUNTY

1. Beckwith, E. W.

In an undated, but apparently (on the basis of internal evidence) recent (1970s) essay entitled ONE PICTURE WORTH A THOUSAND WORDS (copy in the files of the Wyoming Historical and Geological Society, Wilkes-Barre) the Wilkes-Barre photographer, Harold Gittins, mentions with great praise the stereo views taken by E. W. Beckwith:

We got interested in historical photographs over forty years ago when we came into possession of a series of 5 X 8 stereo wet plates. These were made nearly one hundred years ago by a man named Beckwith. I know there is no man alive today who knew Mr. Beckwith and I doubt if a picture of him is in existence, but by making this series of photographs I doubt if he will ever be forgotten. It is known by local historians as the "Beckwith Series" and fills a gap in our history we would never have known, at least not pictorially.

We have a permanent display in our studio of 20 X 24 prints made from some of these plates. They are 'needle sharp,' and the print quality is excellent, which speaks well of the craftsmanship of that era.

What is not clear from this essay is whether Beckwith actually had a studio in Wilkes-Barre. He did have a gallery in Plymouth--a carte de visite portrait of an unidentified young man (seated, half-length, facing to the right), in the collection of the author is printed on the back with the following address:

E. W. Beckwith,
PLYMOUTH
Luzerne Co.,
PA.

If Beckwith's only studio were in Plymouth, then it would be not unreasonable to assume that his work could be well-known in nearby Wilkes-Barre. So far, no record of Beckwith's having a studio at Wilkes-Barre has come to light.

2. Ogilvie, W.

Edward Phillips, "History of Wilkes-Barre, Luzerne County, Pa.," Vol. 2, pt. 1, p. 168 (photographers)

OGILVIE, W.

1866--W. Ogilvie was located at 14 Public Square where now (1937) part of the Weitzenkorn Building stands. He succeeded S. S. Hull.

1867--Collamer & Condit bought the studio.

1873--Leland E. Stearns bought a 1/2 interest in the Collamer & Condit studio at 104 Public Square.

--He bought the entire business.

--Moved to the Osterhout Building on the south corner of the Square and East Market and formed the firm of Stearns & Wildermuth.

1915--He retired from business and was succeeded by his son, Joseph Stearns and M. S. Wildermuth.

1937--Business still conducted by Joseph Stearns.

1944--Joseph Stearns alone was conducting the business at 51 Public Square.

Although the above citation from the Phillips notes might at first glance suggest that all of the information given after the chronologically arranged dates pertains to Ogilvie, W., a careful reading of the information clearly indicates that the only part which pertains directly to Ogilvie is the first part--1866 and 1867.

From that information we may conclude the following:

that W. Ogilvie was in business in Wilkes-Barre at 14 Public Square before 1866 that W. Ogilvie succeeded S. S. Hull at 14 Public Square that W. Ogilvie left 14 Public Square, and presumably Wilkes-Barre, in 1867, when Collamer & Condit bought the studio, 14 Public Square.

Two stereograph cards, in the collection of the author, are printed in the center of the back with the following address:

W. OGILVIE,
P H O T O G R A P H E R, WILKESBARRE,
PA.

These two stereograph cards show (1) a view of an obelisk-shaped monument, and (2) a general view of a cemetery. The back of the cemetery view has the following text written just above the printed address:

Condit & Collamer
Successor to

SCRANTON

1. Brownell, D. K.

In a full-page display ad which D. K. Brownell placed in Andrew B. Galatian's History of the City of Scranton... For 1867 and 1868, p. 117, Brownell lists stereoscopic views among the products available at his studio:

D. K. Brownell, Fine Art Gallery, No. 224 Lackawanna Avenue, Scranton, Pa. THE LARGEST AND BEST SKY-LIGHT IN THE STATE! Having new and Superior Apparatus, is prepared to make FINEST AND LARGEST PICTURES ever made in the Lackawanna Valley. MODERATE PRICES AND GOOD WORK GUARANTEED. Mr. B. will always be on hand to serve his friends with a WELL SELECTED STOCK OF FRAMES, Gilt, Rosewood, Black Walnut, Rustic Union, Oval, Metal, Passepartouts, cart de Visites, Albums, Stereoscopic Views, &c.

The two carte de visite photographs given above, of unidentified sitters, were taken by Frank Jewell, and are here reproduced, full size, from the original photographs in the collection of the author. At the base of the top photograph is printed: "JEWELL, Photographer, SCRANTON, PA. Chase's Gallery." At the base of the photograph immediately above is printed: "FRANK JEWELL HYDE PARK, PA." Volume I, Number 1 of the photography periodical that was created and published by Frank Jewell, THE SUNBEAM, is reproduced in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA on pages 14-17.

Francis J. Griswold (on the left) and Jane (Loomis) Griswold (on the right). Daguerreotypes, each of which is a sixth plate (2 3/4" X 3 1/4") by an unknown photographer, in the collection of the Russell Homestead, Carbondale, PA; copy print by Donald W. Powell.

Francis J. Griswold (11-14-1793, Norwich, MA--09-08-1868, Clinton Township, Wayne County, PA) and Jane (Loomis) Griswold (03-11-1792, Torrington, CT--03-19-1881, Clinton Township, Wayne County, PA) are no strangers to the readers of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA. Volume I, Number 1 is a portrait of their grandson, Theron Orsemus Loomis, and his wife, Mary Emma (Squire) Loomis. Volume II, Number 2, is a portrait of John Griswold (1754-1843) and Elizabeth Crittenden (1761-1851), the parents of Francis J. Griswold, and their ancestors and descendants.

Since Francis and Jane Griswold emigrated from Massachusetts to Clinton Township, Wayne County, PA, in the Fall of 1813, where they permanently settled, their daguerreotypes were surely taken by a Wayne County daguerreotypist.

The custom of the daguerreotype era was to place a gilded mat in front of the daguerreotype image, and to place the framed image in a small hinged case. Typically the image was faced by a velvet mat. In the case of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Griswold, the velvet facing mat for both daguerreotypes is no longer preserved, and the detached image half of each case is all that survives. When these daguerreotypes were discovered among the books and papers of the sitters' great-granddaughter, Edna Pearl Loomis, they were bound together, face to face, with a rubber band.

Horace Gilbert Squire (on the left) and Beulah (Grinnell) Squire (on the right). Daguerreotypes, each of which is a sixth plate (2 3/4" X 3 1/4") by an unknown daguerreotypist, in the collection of Mrs. Laura A. (Loomis) Rude, Carbondale, PA; copy print by Donald W. Powell.

Horace Gilbert Squire (1788/9-1857) and Beulah (Grinnell) Squire (1788-1861) are, like Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Griswold, no strangers to the readers of this historical quarterly: Volume I, Number 1 is a portrait of their granddaughter, Mary Emma (Squire) Loomis, and her husband, Theron Orsemus Loomis.

During the first week of June, 1812, Horace Gilbert Squire came to Clinton Township, Wayne County, PA, from Winsted Village, Litchfield County, CT, staked his claim, built a house, and was joined by his wife, Beulah, and their son, Hilon DeRoy. Thereafter, the Squires became permanent residents of Clinton Township, and therefore these daguerreotypes of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Gilbert Squire were surely taken by a Wayne County daguerreotypist. Many years after these likenesses were taken, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Gilbert Squire sat to a daguerreotypist for a likeness, the second time in a double portrait, which is given below.

Beulah (Grinnell) Squire (on the left) and Horace Gilbert Squire (on the right). Daguerreotype, sixth plate (2 3/4" X 3 1/4") by an unknown daguerreotypist, in the collection of the Russell Homestead, Carbondale, PA; copy print by Donald W. Powell. See the images of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Gilbert Squire in the middle of this page; see the image of Horace Gilbert Squire on page 4 of Volume I, Number 1 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

Unidentified Couple. Daguerreotype, sixth plate (2 3/4" X 3 1/4") by an unknown daguerreotypist, in the collection of the author; copy print by Donald W. Powell. The identity of the couple portrayed in this horizontally oriented, sixth plate, daguerreotype is not known. All that is known about the identity of the likeness is this: it was bought from an antique dealer who acquired it from an estate somewhere "between Pleasant Mount and Poyntelle," Wayne County, PA; other items with this daguerreotype at the time it was acquired by the antique dealer in question seem to indicate that the daguerreotype might have come from the Deming family. Unlike the other daguerreotypes shown on this page, this daguerreotype is shown with the gilded mat which surrounds the image removed. The mark of that gilded mat is clearly visible; particularly on the right.

Unidentified Young Man. Ambrotype, ninth plate (2" X 2 1/2"), by an unidentified ambrotypist, in the collection of the Russell Homestead, Carbondale, PA; copy print by Donald W. Powell. Of the five standard sizes in which daguerreotypes and ambrotypes were made (whole plate, 6 1/2" X 8 1/2"; half plate, 4 1/2" X 5 1/2"; quarter plate, 3 1/4" X 4 1/4"; sixth plate, 2 3/4" X 3 1/4"; ninth plate, 2" X 2 1/2"), the ninth plate size was the smallest. The identity of this young man is not known. That he is a direct ancestor of Helen Loomis (Russell) Powell is without question, since the image passed by inheritance to her. That being the case, the sitter must surely be a Loomis, a Squire, a Woodmansee or a Griswold--in which case, it is virtually unquestionable that the image was taken by a Wayne County ambrotypist. As illustrated here, the image is approximately twice life-size. The image is still framed in its original gilded mat and housed in its original hinged folding case.

Unidentified Man. Ambrotype, sixth plate (2 3/4" X 3 1/4"), by an unknown ambrotypist, in the collection of the Russell Homestead, Carbondale, PA; copy print by Donald W. Powell. Nothing is known about the specific identity of this man, and two equally viable possibilities exist as to the probable identity. He is either a maternal or paternal ancestor of this author. However, since the specific provenance of this picture is lost, any speculation about the possible identity of the sitter must await further corroborative evidence. Whichever of these alternatives is the case, one fact is fairly likely--that the image was taken by a northeastern Pennsylvania ambrotypist. The image is still framed in its original gilded mat and is still housed in its original folding case.

William Anderson Russell. Tintype, 1 1/2" X 2 1/4", framed behind an elaborate, perforated metal frame, 2 3/4" X 3 1/2" (not including nob on frame), in the collection of the Russell Homestead, Carbondale, PA; copy print by Donald W. Powell. William Anderson Russell (1871-1958) married the elder daughter of Mary Emma (Squire) Loomis and Theron Orsemus Loomis, and much information about William Anderson Russell and his wife, Ora Esmarilda (Loomis) Russell, may be found in Volume I, Number 1 of this historical quarterly.

Unidentified Women. Ambrotype, sixth plate (2 3/4" X 3 1/4") on clear glass, with back painted black, by an unknown ambrotypist, in the collection of the Russell Homestead, Carbondale, PA; copy print by Donald W. Powell. This ambrotype is shown here with its gilded framing mat. The ambrotype was originally fitted into a standard-sized case, which has not come down to us. The identity of the two women shown in this ambrotype is not known with certainty, although the likeness passed uninterrupted through the heirs of John W. Powell and his wife, Mary Howell, to its present owners. Therefore, one, or possibly both, of these women might be a Powell or a Howell. In Volume I, Number 4 of this quarterly, some basic biographical information about Mr. and Mrs. John W. Powell, as well as several photographs of the couple, are published. We know that John W. Powell came to America in 1863 and settled in Luzerne County, PA, and that he married Mary Howell in America. The woman on the right might possibly be Mary Howell.

Seven Ambrotype Cases. Collection of Mrs. Verna C. Varcoe, Waymart, PA; photograph by Donald W. Powell. The case in the bottom row, extreme right, contains the ambrotype of James Ensign McMullen that is reproduced in the photograph at the right.

James Ensign McMullen. Ambrotype in the collection of Mrs. Verna C. Varcoe, Waymart, PA; copy print by Donald W. Powell.

The seven ambrotype cases illustrated here are in the collection of Mrs. Verna (Curtis) Varcoe, Waymart, PA. Each of the cases contains an ambrotype, and surely six and possibly all seven of the ambrotypes are of members of the McMullen family, the maternal ancestors of Mrs. Varcoe's husband, Ensign Henry Varcoe (07-25-1896--06-19-1978). Since the McMullen family located in Luzerne County in 1776 and has been in continuous residence in Wayne County since 1800, all seven of these ambrotypes stand a very good chance of having been taken by Wayne County photographers. But we do not know for sure who took the ambrotypes, largely because ambrotypists seldom, if ever, identified themselves by means of printed logos or addresses on the cases in which their images were fitted, and never inscribed or affixed labels to the ambrotype itself--because such inscriptions or labels would readily be visible right through the surface of the image. But, given the fact that in the pre-automobile days of America in the 1850s and 1860s and later, people did not travel very far from home in order to satisfy their basic needs for fundamental goods and services, we may assume with a fairly high degree of certainty that these seven ambrotypes were taken by Wayne County photographers.

Mrs. Verna Varcoe, whose "The Curtis Valley School, Clinton Township, Wayne County" has only recently appeared in the pages of this quarterly (Volume II, Number 4), has supplied the following information about the McMullen family and about the identities of the persons portrayed in the seven ambrotypes. Of the seven images, we have chosen to illustrate here the ambrotype of James Ensign McMullen, maternal grandfather of Mrs. Varcoe's husband, Ensign Henry Varcoe.

1. Unidentified woman, either Sarah Maria McMullen (1834-1880) or her sister, Amanda A. McMullen (1828-1880). See note under #5, below.
2. Unidentified man, most likely Henry Washington McMullen (01-19-1818--02-11-1908, Prompton, Wayne County). David Kendall Martin (Mouse Hill, West Chazy, NY 12992), a teacher and a descendant of Elvira McMullen B. (see #4 in the list of the children of James McMullen, below), helped Mrs. Varcoe to identify the various McMullens whose likenesses are recorded in Mrs. Varcoe's seven ambrotypes. The D. K. Martin note that is attached to this case says: "This picture is either James Ensign McMullen or Henry Washington McMullen who both served in the Civil War - as James was a private throughout the war and Washington was a corporal and a sergeant, this might be Henry Washington." In response to the D. K. Martin note, the author wrote to Mrs. Varcoe, on June 19, 1981: "The soldier in this image is not a private, he wears officer insignia on his lower sleeve, and so the David Martin suggestion that it represents Henry Washington must be correct." In response to the above remark by the author, Mrs. Varcoe, on June 23, 1981, wrote: "I think it is Henry W. McMullen due to his uniform." In order to consider the other possibility--that this is an image of James Ensign McMullen--the author put the following question to Mrs. Varcoe on June 19, 1981: "If this image were James Ensign McMullen, then he would have to look like the private in #7. Does he? I don't think so. Do you?" Mrs. Varcoe, June 23, 1981, responded: "No."
3. Unidentified man, probably Silas Kellam McMullen (1809-1860). See note under #6, below.
4. Unidentified young boy.
5. Unidentified woman, either Amanda A. McMullen (1828-1880), or her sister, Sarah Maria McMullen (1834-1880). Note: Mrs. Varcoe has a pair of "large tin pictures" of two women whom she believes are Amanda and Sarah Maria McMullen. Of the ambrotype cases illustrated here, the one in the bottom row, second from the left, contains a picture of a woman who is the same as one of the women in Mrs. Varcoe's "large tin pictures." On a note attached to the case of the ambrotype in the case shown in the bottom row, second from the left, is the following text: "Amanda A. McMullen, 1828-1880, daughter of George McMullen - this might be her sister Sarah Maria McMullen 1834-1880 but she seems to match with the older looking of the two in the pair of tin pictures." D. K. Martin. To the case in the top row, left, is attached the following note: "Sarah Maria McMullen 1834-1880, daughter of George McMullen - this might be her sister Amanda A. McMullen 1828-1880 but she seems to match with the younger of the two in the pair of tin pictures." D. K. Martin. What both of these notes by D. K. Martin are saying is, then, that these two pictures are of sisters. In his letter to Mrs. Varcoe of June 19, 1981, the author asked her if she thought the two could represent the same women. To that question, Mrs. Varcoe, on June 23, 1981, responded: "The picture in the case in the top row, left, matches one of the large tin pictures, but I can't say that the picture in the case in the bottom row, second from the left, does. The eyes look different. They might be sisters, but they might not."
6. Unidentified woman, possibly Lydia K. M. Conklin (born at Canaan, Wayne County; died 1899; married Silas Kellam McMullen--#3 above--about 1835). The D. K. Martin note that is attached to #3 says: "probably Silas Kellam McMullen 1809-1860, as the picture had to be taken 1852-1866 and he looks so much like a McMullen and is the only male whose age fits this picture." With regard to the above D. K. Martin note, the author asked Mrs. Varcoe, on June 19, 1981, the following question: "I wonder why the picture would have to have been taken between 1852-1866?" To that question, Mrs. Varcoe responded, on June 23, 1981: "Don't know." In his letter of June 19, 1981 to Mrs. Varcoe, the author speculated: "I am sure that #3 is the mate of #6: they both appear in the same kind of case, the outside cover is the same, the felt pad facing the image is the same, and the cases are the same size. The only difference between the two is that the mat around the image in each is different." In response, Mrs. Varcoe remarked: "These could be man and wife."
7. James Ensign McMullen (03-25-1825--03-03-1916).

Much information about the McMullen family was published in a history of the McMullens. A copy of that history is in the collection of Mrs. Verna C. Varcoe. In a letter to the author, dated June 23, 1981, Mrs. Varcoe remarked about that history: "I have a long History of the McMullens. If you ever have time you are welcome to read the History I have. The name McMullen like the name Griswold has disappeared around here."

Mrs. Varcoe's letter to the author, dated June 23, 1981, gives the following information about the McMullens in Clinton Township:

... Daniel (born before 1755) was in Luzerne County in 1776... He (Daniel) fought in the Revolution--Battle of Wyoming. Daniel McMullen moved to Mt. Pleasant in 1800, where he acquired 100 acres, which was assessed to him in 1799. He died in 1804 and his two sons, James and George, farmed the place. In 1814, James and George divided the land--50 acres each. On May 12, 1823, James sold his 50 acres, and on Sept. 8, 1823, George sold his 50 acres. It is not known exactly where James and his family lived after 1823, but apparently in the same neighborhood, as the census lists them in 1830.

Although there is no Wayne County deed for James McMullen after 1823, it is likely that he settled on the farm which in 1872 Atlas of Wayne County, Clinton Township, is marked James E. McMullen. This James E. McMullen [whose picture is given above, right] is the son of James McMullen. The James E. McMullen farm is on the same road as the farm marked A. & M. McMullen [Amanda and Maria McMullen, daughters of George McMullen, the brother of James McMullen]. George McMullen bought the farm which in 1872 was in the possession of his daughters, in 1825; when George bought the farm in 1825 most of the land was part of Mount Pleasant, although the house is located over the line, in Clinton Township, which was formed in 1843 from Canaan Township. The George McMullen farm was located above where Charles Geuther now (1981) lives; Charles Geuther now owns that former George McMullen farm.

Daniel McMullen, the pioneer McMullen in Wayne County, had two sons, James and George. Some of the children of James and George are the McMullens shown in the seven ambrotypes, the cases of which are shown above.

James McMullen and Phoebe Kellam had 11 children; some of whom are:

1. James Ensign McMullen (03-25-1825--03-03-1916, m. on 07-04-1858 to Harriet Saunders, 05-02-1837--10-22-1904). Phoebe McMullen (06-10-1866--05-10-1945) is their daughter; on 12-18-1890 she married Wallace J. Varcoe (10-17-1863--03-10-1940). Ensign Henry Varcoe (07-25-1896--06-19-1978) is the son of Phoebe McMullen and Wallace J. Varcoe. On 06-17-1920, Ensign Henry Varcoe and Verna Agatha Curtis (b. 09-28-1897) were married. Note: In a letter, dated July 16, 1981, Mrs. Varcoe noted that although Phoebe McMullen was named after her grandmother, Phoebe Killam, that "Phoebe McMullen left out the 'o.' She always used Phoebe as found in the Bible (Rom. 16.1)."
2. Silas Kellam McMullen (1809-1860), married about 1835 his first cousin, Lydia M. Conklin (09--1812, Canaan, Wayne County--1899). As early as 1827, Silas Kellam McMullen was employed by the Delaware & Hudson Canal Co. in the construction of the original Gravity Railroad from Carbondale to Honesdale. Alfred Matthews, History of Wayne, Pike and Monroe Counties, Pennsylvania. Illustrated. (Philadelphia: R. T. Peck & Co., 1886), p. 584: "... father of a bright family ... William ... Carbondale, Charles ... Waymart, and two or three others. He died Sept. 29, 1860, ... as a result of an accident being caught in some machinery of one of the stationary engines of the D. & H. Gravity Road. Both he and his wife are buried in the Aldenville cemetery, Clinton Township. He [Silas K.] has several brothers, all of whom served in the Civil War." His son, Silas A. McMullen, assistant superintendent of the Pennsylvania Division of the D. & H. Railroad and a well known citizen of Carbondale, was born in Clinton Township, Wayne County, Pa., October 9, 1836. His father was born at Mount Pleasant in 1809. The McMullen family is of sturdy Scotch ancestry.
3. Henry Washington McMullen (01-19-1828--02-11-1908, Prompton, Wayne County). He married Sarah Routan on 06-23-1853 in Honesdale. She was born in 1835 and died 11-11-1910. He was in the Civil War.
4. Elvira McMullen B. David Kendall Martin (Mouse Hill, West Chazy, NY 12992), a teacher and a descendant of Elvira McMullen B., helped Mrs. Varcoe to identify the various McMullens whose likenesses are recorded in Mrs. Varcoe's seven ambrotypes.
5. Clarissa McMullen; married E. K. Norton and lived on Ridge Farm, R. D. 1, Waymart, PA.
6. daughter; married a Harvey Dann, near Clinton.
7. daughter; married a Bunting and in the next generation are Ledyards and others.

In referring to the children of James McMullen, Mrs. Varcoe noted: "They lived at Prompton, Honesdale, Carbondale, so on... Some are buried at Pleasant Mt., Aldenville, Clinton Center, too long a list to mention."

The following information about George M. McMullen is stated in Mrs. Varcoe's letter of June 23, 1981 to the author: "George M. McMullen (1786-1857) died Clinton Twp., Wayne Co., buried in Clinton cemetery. George M. McMullen married Hannah (1798-1856). Their children: Amanda A. McMullen (1828-1880), Sarah Maria McMullen (1834-1880). George M. McMullen owned a farm above where Charles Geuther now [1981] lives. (Chas. now owns that land too)."

CARTES DE VISITE.

Louis Jacques Mande Daguerre, a Frenchman, perfected a method of fixing the camera image which his fellow countryman, Joseph Nicéphore Niépce, had developed, and Daguerre considered his perfection sufficiently his own to name the image a daguerreotype. For the next fifteen years, the most widely practiced form of photography was daguerreotypy. But daguerreotypy was not the only form of photography on the market. In fact, another process, invented by the Englishman, William Henry Fox Talbot, and in the fall of 1840 modified by Talbot himself and called the calotype (and later renamed the tablo-type), was also being practiced, but to a much lesser extent. In 1851, the invention by the Englishman, Frederick Scott Archer, of the collodion process, made both the daguerreotype and the tablo-type obsolete.

The ambrotype, the tintype, and the carte de visite are three amplifications of the collodion process. Collodion, a mixture of guncotton in alcohol and ether, when flowed on a surface, dries to form a tough, skin-line film. That film attached to the glass was used as a support for the light sensitive emulsion, and by following seven carefully structured steps one arrived at a negative on a glass support, and this negative could be converted to a positive simply by placing it against a dark background or by painting the back of the glass black. The glass positive process, which Scott Archer published without restrictions of any kind, was patented by James Ambrose Cutting of Boston in 1854, and such positives were named ambrotypes by Marcus A. Root, a Philadelphia writing master turned daguerreotypist. Each ambrotype image was unique; the glass plate bearing the sensitized emulsion which was exposed in the camera became the final picture. The same uniqueness of the image was also true for the daguerreotype process; except that with the daguerreotype process the image was made on a silver-coated copper plate.

The tintype was made by the identical process by which the ambrotype was made, but with the tintype the support for the light-sensitive collodion emulsion was a thin metal plate japanned black or chocolate color. Concerning the tintype process, Beaumont Newhall (The History of Photography, Fourth Edition, 1978, pp. 48-49) has noted: "The inventor, Hamilton L. Smith, assigned his 1856 patent to Peter Neff and Peter Neff, Jr. The manufacture of plates was begun in 1856 by the Neffs, who named the process melainotype, and by Victor M. Griswold, who chose the name ferrotype. The more popular word tintype was introduced later."

The third application of the collodion technique was called the carte-de-visite photograph, patented in France by Adolphe-Eugène Disdéri in 1854. These visiting-card sized photographs were paper prints pasted on a mount measuring 4" X 2 1/2". Newhall (1978, p. 49) has summarized the process of making the carte-de-visite photograph: "To take these small portraits, Disdéri first made a wet-plate negative with a special camera which had several lenses and a plate-holder which moved. Eight or a dozen poses could be taken on one negative. A single print from this negative could then be cut up into eight or more separate portraits." Reproduced on this page are the backs of eight cartes de visite taken by the following photographers from northeastern Pennsylvania: W. H. Bennet (Wilkes-Barre), Headley (Wilkes-Barre), W. S. Corwin (Plymouth), Collamer (Wilkes-Barre), S. S. Hull (Carbondale), H. C. Yarrington (Carbondale), R. Warg (Hawley) and E. I. Stearns (Honesdale).

THE SUNBEAM (Volume I, Number 1, February, 1877).

Reproduced on pages 14-17 is a facsimile of Volume I, Number 1 of THE SUNBEAM, a photography periodical created and published by Frank Jewell. It is not known whether or not any other issues of THE SUNBEAM were ever published. We can only hope that there were, and that they will ultimately come to light. Volume I, Number 1 is the only issue of THE SUNBEAM known to the author. The copy of this issue of THE SUNBEAM in the author's collection, be it known, is not in very good condition, and it would not have produced a satisfactory copy had it been used to produce the facsimile given here. For that reason, most of the type in this facsimile and all of the lines between the columns and within the text have been reset. In resetting the type and the lines between the columns and within the text, every effort has been made by the Editor and his staff to reproduce the original exactly. The type that has been reset in this facsimile is here reset, line for line, as it appears in the original. In five instances, the title, THE SUNBEAM, has not been reset: once at the top of page 14, twice at the top of column 2 on page 15, once at the top of column 2 on page 16, and once at the top of column 2 on page 17. The remainder of the type on pages 14-16 has been reset. On page 17, the type in the ad in column 1 entitled "THE ART OF ARTS" has been reset. All of the other ads on page 17 are here reproduced from the original.

"COME, LET US REASON TOGETHER."

I desire to say a few words, in a kindly way, to those who anticipate having their photographs taken, in order that the intercourse between you and the photographer may be pleasant and agreeable, and result in a successful and pleasing picture.

Photographs are not the productions of machinery, nor are photographers always mechanics. We can not grind out, by simply turning a crank, the beautiful and artistic portraits that we are producing daily. Such work requires our utmost efforts, our constant study and thought and even then we sometimes fail. It is, therefore, necessary that a proper understanding exist between the photographer and the patron, and in order to bring about this result we offer you the following

SUGGESTIONS.

Don't patronize a photographer unless you have sufficient confidence in his ability, to allow him to make the picture as he thinks best; that is as regards the pose, the view of the face, the use of accessories, &c. Of course, any suggestions from you should be and, in our case will be kindly received and acted upon, as far as practicable, but the pose, and view of the face, that looks well for one, would, in all probability, be the very worst for you. Those sitters who insist on having this or that view of the face regardless of the fact that, generally, there is but one best view; or being placed in this or that position without the slightest knowledge of art, cannot expect artistic pictures. Indeed, were the sitter an artist, we could not make a successful picture, were we to attempt to do so according to his ideas and against our judgment. If our patrons would think for a moment, they could not but see how absurd and wrong it is for them to dictate to one who ought to be master of the situation. How would it look, if you were sick and should consult your physician, state your case and then, tell him just what to do to cure you? Don't you think it would look a little unreasonable to say the least, and is not your photographer entitled to as much respect as your doctor? We think so. For the sake of a good result then, try to submit to the skill and judgment of the photographer, and remember that it is he who takes the pictures and not you; that it is he whom you hold responsible for the result; that it is he who knows best (or ought to) how to take, and that it is his reputation that suffers if he fails, and not yours. WE guarantee satisfaction always.

WHEN AND HOW TO COME.

It is not necessary that the day should be bright. In fact some of our best work is produced on cloudy days. With my large skylight, built under my own supervision, any day except a very dark, stormy one, will do.

Don't come when you are in a hurry and have not but a few minutes to spare. Art cannot, like soda water, be dealt out in small doses and on short notice. Don't expect to rush in and have a sitting at once. It is worse than running after a railway train as it steams away from you. In both cases you generally have to wait. Those who have not much time to devote to this object should make

APPOINTMENTS.

Appointments are made especially for the accommodation of the sitter, and may be made any day in advance of, but not on the day, the sitting is desired. Our time is very precious to us, and we have "to make hay while the sun shines," and we cannot afford to wait for any one. Therefore, it is necessary that the sitter should be ahead of rather than behind time. A few minutes too late will, probably, throw all our other engagements out of time. Should you be on time and we are already occupied in making a sitting, we cannot stop operations to make yours at once, but will sit you immediately after no matter how many others are waiting; but should you be behind time any length of time, say from fifteen to twenty minutes, you will have to wait your turn with others or make an appointment for some other day. You should endeavor to be on hand about a half hour too soon, so that you may have ample time to arrange your toilet; in fact, we make our engagements in that way.

Having made your appointment or decided to come, arrange matters so that you can make it your first and principle business of that day. There is nothing so conducive to a successful picture as a feeling that you can take it perfectly easy.

THE TOILET

is a matter of considerable importance, and should have your careful attention. Ladies in arranging the hair, should do so, in a manner as they would trim a hat. Hats are trimmed to suit the complexion, so the hair should be arranged to suit the shape of the face. It is not always best to follow the fashion for the reason that photographs are sometimes "horribly correct." For a broad face the hair should be arranged as much as possible, on the top of the head, while a long slim face will be improved by arranging "puffs," "frizzes," or curls on the side. For a long neck a few curls might be so arranged as to completely overcome the difficulty, or a ruffle or ribbon might be worn around the neck.

Please don't powder the face or hair yourself. This is necessary in but few cases, and the photographer is the one to decide when it should be done.

Almost any color or material of dress-goods can be photographed nicely, but of all, black and white silk "take" the best, especially if handsomely trimmed. Avoid striped or plaid goods; it looks badly in a picture. For the new Promenade Card, which we are producing in beautiful style, light or dark silk should be worn (though we take them in any material) but the dress to look well must have rather a long trail, as these are made, only in a full length standing or sitting posture. Lace shawls or scarfs can frequently be introduced with good effect, and many other little articles, such as veils, fans, flowers, &c., can sometimes be used to heighten an effect or cover a fault.

After the toilet is complete all is in readiness for the #### POSITION.

This is one of the most important parts of the operation, and one that requires all the artist's skill and ability. Should the picture be good in every other respect, and the pose ungraceful and inartistic, the picture is spoiled as much as if the sitter had moved. And here, too, is where the artist must be master of the situation. You cannot tell how you will look in this or that position, therefore, it will be better for all concerned to let the photographer place you as he thinks best, or otherwise the pose may possibly be bad, and the artist become so embarrassed at your lack of confidence in his ability that he cannot feel the same interest in a second trial. Should we place every sitter in natural positions—that is, such positions as they would assume upon entering the skylight room, we would, certainly, obtain some very ungraceful attitudes. Then again, the picture must be made up according to the principles of art in such a way that it will, when taken, have a pleasing and symmetrical form.

The head rest must be used in every case. Not to hold you still, nor to give or retain the position, but that it may, by steadying the nerves and muscles, assist you to keep still.

It will be best to leave your friends in the reception room while you are sitting for your picture. You do not want to be stared out of countenance—neither does your photographer wish to be interfered with.

EXPRESSION.

The expression is the most important part of all, and is the very life of the picture. It is the part over which the photographer has the least control, and it is impossible for him to coax out in the picture an expression that was not on the face of the sitter. The photographer, however, can control the expression to a limited extent. He can, by always being in a cheerful mood himself, impart a feeling of cheerfulness to his sitter. And just here I will say that I am sometimes called cross and disagreeable. One of my characteristics is a decided way of speaking, and many attribute this to ill nature; when, I assure you, it is nothing more than an earnestness and anxiety to produce for you a satisfactory result. My whole soul and mind is absorbed in making the picture.

Do not, when told to look at an object, look at it as if your life depended on it. Let the eyes rest on the mark in the same manner as you would look at a newspaper while reading, winking just the same, but in an animated manner. Try to forget that you are sitting for a picture, and think of everything pleasant and agreeable. Make up your mind that you "don't care how your picture will look," and leave the result with your photographer. We are harder to please than you are, and will do our best, and nine times out of ten the picture will be pleasing in expression and satisfactory in every way.

OUR PETS.

Perhaps one of the most difficult things under all circumstances that we are called upon to do, is to make pictures of children from two to four years old. They make lovely pictures, but are often difficult to secure. Please don't drill them at home in the way they shall stand, nor say anything to them about having a picture taken. It soon becomes an old story. The best way is to make an appointment so they will not become tired out by waiting, and bring them in "just to see the bird" or "to look at the pictures." Let the photographer make their acquaintance in the reception room, and take them alone if possible, into the skylight room. Please don't bring the whole family—the mother and nurse are sufficient. Some of them generally insist on being in the room, and I have often found it more work to get rid of the extra help, and get the room quiet, than to make the child's picture. We are very successful with children, and always try a reasonable number of times. If we do not succeed in getting a satisfactory picture after two or three trials, we are not apt to succeed at all that day, and it is best to bring them again. Let the photographer choose the position for them. He will be governed by your wish when possible, but in many cases it is impracticable.

FEBRUARY, 1877.

THE SUNBEAM.

FACTS.

It is to our advantage to finish the pictures as expeditiously as possible, but hurry in finishing makes bad work. Please give us ample time that we may finish your's carefully and well.

Proofs are shown before you leave the gallery, if possible.

In no case will we allow inferior work to leave our establishment.

We can not undertake to make experimental sittings "just to see if they will suit." We know our ability, and feel sure that we can please you, and are willing to do all in our power to make you a satisfactory picture, but we cannot spend the time without an order, and in no case will an order be canceled after one sitting has been made.

No duplicate pictures will be sold or given to any one except the sitter, without the written consent of the proper person.

Positively no sittings made on Sundays. Our friends will please not ask us to do so, as we must refuse.

BUSINESS.

All the popular styles of photographs are made at our establishment, and all new styles will be introduced as fast as they become known. Among the most popular at present are the following: Imperial Cards, Promenade Cards, The Nouveaute, and large size portraits in India Ink, Crayon and water-colors. We make also the Carte de Visite in the Berlin and shadow style. Our work is all of a highly artistic character, graceful in pose, pleasing in expression, and exquisite in finish.

VIENS.

We are also prepared to make views of residences, coal-breakers, churches, machinery, &c., in the very best manner. This is a want that has long been felt in Scranton. We have the most complete outfit for this purpose ever brought to this city, and we can make any size from 14 X 17 to stereoscopic.

We copy old pictures in a style that cannot be excelled and is rarely equalled by any other establishment.

Our prices will be found as reasonable as is consistent with first class workmanship, and not much if any higher than the price asked for inferior work.

Hoping the foregoing remarks may be of service to you, and that they will be received in the same kindly way that they are offered, I am the public's humble servant,

FRANK JEWELL,

— Neatness, cleanliness, and order, are attractive features in a photograph gallery. Everything should be made as inviting as possible. If the customer be pleased with the appearance of the place on entering, is pleased with the treatment he receives, he will be pleased when he comes to sit, and will consequently wear a happy expression, and is quite sure to be pleased with his pictures when finished if they are really good.

The Sunbeam.

SCRANTON, PENN'A., FEBRUARY, 1877

FRANK JEWELL, PUBLISHER.

"THE SUNBEAM," will be published once every three months by Frank Jewell, a practical photographic artist, and is devoted entirely to Photography and its elevation, and the education of the people in art. Each number will contain articles on art as applied to photography both original and selected as well as any other matter pertaining to photography, that will interest the reader, and make it an instructive and entertaining paper, and it shall be our aim that each succeeding number shall be more interesting than the preceding one.

Issued from Frank Jewell's Gallery, Throop block, Wyoming avenue, Scranton, Pa.

A limited number of selected advertisements will be inserted at reasonable rates. Subscription, 50 cents per year; 25 cents per six months—not necessarily in advance.

WE would be glad to receive communications from any photographers, or others, on any subject pertaining to art that would be interesting to the public generally.

WE are glad to note the fact that the scenes and frescoing in the new Academy of Music are being done by such an estimable artist as Mr. L. W. Seavey, of New York. We have known Mr. Seavey, by reputation, ever since we have known photography, and much of this time we have enjoyed his personal acquaintance, and we know him to be one of the best scenic artists, if not the best, in this country. He has long been identified with photography as a background painter, and has done as much towards its elevation and advancement as any one, by the highly artistic character of his backgrounds. The fact that he is doing the work on the new Academy is a sure guaranty that it will be done in a thoroughly artistic manner.

OUR BUSINESS.

Notwithstanding the fact that the times have been unusually hard ever since our return to Scranton there has been a gradual increase in our business, with very flattering prospects of an immense trade at no very distant day. Indeed, our business, now, is nearly as good as it was before we sold our gallery on Lackawanna avenue, and there seems to be more demand for artistic work than ever before. We are, therefore, much encouraged in our business prospects, and are determined that every effort shall be put forth to make work of as high a standard, artistically and otherwise, as can be made, and that no pains shall be spared to make every customer pleased with their pictures. In fact, we are seldom satisfied with the results of our labors, but still strive and strive, by ambitious desires, to excel our latest efforts by more brilliant effects. Thus it should be of every photographer worthy the name of artist, and, although we may never attain that state of perfection in art to which we aspire, still the hope and desire to stand on the very top round of the ladder stimulates us to still greater exertions. There are men engaged in the profession who are mere machines, and who look only to the dollars and cents, and these might honor some other branches of business with more honor to all concerned; and, we think the time is coming when a goodly number will step down and out, and all be gainers. Better work, fair prices, and not so many chronic grumblers about hard times, will be the best thing for all that remain.

THEN AND NOW.

Cheap pictures and cheap material make both photographs and photographers poor. The time was when one hundred dollars would buy a complete outfit and sufficient instructions, to turn out in three weeks time, a professional photographer. The time has come when the price paid for the whole outfit and instructions then would not now buy a first-class lense, say nothing of the many expensive appliances, accessories, &c., that are found in every first-class gallery of the present day.

The time was when from three to six weeks' instructions was considered amply sufficient to learn all the details of the trade; the time has come when the artist photographer must spend much time in study must be an observer of nature, read works on art and study composition.

The time was when the public were satisfied with anything that looked like a photograph if it "had eyes." The time has come when not only the professional artist is competent to judge of artistic work, but the public, by means of the productions of our best artists have cultivated a taste for the fine arts, and are now able to decide for themselves the merits and abilities of the photographic artist, before they consent to sit for their pictures. Therefore, to be successful in business, it is necessary to obtain the very best possible results in our work, and to accomplish this end, fair prices must be strictly adhered to, the best materials obtained regardless of cost, sufficient time spent on each sitter with every care and attention paid to the details, to make each negative as good as can be made, and to let no work be delivered to the customer that would bring discredit on the photographer.

To say of a picture it is good enough when we know we might make it better is not only an injustice to the patrons but to ourselves, and the secret of our success is that we have always striven to make our work equal to any made in the world; to make the very best from each subject; to inspect each proof, as far as in our power, before it is shown to the sitter; to retake any, that in our judgment, might be improved, and to deal honestly and fairly with every customer. By these means we believe we have gained the confidence and respect, as a business man and artist, of the greater part of this community.

— Frank Jewell, the leading photographer.

THE PHILADELPHIA PHOTOGRAPHER.

This is a monthly journal devoted to photography and edited by a practical photographer. Believing that the more the public know about our art the better it will be for the photographer, we desire to see this work in the hands of all those who are in any way interested in photography or admire fine photographic work, and all such could not do better than to subscribe to this journal. Each number is embellished with a fine photograph by one of the masters in photography, that is in itself worth the price of the book, which is edited in a style that renders it an agreeable and readable book for the parlor of the patron of photography as well as for the photographer.

We expect to embellish one issue of this book with an example of photography from our gallery, during the present year.

Subscriptions will be received at our gallery. Price, $5.00 per year.

— The promenade card is the latest out, and ours are artistically elegant.

THE SUNBEAM.

FEBRUARY, 1877.

THE ADVANCE IN ART.

The past year has been more fruitful in the results of art culture among photographers than any since this subject began to be agitated. Evidently, we have art students and some art masters among the members of the fraternity who are not idle, but are making every effort to raise photography to the high position as an art, which it has long since demonstrated is in keeping with its capacities, and the true merit which it possesses. Some of the work now being produced is of the most encouraging and elevating character. Heretofore our own photographers have failed to compete successfully with many of the best in Europe in work that possesses real genuine art feeling and sentiment, but we have no longer to look across the ocean to Paris or Berlin for the highest attainments in the photographic art. Some of the work produced in this country and even here, in our own city, possesses artistic qualities that are not surpassed by the photographic productions of any country. These evidences of advance are of the most gratifying character, and the influence they have on the public will be to inspire a feeling for work of a higher artistic standard.

In speaking of photography as an art some of the old school connoisseurs would make up believe that photography is merely mechanical. Your portrait painter when he has an enlargement to make, does not scruple to line over both canvasses with proportionate squares which look dreadfully mechanical and what is still worse, mathematical. A more decided employment of mechanism is resorted to when your artist holds a strip of card-board before the face of his subject and marks on it the places of the chin, lips, the base of the nose, the roots of the hair, and the top of the head. If he fails to do this he risks his fidelity to nature, that is all. When the artist is well up with the times, he acts like a sensible, practical man, and takes his subject to a photographic artist, and procures two or more views of the individual to study while he shall paint. And but (some critic says) so long as the artists' freedom is not destroyed he is a true artist all the same. Exactly; that is just the point we would come to. He resorts to mechanical contrivances and means to reproduce on his canvass what he has already created in his mind, and so with the artist photographer. If he is about to make a picture, he has to be concerned, not only with the pose, but with all the requirements of art in the arrangement of the drapery and accessories. His machinery, most assuredly, will not do this for him. Then nothing has been said of the lighting of the subject. No one knows better than the judicious photographer how much, not merely of beauty in effect but of actual likeness, depends on the disposition and due relation of light and shade. The machinery of the sky-light, used to bring about these effects, occupies, precisely the same position in art with the photographer as with the independent artist; only in the case of the former the lighting appliances are more complete and more easily controlled.

I have digressed here to show how much of art there may be in photography, and our advance in that art. A few years ago a daub of black and a patch of white passed for a photograph, and the efforts of the sun at portrait painting were very unsatisfactory, and to be a photographer was to be a nobody; but with the advance in art the profession has been elevated, and with it the photographer. Art it is; and it is the people's art; for it places the most exquisite and accurate delineations within the reach of all. Did it accomplish nothing more than to give us the images of our near and dear ones, it would be one of the richest gifts of this wonderful era; but this is only one feature in the wide range and multiplied use of this magic art.

— Frank Jewell, the leading photographer.

THE STUDY AND PRACTICE OF PHOTOGRAPHY.

(From the Philadelphia Photographer.)

The absence of proper and mature judgment in many of the various manipulations of the photograph is often the cause which prevents some photographers from being successful when surrounded by the most favorable circumstances. In order to meet and satisfy the demands of his patrons, the photographer of today must be a different man from the photographer of ten years ago. It was not then regarded as strictly essential that he should possess rare and eminent attainments; but photography, in common with other departments of the fine arts, has advanced with rapid strides and with its progression the important fact has been developed that, besides the mere formula, chemicals and equipments, there must be mind and thought to insure success. The knowledge of this fact is gradually and effectively weeding out the impediments and obstacles which have so greatly retarded its progress as an art. Another important fact is being generally admitted, which is, that reputation (artistic) must be first made before success can be gained. Those who are striving for success, without first establishing a well earned reputation, will have their labor for their pains, reaping nought but the bitter harvest of blighted hopes and fruitless labor, when too late for amendment or repair.

Until a more ardent and earnest desire is manifested to produce work which will lay a foundation for a lasting and worthy reputation—instead of seeking the mighty dollar—than is now exhibited by many, they will never become resplendent as bright stars in the photographic firmament, but will ever be eclipsed by those of the higher order. In photography, it may be truly said, that, "forethought is the mother of success," and as Shakespeare says, "the weakest go to the wall."

Business, in every department of enterprise, to become a perfect success, must be reared upon the solid basis of principle which will merit success. And the mere matter of accumulation and gain should never be considered as paramount, but ever be regarded as secondary in value and worth when placed in juxtaposition with the possible achievements of reputation, eminence, and renown. In no vocation is a strict adherence to these elements of success so highly essential as in photography. Yet there are very many who apparently consider that photography does not claim anything but the most ordinary and insignificant means wherewith to gain an astonishing success. This is a great error. A few moments reflection will show even the most fastidious, the utter absurdity of such a supposition. We might ask the questions who are the successful ones in the profession, and what has rendered them successful? We could mention the names of a score of them, and the response in the case of each would be the same—careful and assiduous study and a love for the art. Simple as this combination may be regarded, it is the most effective receipt, the only specific for the procurement of final success.

The more we study the more we discover our ignorance. When we find a man engaged in photography because he loves it, and makes dollars and cents a "secondary consideration," we can rest assured that man is in the right path, and will eventually make his mark in the photographic world.

The prosperous merchant, in all branches of mercantile enterprise, is the one who has prided himself on furnishing his customers with the best grades and qualities. The photographer need not be an exception to such a case, unless indolently indifferent in his manner of procedure. Many commence well enough, and then suddenly lose all interest; this is particularly so with those who have but little affection for the art, and have merely taken it up with the idea of making a good, easy living, indulging the vain hope of success without the proper exertion.

The only substantial advertisements which will build up a photographic business, are the pictures themselves, and one defective or faulty photograph sent out will be productive of more harm than ten good ones can counterbalance. Once having gained a reputation for artistic excellence, the public take pleasure in recommending you gratis. You need only thereafter work to merit your patronage. And let it be borne in mind, if you have a reputation for producing miserable, poor and imperfect pictures, the public will be found equally eloquent in praising (?) your accomplishments (?) One or the other of these reputations you must necessarily have. There are photographers who, a few years ago, acknowledged almost with shame their vocation, but now are proud to be recognized as votaries of the art, and are seeking earnestly to obtain the loftiest niche in the temple of Fame. All photographers who study works on art cannot fail to see the necessity of elevating photography, which is but elevating themselves. If every photographer throughout the land could be induced to take and study a photographic journal, superior work, and a higher appreciation of the art would be the result.

G. O. BROWN.

[We have extracted the above from our old friend the Philadelphia Photographer as being particularly applicable to us. How far it applies we leave the public to judge.]

IS PHOTOGRAPHY AN ART?

Mr. Editor: I have been reading a good deal lately, pro and con, as to whether photography is an art or not. Revolving the question in my mind one night, after I had retired to my couch, I fell asleep and dreamed. When I awoke, all I could recollect was the following, which if you can understand and interpret, you can do more than I can:

A SETTLER.

Quoth Brown to Jones: To me the case is clear,
Your claim to Art cannot in truth appear;
If I my lexicon do read aright,
All you can do is this, to write by light.

Quoth Jones to Brown: Pray cease your empty strain;
If you say write, our claim is right, 'tis plain,
To write by light, with true artistic skill,
The right is ours, deny it as you will.

VISTA.

—We are frequently asked why our name is not removed from the front of our old gallery on Lack. avenue. This is a conundrum which we could easily answer if we chose, but we leave the public to guess.

—Our card photographs are fine. Try some.

THE ART OF ARTS.

"Other arts earth still mingles with and profanes; impassion is in the poet's words the senses wake with the painter's voluptuous hues, and the sculptor dreams but of the divine beauty of a woman's form; but with—"

What the writer would have said matters not. Suffice it for us to know that the tailor's art fills theaching void, inspires the poet, the painter, and the sculptor, and more than all, fills the thoughts of society. Winter's chill soon brings the wandering thoughts of the majority of creation's lords, who, with remarkable unanimity, flock to Hindsell's Clothing Emporium as the best place to comfort and adorn their needy bodies with beautiful, substantial, and serviceable clothing. The secret of this universal election is that this is the most elegant stock ever shown in Scranton.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS. Four logos of northeastern Pennsylvania photographers from the backs of four cabinet photographs in the collection of the author. These four logos are here reproduced full size. The four photographers are: Lee Stearns (Wilkes-Barre), W. H. Owen (Scranton), J. R. Williams (Olyphant), and J. H. R. Kemp (Luzerne). These four backs are representative of the wide variety of backs that were used by studio photographers for their cabinet photographs. Note that these four backs all contain images that relate to photography and/or painting: palette and brushes, camera and dark room supplies, allegorical figure holding either a mirror or a cabinet photograph in her left hand, painting on an easel.

Notes on the Text

Daguerreotype Case (hinged, two-part case, each part of which is 3 1/2" x 3 7/8", collection of Russell Homestead, Carbondale, PA. At the top of this column is a photograph by the author of outside of one side of this daguerreotype case; immediately above is a photograph, also by the author, of the lining inside of the case, below where the image was placed. The printed text on the lining inside of the case reads as follows:

A. P. Critchlow & Co., Manufacturers of Daguerreotype Cases. A. P. C. & Co., Are the Original Inventors of the Composition for the Union Case, (so called,) including all the various shades of color and fineness of texture peculiar to their manufacture and of the Embracing Riveted Hinges, thus securing them from breaking out as do others that are inserted with or without a metal brace. Hinge Patented Oct. 14, 1856.

Cases were made of leather and of paper pressed into dies to resemble tooled leather. These cases were at first lined with padded silk, and later velvet was used. After 1853, an entirely new type of daguerreotype case was introduced, made of plastic. It was called the "Union case." These molded plastic cases came in a great variety of designs, well over 100. These cases are frequently referred to as hard rubber or gutta-percha. They are not either, but true thermoplastic. The composition of the plastic was described on October 3, 1954: "... gum shellac and woody fibers or other suitable fibrous material dyed to the color that may be required and ground with shellac between hot rollers so as to be converted into a mass which when heated becomes plastic so that it can be pressed into a mold or between dies and made to take the form that may be imparted to it by such dies. Various improvements in the construction of the Union case were patented, the third of which was granted to Alfred P. Critchlow on October 14, 1856 for 'embracing rivetted hinges.'"

The case illustrated here is one of Critchlow's manufacture. It is inscribed, in pencil, along the side of the text on the case liner. That inscription is as follows:

Presented to Miss Jannett H. Locke by Fred.

W. T. Johnsons
Likeness

This case came to its present owner, the Russell Homestead, Carbondale, PA, through the estate of Eleanor Pritchard Jones, daughter of Margaret (Russell) Jones and Samuel Sheldon Jones. Thanks to Eleanor Pritchard Jones, the identity of the sitter has been preserved. He is John Gillespie Murray, the half-brother of Margaret Gillespie (Locke) Russell of Carbondale, PA (see footnote number 13 on page 27 of Volume I, Number 3 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA). John Gillespie Murray was born in 1826 and died on May 10, 1854; a photograph of him is given in Volume II, Number 1 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA on page 6.

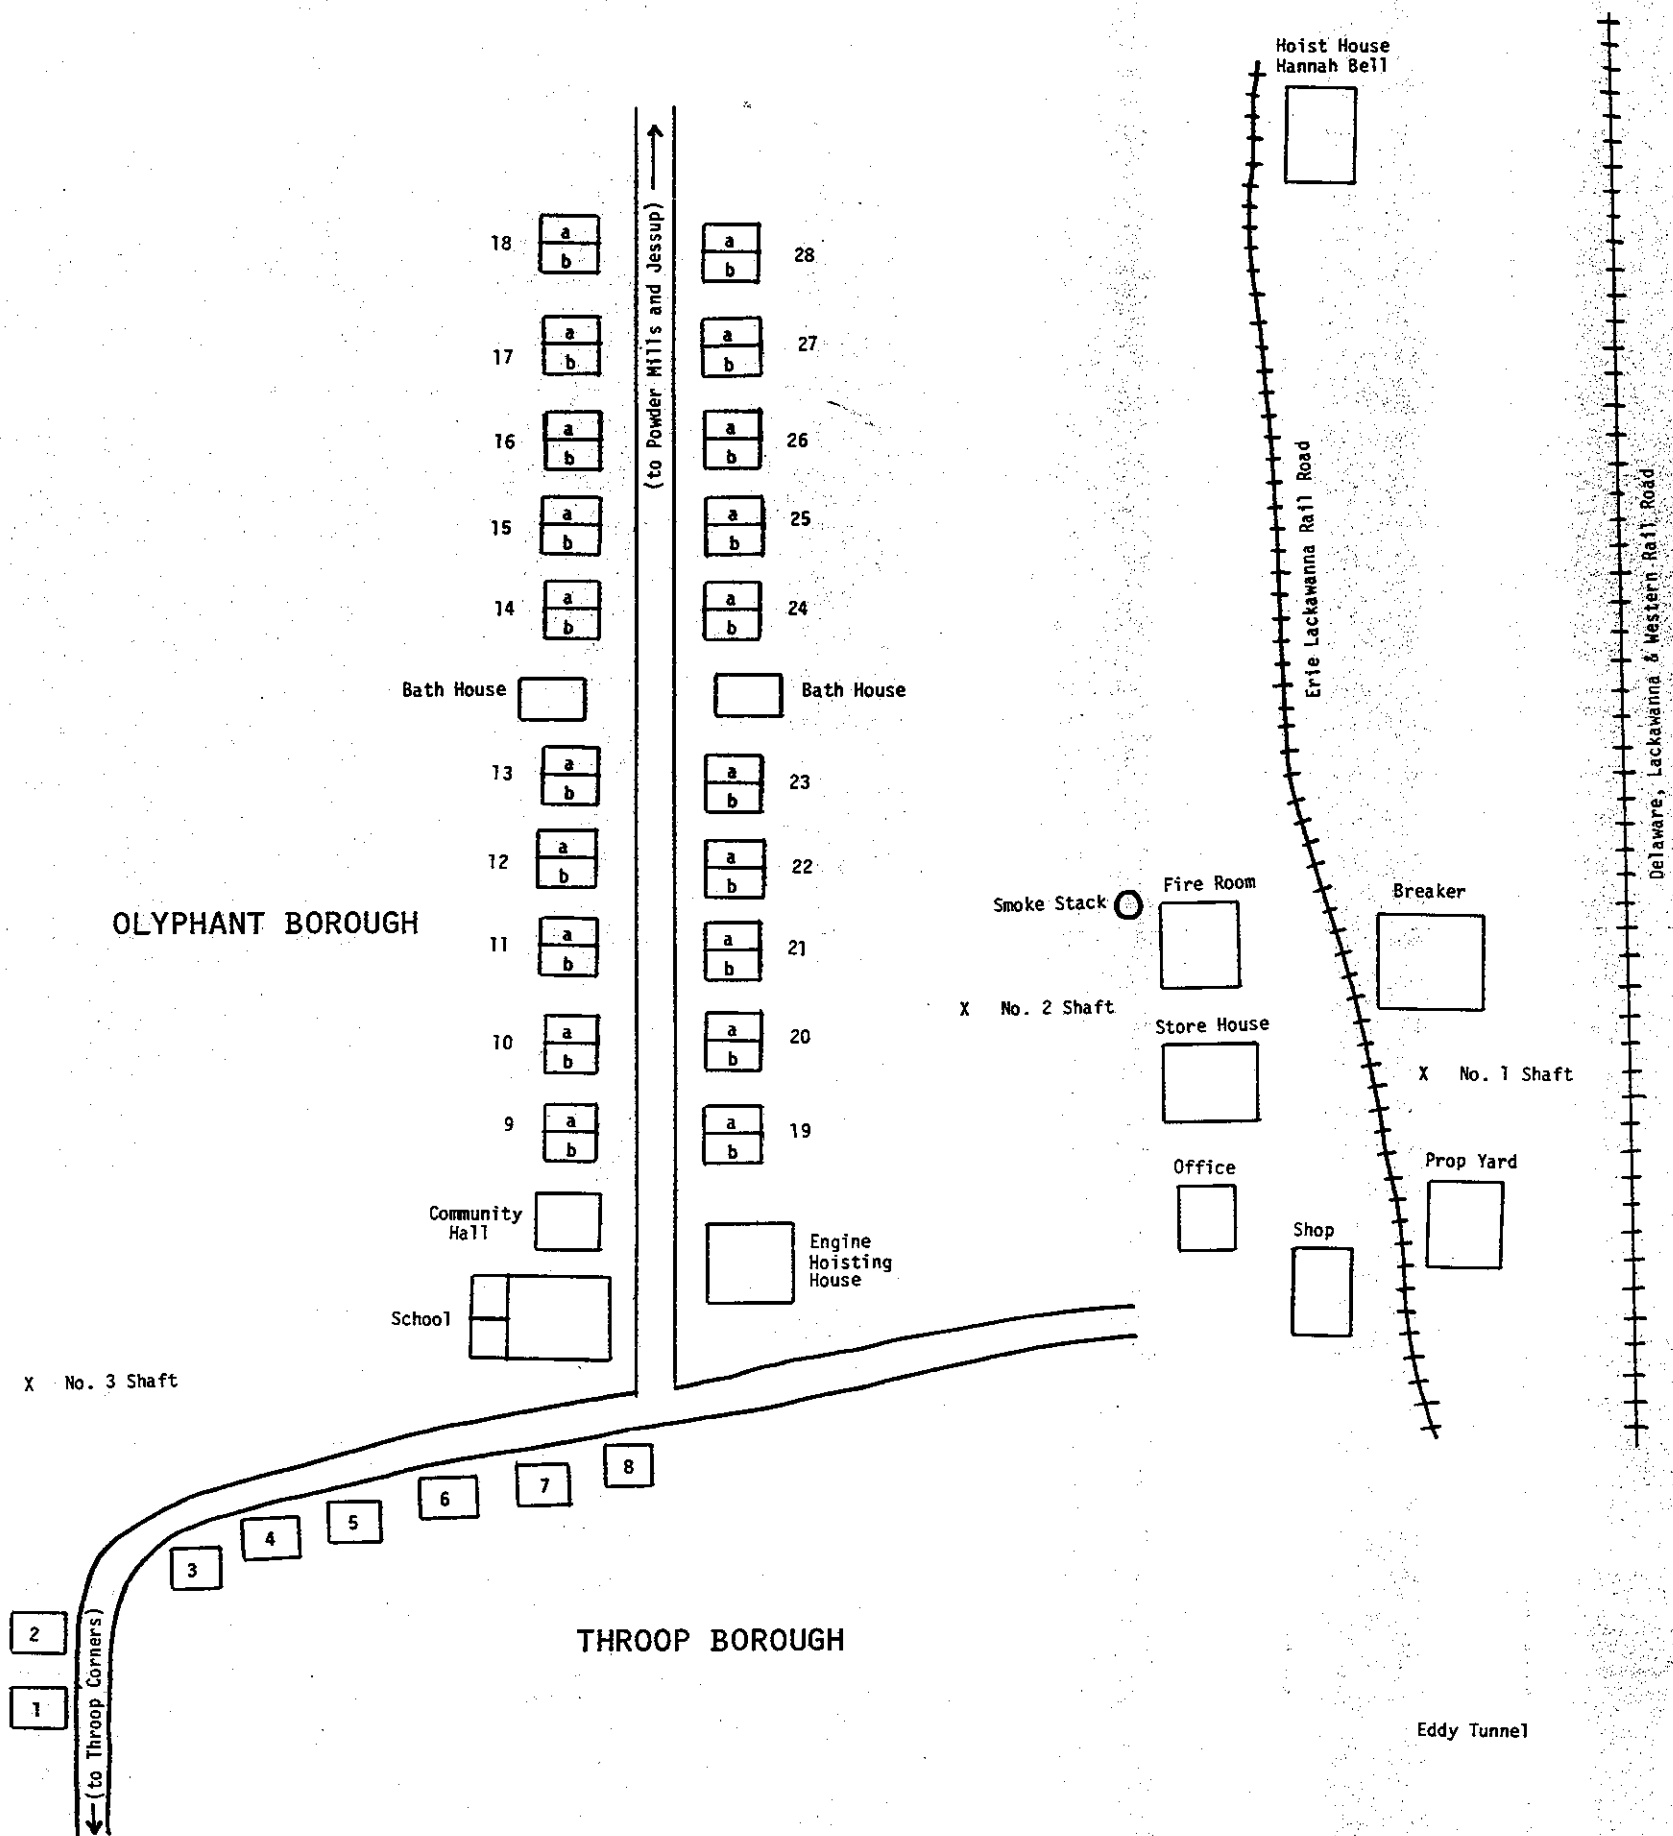

The specific kind of image of John Gillespie Murray preserved in this "Union Case" is not known for certain: it is not a daguerreotype and it is not an ambrotype, but appears to be a meticulously rendered miniature oil painting. If such is the case, then we have come full circle with the small hinged case, since small, hinged and fastening boxes were formerly used to house oil miniatures, and when daguerreotypy was invented in 1839 the hinged fastening box was taken over by the daguerreotype industry to house the daguerreotype, also a "miniature" portrait. The imagery on the outside of the case is concerned with death: Father Time holds his traditional attributes--a sickle and an hourglass.

Tombstone of Captain Michael Flynn. Saint Rose Cemetery (formerly called New Catholic Cemetery), Pearl Street, Carbondale, PA; photograph taken by Donald W. Powell in June, 1981. The inscription on the tombstone reads as follows: "MICHAEL FLYNN / CAPT. CO. C 56 REGT. PV. / AGED 56 YEARS / BRIDGET FARRELL / HIS WIFE / AGED 70 YEARS / MARY E. FLYNN MCGOVEN / AGED 24 YEARS / WM CLIFFORD FLYNN / AGED 3 YEARS / REQUIESCENT IN PACE. / FLYNN" Captain Flynn's portrait appears on the front page of this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA; his name is included among the soldier dead in the list of Carbondale soldiers that was published in The Carbondale Advance (Volume XXVIII, Number 52, Saturday morning, May 16, 1885, page 3, column 6)--that list is reproduced in the present issue of this historical quarterly on pages 25-26.

GENEALOGICAL AND LOCAL HISTORY NOTES

Given on this page and on the following five pages are genealogical and local history data that are potentially useful to genealogists, historians, and social scientists who are engaged in research on either individuals and families from northeastern Pennsylvania or the history of northeastern Pennsylvania. These data, in addition, are intrinsically interesting and can, therefore, be regarded as ends unto themselves.

--Underwood was originally owned by the Pennsylvania Coal Company; later it was bought by the Pittston Coal Company; the principal coal veins in Underwood were named as follows: Pittston, Rider, Rock, Top Clark, Bottom Clark, Top County, Bottom County, First Dunmore, Second Dunmore, Third Dunmore

--No. 1 Shaft was a coal shaft; No. 2 Shaft and No. 3 Shaft were for the men to enter and exit from the mines; at the Engine Hoisting House the cars ran up and down the slope on the Clark and County veins

--the community of Marshwood was located about two miles west of Underwood; in Marshwood there was a one-room school; WSP: "Buzz Collier was the teacher there for years. He walked from Consburg to Marshwood. Pilger's Hotel was in Marshwood. There were five or six families that lived in Marshwood. The Clark family lived there. They had ten or twelve kids."

--the school house in Underwood contained three rooms; there were six grades in the school--two per room; church services were held in the largest of the three rooms; three of the teachers in Underwood during the time when Walter Silas Powell was a student at Underwood were Lucy Fadden, Miss Milligan, and Alice Sweeney; the children of the village of Underwood attended the village school for grades 1 through 6; for junior and senior high school, the children who lived in the Olyphant section of Underwood attended Olyphant Junior High School and Olyphant Senior High School; for junior and senior high school, the children who lived in the Throop section of Underwood had the choice of attending either the Throop schools or the Olyphant schools; WSP: "Originally there was a horse and surrey, in the summer, and a horse and sleigh, in the winter, that took the kids to the streetcar line at Throop. The transportation was supplied by the coal company. In the 1920s they got a school bus. Billy Burns was the bus driver. We got the streetcar at Throop Corners. The Cordys [occupants of house number 4] sent their kids to Throop, maybe the Elvidges [occupants of house number 3] did too. They were the only ones who did. Everyone else went to Olyphant Junior High School and Olyphant Senior High School. When I was in high school, I delivered papers in Underwood."

--in the Community House there was a library, a bowling alley, a recreation hall and a couple of pool tables; WSP: "I was a pin boy at the bowling alley. They paid 75¢ for a match game, and maybe they gave you 25¢ tip"; behind the school was a baseball field

--in the Shop there was an electric shop, a machine shop, and a blacksmith shop

--upstairs over the Fire Room was the Shifting Shanty--where the miners changed their clothes

--the Erie Lackawanna Rail Road is the railroad that served Underwood; the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Rail Road, which passed nearby the village, had no connection with Underwood

THROOP, PA. This map, drawn by S. Robert Powell, of a portion of present-day Throop, PA shows the relationship of the only extant structure in the village of Underwood--the smoke stack of the Fire Room--to Throop, PA. In The Scranton Republican of Wednesday, July 29, 1936 (pp. 16, 30) was published the following article about the village of Underwood:

OLD TIMERS SWAP TALES OF EARLY HISTORY AS UNDERWOOD MARCHES TOWARD ITS DOOM

Stories Depict Village's Birth, Distinguished Career

The Village of Underwood has had its day, and a little town which had a glorious history will soon be just another "Deserted Village"—left behind in the onward march of time and progress.

The death knell has been sounded for the little community by the edict of the Pittston Company that it must be evacuated gradually, it was disclosed Monday. Three families will move out this week, their homes will be boarded up as two houses already have been closed forever.

Other residents have been ordered to move by October 1 at the latest.

And so in the dying community, the old residents swapped tales yesterday of their town which had a glorified birth and a distinguished youthful career.

Life in this wooded section began in 1912, when the Pennsylvania Coal Company built the first model coal colliery on a clearing in the valley at the foot of the Moosic Mountain. Part of the village was in Olyphant and part in Throop. The dividing line ran right down the center of the main street (which, by the way, was paved), and the miners and their families resided in Olyphant, while the officials' homes were in Throop.

A modern schoolhouse was erected in the center of the town. It was ungraded and presided over by a teacher from Olyphant or Throop. On bitter winter days when snow was several feet deep, one of the officials would send a conveyance into town to bring the teacher to her young charges. Daily the children of the town learned their ABC's and great stress was laid upon the Palmer method of penmanship, arithmetic, spelling and grammar. Students leaving the school for a graded institution of learning were very apt to find they could do compound fractions and carpet a floor, but were a little at a loss as to the capital of Georgia, or who won the French and Indian War. On Sundays, the school became a church, and visiting preachers would deliver the sermon to the older people, while a few of the townsfolk taught Sunday School for the children.

No Stores in Village

There were no stores in this infant village, which received its name when the late F. D. Underwood, then president of the Erie Railroad, visited there shortly after its completion. The townspeople were so impressed with their visitor that they resolved to name their village for him. Approximately 250 hand picked residents peopled the village. They were the miners and the officials of the company together with their families. There were no merchants, bankers, butchers or candlestick makers. Supplies had to be purchased in either Throop or Olyphant. For the convenience of the female portion of the community, a bus ran between Underwood and Throop, meeting the car line in Throop, and proceeding into Scranton, where the women might buy their frills and furbelows.

There was no doctor or nurse, the residents depending for expert medical care upon the practitioners of either of the adjoining boroughs. It was up to the women, in most instances, to render first aid to children or their menfolk hurt in the mines.

Miners' Monthly Rent $6

In the center of the town, two bath houses were built. These were a decided innovation for a mining town, and were for the use of the wives and children of the miners. The first up-to-date wash house every built for a mining town, as for the convenience of the miners. All the houses were electrically lighted from the electric plant at the colliery, and the houses were heated from the company's steam plant. A nominal rent was paid for the houses, and electricity and heat were furnished gratis. Miners paid approximately $6 per month and officials $15 per month rent.

All the streets were paved and there were sidewalks throughout the town, which for a mining village was quite something, when one recalls the abandoned railroad track that provided the main thoroughfare in the bituminous village of Dagis Mines for a great many years.

The village boasted of the first modern colliery, steel constructed, and one of the first modern playgrounds. There were garages for each official, and one large garage at the end of the street for the miners. In the early days of Underwood, Model T Fords caused almost as much consternation as a mine accident. One resident, returning from Throop, counted two hens, two ducks, one dog and a telegraph pole to his credit, in the space of a very short time.

The recreational life of Underwood was also up-to-date. There were tennis courts and a baseball field. One of the popular Saturday afternoon sports was the shooting match, in which women and men alike would vie for the prize of a fat hen or turkey.

The village of Underwood has always been linked inexorably with the anthracite industry, and is one of the few towns of its kind that had little labor trouble. The mines, at that time, were running in three shifts, day and night, and their was little difficulty between the miners and operators. Of course, there was an occasional shooting, and some upstart would take revenge for a real or fancied grievance by dynamiting an official's home, always with little physical harm to the occupants.

It was an exciting life that Underwood led during its boom stage. There was scarcely a day that there wasn't something, be it a quarrel between a miner and his wife (and the whole town knew about it at once) or something happening in or around the mines.

The history of this mining town would not be quite complete without mentioning the colliery superintendents, in whom a great deal of the authority for running the town was delegated. There were but five of them, the first having been E. C. Weichel, who was followed by William Jeffrey, Fred Beecham, Cort Snyder and Arthur Wrightson, Jr., the present superintendent.

Underwood has entered upon the final stage. By October many homes will be evacuated. And thus ends another chapter in anthracite mining.

Note: The first four lines in this column are here reprinted exactly as they appear in the July 29, 1936 newspaper article. These four lines should, perhaps, read as follows: "In the center of the town, two bath houses were built for the use of the wives and children as for the convenience of the miners. These were the first up-to-date wash houses ever built for a mining town, and were a decided innovation..."

GRAVITY RAILROAD MONUMENT, Carbondale, Lackawanna County

Located at the intersection of Terrace and Brook Streets in Carbondale is a Gravity Railroad monument. The twenty-three-line text on the plaque that is affixed to that monument reads as follows:

THE PRESIDENT, MANAGERS AND COMPANY OF THE DELAWARE AND HUDSON CANAL COMPANY COMPLETED IN 1829, THE GRAVITY RAILROAD BETWEEN CARBONDALE AND HONESDALE, IN PENNSYLVANIA. IT WAS THE SECOND RAILROAD CONSTRUCTED IN THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE. THE "STOURBRIDGE LION," THE FIRST STEAM LOCOMOTIVE USED ON THIS CONTINENT, WAS BUILT IN ENGLAND FOR THIS LINE AND MADE ITS TRIAL TRIP FROM HONESDALE ON AUGUST 8, 1829. THE FIRST SHIPMENT OF COAL OVER THE RAILROAD LEFT THE MINES ON OCTOBER 9, 1829, AND IN 1830 THE LINE WAS OPENED FOR GENERAL FREIGHT. THE FIRST PASSENGER TRAIN WAS OPERATED IN 1859.

IN 1898 OPERATION BY GRAVITY AND INCLINED PLANES WAS DISCONTINUED, AND IN 1899 THE LINE WAS CHANGED TO STANDARD GAUGE AND OPERATED THROUGHOUT ITS ENTIRE LENGTH BY STEAM LOCOMOTIVES AS AN INTEGRAL PORTION OF THE LINES OF THE DELAWARE AND HUDSON COMPANY.

THIS SHAFT WAS ERRECTED IN 1913, IN COMMEMORATION OF THESE HISTORIC EVENTS. JOHN BOLTON WAS PRESIDENT IN 1829, R. M. OLYPHANT IN 1898, AND L. F. LOREE IN 1913.

In 1830, the following book was "PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY SHARP D. LEWIS. WILKESBARRE, PENN.":

A SKETCH OF THE HISTORY OF WYOMING. BY THE LATE ISAAC A. CHAPMAN, ESQ. TO WHICH IS ADDED, AN APPENDIX, CONTAINING A STATISTICAL ACCOUNT OF THE VALLEY, AND ADJACENT COUNTRY. BY A GENTLEMAN OF WILKESBARRE.

A typescript of the complete Appendix to that book here follows:

APPENDIX.

LUZERNE COUNTY, in nearly the centre of which lies the Valley of Wyoming, is bounded N. by Susquehanna and Bradford; E. by Wayne; S. E. by Wayne, Pike and Northampton; S. by Schuylkill; S. W. by Columbia; and W. by Columbia and Lycoming. Its territory averages about 45 miles in length, from north to south, and 40 miles in breadth, from east to west, and contains about 1800 square miles. The Susquehanna river enters the County near its north-west angle, thence running a N. E. direction, and crossing the mountain ridges nearly at right angles, it breaks into the Wyoming valley near the mouth of the Lackawannock river; thence it turns and runs S. W. about 20 miles, where it breaks through the mountain out of the valley, and continues generally the same course until it passes out of the county a little below the mouth of the Nescopeck creek. It is mountainous, and the mountains run in parallel ridges in a S. W. and N. E. direction. The soil of the valleys is generally of an excellent quality, and well adapted to the growing of grain; that of the highlands, is better adapted to grazing. Perhaps one half of its whole surface may be cultivated, and the greater portion of the other half may advantageously be used for pasturage.

By the census of 1810, Luzerne county contained a population of 18,109. It then included the whole of Susquehanna, and the most populous portion of Bradford. By the census of 1820, Luzerne contained a population of 20,027; Susquehanna 9,960, and Bradford 11,554. Total population in the three counties 41,541--showing an increase in the three counties, in the ten years, of at least 100 per cent. It is believed that the census of 1830, will shew a population in Luzerne of more than 30,000.

Luzerne county is divided into twenty-six townships. Their names, alphabetically arranged, with their boundaries, and a brief description of each, follow. There are occasionally introduced some scraps of local history, which will, it is hoped, be interesting, if not to the general reader, at least, to the people of the neighborhood.

ABINGTON is bounded N. by Nicholson; E. by Greenfield; S. by Providence; S. W. by Falls, and W. by Tunkhannock. Its timber is principally beech, sugar-maple, ash, red cherry and hemlock. Tributaries of the Tunkhannock and Lackawannock, either head in, or flow through, this township, which afford many excellent mill sites; and springs of the purest water may be found on almost every hundred acres of land.

The soil is better adapted to grazing, than the growing of grain. When once cleared, white clover springs up spontaneously, and grows luxuriantly. Timothy is the principal grass cut for fodder, of which from one to two tons per acre are produced. A considerable portion of this township is settled, and some part of it pretty well cultivated. Wild lands of a good quality are selling here at from three to five dollars per acre. This township produces duces annually for market, considerable quantities of maple sugar, butter, cheese, (of a good quality,) wool, domestic flannels and linens, oats, horses, cattle and sheep.

The Philadelphia and Great Bend turnpike road passes nearly through its centre--an act has been passed to authorize the incorporation of a Company for making a turnpike from this township to Montrose, and township roads are opened in every direction. The settlers are principally from New England, and are a hardy, industrious and thriving people. School houses are erected in every neighborhood, in which schools are kept during the greater part of the year.

Abington is situate about 25 miles N. E. from Wilkes-Barre, has three post-offices, and contains about 1300 inhabitants.

BLAKELEY is bounded N. by the county of Susquehanna; E. by the county of Wayne; S. E. by Covington; S. W. Providence, and N. W. by Greenfield. This township was called Blakeley from respect to the memory of Capt. Johnston Blakeley, who commanded the U. S. sloop of war Wasp, and who signalized himself in an engagement with the British sloop Avon.

The timber in the northern part of this township, is principally beech, maple, hemlock, ash and cherry; in the southern, it is pine, oak, hickory and chestnut. The Lackawannock enters it near its N. E. angle, and flows S. W. until it intersects its south-western boundary, a distance of about 15 miles, dividing it into nearly two equal parts.

The anthracite coal formation commences near the sources of the Lackawannock, not far from Belmont, the residence of Thomas Meredith, Esquire, and extends through the whole valley of the Lackawannock, cropping out upon the hills and mountains on each side. It is every where exposed in the bottom and banks of the river, and in all the little ravines formed by its tributaries. It is mined with little expense--its strata having very little dip. The coal lands of the Hudson and Delaware Canal Company are located in this township. The rail-road from the basin at the western termination of the Lackawannock canal, terminates here; and Carbondale, a village containing several stores, mechanics shops, and well-built dwelling houses, and about 400 inhabitants, has grown up, upon a spot where two years since but a single log cabin was to be found. The Company have constructed an excellent artificial road from Carbondale to intersect the Milford and Owego turnpike upon the top of Moosic mountain, at Rix's Gap, a distance of about three miles;--the Milford and Owego turnpike passes through the northern Division of this township: the Luzerne and Wayne county turnpike passes through its eastern, and the Clifford and Wilkesbarre turnpike through its western divisions; and a company has been incorporated for making a turnpike road from Carbondale, along the Lackawannock river, to intersect the Clifford and Wilkes-Barre turnpike, a distance of about ten miles, from whence there is an excellent road to Wilkes-Barre.

A considerable portion of this township will admit of cultivation. Numerous mill sites are furnished by the Lackawannock and its tributaries. It is situate about 23 miles N. E. from Wilkes-Barre--has two post-offices, and contains a population of about 1000 souls.

BRAINTRIM is bounded N. by the county of Susquehanna; E. and S. E. by Tunkhannock; S. by the Susquehanna river, which separates it from Windham; and W. by the county of Bradford.

The river bottom in this township was originally covered with black walnut; from which it is called "Black Walnut Bottom." The hills produce pine, oak and hickory, and will generally admit of culture, and when improved, produce good crops of summer and winter grain. The Tuscarora, and the big and little Meshoppen creeks, afford excellent mill sites. A Woollen factory has been in operation for several years upon the big Meshoppen, furnishing a market for wool, and manufacturing excellent cloths for the surrounding country. The worthy proprietors, Messrs. Sterling and Parker, deserve great praise for their persevering exertions in this branch of domestic manufactures.

A considerable surplus of agricultural products, and large quantities of lumber, are annually produced, and floated down the Susquehanna to market.

Braintown is situate about 40 miles N. W. from Wilkes-Barre. The great post road from Tunkhannock to Athens, passes through it. It has a post-office, and contains 700 inhabitants.

COVINGTON, (so named in honor of Brig. Gen. Covington of the army of the United States, who fell in the battle of Williamsburg in U.C. during the late war,) is bounded E. by Wayne county, S. E. and S. by the Lehigh river, which separates it from Pike and Northampton counties; S. W. by Bear creek, which separates it from Wilkes-Barre; and N. W. by Pittston, Providence and Blakeley.

Its timber is pine, beech, maple, birch, ash and hemlock. There is a very thriving settlement in its northern division upon the lands of Henry W. Drinker, Esquire. Although its surface is very uneven and mountainous, much of it may be cultivated, and most of it will make excellent pasture, especially for sheep. The experiment of keeping sheep upon the wild and uncultivated mountains and highlands in this and Wilkes-Barre townships, during the spring and summer months, has been tried for several successive years. The result has proved most favorable. Sheep return from the mountains in the autumn, greatly improved in health, flesh and fleece.

The Philadelphia and Great Bend turnpike passes through its northern division, and the Easton and Wilkes-Barre turnpike and great stage road through its southern. Stoddardsville, at the great falls of the Lehigh, was, a few years since, a very flourishing village. It has felt the pressure of the times and is now going to decay. This is the extreme point to which the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company, are authorized to extend their improvements in the navigation of that river. The contemplated Canal or Rail Road from the mouth of the Lackawanna to the Water Gap upon the Delaware, must pass through this township. Its streams afford abundant and never-failing mill power, and its forest the choicest of timber.

It has two post-offices and contains about 500 inhabitants.

DALLAS, is bounded N. E. by Northmoreland; S. E. by Kingston and Plymouth; and S. W. by Lehman. It is called Dallas, in honor of the late Alexander J. Dallas, Esquire, of the city of Philadelphia, one of the most distinguished citizens of Pennsylvania.

Its timber is pine, oak, hickory and chestnut. A good portion of its soil will admit of cultivation, although its surface is very uneven, and part of it mountainous.

Harvey's lake, a beautiful sheet of water, surrounded with romantic scenery, and stored with the finest of trout, perch and sunfish, lies in this township, and is the resort of parties of pleasure during the summer months. The outlet of this lake, Bowman's creek, and other streams, furnish excellent mill power.

Dallas is situate about 8 miles N. W. from Wilkes-Barre, and contains about 500 inhabitants.

EATON, (so named, in honor of General William Eaton, a native of Massachusetts, and hero of Deme, in Barbara,) is bounded N. E. and E. by the Susquehanna river, which separates it from Tunkhannock and Falls; S. by Northmoreland; and N. W. by Windham. It is generally hilly, some part of it mountainous, but a good portion of it may be cultivated. It produces some agricultural products, and considerable lumber for market. The great stage route from Wilkes-Barre to Montrose, passes through it. It is situate about 25 miles north of Wilkes-Barre; has a post-office, contains about 600 inhabitants.

EXETER, is bounded N. by the Susquehanna river and Falls; E. and S. E. by Providence and Pittston; S. W. by Kingston; and N. W. by Northmoreland.

Its timber is similar to that of Dallas. Its surface is very uneven. Part of its soil is excellent, and most of it may be cultivated.

The southern angle of this township includes part of Abraham's Plains, the celebrated battle ground of the 3d July, 1778, where the whole military force of the valley, under the command of Colonels Butler and Denison, were drawn into an ambush, and literally cut to pieces by the British, Indians and Tories, under the command of the British Col. Butler, and the Indian chief, Brandt.

Near the battle ground stood a fort called Wintermoot's, after a notorious and blood thirsty tory of that name, who claimed the adjacent land. Old Wintermoot, after having done all the mischief he could to our naked and defenceless frontier settlements, removed to, and settled in Canada. After the revolution, Col. John Jenkins, an American officer, and a citizen of the valley, entered upon Wintermoot's claim, as a Connecticut settler, and remained in possession until his death in 1827. During the late war, whilst our army was in possession of the British fort Erie, and the enemy lay in its vicinity, a son of the old tory, who was a Lieut. in the British army, commanded one of the enemies advanced pickets. A volunteer from Bradford county, was stationed at one of our pickets in the neighborhood. Young Wintermoot one day left his post, and advanced alone towards our lines, for the purpose, it is presumed, of reconnoitering our position, when he was discovered at some distance by our volunteer, who was advancing alone upon a similar errand towards the enemies lines. Our volunteer was armed with his rifle, which in his hands never missed its mark. He took good aim, fired, brought young Wintermoot to the ground, and returned to the fort with the arms and commission of his enemy. Thus, after the lapse of nearly 40 years, were the iniquities of the father visited upon the son. The battle ground is within a mile of the northern extremity of the valley, and about 10 miles by the road N.E. from Wilkes-Barre. Subscriptions have recently been solicited throughout the valley for the purpose of erecting a monument to the memory of those who fell in that disastrous battle. The object is praise worthy, and it is hoped, will not fail of being accomplished.

The great stage road and turnpike from Wilkes-Barre to Montrose, passes through Exeter, and over the battle ground. Exeter has a post-office, and contains about 800 inhabitants.

FALLS, is bounded N. W. by Tunkhannock; N. E. by Abington; S. E. by Providence and Exeter; and S. W. by the Susquehanna, which separates it from Exeter, Northmoreland and Eaton.

This township derives its name from a beautiful cascade in Buttermilk falls creek; a handsome view of which, engraved from a sketch by the late Jacob Cist, Esq. formed a frontispiece for one of the numbers of the Port Folio, several years since.

Its timber is white and yellow pine, oak, hickory, chestnut, and some beech, maple and hemlock.

Its surface is very uneven—part of it mountainous; but a considerable portion of its soil produces good crops of grain and grass. It furnishes a considerable quantity of lumber annually for market. It is situate about 18 miles north of Wilkes-Barre, and contains about 500 inhabitants.

GREENFIELD, is bounded on the N. by Susquehanna county; E. and S. E. by Blakeley; S. by Providence; and W. by Abington and Nicholson.

Its timber is beech, maple, ash, red cherry and hemlock. Its soil is generally of an excellent quality—better adapted to grazing than the growing of grain. It produces annually for market, considerable surplus quantities of maple sugar, butter, cheese, (of an excellent quality,) oats, domestic flannels and linens, horses, cattle and sheep.

Chapman's lower Chrystal, and part of upper Chrystal lakes, lie within this township; and several of the branches of the Tunkhannock and Lackawanna, have their sources in it, which furnish sufficient mill sites. Wild lands of a superior quality are selling here at from three to five dollars per acre. The Milford and Owego turnpike road crosses its north-eastern angle, and the Clifford and Wilkes-Barre passes nearly through its centre, from north to south.

The flourishing village of Dundaff, in Susquehanna county, is located near its northern boundary, and the village of Carbondale is springing up like magic near its eastern border. The settlers are generally from New England—hardy, industrious and intelligent. Their prospects are very flattering; and every circumstance conspires to invite settlers. Indeed, no portion of northern Pennsylvania, presents stronger inducements, and more favorable prospects to the New England emigrants, than Greenfield, and the neighboring townships of Abington, Blakeley and Nicholson.

It is situate about 30 miles N. E. from Wilkes-Barre. It has a post office, and contains about 1200 inhabitants.

HANOVER, is bounded N. E. by Wilkes-Barre; E. and S. E. by the Lehigh and Northampton county; S. W. by Sugarloaf and Newport; and N. W. by the Susquehanna river, which separates it from Union and Plymouth.

That portion of this township which lies in the Wyoming valley, is thickly settled, and the land is of an excellent quality, and well cultivated. The mountainous part is covered with timber, consisting of white and yellow pine, oak, hickory and chestnut; some portion of which may be cultivated.

Anthracite coal is found every where in this township, from the river to near the summit of the mountain, a distance of two or three miles. The argillaceous iron stone abounds in the mountain, and it is believed of sufficient richness to justify its being worked upon an extensive scale.

In the eastern division of this township, are the eastern branch of the Nanticoke, and Solomon's creek, which are pretty good mill streams. In this latter stream, about mid-way up the mountain, and two miles from Wilkes-Barre, in which is called Solomon's Gap, is a beautiful cascade, which has long been visited as a great natural curiosity. Its wild and romantic aspect, and the delightful natural scenery around it, have, within a few years, been considerably injured by the erection of a very superior merchant mill immediately below the falls, by General William Ross, of Wilkes-Barre, who is the proprietor of this valuable water power. But the lovers of nature and of art, are still highly gratified with a visit to this romantic spot.

In its eastern division are Pine, Wright's, Terapin ponds, and Sandy creek; which empty into the Lehigh, and the sources of the Nescopeck and the big and little Wapwallopen, which flow into the Susquehanna.

Penobscot Nob, the highest peak of the mountain in this township, affords an extensive and sublime prospect. Standing upon its apex, you look down upon the surrounding country as upon a map. To the west and south-west, the valleys of the west branch, Penn, Buffalo and Bald Eagle creeks, and the majestic Allegheny, in Centre county, are plainly seen, whilst the intervening mountains dwindle in the view into gentle undulations. Here, whilst he contemplates the vast prospect around him, man feels his own littleness, and, instinctively turning to the great Author of all, exclaims, "what is man, that thou art mindful of him!"

Hanover was originally settled by emigrants from Paxton and Hanover, then Lancaster, now Dauphin and Lebanon counties, who came on under the Connecticut title in 1769, among whom was the late Judge Hollenback.

Judge Hollenback took an early and active part in the revolutionary war; was honored with a commission in the army, by the Continental Congress; participated in the conflict relative to the right of soil and jurisdiction to this part of the country; was complimented with various appointments, civil and military, by his fellow-citizens and the Government; enjoyed the abundant fruits of an active and temperate life, and died at the advanced age of 77, on the 18th of Feb. 1829.

The original settlers in this township have given place to the Germans, who now compose the principal part of the population. They are an honest, industrious and punctual people.

Hanover furnishes annually large surplus quantities of wheat, rye, Indian corn and pork, which has hitherto been transported by waggons to Easton, and laterly to Mauch Chunk, to market. The great stage route from Wilkes-Barre to Harrisburg, passes through it. Nanticoke falls is near its western angle, which will be more particularly noticed in the description of Newport. It contains about 1000 inhabitants.

HUNTINGTON, is bounded N. E. by Union and Salem; S. E. by Salem; S. W. and W. by Columbia county; and N. W. by Lycoming county.

Its timber is pine, oak, chestnut and hickory, and in its north-western angle, some beech, maple and hemlock. Its surplus products are pork, whiskey, and the various kinds of grain, which it produces in considerable quantities. Huntington and Green creeks flow through this township, and it is not known that it has been found in any considerable quantities on the west of the Susquehanna, south of this. It is a populous and thriving township. It has three post-offices, and contains 1500 inhabitants.

KINGSTON, is bounded N. E. by Exeter; S. E. by the Susquehanna river, which separates it from Pittston and Wilkes-Barre; S. W. by Plymouth and Dallas.

This township has a large portion of first rate timber. The mountain is of gentle declivity, and its soil is good, and produces abundantly. It yields annually, large surplus quantities of wheat, rye, Indian corn, pork and whiskey, which are either floated down the Susquehanna, or transported by waggons across the mountains to Easton to market.

It contains two villages—Kingston, quite upon its southern boundary, and New Troy near its northern; each of which has a post-office, and contains several stores and mechanics' shops. Kingston village is at present most flourishing. School houses are erected in every neighborhood, in which schools are kept up during the greater part of the year. They are partly supported by the annual income from lands, which were originally appropriated to that purpose by the Connecticut settlers. Had the government of Pennsylvania made similar provision for each township in the Commonwealth, its advantages, judging from all experience, and particularly from the practical effect of the Connecticut system of Common School support, from which the original settlers in Kingston took the hint, would have been incalculable. The day is past for this species of provision; but it is believed if Pennsylvania prosecutes and completes her system of internal improvement, the time is not distant, when its income will be abundantly sufficient to extinguish the debt incurred, and make ample provision for the Common School education of every child in this Commonwealth.

Anthracite coal abounds in this township, and it is not known that it has been found further to the north on the west side of the Susquehanna river. Abraham's and Toby's creeks are pretty good mill streams.

In this township are to be seen some remains of an ancient fortification, similar to those found up on the western waters. They bear the impress of an advanced knowledge of the art of war. Here also are the remains of Forty fort, to which Col. Denison, with a feeble remnant of his corps, retired after the battle of the 3d of July, 1778. It was from this fort that the Colonel was compelled to negotiate for the safety of the aged and infirm—and for the widows and orphans which that disastrous battle had made. It was here that articles of capitulation were agreed upon, and the pledge of safety given by Butler, the British commander. The preceding history tells how soon that pledge was violated.

Part of the battle ground lies in the north-eastern angle of this township. The remains of those who fell, were here collected, and hastily and "sadly" interred. The wealthy, intelligent and liberal citizens of Kingston, and of the valley, can hardly permit so interesting a spot to remain long without a "raised stone," and a "carved line," as a memorial of their fallen kindred and friends.

The great stage route from Wilkes-Barre to Montrose, passes through this township. It has three post-offices, and contains about 1500 inhabitants.

LEHMAN, is bounded N. E. by Windham and Northmoreland; S. E. by Plymouth; S. W. by Union; and N. W. by Lycoming county.

This township was organized in November, 1829; its name was intended as a tribute of respect to the late Doctor William Lehman, of the city of Philadelphia, for many years a member of the House of Representatives, chairman of the committee of internal improvement and inland navigation, and a distinguished and active friend and advocate of the great system of canal and rail road improvement, adopted in Pennsylvania, and which promises incalculable advantages to the Commonwealth. He had visited the great public works in Europe; had witnessed their operations, and returned with a mind well stored with useful information upon the subject. He died at Harrisburg during the session of the Legislature of 1828-9, whilst attending to his duties as a member. His fellow members of the House of Representatives, decreed him a tomb-stone, to be erected at the public expense.

This township is very uneven; the great range of the Allegheny passes through its north-western division; yet much of it may be cultivated. The timber is pine, oak, hickory, chestnut, with some beech, maple and hemlock. It contains several small lakes, one of which at the head of the western tributary of Harvey's creek, is here called Lehman's lake; and the tributary itself, of which the lake is the source, is called Lehman's creek. Harvey's, Bowman's and Mahopeny creeks flow through it, and afford numerous mill sites.

It has a post-office, and contains about 400 inhabitants.

NESCOPECK, is bounded N. E. by Newport; S. E. by Sugarloaf; W. by Columbia county; and N. W. by the Susquehanna river, which separates it from Salem and Union. It has some very good river bottom, but its surface is generally uneven. Big and little Wapwallopen, and the Nescopeck creek, flow through it. Nescopeck village, handsomely situated on the bank of the river, has a post-office, and several well built houses. A bridge is thrown across the Susquehanna at this place, connecting it with Berwick, a thriving village upon the west bank of the river. The Berwick and Easton turnpike road and great stage route passes through this township. Its exports consist in the various kinds of grain and timber. Its population is principally German, and amounts probably to 1300.

NEWPORT, is bounded N. E. by Hanover; S. E. by Sugarloaf; S. W. by Nescopeck; and N. W. by the Susquehanna river, which separates it from Union and Plymouth. Its timber the same as in Hanover and Nescopeck. Some part of it is thickly settled, and well cultivated; but a considerable portion of it will not admit of culture. Anthracite coal is found here in abundance. It contains bog iron ore, which has been worked to a considerable extent at a forge upon the Nanticoke, which has been long in operation.

Nanticoke falls, where a feeder dam is now being built for the North Branch canal, is at the extreme northern angle of this township. The immense amount of surplus water which this dam will furnish, and which may be applied to hydraulic purposes, its location at the outlet of the extensive valley of Wyoming—the coal and iron ore in its vicinity, with the facilities of canal transportation, are calculated to invite capitalists, and at no very distant day, to produce in its immediate neighbourhood, a populous and busy manufacturing village. It is situate about 8 miles from Wilkes-Barre; has a post-office, and contains about 1000 inhabitants.

NICHOLSON, (so named, from John Nicholson, Esq. formerly Treasurer of Pennsylvania, who early formed a settlement in the neighbourhood,) is bounded N. by Susquehanna county; E. by Greenfield; S. by Abington; and W. by Tunkhannock.

Its timber along the Tunkhannock, which flows through it, is principally pine, but its greater portion is covered with beech, maple, ash and hemlock. The soil, except upon the creek, is similar to that of Abington and Greenfield. Its exports are principally lumber. The Philadelphia and Great Bend turnpike, passes through it from north to south, dividing it into nearly two equal parts.

It is situate about 35 miles N. from Wilkes-Barre; has a post-office, and contains about 800 inhabitants.

NORTHMORELAND, is bounded N. by Eaton and the Susquehanna river, which separates it from Falls; E. by Exeter; S. by Dallas and Lehman; and W. by Windham. Its surface is very uneven—indeed mountainous; yet it contains a considerable quantity of land which will admit of culture. Its timber is similar to that of Dallas. Its principal exports at present, are lumber. It has three post-offices, and contains 800 inhabitants.

PITSTON, is bounded N. by Exeter and Providence; N. E. by Providence; S. E. by Covington; S. W. by Wilkes-Barre; and W. and N. W. by the Susquehanna, which separates it from Kingston and Exeter.

The soil of that portion of Pittston which lies in the valley is good, and some part of it of a superior quality. A great portion of it is mountainous, but much of it may be cultivated. It includes the mouth, and lower section of the Lackawannock river, a strong and never failing stream, which furnishes numerous mill sites.

Falling Springs, a great natural curiosity, near the north-western angle of this township, is precipitated from a high elevation over an almost perpendicular ledge. Its frothy track, of a snow white appearance, is seen by the traveller, as he advances to the north, at the distance of several miles. At this point the Susquehanna breaks into the valley of Wyoming.

Anthracite coal is found here in great abundance. The mouth of the Lackawanna, in Pittston, is about 10 miles N. E. from Wilkes-Barre; 23 miles S. W. from Carbondale; and 50 miles N. W. from the Delaware water gap. The construction of a canal along the Lackawannock river, and a canal or rail road from the Delaware water gap, have been authorized by law. If these improvements should be executed, and the North Branch canal extended, of which there can be little doubt, Pittston, with its immense water power, and rich coal mines, will possess advantages calculated to attract capitalists, and at no very distant period, a populous manufacturing village may be expected to grow up within its limits.

PLYMOUTH, is bounded N. E. by Kingston and Dallas; S. E. by the Susquehanna, which separates it from Wilkes-Barre, Hanover and Newport; S. W. by Union; and N. W. by Lehman and Dallas.

That part of Plymouth which lies in the valley of Wyoming, consists mainly, of the richest alluvial soil. A great part of its surface is mountainous; but its mountains are generally of gentle acclivity, and will admit of cultivation.

The Plymouth coal mines have been worked to a greater extent, and with more judgment and skill, than any other in the valley.

The Connecticut settlers, originally appropriated lands in this township, for the support of schools, from which very considerable aid to that object, is now derived. Its citizens have established an academy, or high school, in which the languages, and the higher branches of an English education are taught.

The exports of Plymouth are coal and grain.

It has two post-offices, and contains about 1200 inhabitants.

PROVIDENCE, is bounded N. E. by Blakely; S. E. by Covington; S. W. and S. by Pittston; W. by Exeter, and N. W. by Falls.

There is much good, and well cultivated land along the Lackawannock, in this township. Most of its surface is mountainous, but much of it may be cultivated.

Anthracite coal is found here in abundance, and is easily mined; the Lackawannock and the Roaring brook, furnish mill power to an indefinite extent.

The Philadelphia and Great Bend turnpike passes through its northern division, and the Luzerne and Wayne county turnpike, has its commencement there. A village called Centreville has been recently laid out upon the river, which is fast improving.

The local position of Providence, in relation to the great projected improvements in this quarter, its immense water power, extensive coal mines, and valuable timber, all combine to render its prospects of increased population and improvement, highly flattering.

Lumber, grain and whiskey, are its principal exports.

It is situate about 17 miles N. E. from Wilkes-Barre; has a post-office, and contains about 1000 inhabitants.

SALEM, is bounded N. E. and S. E. by the Susquehanna, which separates it from Nescopeck; S. W. by the county of Columbia; and N. W. by Huntington.

The greater part of its soil will admit of cultivation. The river side of this township is well settled, and pretty well cultivated. The North Branch canal passes through it. Anthracite coal has been found in its hills, but its extent has not been ascertained. The Shickshinny, Beach's, and several other streams, furnish pretty good mill power.

A post-office is established at Beach Grove, in this township, the residence of Nathan Beach, Esq. who emigrated with his family when an infant, and settled in this township in 1769. After having served his country during the revolutionary struggle, he returned and settled near the spot where his family was first located, and is believed to be the only man living who resided in the valley in 1769. He long acted as a magistrate, and represented the county for several years in the Legislature. He is now enjoying the abundant fruits of a temperate and active life.

Salem produces a considerable quantity of surplus agricultural products for market; is situate about 20 miles S. W. from Wilkes-Barre, and contains about 900 inhabitants.

SUGARLOAF, (so named from a mountain which at a distance appears shaped like the sugar loaf,) is bounded N. E. by Hanover; S. E. by Northampton county; S. by Schuylkill county; S. W. by Columbia county; and N. W. by Nescopeck and Newport.

It is very mountainous. The vallies of Nescopeck and Black creek, contain some excellent land, which is pretty generally settled, and well cultivated. Its streams afford excellent mill sites.

The Berwick and Easton turnpike and great stage road passes through it; and a canal is in contemplation across the Nescopeck summit, to unite the waters of the Lehigh and Susquehanna.

Its population is German; Exports, the various kinds of grain. Conyngham, in this township, is a thriving and prosperous village, where there is a post-office.

Sugarloaf contains 1200 inhabitants.

TUNKHANNOCK, is bounded N. by Susquehanna county; E. by Nicholson and Abington; S. E. by Falls; S. W. by the Susquehanna, which separates it from Eaton and Windham; and N. W. by Braintrim.

The soil along the Susquehanna, and the valley of the Tunkhannock creek, is productive; and the high lands, a considerable portion of which may be cultivated, are covered with valuable timber, consisting of white pine, oak, chestnut, &c. A village, advantageously situated near the mouth of the Tunkhannock, contains a post-office, several stores and mechanics' shops; and from its local position, promises to be a place of considerable importance.

It produces large quantities of lumber, and some of the products of agriculture, for market.

It is situate about 28 miles N. of Wilkes-Barre, and contains about 1200 inhabitants.

UNION, is bounded N. E. by Lehman and Plymouth; S. E. by the Susquehanna, which separates it from Newport and Nescopeck; S. W. by Salem and Huntington; and N. W. by Lycoming county. Surface very uneven. Much of it may be cultivated. Henlock's, Shickshinny and Huntington creeks, head in, or flow through this township, which afford sufficient mill power. The North Branch canal passes through it. Its timber and agricultural products are similar to those in Huntington. It contains about 800 inhabitants.

WINDHAM, is bounded N. E. by the Susquehanna, which separates it from Braintrim and Tunkhannock; S. E. by Eaton and Northmoreland; S. W. by Lehman; and N. W. by the county of Bradford.

Its surface is mountainous; yet it contains some excellent land. Most of its soil will admit of cultivation.

The big and little Mahopeny, are strong and never failing mill streams, and its forests contain the finest of timber.

It produces large quantities of lumber for market; and within a few years considerable attention has been paid to grazing, and several dairies have produced excellent cheese.

It is situate about 40 miles N. W. from Wilkes-Barre, contains a post-office, and about 100 inhabitants.

WILKES-BARRE township, is bounded N. E. by Pittston; E. by Bear creek, which separates it from Covington; S. W. by Hanover; and N. W. by the Susquehanna, which separates it from Plymouth and Kingston.

Its names is derived from the celebrated John Wilkes and Colonel Barre, who were members of the British Parliament during the revolutionary struggle, and took a decided part in favour of America, against the measures of the British ministry.

Wilkes-Barre is situated in the midst of the anthracite coal formation, and contains an inexhaustible quantity of this valuable mineral. It is believed that no portion of the valley affords greater facilities for the transportation of coal to the Susquehanna, or offers stronger inducements to capitalists to engage in the coal trade, than the coal lands in Wilkes-Barre. They extend from the river back to near the top of the mountain, a distance of about two miles. The strata are from six to twenty-four feet in thickness, and are every where exposed where intersected by the streams and rivulets from the mountain. The coal is of a brilliancy and richness equalled, and no where excelled, in the whole anthracite coal formation.

The Borough of Wilkes-Barre, in this township, is on the east bank of the Susquehanna, and is the seat of Justice for Luzerne county. It contains a court-house, jail, public offices, an academy, a meeting-house, an Episcopal church, eight or ten stores, a number of mechanics' shops, and about one hundred dwelling houses. "The Wyoming Bank of Wilkes-Barre," chartered by an act of the Legislature in 1829, has now (February 1830,) commenced its operations. From the general interest felt for its success, and from the known character of its officers, it is believed it will contribute largely towards the improvement and prosperity of the country. The number of inhabitants within the borough is probably about 1200, and about the same number in the township.

The Wilkes-Barre academy, incorporated in 1806, has deservedly acquired a high reputation. It generally contains from twenty-five to fifty students, of both sexes, pursuing the higher branches of learning. The Latin and Greek languages, are here taught, together with the mathematics, and all the various branches of an English education. This institution has produced some respectable scholars, and has prepared numerous young men to enter the northern colleges.

The Wyoming Seminary, for the education of young ladies, recently established at Wilkes-Barre, promises as extensive usefulness, as any institution of the kind in our country. Under the care of Mrs. Chapman, (the widow of the author of the preceding history,) its principal, and Miss Trott, her assistant, both highly accomplished, and well qualified instructors, this Seminary has excited an interest, and is acquiring a reputation, not usual in the infancy of institutions of the kind.

From the general healthiness of the valley, and the delightful scenery, and natural charms which it affords—from the excellent society of the village—the cheapness of living, and the competency of the instructors, the schools of Wilkes-Barre deservedly merit extensive patronage and support.

Given below is a list of "Our Soldier Dead" from Carbondale, that was published in The Carbondale Advance (Volume XXVIII, Number 52, Saturday morning, May 16, 1885, p. 3, col. 6). These soldiers, with two exceptions (see the list of "Veterans of Other Wars"), were all soldiers in the Civil War. Note that the name of "Capt Mich'l Flynn" is given at the top of the list of those persons buried in the New Catholic Cemetery, Carbondale, Pa. A photograph of the tombstone of Captain Michael Flynn in that cemetery is given in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA on page 20; a photograph of Captain Michael Flynn is given in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA on page 1.

LETTERS RECEIVED

Given below are some letters that were received prior to the institution of the Letters Received column in NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA in the May 20, 1981 issue (Volume II, Number 4):

William B. Weinstein of New York City wrote the following letter to S. Robert Powell on August 21, 1979:

Dear Mr. Powell:

I have just had the pleasure of reading Volume I, Number 1 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, an experience at once thoroughly enjoyable and educational, one which I would (and shall) recommend far and wide.

I do not know one iota about my ancestry... I am therefore enriched by understanding the extent to which a person's self-definition--yours--can be drawn from a cherished heritage, the burning bush from the family tree, as it were. Theron Orsemus Loomis and Mary Emma Squire emerge as individuals living in a specific time and place, as a result of your care both for them and the job you set out to accomplish.

Some details stand out more than others. Your lovely touch of rectifying your and your brother's names at the bottom left of Page 1. How the deacon cared for Theron Loomis. Theron's 1871 planting. Footnote #8. Young Theron's matched set of grays. The values with which Theron and Mary Emma enriched their household. How Theron "choked up" on Children's Day. The tale of the found ring--it made me wonder if I would do the same, and as I wondered I gazed at the subway platform hoping a sufficiently valuable object would present itself. The transposing of parentheses from one name to the other in the headline and left-hand picture-caption on Page 8. (I decided it was done for your amusement.) Mary Emma's proclivity toward hiking. (I wished you had specified the distance to and from West Mountain Hospital.) The outing to Mary Emma's birthplace. That she died in the 100th anniversary year of her husband's birth. "What My Lover Said." (Beautiful!) Sumac balusters.

Congratulations. Thank you.

Bernard F. Persells (16124 Ego, East Detroit, MI 48021) wrote the following letter to Donald W. Powell on June 19, 1980:

Dear Mr. Powell:

Have enclosed a picture of Lydia Fellows Bartlett taken by the Wright Photographers of Canton, Pa. supposedly before the Civil War. This copy was taken from one in the possession of Mrs. Harriet Kinney, Amery, Wis., Box 210 Rte #3. 54001. Have contacted Mrs. Kinney for more information.

Am researching the family Fellows of E. Canton, Bradford County, Pa. and have considerable information if you are interested.

The enclosed picture is of:

Lydia Fellows b. 3 June, 1803 @ Shelburne, Ma. daughter of Joseph and Lydia (Bartlett) Fellows
d. 8 Dec., 1886 @ Lyons Township, Lyon Cty., Mn
m. 30 December, 1823 @ Shelburne, Ma. Oliver E. Bartlett
b. 28 Dec., 1804 d. 24 January, 1863 - Killed in a saw mill accident at E. Canton, Pa. buried: E. Canton, Pa.
Eleven children that were all born in E. Canton, Pa..

Oliver Bartlett and his wife Lydia Fellows came to Canton, Pa. about 1825. Joseph Fellows and Lydia Bartlett his wife came to Canton a short time later. There are a number of the Fellows family buried in the cemetery at E. Canton.

Yours truly,

Mrs. Kinney also has a tin type of Joseph Armstrong of Elmira, N. Y..

Andrew Eskind, Assistant Director, Curatorial, International Museum of Photography at George Eastman House, 900 East Avenue, Rochester, New York, 14607, wrote the following letter to Donald W. Powell on June 27, 1980:

Dear Mr. Powell,

... I am delighted to receive [Volume I, Number 4] Northeastern Pennsylvania which I have examined briefly and which looks excellent. I would very much like to receive two to three additional copies as well as three to four copies of the subsequent issue on Lackawanna County [Volume II, Number 1]. In exchange I enclose a set of microfiche which I hope you have some way of reading. If you look under Pennsylvania on the geographic index you will find we have work by at least some of the photographers you list. It's a little clumsy to compare since our geographic index is not arranged county by county. If this isn't a fair trade, feel free to send me a bill for the extra issues.

If you're interested, perhaps there are areas in which we can collaborate in researching biographies of photographers.

Sincerely,

Andrew Eskind
Assistant Director, Curatorial

Fred Sherwood of Levittown, PA, wrote the following letter to S. R. and D. W. Powell on June 29, 1980:

[Dear] S. R. and D. W. Powell,

I believe you men have a great idea with "Northeastern Penna." The work that goes into it must be almost impossible to comprehend.

It is really great. Keep up the good work and I wish you much success.

Dorothy Rogers is my neighbor and I am going to visit her as soon as I can.

I was in the grade between Ruth & Jennie Winter when I went to the Jermy school.

Very Sincerely,

Shirley Ferry Bell of Scaramento, California, wrote the following letter to Donald W. Powell on September 21, 1980:

Dear Mr. Powell,

Needless to say, I was delighted with the last issue [of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA] of 20 August [Volume II, Number 1] which had the information on my great grandfather, Charles Marsh Ferry. I am enclosing an order blank for two more issues. I want to send one to our son who is a Lt. Cdr. F-14 radar officer currently on the aircraft carrier Eisenhower somewhere in the Indian Ocean. I think he will enjoy it...

I am looking forward to the February issue [of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, Volume II, Number 3] with the information on Maplewood Cemetery as I am hoping that Elizabeth Roe Rust will be listed. Today, at the semi-annual pedlar's fair at the little rustic town of Folsom east of here, I bought a daguerreotype of a beautiful young lady in a gown of the fashion of the time that S. S. Benedict & Charles [Marsh Ferry] were in the studio [photography] business. Will just have to pretend it's Elizabeth, I guess, as I have no pictures of them. It is in a case which at one time was a beautiful case. It has mother of pearl inlaid into the cover.

I hope to visit personally some day, but in the meantime I am

Most sincerely,

Bernard F. Persells (16124 Ego, East Detroit, MI 48021) wrote the following letter to Donald W. Powell on October 12, 1980:

Dear Mr. Powell:

Am doing a book on the genealogy of the Persell - Persells family and am trying to locate a maternal member's burial place. Phoebe Eliza Matter (Horth) died somewhere in Pa. 6 May, 1888. Why I am writing you is her husband William Matter was a photographer and if you should happen upon this name, I would appreciate the town he was from. Any information is greatly appreciated.

Yours truly,

[signed] Bernard F. Persells

Phoebe Eliza Horth was the 1st wife of John R. Persells
William Matter was the 2nd husband of Phoebe Horth Persells

Alice L. Hubbard of Silver Spring, MD, wrote the following letter to Silas R. Powell on March 25, 1981:

Dear Sir:

Your last issue [Volume II, Number 2] on the Griswold family is most interesting. You are doing a marvelous job with this publication...

Sincerely,

[signed] Alice L. Hubbard

Given below are letters from readers who have requested information on various individuals and/or families. Can any of the readers of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA furnish these readers with the information they request?

1. Mrs. Mildred M. Franklin (740 N. Woodland Boulevard, Apt. 621, DeLand, FL 32720), in her letter of May 21, 1980, states: "I am doing research on the James Timothy Meeker families and the Israel H. Henry families who lived mainly in Columbia, Luzerne, and Sullivan Counties. I do have considerable information on both families but am lacking some vital information."
2. Mrs. Wilma C. Wilsea (186 N. Bloomfield Road, Canandaigua, NY 14424), in her letter of April 5, 1980, states: "I am interested in this [subscribing to NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA] since my father-in-law, Clair John Wilsea, was born in 1888 in Scranton, PA--his father, Clarence Wilsea, was a railroad man and was killed in a train wreck about 1898-1900 (train went into Susquehanna River)--he was scalded to death; Clair, my father-in-law, was left alone at age 10 or 11, as his mother had already passed away--he was placed in a home (do not know if an orphanage or what). Also, my husband's grandfather's picture supposedly was hung in the respective railroad station (name of railroad unknown) in Scranton, PA for quite some time. If I could ever find verification of the above, I would be so happy... Thank you for your time and consideration in this matter."
3. Mrs. Elizabeth M. Nelson (3906 Council Crest, Madison, WI 53711), in her letter to the Editor of October 3, 1980, states: "The ancestor I am searching for is Johanna or Hannah Santee or Senti who married John (Johannes) Arnold b. ca. 1760 and died ca. 1841 in Hamilton Twp., Monroe County, Pa. I've a copy of his will, Jan. 15, 1840, and of its codicil, 1841. I have tried to find Johanna's parentage--secured the will of a John Santee of Nazareth Twp., Northampton Co. but there is no mention of a daughter Johanna. His will was signed Nov. 2, 1805 so I have still no lead on the Senti or Santee parents of Johanna. In John Arnold's will, their children are named--one being their daughter Maria Magdalena (Molly) who married J. George Murphy ca. 1802. Mary Magdalena was born 13 Jan. 1785 & died 3 March 1859. J. George Murphy was born 15 Sept. 1780 and died 6 April 1865. They are buried in the Old Arnold Cemetery 1 1/2 miles north of Saylorsburg, Monroe Co. J. George's and Maria Magdalena's son Abraham was my great grandfather. I've a curiosity about the Santee family and their nationality etc. & would like to find Johanna or Hanna. John Arnold's father was Conrad Arnold, b. ca. 1735 and d. 1791 in Hamilton Twp., Northampton, now Monroe Co., PA. Thank you for any 'lead'--you were kind to offer."
4. Robert B. Reynolds (R. D. 1, Box 358, Pittston, PA 18643) asked the following questions in his letter of January 7, 1981 to Silas Robert Powell: "One of my ancestors Harvey and Emily Abbott Reynolds arrived in Carbondale about 1851. According to the Census Records of 1860 they lived in Carbondale Twp.; the 1870 Census shows Carbondale City and the 1880 Census Carbondale Township. Family Records indicate that they lived in the Jermy-Mayfield area. Can you advise which would most likely be correct? Both Harvey and Emily were buried in the Sunnyside Cemetery, Mayfield, but due to mine caving in the area, the bodies of the entire cemetery were moved about 7 May 1931 to the Valley View Cemetery at Montdale. Their [Harvey and Emily Abbott Reynolds] dates of death are unknown. Can you advise if the records of burial in the old Sunnyside Cemetery would be available anywhere? Montdale Cemetery Association only has the records of the removals, no other dates... Any assistance you can offer will be appreciated."

WAYNE COUNTY HISTORICAL SOCIETY

MUSEUM 810 MAIN STREET - P. O. BOX 446

HONESDALE, PENNSYLVANIA 18431

On Thursday, May 28, 1981, the Jason Torrey Land Office Building, the oldest commercial brick building in Honesdale, PA, was moved from the site on Park Street on which it was built (property presently owned by the Wayne County Memorial Hospital) to the grounds of the Wayne County Historical Society, Main Street, Honesdale, PA. Mrs. Charles Hames of Hawley, PA, a staff member of the Wayne County Historical Society Museum, wrote the following two poems about the moving of the Jason Torrey Land Office Building:

A TRIBUTE TO BYRON

by Alma E. Hames

When we talked of moving the Torrey building,
Little did we know what a task it would be,
Someone had to be in charge of it all,
Byron White volunteered, so of course, it was he.

It surely took a great deal of planning,
During the day, and often into the night,
Everything had to be planned in advance,
And it was all done by a guy named White.

He grabbed the old bull right by the two-horns,
And he promised to give us a good fight,
Most of us knew things were in good hands
Under the determination of Byron White.

He plowed right ahead, not afraid to make waves,
He argued when he knew he was right,
And sometimes he had much opposition,
But that made no difference to Byron White.

He worked right along with the rest of the crew,
Down in the hole and on the roof, what a sight,
We'd see him covered with mud, sweat and cement,
And at the end of the day, a tired Byron White.

Of course many times he became angry,
And many times he was really up tight,
Because numerous frustrations kept popping up
To make more worry and work for Byron White.

His dear wife was a Torrey widow,
I felt truly sorry for her in her plight,
Because she didn't see much of her husband,
She never knew if he was really all right.

He did a great job, we all do agree,
And we thank him for all that he's done,
He fought the fight like a good matador,
It was a tough battle but he won.

He gave of his talent, material and time,
He gave much more than most of us know,
When he takes on a job, he gives it his best,
And Byron, you put on a great show.

Now Byron, we hope you'll stay well and strong,
Because if there's ever another project to do,
You've done such a great job on this one,
You can count on our calling on you.

THEY SAID IT COULDN'T BE DONE

by Alma E. Hames

They said it couldn't be done - but we did it,
We have every right to be proud,
The Torrey building has been moved at last,
And we're now sitting on number nine cloud.

They said it couldn't be done - but we did it,
They said it would just fall apart,
But we knew very well we could do it,
We just needed money, and had to have heart.

They said it couldn't be done - but we did it,
Through a lot of blood, sweat and tears,
It's an undertaking we're sure to remember,
We'll remember for the next fifty years.

They said it couldn't be done - but we did it,
What a thrill to see it come into view,
Our Main Street was filled with excitement,
Were people not interested? Just a few.

They said it couldn't be done - but we did it,
Jason Torrey - wherever you are,
Your name will long be remembered,
Because we hitched your wagon to our star.

From the Editor:

The author of this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, S. Robert Powell, synthesizes herein a great deal of information about (1) the Clinton Township Pioneer Days that were celebrated in the period 1915-1942 and in 1978, and (2) the Clinton Center Baptist Church. In addition, he presents, in the Genealogical and Local History Notes in this issue, a great many data about Clinton Township: township histories, family histories, cemetery inscriptions, personal recollections by township residents, photographs of prominent citizens of the past and of their equally prominent descendants, a detailed account of the seventy-fifth annual Griswold Reunion.

Two previous issues of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, both of which were written by S. Robert Powell, are primarily about Clinton Township.

Volume I, Number 1 (August 15, 1979)

A Portrait of Theron Orsemus Loomis (1848-1911) and Mary Emma Squire (1854-1948) of Clinton Township, Wayne County, and Carbondale, Lackawanna County, Pennsylvania.

Mary Ann, Lucinda, and Mehitabel Muzzey. Daguerreotype, in the collection of Mabel Bunting, South Canaan, PA; copy print by Donald W. Powell. The Muzzey family was one of the pioneer families of Clinton Township, Wayne County. In about 1825, Pliny and Mary (Draper) Muzzey and family (their three daughters are shown at left) moved to Clinton Township from the state of Massachusetts, and bought the farm that in 1886 was owned by Hiram Pease Loomis and his wife, Laura Griswold. Mary Ann Muzzey married Bigelow; Lucinda Muzzey married Hiram Norton; Mehitabel Muzzey married Erastus W. Loomis (see biographical sketch and line engraving of Erastus W. Loomis on page 27 of this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA). Among the other early photographs in the collection of Mabel Bunting are the following: (1) Edwin Muzzey and His Wife, Mary Otis. Daguerreotype; (2) Lucinda (Muzzey) Norton. Daguerreotype; (3) Hiram Norton. Daguerreotype; (4) Sarah (Draper) Gates. Ambrotype on light amethyst; Sarah (Draper) Gates is the twin sister of Mary (Draper) Muzzey; (5) Roswell Norton, Age 21, and Mary Norton, Age 11. Ambrotype on light amethyst; (6) Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Muzzey. Ambrotype with back painted black; (7) Netty and Natty Muzzey. Ambrotype with back painted black. Netty and Natty Muzzey are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Muzzey. Presented in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA are (1) the history of the Clinton Township Pioneer Day celebrations that were held in the period 1915-1942 and in 1978, (2) the history of the Clinton Center Baptist Church, and (3) Genealogical and Local History Notes that are primarily about Clinton Township, Wayne County.

CLINTON TOWNSHIP, WAYNE COUNTY, PA: PIONEER SETTLERS

The history of the pioneer settlers of Clinton Township that is presented in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA on pages 1-13 is structured in terms of the Pioneer Day celebrations that were held in Clinton Township in the period 1915-1942 and in 1978. In writing this history, we have relied extensively on the large quantity of information about the pioneer settlers of Clinton Township that was either written by or collected by the late Lois Tryphenia (Norton) Curtis, photographs of whom are given in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA on pages 7 and 26. Were it not for the exemplary historical work in that regard by Lois Curtis, the history of the pioneer settlers of Clinton Township that is given below could not, therefore, have been written.

IDEA FOR PIONEER DAY CONCEIVED

At the ceremonies at which was unveiled the monument in the Clinton Center Baptist Church Cemetery "IN MEMORY OF THE EARLY SETTLERS OF THIS [Clinton] TOWNSHIP AND THE FOUNDERS AND MINISTERS OF THE CLINTON BAPTIST CHURCH," it was decided to hold a "Pioneer or Old Home Day" each year in Clinton Township. This we learn from the article, "PIONEER DAY AT CLINTON CENTER AS RECORDED IN THE WAYNE INDEPENDENT THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1916," about the Pioneer Day celebration that was held in 1916. The first paragraph of that article reads as follows:

At the dedication of the monument, unveiled on August 27, 1915, at Clinton to the memory of the early settlers of that township and the early ministers of the Clinton Baptist Church, it was resolved to meet each year to honor the memory of the "pioneers of Clinton Township." In accordance with that decision such a gathering was held at the Clinton Centre Church on Sept. 1st [1916]. The ladies of the Congregation served dinner at 12 o'clock which seemed to occupy the undivided attention of a large number for an hour or more.

SHELDON NORTON AND EARL MELVILLE PECK

The originator of the idea of Pioneer Day was Sheldon Norton. This we learn (1) from the newspaper article, "CLINTON CENTER'S PIONEER DAY," that was published in The Wayne Independent on September 9, 1922, about the celebration that took place on September 4, 1922. The fifth paragraph of that newspaper account reads as follows:

Resolutions were passed that expressions of regret be sent to Rev. James Rainey, a former loved and respected pastor, Sheldon Norton, the originator of "Old Home Day" and to Mrs. Laura Loomis, expressing our sorrow that they were unable to be present, and tendering our good wishes for the future; also to Rev. George S. Wendell, with our sympathy in the trials they are enduring in the severe illness of their daughter.

and (2) from the newspaper article, "Pioneer Day At Clinton Center," that was published in The Wayne Independent in September 1935 about the Pioneer Day celebration held that year. The first three paragraphs of that newspaper account read as follows:

Twenty years ago [1915] through the instrumentality of Sheldon Norton and E. M. Peck of Carbondale, a conglomerate rock weighing about six tons was placed in the cemetery at Clinton Center and on that huge stone is a bronze tablet listing the names of the early settlers as well as the early members and pastors of the Clinton Center church.

And on that memorable day, about 400 people from the immediate vicinity and near-by towns, gathered to witness the unveiling and dedication of this monument. At the cemetery a brief history of the first settlers and the early ministers was given by the chairman, E. M. Peck. [A fragment of this text by E. M. Peck is extant.] After repairing [to] the church auditorium Sheldon Norton gave an interesting and instructive address on his boyhood recollections of these pioneer settlers.

At his [Sheldon Norton's] suggestion, it was voted to set apart a day each year for meeting to commemorate the early settlers. It has been subsequently celebrated, on Labor Day [at Clinton Center Baptist Church] for the last two decades. [Beginning in 1920, Pioneer Day celebrations were held on Labor Day. Before 1920, a fixed date for the annual celebration was not established: in 1916 Pioneer Day was celebrated on Friday, September 1, for example.]

The complete text of the inscription on the bronze plaque on this monument is given on page 3, column 1, of this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

Pioneer Day, Clinton Township, August 27, 1915. Enlarged copy print, collection of Mrs. Mildred (Rude) Thomas, Carbondale, PA. Shown here, at the north side of the Clinton Center Baptist Church, are some of the four hundred persons who attended the Pioneer Day celebration in Clinton Township on August 27, 1915. On that day, the six-ton flint conglomerate stone monument "IN MEMORY OF THE EARLY SETTLERS OF THIS [Clinton] TOWNSHIP AND THE FOUNDERS AND MINISTERS OF THE CLINTON BAPTIST CHURCH" in the Clinton Center Baptist Church Cemetery was dedicated. That monument can be seen in the photograph given at the top of this page. The American flag that draped that monument at the ceremony at which it was dedicated was removed by the oldest descendant of the pioneers in attendance at the dedication ceremony, Laura (Griswold) Loomis, who was born in Clinton Township on 07-07-1826, and who died in Clinton Township on 03-25-1924. On 05-20-1846, at Aldenville, PA, Laura Griswold was married to Hiram Pease Loomis, who was born in Mount Pleasant Township on 12-09-1819, and who died in Clinton Township on 08-27-1900. Laura (Griswold) Loomis is shown in this photograph: of the two women seated in chairs in the front row, she is the one on the right. Readers who can identify any of the other persons shown in this photograph are asked to write to S. Robert Powell, Post Office Box 161, Carbondale, PA 18407-0161. Contained in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA is a history of the Pioneer Day celebrations that were held in Clinton Township in the period 1915-1942, and in 1978. Virtually all of the information that has come down to us about those Pioneer Day celebrations, which were instituted by Earl Melville Peck and Sheldon Norton, was gathered and preserved, be it known, by the late Lois Tryphenia (Norton) Curtis (1894-1981).

PIONEER DAY OFFICERS

The first president of Pioneer Day was Earl Melville Peck, the first vice president was W. E. Rude. Following the death of Earl Melville Peck, on November 19, 1923, W. E. Rude was elected President, and Earl Melville Peck's son, Emmons L. Peck, was elected vice-president. This information about the presidents and vice presidents of Pioneer Day was learned from the minutes of the 1941 Pioneer Day celebration. Contained in those minutes is a text entitled, "In Appreciation," written by Lois (Norton) Curtis. The first paragraph of that text reads as follows: "Twenty-six years ago 'Pioneer Day' was first established with E. M. Peck as President and W. E. Rude as Vice Pres. After the passing of E. M. Peck to his eternal Home in 1923, W. E. Rude was elected Pres. and Mr. Peck's son, Emmons L. Peck, was elected Vice Pres." The first secretary-treasurer of Pioneer Day was Lois Norton Curtis, who, be it known, was secretary-treasurer for all of the Pioneer Day celebrations held in Clinton Township. We are all very much indebted to Lois (Norton) Curtis, not only for having recorded virtually all of the information that is known about Clinton Township's Pioneer Days, but also for having recorded, gathered and preserved a vast quantity of information about the history of Wayne County.

PIONEER DAY: AUGUST 27, 1915

Among the historical documents collected by Lois T. (Norton) Curtis is a one-page, typewritten text that was--or was perhaps intended to be--a newspaper article about the 1915 Pioneer Day celebration. It is from a xerographic copy of that one-page text in Lois Curtis' document archive that S. Robert Powell typed the copy that is given below.

1915

BRIEF HISTORY OF EARLY SETTLERS AND MINISTERS.

(Flint Memorial Dedicated)

Nearly four hundred (400) men, women and children attended the dedication exercises of the monument erected in honor of the early settlers of Clinton township and the founders and ministers of Clinton Baptist Church, on August 27, at the Clinton Church.

A bountiful dinner was served by the ladies of the society, at noon.

The monument is a natural flint conglomerate from the mountain west of the Church, weighing about six (6) tons, standing on a concrete foundation, all costing nearly ($150.00) One Hundred and Fifty dollars.

The following are the names inscribed on the bronze tablet:

IN MEMORY OF THE EARLY SETTLERS OF THIS TOWNSHIP AND THE FOUNDERS AND MINISTERS OF THE CLINTON BAPTIST CHURCH

NORTON	REV. ELIJAH PECK
GRENNELL	REV. JOHN SMITZER
NORTH	REV. HORACE JONES
WEST	REV. CHAS. H. HUBBARD
GAYLORD	REV. ALEX. SMITH
GRISWOLD	REV. CHARLES A. FOX
PECK	REV. HENRY CURTIS
Mc MULLEN	REV. GEO. V. WALLING
LOOMIS	REV. JOSEPH CURREN
LEDYARD	REV. JAMES SPENCER
BUNTING	REV. D. P. PURDON
SAUNDERS	REV. B. B. BUNTING
DAVENPORT	REV. J. R. REMSEN
ARNOLD	REV. JAMES RAINEY

ERECTED 1915

The Chairman of the monument committee, E. M. Peck, after speaking of the consummation of the plans for the memorial called on Mrs. Laura Loomis, a daughter of Francis Griswold, and the oldest living descendant present (About eighty nine) to remove the flag of the United States with which the monument was veiled.

The Prayer was offered by Rev. Geo. S. Wendell, pastor of the Baptist Church of Honesdale which was followed by an offering of laurel wreaths by young girls and boys, fourteen (14) in number, representing the fifth and sixth generations of the families named on the tablet. Laurel well becomes a victor, and the early families were victorious in more senses than one, over the wilderness, their own lives and in the influence they exerted over the lives of the oncoming generations.

A brief history of the first settlers of our township, and the families and ministers was given by the chairman which follows:

Coming together as we do in memory of the early settlers of our township, and the families and ministers of the Clinton Baptist Church, causes us to try to recall the conditions of those days when this country was nearly a wilderness.

We do well to honor their names by erecting this lasting and natural monument which represents their rugged and stable characters.

[The remainder of E. M. Peck's brief history of the early settlers of Clinton Township and the founders and ministers of the Clinton Baptist Church has not come down to us.]

The following remarks about the 1915 Pioneer Day celebration are from an article entitled, "Pioneer Day At Clinton Center," that was published in The Wayne Independent in 1935:

And on that memorable day [August 27, 1915], about 400 people from the immediate vicinity and near-by towns, gathered to witness the unveiling and dedication of this monument [the monument "IN MEMORY OF THE EARLY SETTLERS OF THIS TOWNSHIP AND THE FOUNDERS AND MINISTERS OF THE CLINTON BAPTIST CHURCH"]. At the cemetery a brief history of the first settlers and the early ministers was given by the chairman, E. M. Peck. [A fragment of this text has come down to us.] After repairing [to] the church auditorium Sheldon Norton gave an interesting and instructive address on his boyhood recollections of these pioneer settlers. [This is the Sheldon Norton text that is given below.]

On the first Pioneer Day, August 27, 1915, Sheldon Norton gave his boyhood recollections. The text of those recollections has come down to us. That text was preserved by Lois T. (Norton) Curtis, and it is from a xerographic copy of Lois Curtis' typed copy of those recollections that the author typed the text that is given below. The text of Sheldon Norton's boyhood recollections that has come down to us is entitled "CLINTON PIONEERS THEIR MEMORY VENERATED BY E. M. PECK Pioneer Day Sept. 7, 1915." This text was not written by E. M. Peck. The first and the final paragraphs are written in the third person--most probably written by the person who typed this copy of Sheldon Norton's recollections--and the remainder of the text is written from the first-person perspective of Sheldon Norton. The date on the typed copy that belonged to Lois Curtis, in addition, is in error: Pioneer Day in 1915 was on August 27. The date, September 7, 1915, is probably the date that an account of the 1915 Pioneer Day celebration was published in The Wayne Independent.

In his recollections, Sheldon Norton speaks of the following Clinton Township pioneer families: Peck, Stanton, Stearns, McMullen, Norton, Grennell, Gaylord, Sanders, Griswold. In addition, he refers to the following persons by name: Asa Stanton, Deacon Davenport, Squire West, Alva Norton, Sylvester North, Deacon Rufus Grennell, Reuben Peck, Elder Curtis, Ensign McMullen, Brother Randall, Horace Griswold, David Sanders, Sidney Norton, Milo Gaylord, Samuel Lee, Deacon E. K. Norton, Francis Griswold, Mrs. Francis Griswold, Mrs. Horace Griswold, Mrs. Davenport, Mrs. North, Mrs. Alva Norton, Mrs. Reuben Peck, and Mrs. Sheldon Norton.

CLINTON PIONEERS THEIR MEMORY VENERATED

by Sheldon Norton

Pioneer Day, August 27, 1915

The boyhood recollections of Sheldon Norton of Carbondale, a son of Deacon E. K. Norton, an honored member of Clinton Church, contained most interesting references to pioneer settlers.

The elk's horns on Asa Stanton's front porch are one of the land marks in my boyhood days and I have never passed the house in all of the years that are gone without looking for them. The day dreams of hunting elk and Indians were many and the camp fires that have blazed in my imagination are not a few. Was there ever born in a country where the forests were being cut down, a boy that did not long for a frontier life and to be a second Daniel Boone or a Kit Carson?

As I try to write this story of what I saw, or rather how men and things looked to me, there is unraveled a panorama of moving pictures of men and scenes that run so fast that they seem to blend into one picture, but when I think that more than sixty years have passed away and of the thousands of men and pictures I have seen, it is hard to separate the pictures and not look at the past from the stand point of one who has nearly reached the age of three score and ten.

Clinton was settled by people from Massachusetts and Connecticut with the addition of some from Mount Pleasant which was settled at an early period. Pecks, Stantons, Stearns, McMullens, moved from Mt. Pleasant. The Nortons, Grennells, Gaylords, Sanders and Griswolds were from Massachusetts and Connecticut and these with the families from Mt. Pleasant were the ones who came into what then was a wilderness of hemlock, beech and maple and cleared the land so that they could provide food and clothing for themselves and families and to make homes. We often think of the church as being the only divine institution that the all wise Creator has given man but the God given home was established ages before the church and a godly home is yet God's best earthly gift to man and these men were home builders and were the type that built homes when truth, integrity, industry and thrift were taught and the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of man were the controlling principles of their lives.

The Clinton Church was not only the religious center but the social center also. I remember the old church or meeting house but dimly. I well remember the storm that destroyed it as the hail stones broke the windows in our home and I was so frightened that I went behind the stove. I also remember Elder Curtis holding services in the grove back of the present meeting house after the old building was destroyed by the cyclone. Elder Curtis to me, was a man to whom God had given the keys of Heaven and could shut or open them as he thought best. As for the sermons, I have no remembrance of them only as they increased my ideas as to his power to punish sin and reward good. With all my boyish fears, I never for a moment doubted that but Elder Curtis was just and whatever he said must be so and right. The prayer meetings were a pleasure to me. I listened more as a lover of music does to the tones and as I close my eyes and look back, I can hear the tones of Bro. Randall, Deacon Davenport, Horace Griswold, David Sanders, Sidney Norton, Milo Gaylord, Deacon Grennell, Samuel Lee and my Father. The prayers were all more or less scriptural but were a true and beautiful tribute to the lives of the men who were making them. Time will only allow me to mention a few of the men who impressed me most, and Francis Griswold stands out as a character that for his time is typical of the men of today who in common language are called captains of industry. He was always up and doing and his energy and push made others work also. What Clinton owes to Francis Griswold we can not tell. He was a power for good in the community not only for its material well being but of its moral and spiritual growth.

Deacon Davenport was a man who impressed me with his dignity and responsibility. What he did could not be questioned because the law as laid down in the book was thus and so.

Deacon Davenport was a man whom everybody respected as it was easy for us boys to see he lived as the law dictated. As his words were governed by the law so was his life. He was a godly man and his words and actions always showed his reverence for the Great Creator.

Squire West was a great reader and probably the most scholarly of any of the early settlers. He was somewhat of a Dr. and I can remember his old fashioned turn keys with which he pulled teeth. I am of the opinion that he very often broke the jaws of his patients. The characteristic of Squire West was his New England thrift. He was never known to forget to save. It is told that when butter was low he would tell his household they must butter thin as they must sell all the butter they could to get money and when butter was high they must butter thin as they must sell as they could while times were good. We may laugh at the thrift of these olden times, but it was New England thrift that has built our railroads and cities and provided the money to make the wheels go around so that the common people would have work and food.

Alva Norton was one of the original settlers, and was well known in the community as he was not noted for keeping his opinions to himself and was rather radical and prided himself on being a first comer, was not on very friendly terms with some other residents of the place. He was a greater reader and talker than he was a worker. He was not a believer in team work unless he was the team and driver. He was a good man as far as his character was concerned. He was the land surveyor for the community and knew all the corners of the farms and able to settle many questions relating to land lines.

Sylvester North was our near neighbor for years. He was a man everybody liked and he made his home and farm by the work of his own hands. I can well remember when he was telling us boys how worthless and shiftless we were, his eyes would twinkle and he would tell us to go home and go to work. As a boy I often went to his home to dig horse radish and I think Mr. North's words about people and general affairs were somewhat like horse radish, they gave spice and flavor to the life of the settlement. He was ever ready to help anyone in trouble and always carried a hoe when on the highways and for years kept the loose stones out of the roads.

Deacon Rufus Grennell was a true product of the times. He was a man who read and remembered what he read and was the most wonderful Bible student I ever met. He told me he had read the Bible from cover to cover twelve times when he was 14 years old. He was a man of strong opinions but he never forced his opinions on others. In fact he never said very much. When he did say anything he used to put it in very few words. I remember him as one of the least talkative men I ever knew. I have often heard him remark to others "Dwell in the land and surely thou shall be fed." He was of the type of men who have been the back bone of the progress of this County in moral and religious growth. I remember being at a meeting where some young man who was not what he should be was making a long and tearful confession and making promises that he would never more go from the true path again. The Deacon was there and as the young man took his seat, the old Deacon who was seated near the pulpit arose slowly and turned around and calling the young man by name, said, "The devil is not dead yet."

He resumed his seat and that was all he had to say. I remember as a boy playing around his shingle shop, when a young man came to see him and as he talked I finally heard him say he thought he had a call from God to preach. The Deacon did not say anything for some time but kindly calling the man by name said "It might be better for you to go home and hoe potatoes as it might have been some other voice you heard."

The Deacon was very careful not to say anything against others, but at the same time would not vary from the truth.

I remember being out near the road when a man driving a horse and buggy seeing the Deacon stopped and asked him in regard to a man living in the community. Now as the man he asked about was "Good Provider" for his family, he was looked upon by his neighbors as having come very close to committing the unpardonable sin. The Deacon looking at the man answered his question about the man's character by saying, "So and so has one of the best women in the town for a wife." It seems I can even now hear the man laugh as he drove away. The Deacon believed in work and if a man worked he would have food and clothes. The quality of the food never bothered him. Mush and milk or roast turkey were all the same.

Reuben Peck was our neighbor for years and was one of our boyish heroes. Uncle Reuben was ever active in the church and town, no man had a warmer heart nor was a more earnest Christian ever ready to help in every good work. But what made Uncle Reuben great was his skill in handling an ox team. He was an expert with a yoke of oxen and would make them pull more and work harder than any one else and his oxen seemed to know that when they were in the yoke they had to do their level best. Uncle Reuben was in his glory when he had driven the grab hooks and gave the word his oxen settled themselves into the yoke and the roots, dirt and ashes would fly as they took their way to the heaps. Uncle Reuben did not train his oxen to work by whispering or pointing the finger. He had a strong pair of lungs and used them when he was driving oxen. You could tell if you were anywhere within 1/2 mile whether he was at work with the oxen.

One time when Uncle Reuben was a young man, he had a pair of 5-year old steers that were the apple of his eye and while clearing land always bragged about them. The two men who were helping him were Orin Griswold and James McMullen and they made a bet with Uncle Reuben that they could put in place all day long any log that he could draw up to the log heap without the use of skids or hand spikes, that is with nothing but their hands and they did it. All were large logs.

But to us boys, Uncle Reuben was in his glory when he was in a contest with some other men as to which had the oxen who could pull the most. I remember at the County Fair when my father had a yoke of oxen driven by my Uncle Ensign McMullen, who was also a crack ox teamster.

As my father's team pulled until they could not move the load, Uncle Reuben hooked on his team and pulled the load about 100 ft. farther. He then took my father's team and hooked them to the load and when they heard the trumpet tones of his voice, they nearly ran away with the load and Uncle Reuben won the prize for father's team and the two Deacons came very near to a quarrel as father insisted that the prize was Uncle Reuben's and not his.

What boy who was born and lived in the country in those days can forget the winter snows and the joy of breaking roads? I can now see the old long wood shed with 8 or 10 yoke of oxen and Uncle Reuben and Uncle Ensign in command as they drove the oxen keeping them on the road and we boys were part of the time in the sled and part running over the drifts and it seems as I write I can hear the clang of the chains and the clashing of horns and over all the voices of the two men as they "Haw" and "Gee" and plow the way through, opening the road so we could go out and in.

Uncle Reuben is gone, the ox team are a thing of the past, the grand forests of natural growth are gone, and naught is left but the hills and valleys and fields where Uncle Reuben struggled to open up the County.

The above sketches are typical of the other people of the town at the time and did what they could and the world was better for their living in it. Here comes the vision of the women pioneers in the settlement of the Beech Woods.

It would take a ready write to write the story of these women's lives and what they did and suffered in the labor and loneliness of their homes as they went on with their daily work. They were not like the lilies of the field that toil not neither do they spin, for their life was one unending round of labor. They not only toiled but they spun. They were also weavers, cooks, sewing women and mothers. They had none of what we now call the necessities of housekeeping, with only an open fire to cook and warm the house.

The thought that comes to me, if we would only try to compare their surroundings with ours of the present, try to see the log cabin with the cracks stopped with moss and mud and the few rough articles of furniture and the cold they must have endured with the dark forest surrounding them with no neighbors near and only a path from one cabin to another, with the woods filled nightly with the dismal howling of the wolves. Picture for yourself, if you can, the silence of the daily life and then think of what you now have, and then raise your hands to the God of creation and pour out a heart felt prayer of thanks that these women lived and have shown the present generation what can be done.

We build grand monuments to men who have done great things, and ask what is this that so far transcends the monuments of man. And then comes the thought, man has forgotten the love, labor, sorrows and prayers of the noble women of the past.

These were the mothers of the land. The women of the older class as I remember them were: Mrs. Francis Griswold, Mrs. Horace Griswold, Mrs. Davenport, Mrs. North, Mrs. Alva Norton, Mrs. Reuben Peck, and my grandmother, Mrs. Sheldon Norton, afterwards Mrs. Rufus Grennell.

It always seemed to me when I was a small boy that here was the story of a life of love for others written on their faces and it was years afterward before I understood what that blended look was. So to my boyish fancy these old and care worn women were beautiful.

As we talk of the past we stop and think they are gone, they are only sleeping, their work is still going on as no noble dead ever dies.

Rev. Geo. S. Wendell dismissed the Congregation.

PIONEER DAY: SEPTEMBER 1, 1916

On the second Pioneer Day, September 1, 1916, Wilford M. Peck of Los Angeles, CA, delivered an address, entitled "CHARACTERISTICS OF CLINTONIANS. Tribute to their memory 1916," in which he spoke of some of the early families of Clinton Township. The text of that address has come down to us; it was preserved by Lois T. (Norton) Curtis, and it is from a xerographic copy of Lois Curtis' copy of that address that the author typed the copy of Wilford M. Peck's address that is given below. Note: In the typescript of Wilford M. Peck's address from Lois Curtis' document archive, the author of "CHARACTERISTICS OF CLINTONIANS. Tribute to their memory 1916" is erroneously given as E. M. Peck. Internal evidence in the address, however, makes it clear that the author is Wilford M. Peck. A note on the relationship of Wilford M. Peck and Earl Melville Peck: Wilford M. Peck is the son of Albert R. Peck of Aldenville. Albert R. Peck is the brother of Earl Melville Peck (06-24-1838--11-19-1923), who married Emeline Ledyard, the daughter of Hiram and Lucinda (Rude) Ledyard. Wilford M. Peck is, therefore, Earl Melville Peck's nephew. Emmons L. Peck is the son of Earl Melville Peck and Emeline Ledyard. Earl Melville Peck and Albert R. Peck are the children of Reuben and Sally Ann (King) Peck.

In his reminiscences of the pioneer families of Clinton Township, Wayne County, Pennsylvania, Wilford M. Peck specifically mentions the following families: Gaylord, Peck, Norton, Grennell, North, Griswold, West, McMullen, Ledyard. He refers, in addition, to the following individuals: Virgil Gaylord, Milo Gaylord, Sidney Norton, Hiram Norton, Squire West, Horace Griswold, Francis Griswold, Francis June, Sheldon Norton, E. M. Peck, Deacon Rufus Grennell, Uncle Giles and Joanna Gaylord, Reuben and Sally Ann Peck, E. K. and Clarissa Norton, Sylvester E. North.

CHARACTERISTICS OF CLINTONIANS

Tribute to their memory

By Wilford M. Peck

1916

Mr. President; Friends of Old Clinton; Ladies and Gentlemen:- Forty five years have gone by since I went out from the old homestead in Clinton. During those years I have been but an infrequent visitor here, but coming once again to these scenes of my boyhood days, is a sad, sweet visitation. The flood gates of memory are open wide and the tide of recollection is rushing through. Of the many homes in this community, but two or three are now occupied by the families I knew in the long ago. These comfortable houses and beautiful farms are always associated in my mind with the pioneers and their children - The Gaylords, the Pecks, the Nortons, the Grennells, the Norths, the Griswolds, the Wests, the McMullens, the Ledyards and numbers of others. Strangers may now occupy them, but as I now ride by I can see with my eyes the old familiar forms and faces which lent a peculiar character to the dear old homes. The pioneers are sleeping now in their "windowless Palaces of rest" but their spirit still walks abroad in these beloved scenes. Of those who occupy their homes well may it be said:

"They have no title deeds to house or lands.
Owners and occupants of earlier days,
From graves forgotten, stretch their boney hands,
And hold in Mortmain still their old estates."

Scenes In Old Church

My home was on the border line between the two church communities of Aldenville and Clinton, and I was familiar with the men and women who worshiped in this church in the olden days. As I look out upon this audience, I see another audience, invisible to most of you, but present to my mind--Deacon Rufus Grennell, Uncle Alva Norton, Sidney Norton, E. K. Norton, Hiram Norton, Squire West, Sylvester E. North, Virgil and Milo Gaylord, Horace and Francis Griswold, the faithful wives of all these and a host of others too numerous to mention. They are all here in their old familiar places. I cannot, if I would, forget the dear old faces of those godly men and women who lived and toiled and sacrificed in this community, and who worshiped here and kept the faith and when their blessed hands grew weary they folded them and lay down to dreamless sleep here among the monuments of their loves and labors. Their presence pervades this room, with their peculiar modesty they shrink from the praise we offer and the encomiums we pronounce upon their characters. You, venerable fathers, mothers, heroes, heroines all, we welcome your silent forms and blessed faces here today. You were faithful in every walk of life. You laid the foundations of these homes, schools and churches, the blessings your children and strangers enjoy.

Again. I lift my eyes yonder where used to be the choir loft and I see a goodly array of men and women, who year in and year out sang the dear old hymns, but who have long since joined the choir invisible. I see Francis June, the leader, pitching the tune with his fork. I see the men and women rise and the long tune book flutter open in a row along the railing. I hear the old familiar voices as they all join in and sing the songs of day before yesterday as if the music was in their souls and must come out. And thus long years they sang and soared and floated upon the wings of music till, one by one they passed in thru the pearly gates and are singing now the songs ever old yet ever new around the Great White Throne in heaven.

"Oh, be lifted ye gates,
Let me hear them again,
Blessed song, blessed singers,
Forever, Amen."

My Uncle, E. [arl] M. [elville] Peck, of Carbondale, has garnered so much of the history and biography of the pioneers of this community and so well preserved it for the future, that there is little left in that field for me to glean. Sheldon Norton of Carbondale, in his splendid reminiscences of the pioneers given you a year ago when was unveiled yonder monument, has left quite as little in that field for one who comes after. I understand that this pioneers monument was an idea of those two men, Sheldon Norton and E. M. Peck, theirs was a happy thought that here in this cemetery where sleep so many of those men and women who braved the terrors of the forrest primeval and laid here the foundation of things and here, so near the center of the community where they builded their rude log cabins and cleared their rough lands, this monument should stand for all time. It was a happy thought too, that the monument should be not of chisled marble or of corroding brass, but a flint conglomerate boulder just as taken from the mountains, unique, yet peculiarly emblematical of the rough, substantial characters it commemorates. It was also a happy thought that it should bear upon its bronze tablet the family names and the names of those ministers of the gospel who from time to time preached here and laid the foundations for christian worship in this community, for the family names comprehended so many individuals, and the preached word was so much a part of the daily lives of those men and women. I could but add one other idea which it seems to me would have been appropriate--the family names of the wives of the pioneers. We hear a great deal in our day of our forefathers and what they suffered and accomplished, but all too little of our foremothers.

Men I Well Remember

It was my happy lot when a boy to know some of the pioneer men and women whose memories we honor today. I well remember Deacon Rufus Grennell. He was an old man when I knew him. He was just waiting for the summons home, he was already to go and he soon passed on. I attended his funeral in the church, the first funeral I ever remember to have attended. Deacon Grennell always seemed to me like one of the old Patriarchs of the Bible. I can remember uncle Alva Norton. He always reminded me of the portrait of Andrew Jackson, for whom so many still vote at every presidential election and from what I've heard of the two men they were much alike in many ways. I can remember well uncle Giles Gaylord and his wife Aunt Joanna. They were pioneers I trow [sic] for if struggles and privations and hardwork to bring up a large number of worthy children of their own, and numbers of others not their own, was the work of pioneers, then they were pioneers indeed. I remember well my grandfather and grandmother, Reuben and Sally Ann Peck. It seems but yesterday I sat at their feet and drank in with a boy's eagerness stories of the trials of those early days. My grandmother was a great reader and a great thinker and in Civil war times the best of men in the community hardly dared to attempt an argument with her. She was a natural herb doctor too, and the sweet savor of tansy and boneset and peppermint and spearmint herbs that hung about her old kitchen and garret are with me yet. I always felt when taken sick that I was surely going to get well if grandmother could only come with her teas and cordials and plasters and materials for sweats. My grandfather, Reuben Peck, was one of the best of men. I remember the splendid Christian spirit he manifested at a trying time at the Aldenville Baptist Church. My father who was a deacon in that church for forty years, had invited a woman who was a member of the Methodist church, but who had been baptised by immersion, to sit at the communion table with her daughter who had that day been received into fellowship with the Baptist church. The minister and some others were shocked, but my father held that the baptist church was founded not on close communion but on close baptism, and as this Mother had been baptised by immersion, she had complied with the Bible command and was there fore entitled to sit at the Lord's table with her daughter. The matter came up for discussion at the next covenant meeting, and as always when doctrinal questions are up for consideration much rancor and bitterness were exhibited. When discussion was at the crisis grandfather arose, his face beaming with Christian charity and spoke these words which were like oil poured upon the troubled waters:- "The sands of my life are well nigh run. It will be but a little while till I go home. I don't believe Heaven will be just what I expect, if I do not find some of my good Methodist brothers and sisters there, men and women who have been my neighbors for many years and who have shown forth in their lives that they have kept the faith each as I have tried to do. I don't believe that when we get up to the gates of that beautiful land we will be asked what church we belonged to. It will be all right and we will be bidden to enter if we have followed the best light God has given us. So it seems to me, my friends, that we are not doing just as Jesus would have us do. I move that the subject be dropped." The motion prevailed almost unanimously. It was the voice of a faithful servant of God, speaking on the brink of the grave. In a little while they laid him away.

I remember too, E. K. Norton and his wife Clarissa. Surely they were pioneers in all that goes for the improvement of the community and for the best interest among those with whom they lived. Their farm was for many years the experimental station for all modern improvements in agriculture, horticulture and [sic]. Their beautiful home was the mecca of all who sought to come under the influence of an ideal life.

"In that mansion used to be Free hearted hospitality.
His great fires up the chimney roared,
The stranger feasted at his board."

I remember also Sylvester E. North. There is no question that he is one of the original pioneers. He had a clear head and a sarcastic tongue when he wanted to use it, which was not infrequently. Remember an argument he had with a minister of the gospel who did not believe that immersion was the only way of baptism. Uncle North cited the fact that Jesus was baptised in the river Jordan. The minister contended that the word in the Greek "in" or "into" could just as well be translated "near" or "close to." Mr. North answered, "My friend, I am very much obliged to you for that bit of information. It explains so much that I did not understand. NOW I see that Daniel was not cast INTO the lions den, but just NEAR or CLOSE TO THE DEN, just so he could have a good view of the show and of the animals. Now I understand that story about Jonah. I never could understand how Jonah could have lived in the whales belly. Now I see, he wasn't in the whale at all only just NEAR, just CLOSE enough to the whale so that he could make a good fish story for all fishermen to try to rival." Needless to say the minister was silenced.

Hardy New England Stock

The pioneers of Clinton came from New England. They came from hardy stock and they all had been trained in the hard schools of poverty and adversity. They were used to digging a scanty living out of the sterile and meager soil of New England where the hard pan was up to the third rail of the fences and where they could raise Indian corn only by following the rule taught them by the Indians by planting three kernels in a hill with a cod fish, New England standard fertilizer under each kernel. They were men and women of faith and courage and individuality. They were each cast in a separate mould, and they preserved their distinct characteristics all their lives. They came through the woods with oxen and wagons or sleds, bringing their simple household furniture and utensils with them. They were busy men and women as they built their log cabins, cleared the land, made their homespun garments and reared their children. They had their simple pleasures too. Mostly "bees" when the men around gathered to help a neighbor build a log barn. The women had their "bees" too, quilting bees, sewing bees, spinning bees and right by they buzzed around the old spinning wheels and looms. It was this custom, as now it is with ladies when they went to spend an afternoon to take their fancy work with them, and their fancy work consisted of perhaps, of a basket of apples to be peeled, cored, quartered, or carpet rags to be sewed, a woolen stocking or sock to be knit. Coming as the Yankees did from Yankee land, they brought some Yankee notions with them, three principally, the home, the school and the Church. Let us take a look at these homes, schools, and churches as they were when the pioneers had them pretty much to their notions. It will give the younger people of this community a higher appreciation of the struggles and privations of these pioneer days and may kindle in all our hearts a higher appreciation too, of the beautiful homes, and splendid schools and pleasant churches we enjoy today.

The log cabin the pioneer built was not the home he came to establish here. The log cabin was but his temporary building. The ideal home he came to build was a thing of slower growth. When he laid the hearth stone of his ideal home, he laid it deep and wide and substantial for he knew he was building for the future a home from which should go influence for the uplifting of the community. On the hearth stone rose the great stone fire place up whose massive chimney the smoke curled in summer and the great fires roared in winter and through which he could see the stars by night. In the fireplace swung the long crane with hooks for pots and kettles and pans in which the cooking was done. Beside the fire place was the great oven in which fires were built to heat it, and out from which came the best bread and pies and cakes--pies and cakes and bread so good that to this day when a baker wants to advertise he calls his cakes and bread and pies the kind your Mother used to make. Speaking of that old fire place, there goes a tradition with it that no young lady of those days was quite fit to get married till she could put a slap-jack on the griddle she held by the long handle, over the fire. A flap-jack or pancake as it is called now, that was eight inches in diameter and a half inch thick in the middle - and when it was baked on one side, give it a throw up the great chimney, run out doors and catch it bottom side up out side in the yard when it came down. I don't vouch for the truth of this tradition, but this I do know that the girls of those times must have had some vigorous exercise for in later days they could wield a slipper to some purpose in places where it would be the most effective and in other ways direct most vigorously the pathway for wayward youth.

These old homes our fathers built are sacred places. In them are rooms hallowed by the faces of grandmother that have smiled down the generations, hallowed, too, by births and weddings and funerals. There are old pieces of furniture--tables and chairs and cupboards, that keep you from forgetting that you were once a boy; old looking glasses that have caught the shadows of faces and forms that were, but are no more; old hair cloth sofas down whose slippery arms you used to slide when a boy, and on whose cushions you lay when the mumps, the chicken pox and the fevers came while over you watched a Mother or grandmother, with home brewed herb tea which said good by to the bitter pills and the Doctors bills. There in the chambers too, are the old feather beds, for which you needed a ladder to get in and a derrick to get out, and which were about the best places in the world for a boy on a winter night, even though the snow blew in and laid an extra counter pane on the bed, white and lace-like and soft as down. Up in the garret are old horse hide trunks, with the hair on and with brass nails driven to make initials and full of old documents that go way back like a genealogy. And there are old pictures hung on a wall in a row, mostly certificates of marriage or documents which certify that this or that member of the family contributed dollars to and was a member of the Baptist Missionary society. - Dollars that went to keep Dr. Judson and Ann Judson and Sarah Judson and Emily Judson, and Gordon Hall and Dr. Kincaid in far away Asia, where they labored in the vineyard of the Lord, and where the end came. Ann Judson found a grave under the hopia tree at Amherst in Burmah, Sarah Judson a grave on the lonely storm swept island of St. Helena and Dr. Judson a resting place some where beneath the wild waves of the Southern seas, but whose grave, like that of Moses, in a vale of the land of Moab, by Nebo's lonely mountain, no man knoweth untill this day.

Among the historical documents collected by Lois T. (Norton) Curtis is one entitled "PIONEER DAY AT CLINTON CENTER AS RECORDED IN THE WAYNE INDEPENDENT THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1916." It is from a xerograph-copy of that text--which, in all probability, was written by Lois Curtis--that S. Robert Powell typed the copy that is given herebelow.

Descendents of Early Settlers Gather at Baptist Church. TALKS AND REMINISCENCES

Speakers Sheldon Norton, W. M. Peck and Wm. H. Lee--Delightful Meeting and Good Dinner--Interesting Program--Bits of History--Members of Families Widely Scattered--Three Revolutionary Soldiers' Graves--Dr. Dunning and Politics.

At the dedication of the monument, unveiled on August 27, 1915, at Clinton to the memory of the early settlers of that township and the early ministers of the Clinton Baptist Church, it was resolved to meet each year to honor the memory of the "Pioneers of Clinton Township." In accordance with that decision such a gathering was held at Clinton Centre Church on Sept. 1st. The ladies of the congregation served dinner at 12 o'clock which seemed to occupy the undivided attention of a large number for an hour or more.

At two o'clock those present gathered in the auditorium for the services. The singing was led by Arthur Curtis with the organ, and Mrs. Sangston with her violin. America was first on the program, followed by a prayer by Mr. Sangston, the "Tent Evangelist."

A few fitting and humorous remarks were made by Rev. G. S. Wendell, pastor of the Honesdale Baptist Church. Sheldon Norton of Carbondale read some epistles, purported to have been written by a cat to a little girl. The genius of the author was so apparent that one could easily decide who was the cat. [The text of those epistles by Sheldon Norton has not come down to us.]

Attorney W. H. Lee of Honesdale, born in Clinton, and a resident of the place during his early years, gave some very interesting bits of History of many of those who have passed away but, who are not forgotten, paying a fine tribute to their useful lives. [A portion of W. H. Lee's address is reported in this same newspaper article; see below.]

"Come to the Little Brown Church in the Wildwood" was heartily sung by the choir and audience.

The chairman, E. M. Peck, had the honor of reading "The Old Tin Lantern" written by Sheldon Norton which follows:

THE OLD TIN LANTERN

Some months ago a friend of mine gave me an old fashioned tin lantern, battered, rusty, and worn. In my boyhood days I had seen a few of these inventions in use, made entirely of tin perforated with small holes in many strange and fantastic shapes, through which the feeble rays of a tallow candle were cast on the outer darkness, making a "dim religious light."

Placing the lantern on my desk one evening and putting a lighted candle in it to see what shapes the rays of light would form on the walls of the room, and seating myself in an easy chair, I watched the dancing rays as the candle flickered, thinking what a story this battered, rusty, tin lantern could tell if it only had a voice. My thoughts went back across the years and I remembered the story of my grandmother's journey from Connecticut to Northern Pennsylvania, then an almost unbroken wilderness of hemlock, beech and maple, peopled only with deer, bear, wolves, and small game.

While my thoughts were busy with these past days and my fancy was painting a picture of those olden times and their people, I turned my face toward the old tin lantern, battered, rusty, and worn, and on its peaked top I saw a diminutive figure of "Old Father Time" as I had seen him pictured. His hair was long and white and his whiskers, reaching nearly to his feet, were like the new fallen snow; in his hand was the hour glass with the sands running through and the scythe of time to mow down the pride and grandeur of earth's mightiest works.

As I listened I heard him say, "Mouldst thou learn the simple story of the old tin lantern, battered, rusty, and worn? I am the Spirit of past years and will tell it to you."

The tin plate from which this lantern was made was manufactured in one of the beautiful valleys of Wales; from there it was sent across the wide and ever restless Atlantic by sailing vessel to Boston; then it was carted by ox team to one of those narrow but enchanting valleys of Connecticut where, in a quiet village was the shop of the tin smith; here it was made into its present form, but bright and shining, not as you see it now, old, battered, rusty, and worn.

One day there came to the shop of the tin smith, a young man dressed in homespun clothes from head to foot. In those days the ones who wore the best clothes were the ones who were the most skillful and industrious, as what people had in those days they made themselves.

The young man was tall and strong, and was accompanied by his bride, who was also dressed in cloth made by her own fair hands. They were starting out to make a home with their own hands, and labor, in the far off wilderness. They started from their home in that pleasant valley with a few kettles and pans and a meager supply of household articles besides the beds and bedding made by the brides own hands, and the now old tin lantern. They had one horse which the bride rode, and two cows and six sheep.

While the man drove the oxen and a boy the sheep and cows, with what help the wife could give, they turned their faces toward the setting sun, and with strong hearts and bright faces and an undaunted faith that the God of the universe would help those who try to help themselves, they pressed on. Over the hills toward the west they came, crossing the Hudson, then up and down the hills that intervene between the valley of the Hudson and the Delaware until at last they reached the outer border of civilization. Crossing the waters of the Delaware they were soon lost in the woods or forests of Pennsylvania, or as they were then called, the "Beech Woods." Making their way on through this forest, they came to the spot where they were to build up that most precious of earthly things, A Home.

Here they built a log cabin, and started to change the wilderness into a field that would yield them bread. With labor and care they provided food and clothing, and the dim rays of the old tin lantern, now battered, rusty, and worn, have shone out many a night to light the way from this cabin to that of neighbors who soon settled around them, and peace, happiness and plenty rested on the home in the "Beech Woods."

As the years rolled on, the lantern lighted the feet of many a boy and girl to and fro in the winter evenings, and the boys and girls grew to be old, and their children are scattered until now, all there is left is the old tin lantern, battered, rusty, and worn, which has shed its rays over great-great grandfathers, great grandfathers, grandfathers, fathers, sons, and daughters, who are now dead or scattered from the hills of the "Beech Woods" toward the west, even to where the billows of the Pacific wash the shores of our broad land. All there is left of that home in the wilderness is the old tin lantern, battered, rusty, and worn. As I rubbed my eyes to get a better view of my visitor, I awoke, and all there was left of the story was the old tin lantern, battered, rusty, and worn.

Note--The couple referred to were the grandfather and grandmother of Mr. Norton who were among the early settlers of Clinton.

ATTORNEY PECK'S REMINISCENCES

Reminiscences of the old families, male and female, were given by Wilford M. Peck of Los Angeles, Calif., son of the late Albert R. Peck of Aldenville. [The text of Wilford M. Peck's reminiscences is given above in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.]

Wonderful word paintings of their ways and doings, seemed almost to bring them before us as of yore, causing one to fancy hearing their voices in prayers and songs of the days long gone by.

He forcibly dwelt on the threefold purpose of their coming from New England to Wayne County--home, school, and church. For these they toiled and patiently labored. How well they succeeded is shown by the results as evidenced by their descendants, who are sharing the fruits of their efforts, many being honored members of this community, and others in various states, good citizens with the loving memories of Old Clinton.

It was somewhat remarkable that we were favored with addresses by two former Clinton boys who attended the same school and both in the legal profession, "two Willies" as one said. We will not add the "weary" to that expression as they did not weary us.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS

A committee of seven was appointed to decide on time, and arrange program for next year's meeting. After singing "When the Roll is Called up Yonder" adjourned with benediction by Rev. G. S. Wendell.

W. H. LEE'S ADDRESS

Wm. H. Lee spoke in part as follows: "It is nearly forty-five years ago, yes to be exact, forty-five years ago, that I delivered upon this platform what I considered a powerful temperance address. Surely those that listened to that speech are now sleeping in yonder cemetery, or I would not have been asked to address you on this occasion. One year ago it was my pleasure to be with you as you dedicated your monument to the early settlers of this community. But as my eye rests on the faces before me, I miss one, a man who was approaching the four score limit, the frosts of many winters had silvered his flowing locks and beard. It was my good fortune, nearly half a century ago, to know this man well. We worked together for months, ate at [sic] of your tables, rejoiced, sorrowed and selp [sic] together. What impressed me most was his even temperament. Everything might go dead wrong, difficulties seemingly insurmountable beset him, and yet he met each with a smile and cheerfully, with no evidence of anger or resentment, without use of profanity, proceeded and did overcome all obstacles. This man had conquered himself. I would place upon his monument, 'Here lies a man who mastered himself, the greatest victory that a man can achieve.' I refer to my dear old friend William W. Rude."

There is one more that during the past year has gone to his long home. At your meeting last year you learned of his skill in obtaining from a yoke of oxen their best efforts. You who read his obituary in the county papers will recall that when he was a Union soldier, at one time while on guard all the pickets but he were driven in. When he was rescued, he was asked why he did not come in with the others and his reply was "you put me out there to stay, did you not?" And he faithfully obeyed orders. Upon the monument of Ensign McMullen I would enscribe, "Here lies a faithful man."

As I look into your faces I see, not your smiling countenances, but those that occupied these pews fifty and sixty years ago. On the North side of the Church there always sat a short thick-set man. In the ordinary conversation he was deliberate, slow in action and speech, but when addressing the throne of grace his words came with lightning rapidity, clearly showing that he and his Maker were on intimate, loving terms. We, who listened failed to catch many of his words but I have no doubt that his loving Father caught every one. Good pious Edmund Randall.

There was another good man who sat in the Amen pew, or what would have been the amen pew in a Methodist church. I see him now as he entreated his brethren and sisters to renewed zeal in the worship of God Almighty, while with his right arm raised, his left eye shut and his head on one side and looking right toward Heaven, I was reminded of that line which reads "I will guide thee with mine eye." A thoughtful Christian gentleman, E. K. Norton.

There was a good deacon that occupied the pew directly ahead of my father's. I see him now listening earnestly to every word that fell from the mouth of the minister, with fingers intertwined and the only muscle that stirred was when his right thumb surmounted the left and the left the right until the final Amen of the long long sermon was said. My father Samuel Lee, I hear as if it were yesterday, when he, after some earnest invocation, some heart felt experience started that good old baptist hymn, "Amen, Amen, my soul replies, I am bound to meet you in the skies." As the congregation joined in the singing the old church reverberated with their song of resolution. After the singing it seemed to me that Heaven was nearer and Christ was dearer than ever before.

There were two occasions, two gatherings in the church, in my early days that are indelibly impressed upon my memory. The first was in the fall of 1860. Lincoln's first campaign. In the early fifties this community was strongly democratic. The agitation of the slavery question throughout the country, the writings and speeches of those that were termed abolitionists. The writings of others, and especially that of Harriet Beecher Stowe in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" caused many to forsake that party. The coming into existence of the Republican Party seemingly more adapted to their convictions, caused many as it was termed in those days, "to turn their coats." The leaders here asked those in charge of the campaign to send two speakers to this place. You must remember that at this time this community was devoutly religious. In almost every home the family altar was reared, the family Bible daily read, and prayer offered. The leaders understood this condition and selected the Rev. Charles S. Dunning, the Presbyterian minister at Honesdale, as one of the speakers and he brought with him Stephen D. Ward, a ruling elder of his church. Now think a moment. Here was a Presbyterian minister to speak politics in a close communion Baptist church. The cry, "don't mix politics with religion," was then loud and vociferous. To this meeting for some reason, I do not know what, my father insisted that his oldest son should attend. The church was crowded with men, while the only remark that the Rev. Doctor Dunning made that comes to my memory is this, "We had to come here to blow off or we would need to be hooped or burst." As father and I wended our way homeward upon the lonely mountain road I was firmly convinced that the only man fit to be elected President was Abraham Lincoln, the rail splitter.

The second occasion came some four years and six months later. The four years of fratricidal strife were over. Lee had surrendered, peace was dawning upon this distracted country, when our beloved President met death at the hands of an assassin. In obedience to proclamation of the incoming President as well as our war governor, Andrew G. Curtin, we gathered at this church and listened to a sermon appropriate to the occasion. I remember how neighbor met neighbor, how the trembling hands were clasped, when the lips faltered, the tear started, the vocal chords were paralyzed, and the tongue refused to speak. Slowly and sadly we bent our heads as we entered this church and took our accustomed places. The only expression that good Rev. B. B. Bunting, the then pastor of this church said, that comes to my memory at this time was the text "The remainder of that wrath will I restrain." I have since listened to thousands of sermons delivered by men far more educated, men of more abundant research, far superior ability and yet no sermon so impressed me as the kindly words that fell from this deeply religious man. As the hearers wended their several ways homeward all were convinced that God reigns and the government at Washington still lives.

There is one more subject to which I wish to call your attention, relating to the past, to the presents and the future. You are triply blessed in the fact that there reposes in your churchyard, "God's Acre," three soldiers of the Revolution. Two have passed on before my birth. One however is associated with my earliest recollections. I have sat with him at the table, listened to his reading the scripture, and knelt with him at the family altar. At this time he was approaching the end of his long life, one hundred and five years, ten months and thirteen days. As I now recall Michael Grinnell I consider that when he placed his hand upon my head and said, "God bless you, my boy," was the proudest moment of my life. Whenever I enter your cemetery I go at once to where he lies sleeping, and with uncovered head breathe a prayer of thankfulness for the memory of this life, his excellent qualities as a soldier, a man, and a Christian gentleman. I urge you, each one to keep the graves of these soldiers green for all time. Green in the memory of their patriotism, their devotion to freedom of the thirteen colonies and their efforts through which a nation was born free and independent. As your children and your children's children come to years of understanding, deeply impress upon them the history of their lives, that the life of this nation may be insured, as well as the lives of these soldiers revered and forever honored.

PIONEER DAY: 1917

Pioneer Day celebrations are known to have taken place in the following years: 1915, 1916, 1918, 1920, 1921, 1922, 1923, 1924, 1926, 1927, 1928, 1929, 1930, 1931, 1932, 1933, 1934, 1935, 1936, 1937, 1938, 1939, 1940, 1941, and 1942.

We know that celebrations took place in those years because of the existence of either newspaper articles or of minutes taken by the Pioneer Day secretary, Lois (Norton) Curtis. All of these newspaper articles and minutes were in the document archive of Lois (Norton) Curtis at the time of her death.

The first Pioneer Day celebration took place in 1915. The last Pioneer Day celebration of which there is any record took place in 1942. No information has come down to us that indicates that celebrations were held in 1917, 1919 and 1925.

An interesting document about the Pioneer Day celebrations that were held in Clinton Township prior to 1942 is the letter that Arthur Curtis wrote to Mrs. Lois (Norton) Curtis on September 4, 1942. That letter is as follows:

Moses Taylor Hospital
Scranton, Pennsylvania
September 4, 1942

Mrs. Lois Curtis, Secretary
Clinton Center Pioneer Day Association
Wayne County, Pennsylvania

Dear Lois:

As you know, the recent operation from which I am now recovering will prevent me from attending the "Pioneer Day" celebration to be held Monday, September 7, 1942. This is a matter of considerable regret because it will be the first meeting I have missed in the past twenty-four years.

Please convey my best wishes to everyone present and thank those who have so kindly sent letters while I have been at the Hospital.

Yours,

[signed] Sincerely Yours,
Arthur Curtis

What does Arthur Curtis mean when he states: "This is a matter of considerable regret because it [the 1942 Pioneer Day celebration] will be the first meeting I have missed in the past twenty-four years." Does he mean that "every year for the past 24 years there has been a Pioneer Day celebration and I have attended all those celebrations" -- in which case Pioneer Day celebrations took place in 1919 and 1925. Does he mean that "every year during the past twenty-four years in which there has been a Pioneer Day celebration I have been in attendance" -- in which case we can not deduce from Arthur Curtis' statement whether or not Pioneer Day celebrations were held in 1917, 1919 and 1925.

PIONEER DAY: SEPTEMBER 6, 1920

A history of the Griswold family was read. It is from a xerographic copy of a text entitled "HISTORY OF GRISWOLD'S PIONEER DAY" in the document archive of the late Lois T. (Norton) Curtis that the author typed the copy that is given below.

HISTORY OF GRISWOLD'S PIONEER DAY

History of John and Elizabeth Griswold read at the Pioneer Observance, Clinton Centre, Monday, September 6, 1920.

We have come here to show our appreciation to a famous and illustrious pioneer of our country. Famous, in that he was one of those sturdy pioneers that founded our country - illustrious, for the honesty and integrity he has left to posterity. So today we have come here to dedicate this monument to his memory.

He was born in Granville, Hampshire County, Mass., 1754 and died October 16, 1843. In Oct. 1790 or '91, he was married to Elizabeth Crittenden at Sandisfield, Mass.

At the age of eighteen, July 8th, 1777, he enlisted in the Continental Army in Rathburn's Co., Major Caleb Hyde's detachment of Militia. They marched to reinforce the Northern Army. Again in the same Co., he was under the command of General Gates, and was honorably discharged for his service. And right we have to think that John Griswold belonged to those heroes that purchased liberty, although, he was not killed on the battle field.

The family moved from Mass. to Penna. with their possessions, in a heavy two-wheeled cart, drawn by four year-old steers. The mother rode the horse and the little colt followed. In the wilderness, they set to work to build their log cabin and to clear the land for crops. The trees at that time, were considered worthless and were burned. The pioneers often found the trees difficult to cut on account of their great size.

The wild animals still roamed through the forest and the early settlers had many encounters with these. Some families, having sheep took turns during the night watching from the windows of their log cabins to protect them from the wolves and bears, which might be searching for an early breakfast.

One day the three sons of John Griswold, Horace, aged 11 with his two younger brothers, Sumner and Sedate, were out playing in the forest, when they chanced to see an animal sunning itself by a fallen log. The boys discovered the animal was a panther and departed, in haste, for home.

Everyone was busy about the log cabin. The good housewife, spent her spare moments in spinning the wool and flax and weaving it into cloth. The family clothing and the household linen depended upon her nimble fingers. Some of the trees of the forest supplied them with coloring matter, such as walnut. Much ingenuity was shown in the weaving of their fine linens. Designs were sometimes woven in their tablecloths.

The early settlers found nature a bountiful provider in the line of fish and wild game. As soon as the land was ready they sowed the grain and planted the crops they needed for their own use. The sap of the maple trees, supplied them with sugar. The old sugar barrel belonging to John Griswold, is in good condition today and is owned by F. H. Curtis. The old canteen, another relic carried by John Griswold in the Revolutionary War, is at the home of Augusta Curtis. The silver knee buckle and powder flask are owned by William Griswold of Pine City, New York.

John Griswold took on horse-back the first grist of wheat which he raised and started for Wilkes-Barre, to have it ground. The first night he camped on the forks of a river, near the present site of Scranton. He caught enough fish for supper and breakfast. While eating his supper, he heard a slight noise and saw three deer coming toward the river. Then he shot the first one, a nice fat yearling. He dressed it and hung it on a limb of a tree near by.

The next morning, he continued his way to Wilkes-Barre. When the wheat was ground he started on his homeward journey, camping at the place where he left his deer in the morning. He strapped one of the hind quarters on the horse's back and departed for home. He reached home toward evening, where the anxious family were watching and waiting for his delayed return.

The names of his sons were as follows: John, Francis, Orin, Sumner, Horace and Sedate. His descendants are many and are found in all parts of the United States.

Whether or not we ever trace our English forebears, we may be sure that these Old New England ancestors were men who lived for the ideals of justice and right, and were among those who came across the ocean in the pursuit of the principles that make life worth living, and that they were worthy of being kept fresh in the minds of their posterity.

PIONEER DAY: SEPTEMBER 5, 1921

Among the historical documents collected by Lois T. (Norton) Curtis is a newspaper clipping entitled "CLINTON PIONEER DAY OBRERVANCE [sic]," which, in all probability was published in the Wayne Independent. It is from a xerographic copy of that newspaper clipping that S. Robert Powell typed the copy that is given below. Written in pencil on this clipping is "Sept. 1921"; Pioneer Day in 1921 was celebrated on September 5.

CLINTON PIONEER DAY OBRERVANCE [sic]

The fourth annual "Pioneer Day" at Clinton Center was observed on Monday and in 1920 a motion was made and carried to hold it each year on Labor Day. The place is ideal for such an event. The church is used for the program--the basement furnishes a commodious dining hall and the cemetery adjoins where rest their sacred and honored dead. The whole township joins in the affair and scores from far and near attended the program and entered into the spirit of the exercises. It is an ideal occasion.

On Monday promptly at 12 o'clock, the sumptuous dinner was ready and hungry diners surrounded the tables and got busy. The good "eats" prepared were generously served and greatly enjoyed. Over half a hundred autos were parked about the grounds and many sections of Wayne were represented and several were there from the anthracite valley.

President E. M. Peck of Carbondale, a son of a pioneer, called the assemblage to order and after prayer by Rev. Mr. Winkelman, pastor of Waymart Baptist church, and several songs led by Mr. Curtis, Homer Greene, Esq., of Honesdale was introduced as the orator of the day. Mr. Greene was at his best and delivered a fine address. He spoke of the principles which actuated the pioneers and commended their loyalty to the church, their devotion to what they believed to be right and their Americanism.

George H. Knapp of Aldenville, in keeping with a plan of the day's program, read the history of his grandfather, Rev. Mr. Curtis, one of the pioneers of that part of the county and as a preacher one of the great workers of the Baptist denomination, having baptized in his long ministry over 1,000 converts. Many of his descendants are living and are a credit to his name and who revere his memory. This paper by Mr. Knapp will be published in a forthcoming issue of The Independent.

Miss Margaret Remson of Aldenville gave a pleasing recitation and A. R. Pennell, editor of The Independent, was called upon for a few remarks. Pastor W. A. MacKenzie delivered a pointed and appreciative address, referring to the splendid oration by Mr. Greene and the principles which actuated the settlers of this country in the preservation of the fundamentals which go to make up our great republic. Chairman Peck read an interesting reminiscence of the pioneers as he remembered them, mentioning them by name. He was born some eighty years ago and in his childhood days enjoyed the acquaintance of several of them.

The program came to a close and there was a general greeting and fellowship of old friends in an informal [wa]y, and then the large company departed for their several homes, feeling that they had done honor to the [word missing; text is torn] settlers and [word missing; text is torn].

The record book of the Secretary of the Pioneer Days, Lois T. (Norton) Curtis, contains a handwritten account of the 1921 Pioneer Day celebration. Inasmuch as that handwritten account was used by Lois Curtis in preparing the newspaper account of the 1921 celebration that is given above, we will not present here a typescript of the minutes for 1921, which, in the record book are entitled "Clinton Pioneer Day Observance." The first sentence of the minutes reads as follows: "The Fourth annual 'Pioneer Day' at Clinton Center was observed on Monday Sept. 5, 1921."

Contained in the very comprehensive history of the Rude and Remsen families of Clinton Township, Wayne County, compiled by Marjorie Angeline (Rude) Cook in 1980-1981, is a copy of a newspaper clipping--probably from The Wayne Independent--entitled "AS PECK RECALLS CLINTON PIONEERS (By E. M. Peck) Read at Pioneer Day, Clinton Centre, Sept. 5, 1921." The text of that newspaper account of Pioneer Day, 1921, is as follows:

AS PECK RECALLS CLINTON PIONEERS

(By E. M. Peck)

Read at Pioneer Day, Clinton Centre, Sept. 5, 1921.

I would like to give you a picture of some of the residents of Clinton, as my recollections recall them. Coming into comparatively a wilderness of necessity it was for the early settlers, clearing of the land, in hopes of getting a bountiful harvest to provide for their families. This was hard work and only rugged determined men would undertake it. We of the present can see how well they succeeded. If the timber that was cut and burned were now standing, its value would be more than the farms at the present time. The Pioneers came to make homes for themselves, and families and also to hand down same to their descendants. Success attended their efforts.

It is of a later date, 1845, and on that I recall those who were enjoying fruits of the first settlers. They also worked without machinery. No moving machines, no hay loaders, no wood saws, no wire fencing, no telegraph lines, no automobiles. Just axes, beetles and wedges for splitting rails; sythes to cut the grass; pitch forks, with long handles, in order to get hay over the big beam, etc. A few had tread power for churning, but nearly all the butter was made by a dash churn; simply putting it up and down, up and down, till the welcome result was reached--but oh, what butter!

The Stantons are represented by Uncle Asa, who was a genial, kindly man, a good citizen known and respected by all. Jabez Welch, who farmed and had a saw mill on the outlet of Elk Lake, (one stiff leg), was a hard worker and had a good reputation. It was said of him that he tried to stick on the end of his thumb which he accidentally cut off one day with an axe; also that when he was going to shave, if the razor was very dull he would sharpen it on the bottom step of the cellar stairs, but if in fair condition would use the top step. It is needless to say that a man with those characteristics succeeded even if the end of his thumb did not stick fast.

'Squire West was no doubt the best educated of any of the earlier settlers and had great influence on account of his knowledge of law and medicine which was imparted to all inquirers. He also served as surveyor. He was thrifty in all his business affairs and was considered as one of the moneyed citizens.

Edwin Randall and his wife were a very kindly pair; Lemuel Stone, with Austing Davenport, Carmi and Amasa Gaylord, and Nathan Wheeler, who was an expert sheep shearer, occupied farms in the southern part, all having good standing among the families of the township; Cummings Saunders lived on the mountain and, with his wife and family, were regular attendants of the Clinton church where he officiated as leader of the singing. I have seen them drive up to the church in the winter time in a wood shod sled drawn by a pair of oxen.

Uncle Alva Norton, postmaster, at his house known as Mt. Republic, was public spirited, always ready to take the lead in matters yet not always followed enthusiastically. He was a surveyor, usually at variance with Squire West as to land lines.

Warren Norton, whose home was on the north corner of the road leading eastward from the north and south main road by home of Mrs. Bunting, was a short, somewhat stout man, well thought of. He drove a horse with a market wagon without springs, never passing folks on foot without asking them to ride. He was especially fond of children.

Horton Peck, Alfred Thomas, David Saunders and Samuel Lee lived north of Clinton church, all helping to maintain the good reputation of Clinton. Plinny Muzzy was a near neighbor to Warren Norton.

The Griswolds, Francis, Somner and Horace were also in the center of the town. Francis was a man of strong body and mind, being considered one of the most substantial residents, leaving several good, well tilled farms as marks of his toil and success. Reba Blanding was a man of very decided expressions, a true Jeffersonian Democrat; Erastus Loomis, who lived on the Rude farm, was a very particular person, always well dressed, known as a leader of singing in the Clinton church. I can almost hear the tones of his tuning fork as he bit it to get the correct pitch.

David, Shepherd, Jonathan and Samuel Saunders and Seth Dann were among the farmers, each having their own peculiarities. Sylvester North was a valued member of the neighborhood, not doing much work personally, yet a successful farmer. His speciality seemed to be to take a hoe every now and then and remove the stones from the roads, thereby making travel more comfortable. I remember him as always at church services with a bandanna handkerchief over the bald spot of his head.

Grennell Monument, Clinton Center Baptist Church Cemetery, with Fourteen Persons Posing in Front of Stone. Snapshot, slightly out of focus, in the Russell Homestead Photograph Archive, Carbondale, PA; given above is an enlarged copy print, by Donald W. Powell, of that snapshot, taken in August, 1919, by an unidentified person. Standing (left to right): Lydia Norton, Susan Munson or Catherine (Perham) Ross, Mrs. John Geuther, man with mustache, (?) Ora Esmarilda (Loomis) Russell. Seated (left to right): seated at left base of stone is Mary Emma (Squire) Loomis, in front of and to the left of Mary Emma (Squire) Loomis is Edna (Loomis) Loomis or Flora (Loomis) Brown or Nettie (Loomis) Graham, in front of the preceding is Amanda Norton, man with white beard in the middle is either Myron Norton or Grandison Loomis, woman in white dress in foreground is Lois Tryphenia (Norton) Curtis, seated at the right base of the stone is Ensign Varcoe, the woman to Ensign Varcoe's right has not yet been identified, the woman to the right of the preceding woman has not yet been identified, the man seated on the far right is Homer Curtis.

The inscription on the brass plaque that is attached to the Grennell natural flint conglomerate monument in Clinton Center Baptist Church Cemetery reads as follows: "MICHAEL GRENNELL / GREAT, GREAT, GREAT GRANDSON OF / JOHN AND PRISCILLA ALDEN / OF MAYFLOWER FAME / A REVOLUTIONARY SOLDIER, / A DEVOUT CHRISTIAN, / BORN 1752 / DIED FEBRUARY 13, 1858 / AGED 105 years, 10 MONTHS, 13 DAYS / SUSANNAH BALCOM / HIS WIFE / BORN 1760 - DIED 1829 / ERECTED BY THEIR DESCENDANTS / AUGUST, 1919."

Rufus Grennell, known as deacon, was a man of few words but which contained the conclusions of a thoughtful mind. He was known and respected for his sterling integrity. "Grandad" Grennell as so many knew him, lived to the ripe old age of nearly 106 years. I well remember hearing him pray after he was so deaf he could not hear his own voice. He was always at church service as long as he was able to get there. His custom was for many years in the early spring when good weather came, to make a visit to many of the homes about the town, which calls were always welcome. Clintonians have done themselves credit in placing a substantial stone and bronze tablet to mark the place of his burial, noting him as a descendant of John and Priscilla Alden of Mayflower fame.

Among others were Reuben Peck, Giles Gaylord, Virgil Grennell, Ralph and Jerome Case, Jabez Stearns, Aaron Loomis, George Kingsbury and John Belknap, who was landlord of the tavern near what is now known as Creamton. He was an expert nurse and his services were in great demand. He was genial and full of good humor. Religious services were held in a school house near his place and I remember on one occasion he brought in a stand on which he placed a copy of the Wayne County Herald, and then a Bible, saying in his quaint way, with his hand on the Bible, "What you don't find in this book you will find in this paper."

John and Daniel Bunting and Joseph Beticher were staid members of the vicinity of Aldenville.

'Squire June, Daniel Arnold, James and George McMullin were on the mountain, the latter a hunter of renown at the time when deer, bear and wild cats were in evidence.

E. K. Norton was well known as an extensive farmer and dealer in cattle, always being ready to purchase or sell as parties desired. He was active in all church matters and very influential in the work of the Clinton church. He was superintendent of the first Sunday school that I attended in the first church building which was on the same foundation which this building now occupies and was blown down by the hurricane of July 25, 1851, which commenced just west of here at the foot of the mountain and moved a swath through the timber and over the hills to the upper end of Honesdale, where part of the roof was taken off a brick building on upper end of Main street.

It is no doubt due to the effort of the worthy son of Mr. Norton, familiarly known as Sheldon, that the "Old Pioneer Day" was brought into existence, which has been a great pleasure to many.

These and others made up the township of Clinton noted for its good reputation, honored names, worthy of respect by their children, which is a goodly inheritance to hand down to posterity.

They were a wise people. First, they had a vision of a place where they would be free to worship God unmolested by forms and ceremonies and church free from state control. Second, organizing a church where they could meet and their children be brought under the influence of godly teaching. Third, determination to work which is the foundation of all success and in accordance with the law of God--Six days shalt thou labor. Fourth, thrift and economy, thereby laying a foundation for future prosperity.

I am exceedingly glad that such a permanent marker with their names in bronze stands in yonder "God's Acre" as a reminder to their descendants and others who pass by.

With all the pleasant memories and delight in their achievements, in clearing farms and building up a community, I am glad of the knowledge I have of these who now occupy the grounds once held by the pioneers and that by their lives Clinton still has a reputation for good citizens and successful farmers.

While I look backward I am going to indulge in a "day dream", in which I see Clinton farmers organized in a community group using the best known methods for production of crops, and all the products of the land enjoying the comforts and conveniences in their homes--running water, cold and hot, bath tubs, electric lights, washers, ironers, sweepers, etc. Also a system of marketing, co-operatively, of milk, butter, apples, potatoes; systematically packed and graded, bearing the mark, "Made in Clinton", which will be an assurance that each article is the best that can be produced. Surely such as Curtis, Rude, Gaylord, Dann, Snedeker, Knapp, Bunting, and a score of others can make my dream come true. Amen, so let it be.

NOTE:

From the newspaper account of the 1921 Pioneer Day celebration that is given above ("CLINTON PIONEER DAY OBSERVANCE"), we learn that it was decided, in 1920, to hold Pioneer Day every year on Labor Day:

"The fourth annual 'Pioneer Day' at Clinton Center was observed on Monday and in 1920 a motion was made and carried to hold it each year on Labor Day..."

PIONEER DAY: SEPTEMBER 4, 1922

Among the historical documents collected by Lois T. (Norton) Curtis is a newspaper clipping entitled "CLINTON CENTER'S PIONEER DAY," which in all probability was published in The Wayne Independent. It is from a xerographic copy of that newspaper clipping that S. Robert Powell typed the copy that is given below. Pioneer Day in 1922 was held on September 4; this clipping was published on September 9, 1922.

CLINTON CENTER'S PIONEER DAY

The Pioneer or "Old Home Day" was observed as usual at the Clinton Baptist church with a good attendance. While it was rainy in the morning, it cleared and was beautiful sunshiny weather to gladden the large number present.

The fine dinner served by the ladies of the church was the greatest attraction from twelve o'clock, until all were supplied.

The first event of the day was the dedication of a newly erected conglomerate stone monument with a bronze tablet, in memory of John Griswold, a Revolutionary soldier, and ancestor of the Griswold families of Clinton. A very suitable address was given by George Curtis, whose mother, Mrs. Louisa Griswold Curtis, was a granddaughter of John Griswold. Mr. Curtis dwelt on the intense loyalty and patriotism of the American soldier, which not only made it possible for our country to obtain its independence in 1776, but in the several wars, 1812, Mexican, the Rebellion, Spanish-American and the so recent world contest, has been so efficient in support of the principals of freedom, that we are renowned as "the land of the free and the home of the brave."

From the cemetery, repairing to the church, exercises were interspersed by choir singing, under the enthusiastic leadership of Arthur Curtis, which always adds so much to the pleasure of the celebration. An address of welcome was given by Rev. F. A. Childs, pastor of the Aldenville and Clinton Baptist churches. The president referred to those who have passed on since the last meeting, especially Myron Norton, who has been one of the most active members of the organization. Singing, Shall We Meet at the River?

Resolutions were passed that expressions of regret be sent to Rev. James Rainey, a former loved and respected pastor, Sheldon Norton, the originator of "Old Home Day" and to Mrs. Laura Loomis, expressing our sorrow that they were unable to be present, and tendering our good wishes for the future; also to Rev. George S. Wendell and Mrs. Wendell, with our sympathy in the trials they are enduring in the severe illness of their daughter.

The present officers were re-elected: E. M. Peck, president; Mm. P. [sic] Rude, vice president; Arthur Curtis and W. P. [sic] Rude for Clinton church; G. H. Knapp and George Gaylord, Aldenville church; E. H. Ledyard and G. H. Gaylord, Maple Grove; Claude Stanton, South Clinton, M. H. Gager and M. A. Loomis, Waymart church, for committee of general work of the organization.

Rev. James Pope, pastor of South Clinton Baptist church, spoke of the sterling qualities possessed by the early settlers, and the loving memory in which they should and are held. Numerous recitations by Mrs. Margaret Remsen Rude were very pleasant reminders of former favors she has rendered. Rev. Frank A. Stanton, pastor of the Berean Baptist church of Carbondale, gave an address, especially emphasizing the necessity of being loyal and obedient to the laws of a country that has done so much for the uplift of the whole world. A couple of recitations by Emmons L. Peck were very pleasing.

The president had an old tin lantern, round and pointed at the top, full of punched holes, to let out the dim light of a "tallow dip," which is owned by Sheldon Norton. He also read the composition, "The old Tin Lantern, Battered, Rusty and Worn," written by Mr. Norton, which illustrated the place it had in the early days, when but little light was had. One of the most pleasing meetings in memory of the early settlers of Clinton was closed by prayer and benediction by Rev. Mr. Stanton.

The record book of the Secretary of the Pioneer Days, Lois T. (Norton) Curtis, contains a handwritten account of the 1922 Pioneer Day celebration on Monday, September 4, 1922. Inasmuch as that handwritten account of the 1922 Pioneer Day celebration was used by Lois T. (Norton) Curtis in preparing the newspaper account of the 1922 celebration that is given above, we will not present here a typescript of the minutes for 1922, the first sentence of which reads: "The Fifth annual 'Pioneer Day' was observed Monday Sept. 4 - 1922 at the Clinton Center Baptist Church with a good attendance."

PIONEER DAY: SEPTEMBER 3, 1923

Contained in the very comprehensive history of the Rude and Remsen families of Clinton Township, Wayne County, compiled by Marjorie Angeline (Rude) Cook in 1980-1981, is a copy of a newspaper clipping--probably from The Wayne Independent--entitled "CLINTON CENTRE OLD HOME DAY," about the Pioneer Day celebration that took place in Clinton Township on September 3, 1923. The text of that newspaper account is as follows:

CLINTON CENTRE OLD HOME DAY

The "Old Pioneer and Home Day" was observed at the Clinton Baptist church on Sept. 3rd, with a large attendance. The ladies served dinner to nearly three hundred. The choir under the leadership of Arthur Curtis, added to the pleasure of the occasion by their singing and instrumental music.

Rev. William F. Shoup, pastor of the Clinton and Aldenville Baptist churches, opened the services by prayer. The president spoke as to the great loss sustained by the passing away since our last meeting of Sheldon Norton on the 27th of February. He was the one who started the plan of holding a day in remembrance of the Pioneers also in having a monument erected with the names of the early families and the early pastors of the Clinton church on a bronze plate, to perpetuate their memories. Nothing can have been better for that end, than a yearly gathering as has been held since its inauguration on Aug. 27, 1915.

He had some fine enlarged pictures of Deacon Rufus Grennell and his wife, Aunt Harriet, who was his grandmother, and his father, E. K. Norton and wife, which were, as per his request, presented to the Clinton church by E. M. Peck. He spoke of the memories of their efficient Christian service, freely given, for many years, and expressing the wish that looking in their faces might be an inspiration for faithful work on the part of those who are responsible for the success of the cause.

A suitable response and acceptance was made on behalf of the church by W. E. Rude.

Rev. W. K. Norton, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Honesdale, was the speaker of the day, and well he fulfilled the task with a thrilling address, on the subject of our forefathers, and the causes that led to America becoming a free nation. He emphasized the teachings of the Bible as the mainstay of our republic. The talk was spiced with wit, making it very entertaining and was listened to with close attention.

Mrs. Margaret Remsen Rude gave some delightful recitations that were very much enjoyed. Rev. W. A. McKensie, a former pastor, gave a very interesting talk, expressing his pleasure in being present, and the opportunity to meet so many former friends. The report of the secretary was read and the present officers were re-elected as follows: E. M. Peck of Carbondale, president; W. E. Rude, vice president; Mrs. Lois Curtis, secretary.

The secretary was instructed to send our good wishes to Rev. James Rainey and Mrs. Laura Loomis, who are not able to be present, and extend our sympathy to Mrs. Edith Yarrington in the loss of her father, who was the loved friend of our association, Sheldon Norton.

It has been the custom to give the history of some of the early families, at the meeting, and this year the Gaylord family records as far as could be made out was read as follows:

"The Gaylords of Wayne county were descendants of the Gaillards of Normandy, France. The meaning of the name was of Gallic or Spanish origin, signifying a merry or pleasant companion, and the change into English still is in harmony, as gay lord seems to fit the general character of many of those bearing the present name. Members of the family removed from the north of France to the west of England, and their children came to Connecticut, from thence into the various states of our Union. They were Protestants in France, and left there on account of religious difficulties, and came to America seeking freedom to worship God in accordance with the dictates of their own conscience. This was about 1630.

The following from a history by William Gaillard a number of years ago, gives as good a sketch of the family of the ancestors of those who are residents in Clinton and vicinity as can be found. Walter, third son of William of Dorchester, England, born about 1622, came with his father in 1630 and settled in Windsor, Connecticut. He married Mary Stebbins. Their son Joseph died about 1742, his son Joseph had a son named Timothy who married Prudence Roys; their son married Sarah Norton in 1765. Their second son, Amasa, married Miss M. Austen. He was the grandfather Gaylord who came to Clinton about 1812. His children were Melissa, Amasa, Harriet, Giles and Carma. No record of Melissa can be found.

The children of Amasa were: Harlow, married Marietta Case; Sarah, married Mr. Burdick; Matilda, married Charles Arnold and Mr. Bridge; Rachael, married Horton Peck; Susan, married Lemuel Stone; Mariah, David, Henry, Lucian. Harriet married Virgil Grinnell. Their children were: Helen, married Nathan Griswold; Ann, Myron, married Mattie Bridge; Emalinda, married Albert R. Peck; Giles, married Joanna Peck; both have passed away. Their descendants are as follows: Milo, married Elizabeth Arnold, children. Antoinette, Addie, Charles and Nora; Antoinette, married E. C. Terrell, children Effie, Alice, Edith, Ray, Elma, Maud, Ruth, Madeline, Given and Edwin; Frederick M., married Margaret Buckland, children Rena B. and George G.; Henry Curtis, married Ruth A. Turner; Remus M., married Mary A. Goodell, children Blanche G.; Lewis P., married Eleanor Ward, children Elizabeth P., Joanna, Giles A., and Luella; Eleanor E., married Judson J. Curtis, children Grace H. and John Judson; W. A. married Augusta C. Butler, children Hattie B., Katharine J. and Albert B.; Helen, married Charles H. Gaylord of Cortland, N.Y.

PIONEER DAY: SEPTEMBER 1, 1924

Among the historical documents collected by Lois T. (Norton) Curtis is a two-page typed text entitled "Pioneers hear tribute to Peck." That text is an account of the Pioneer Day celebration of September 1, 1924. It is not certain whether the text "Pioneers hear tribute to Peck" is a typed copy of a newspaper account or a typed copy of the minutes for 1924. Whatever the case, it is from a xerographic copy of that two-page typed text that S. Robert Powell typed the copy that is given below.

Pioneers hear tribute to Peck.

The seventh annual Old Pioneer and Home Day was observed at the Clinton Baptist church, Sept. 1, with a good attendance. The choir sang several selections. Rev. William F. Shoup, pastor of the Clinton and Aldenville Baptist churches offered prayer, and gave the address of welcome which was full of wit and humor. The vice president, W. E. Rude, spoke as to the great loss sustained by the passing away since our last meeting of E. [ar] M. [elville] Peck, in November. A tribute was read by Mrs. Rena Remsen, written by Mr. Knapp, but on account of the illness of Mr. Matthews, his son-in-law, he was unable to be with us. A tribute to the memory of Earl Melville Peck, son of Reuben Peck and Sally Ann King [who] was born in Clinton township, on what is known as the Peck place, June 24th, 1838, and entered into rest Nov. 19, 1923, at his home in Carbondale. Early in 1855 he was baptized at Aldenville by Rev. Newell Callender who was then holding evangelistic meetings at that place. In 1866 he was united in marriage to Emeline, eldest daughter of Hiram Ledyard and Lucinda Rude of Pleasant Mount township. To this union was born one child, Emmons L. Peck. While I feel it a privilege and an honor to give a brief tribute to this most worthy brother, I am reminded at the beginning of the unlimited field of activity I have to cover and my lack of ability to at all adequately satisfy all claims. If there is ever a time when we realize the need of freedom of speech and a good command of our language it is indeed upon occasions like this, when we wish to dwell upon the good qualities of a friend or emulate the deeds of a brother. Since Brother Peck and my mother were about of an age and children in the same locality, I first came to know him through her. Because of his abiding interest in the Aldenville Baptist church, the Aldenville cemetery, and the Wayne Baptist association some correspondence passed between them at various times and in this way I early learned of his deep sympathy with matters pertaining to organizing. In so far as I know he never failed to respond to any need of theirs if it was brought to his attention. He was a faithful attendant at the sessions of the Wayne Association and its prosperity was near to his heart. He usually participated in the discussions and his remarks were those of a well balanced mind. Deacon Peck at the time of his death was one of the two surviving charter members of the Aldenville church and he always retained his interest in its welfare, and at different times after becoming a member of the Berean church at Carbondale his check came over the Moosic for the support of his first church. We always felt that we had a staunch friend in deacon Peck. Two years ago when in need of a piano I wrote him that we were raising the funds by subscription and the next mail brought a check for twenty-five dollars. When the Aldenville Cemetery association was formed Brother Peck was elected a director and continued in that office until his death. The Peck lot through his care has always been an example of neatness and interest and he contributed regularly to the general fund for the upkeep of the cemetery. At the period of the Civil War he entered the employ of the D. & H. company at Carbondale and continued in that position for over sixty years. This position was one of large responsibility and his fidelity to his employers is proven by his long service. Mr. Peck was a recognized leader in business circles, was director and president of the Pioneer Dime bank at the time of his death. One of the enterprises nearest to his heart was Keystone Academy. He served many years as its secretary and treasurer. He clung to his abiding faith in its value to the denomination during its years of adversity and they were not few. Instead on its maintenance when the other trustees were discouraged and advised closing the doors. He gave liberally in time and money for its support and rejoiced during its prosperity. For a half century he was most prominent in the affairs of the Berean Baptist church of Carbondale and by his good judgment assisted in carrying it over some of the critical points in its history. In conjunction with the late Sheldon Norton he was the promoter of Pioneer Day which we are now observing and was its continuous president. He seemed to realize as few do the debt we owe to our forefathers and was always ready to emulate their deeds of bravery and righteousness. To recount their hardships and to praise their sturdy characters. His mind was replete with anecdotes of their lives and sympathy with their trials. He liked to exhibit the crude implements they used and compare them with the improved implements of modern times. Little did we think when he presided a year ago that his mantle would so soon fall on another. Bro. Peck was never a member of society "so called," but loved the companionship of good people, sought their acquaintance and retained their friendship. We often mourn the loss of some talented young person because of the good we believed they could if spared have accomplished, but this could not apply to our brother. Spared to the ripe age of eighty-six it requires several volumes to record the activities of his tireless life. But few persons have been granted such broad opportunities for fellow service and the means with which to embrace them in connection with an unselfish character and a broad-minded vision. To deacon Peck the needs of the church its departments of work the school, legitimate business, his home, were a challenge to his noble character and readily responded to. His home was noted for its simplicity completeness and hospitality. Alike as husband and father his life was above reproach. Like the apostle Paul, he could well say, "I have fought a good fight. I finished my course, have kept up for me a crown of righteousness which is Christ the Lord." Since his passing, ministers, laymen, trustees, directors and journalists have vied with each other in eulogistic phrases, but I am persuaded that if we consider Deacon Peck's life worthy as an example he would not have us spend our time in idle repetition of his manifold deeds, but what would please him most would be to feel that he had been an inspiration, drawing men to higher and better lives. In passing I would just like to picture him visiting with the saints in glory, who have gone before and whom we have loved long since and lost awhile and in closing may I not say in the words of the poet. Lives of great men all remind us that we too departing may leave behind us, footprints in the sands of time.

A suitable response was made on behalf of the church by Mr. Rude and the secretary, Mrs. Hobart Curtis, was instructed to send a copy to Mrs. Peck and extend to her our sympathy.

It has been the custom to give the history of some of the early families at the meeting, and this year the history of the Stanton family was given by Mrs. Emma Geer.

Deacon Geo. Stanton of Carbondale gave a splendid address, filled with spice and wit, making it very entertaining and was listened to with close attention. The Stanton brothers and sisters gave us several fine vocal selections.

PIONEER DAY: SEPTEMBER 6, 1926

The record book of the Secretary of the Pioneer Days, Lois T. (Norton) Curtis, contains the following account of the 1926 Pioneer Day celebration:

Ninth Annual Meeting 1926.

The Ninth annual Meeting of Old Pioneer & Home Day was observed at the Clinton Center Baptist Church Sept. 6th 1926. Dinner was served at noon to a goodly number. Vice Pres. W. E. Rude called the meeting together. The choir sang several selections - Prayer followed by our pastor Rev. C. K. Shoup. Minutes of last meeting read & approved. An interesting program was carried out. Frank Ledyard of Scranton was very pleasing & humorous with his talk & all enjoyed it. The address of the afternoon was given by Judge Geo. C. Taylor of Scranton. All who heard him was much impressed by his address. The Loomis family history is to be given this year. Closed by Song & Benediction.

(Mrs) Lois N. Curtis Sec'y.

In 1980, Lois T. (Norton) Curtis graciously allowed the author and Donald W. Powell to borrow and make xerographic copies of a large quantity of historical documents in her collection. All of those documents were copied and returned by the Brothers Powell to Lois Curtis in 1980, and were in Lois Curtis' document archive at the time of her death on May 27, 1981. Among those documents are four typewritten pages of information about the Ledyard family, written by Mrs. Emeline (Ledyard) Peck, a typescript of which, by S. Robert Powell, is given below.

The Ledyard Family.

Written and read by Mrs. Emeline Ledyard Peck, at Pleasant Mount, Pa. Pioneer Day at Clinton, Pa. Sept 2, 1926.

I wish to apologize for coming before you with records which may be of little interest to those outside the family of the subject of this sketch, - only the recent persistence of our President is responsible.

"Remove not the ancient landmarks which thy fathers have set up." Deut. 19-14. and "Thou shalt not remove thy neighbors landmarks." Prov. 22-28.

Statistics are meagre, hence must rely largely on local traditions.

Robert Ledyard came to this country from England when a young man, coming as a stowaway, after the disagreeable experience of being compelled to swear allegiance to King George. The story is told that when a piece of money was placed in his hand, he turned his hand over, letting it fall to the ground with no pleasant words.

Upon reaching America, he joined the continental army, enlisting under Benedict Arnold, with whose traitorous doings the older generations are familiar. History tells us he asked for and obtained a command at West Point, then the most important fortress, which he offered to surrender to Sir Henry Clinton. The accidental capture of Major Andre, the British messenger, frustrated the scheme, and Arnold hastily escaped to a sloop of war and went into British service. His army was banished to the Plains of Abram, near Quebec, till the close of the war when they were honorably discharged. Arnold was held in no high esteem in England and died in London lamenting his dastardly act. As a child some of our family remember well hearing our father tell the story as his father told it to him, and seeing the last pension money received, after his death, 'twas paid in silver dollars. No words could express grandfather's contempt for Arnold.

At the close of the revolution, Robert Ledyard settled in Connecticut, later married Sarah Ann Cady of Brooklyn, Conn. A genuine Windham county Connecticut woman. To them were born eight children, six sons and two daughters. In the fall of 1809 they came to Penns Woods, Pennsylvania drawn by horses, with all their worldly possessions loaded in a prairie schooner, with doubtless less conveniences, than those of modern date in which people from this region migrated to the far west seventy or eighty years ago, viz. - Iowa, Ill. Michigan and even Indiana and Ohio can be included.

The emigrants destination was somewhere in the vicinity of Tunkhannock on the Susquehanna River, but cold weather coming on and money scarce they stopped at Uncle Levi Geers who had previously come from the same locality, his wife Aunt Vina Rude Geer, later great Aunt to the honorable president Rude and also great Aunt to a descendant of Robert Ledyard.

They remained there six weeks, when they moved into a log house on what was called the Solomon Sherwood's flats two and a half miles south east of the Pleasant Mount village of today. It has been related by one who was there, that a cat could have been thrown through the chinks, - the boy was young, - we draw the curtain over the experience of that winter.

Later they settled in what is known now as the extreme southern part of Mount Pleasant township, built a log house on the east side of the road, dug a well, and planted apple seeds brought from Connecticut. Some of the third generation now living remember seeing the remains of the old house, the well, always carelessly covered into which mother feared some one might fall; also one kind of flowers in the grass that we never saw any where else, and currant bushes.

In after years, the youngest son Hiram, whom we will mention later built the house ninety nine years ago which still stands on the western side of the road on a pleasant elevation with a beautiful view.

The Ledyard family consisted of six sons and two daughters, - the eldest daughter Clarissa married Thomas Dimock, and never came to Pennsylvania. She died young, leaving two children. One son, Samuel, born in 1790 went eventually to Ohio, settling in the vicinity of Cleveland, had ten children, - eight sons and two daughters, their descendants scattered throughout the west, one living thirty miles south of Cleveland who visited here twelve years ago. In a letter received from him recently, he says that he feels that he is nearly at the end of his journey.

John born in 1794 was killed in the war of 1812 and was by the side of General Pike when he fell at the battle of York. He left no descendants. Girden, the third son was killed by the falling of a tree near the old homestead when he was eighteen years of age. David born in 1795 settled in Illinois, had two sons and two daughters who all lived to reach maturity, but a son and daughter were stricken and passed away in the prime of life. Luther born in 1794 settled in Clinton Township about a mile south of the Ledyard homestead, had five children, all lived to grow up except Scott who was drowned at the age of eighteen. The other children married and had families of their own, attaining over four score years, one reached the age of ninety. Mary married Peter Rider, had five children, three reaching maturity, married but left only one descendant, a grandchild by the name of Thomas. Hiram born in 1802 youngest of the family of Robert Ledyard was but seven years old when the family left Connecticut. He had less advantages and more privations than the others, some of which might be rehearsed, but probably of no interest outside the family, suffice it to say that he was a kind neighbor, a good citizen, a great reader, interested in civic affairs, having served his country as commissioner being elected in 1846.

I remember when a child hearing it remarked that Hiram Ledyard's word was a good as his bond; I wondered what a bond meant, will leave it to others whether of any value. Five of his children reached maturity; one, Dan died in childhood, but two survive and they are present today. With one cousin near Cleveland, previously mentioned, but three of the third generation remain, all octogenarians.

The Ledyards came of sturdy stock, several living past the four score years; Hiram having lived till 97, retaining his mental faculties, including a remarkable memory till his last illness which was short, passing away on June 15, 1899. In politics he was a democrat, maintaining that the democratic principles were the true national principles.

Of the mothers we have made no mention, so far; their anxieties their privations and their hardships together with the loneliness occasioned by the absence of friends with whom it was more difficult to communicate than if living at the present time. Our grandmother was a Baptist, and her well worn bible which is still in existence is a mute testimonial of the comfort and consolation she derived from God's word in her hours of loneliness and privation.

If time can be allowed we would like in extenuation to mention a neighbor who was highly prized, by the name of Chalker. The father was called Captain Charles Chalker. This family consisted of Father, Mother and three children, and came from Guilford Conn. a few years later, and were neighbors with all the word neighbor implies. With their demise the name became extinct, as no descendants remain. Another family by the name of Kingsbury came from Brooklyn Conn. and settled in the neighborhood, were very helpful in many ways, being exceedingly industrious, and of quite an inventive nature, one remains, a member of this church, or Maple Grove.

Ten years ago two of Hiram Ledyard's descendants went by automobile to Windham county Connecticut the place from which our ancestors migrated. It was a town of small pretensions about thirty miles from Providence, R.I. seemingly without much change for many years, owing to a railroad being put through, skipping the town, with the passenger station about four miles distant. Vestiges of its prosperity remain in the way of church buildings Congregational, Unitarian, Baptist and Episcopal, but the congregations are lacking. Attended Unitarian in the morning, not more than forty being present, heard a sermon on Mary Eddy. The Episcopal minister called in the afternoon and invited us to his church. Went there in the evening, 19 present including the choir; services kept up by endowment, the original place of worship a mile and a half from the town, the endowment was for that church, but the town decreased in population a more central location seemed advisable so a smaller building was put up, and the old church abandoned, save a service held there once a year, either Thanksgiving or Christmas to hold the endowment. We stopped at the Putnam house, the only place of entertainment in the town, and formerly the home of General Putnam of revolutionary fame. He was born in Danvers Mass. in 1718 then a part of Salem. The building has been enlarged and is kept open during the summer only for summer boarders.

On Putnam Green near the house Old Put sits enthroned upon bronze and granite, said to be the finest equestrian statue in the world. Preparedness, vim and energy are typified in every line of countenance and pose. He it was who fought the French and Indians along the Canadian border, left his plow for Lexington, fought at Bunker Hill, was one of the four Major Generals of the revolution and defended New York and Philadelphia. In 1739 he moved to Pomfret Conn. where he became a successful farmer and wool grower. When the port of Boston was closed because of the Boston Tea Party, Putnam drove a flock of sheep from the Parish of Brooklyn to Boston to help feed the people. The farmers had long suffered from the depredations of a she wolf and her whelps, and made fruitless efforts to drive her from the neighborhood, which was new and unsettled. Her home was in a cavern, and though brush, straw, and sulphur had been used she still terrorized the community. One dark night at midnight Putnam entered her cavern by a narrow opening, with a torch in one hand, and a musket in the other, and shot her as she was in the act of springing at his throat, and pulled her out by the ears. We will pass over the miraculous escapes he passed through in his life, which can only be accounted for by acknowledging that a higher power protected him to aid us in bringing independence to our Country. In April 1775, tidings of the Battle of Lexington reached him and he left his plow in the field, turned his oxen loose, sent word to his wife Hanna, mounted one of his horses, and started for Cambridge, a distance of 68 miles, making the trip in twenty four hours. He was made Brigadier General. He came to Hartford raised a regiment, and returning to Boston took command at the Battle of Bunker Hill. On the Monument at that place we found the name of our maternal great grandfather, William O'Brien, a protestant, born on the high seas, according to the family records. The daring exploits and escapes of Israel Putnam seem almost without parallel, and would be of great interest to readers of the present day. On a visit to his home in 1778 he had a stroke of paralysis which put an end to his active military career, and he died in Brooklyn Conn May 19, 1790 at the age of 73.

What is to be learned from these experiences of our ancestors? Also in laying aside our daily tasks one day in the year to keep them in remembrance, and encourage in the younger generation a spirit of respect for our forefathers, spreading the mantle of charity over their failures and emulating their virtues. A needful lesson is to bear in mind the words of the hymn - "Only remembered by what we have done" and to SERVE OTHERS, a quality to be cultivated.

A story was told recently in public of a lady who spent her life in devotion and sacrifice to others; she wore a locket, the under side of which she would never let any one see. After she passed to her reward, it was found to bear the inscription, "OTHERS"

Respectfully,

Emeline Ledyard Peck.

Grandison Loomis gave a history of the Loomis family; Flora (Loomis) Brown gave a history of the Reuben Loomis family; Mrs. Augusta Monroe Westgate gave a history of the Aaron Loomis family.

The following account of the 1927 Pioneer Day Celebration is given on pages 9-10 of Edna Loomis Loomis' 1955 book, Ancestry of Ora Loomis Russell [and] Edna Loomis Loomis and Descendants of Ora Loomis Russell:

A COPY OF A PAPER PREPARED AND READ BY FLORA LOOMIS BROWN ON PIONEER DAY AT CLINTON, PA., 1927

"The tenth annual meeting of the Pioneer Day was observed at the Clinton Center Baptist Church, Monday, September 5, 1927. The ladies aid served dinner----- Each year some pioneer family history is given. Grandison Loomis, aged 79, related the early Loomis family stating they took up their duties in this country in 1638. Mrs. Augusta Monroe Westgate, aged 84, told of the hardships and pleasant times the early pioneers had and gave a fine report of the Aaron Loomis family, her grandfather. Mrs. Westgate is a daughter of Uruia Loomis Monroe who lived to be 99 years old. Mrs. Flora Loomis Brown gave the Reuben Loomis history. It follows:

REUBEN LOOMIS FAMILY HISTORY

"In 1816, Reuben Loomis left Litchfield County, Connecticut, for the wilds of Pennsylvania, with his wife who was Miss Sallie Westlin. He made his home near the present Bartholomew farm in Pleasant Mt. Township. They were the parents of seven children: Erastus W., who married Mehitabel Muzzey; Oliver H., who as a young man went to Honesdale, and worked in a shoe store. There he was married but died soon after his marriage with what now would be called acute appendicitis; Daniel went West and married and was lost trace of by the family; Hiram Pease married Laura Griswold; Marietta died while yet a young woman; Lucretia became the wife of Rensselaer Stephenson of Peckville.

"Erastus and his wife made their home on the farm just north of the Church. He was a man of fiery temperament, yet penitent of his fault. He was extravagant in his tastes, nothing but the very best being good enough. I am told that for many years he carried a fine gold watch which he prized very much, so that he always kept it wrapped in red Flannel when carrying it. Then when he wished to know the time of day he would walk through two or three rooms to look at a clock rather than go to the trouble of unwrapping the watch. He and his wife were very good singers and both sang in the choir, he being the chorister for many years. After the death of his wife, he made his home among his friends throughout the neighborhood, some of them being Ensign McMullen, Kirk Gaylord, and Henry Curtis, and later with his brother, Hiram, where he died at the age of 84.

"Hiram as a young man, earned his livelihood in driving oxen and working in the lumber woods. Shortly after his marriage, they became owners of a farm in Clinton. They were parents of four children: Theron Orsemus; Oliver G.; Helen A.; and Francis Earl. He operated his farm for several years then went with his wife and two sons, Theron and Earl, (The children Oliver and Helen having died in early childhood) he moved to Delaware where he was engaged in the mercantile business. Several years later, he returned to Carbondale where for one and one-half years he engaged in the same business. Removing his business interests to Aldenville, Wayne County, he continued merchandising at that place for five years. During his stay in Aldenville, his son Theron worked the farm with Erastus as his housekeeper, he being a splendid housekeeper as he always preferred women's work and sewing to manual labor. I am told he always made his own shirts and pieced a number of bed quilts. Hiram then returned with his family to his Clinton Center farm where they erected a fine new residence and there he continued to make his home. He never sought public favor but capably filled township offices. He was closely affiliated with the church and had its interests at heart, holding the office of Deacon at his death which occurred in his eightieth year.

"Lucretia Loomis for some time after her marriage to Rensselaer Stephenson, made her home near Hankins Pond, later removing to Peckville where her two daughters, Mrs. Ann Stephenson Belknap, and Mrs. Eliza Stephenson Tuthill still reside. The son, George, now resides in Seattle, Washington.

"Theron and Earl Loomis as young men formed a partnership in the lumbering business erecting a sawmill to further their interest. The partnership was finally dissolved, Theron going to Carbondale to make his home, and Earl remaining on the father's farm which he conducted and also continued to run a sawmill. Francis Earl Loomis married Mary Paynter. To this union the following children were born: Herbert, Flora, Russell, Nettie, Laura, Floyd, Raymond, and Nelson. Earl Loomis died in 1921, at his home in Clinton.

"Theron Loomis married Emma Squire. Two daughters were born to this happy couple: Ora and Edna. Theron Loomis died several years ago."

PIONEER DAY: SEPTEMBER 3, 1928

Among the historical documents collected by Lois T. (Norton) Curtis is a newspaper clipping entitled "Pioneer Day Calls Good Crowd," which was published in The Wayne Independent. Written in pencil at the top of this clipping is the date, "Sept 3, 1928," which is the date on which Pioneer Day was celebrated in that year. It is from a xerographic copy of the clipping that was owned by Lois Curtis that S. Robert Powell typed the copy that is given below.

Pioneer Day Calls Good Crowd

For a number of years "Pioneer" day has been successfully conducted at the Clinton Center Baptist church. One of the moving spirits in this unique and delightful observance was the late E. M. Peck. His widow was again present this year and is deeply interested in every feature of the program. It was rainy on Monday in the morning, but in spite of the threatening weather there was a large attendance to partake of the bountiful dinner which the ladies had provided in the dining room of the church. As they have done before they served a delightful menu to those who came to have part in the exercises. A nominal charge is made to defray expenses and the large patronage each year shows how successful they have been in this part of the day's features.

Clinton township was settled over a hundred years ago by natives of New England many of whom drove their ox teams thru the woods from Connecticut and Massachusetts. They took up lands, built for themselves homes, reared their families, established their churches and schools and became leading citizens of Wayne county. They were mostly Baptists by early training and in their surroundings carried out the training of their family history. As a consequence there is a church at Clinton Center, South Clinton, one in the northern part of the township and one at Aldenville, of that denomination. The edifice in which this program is carried out reminds one of the New England architecture such as one finds today in the rural sections of Connecticut and Massachusetts, built and occupied by Congregationalists or Baptists.

A delightful feature and an impressive part of the program is a custom which they have had for a number of years on Pioneer day is reading the history of one of the pioneer families as part of the exercises. This year it was the Arnold family, read by one of the members whose name we did not catch. [Written in pencil on this clipping at this point is the name, "Claude," i. e., it was Claude Arnold who read the Arnold family history.] It was carefully prepared and showed the vigor of those early settlers existing in their descendants, many of whom live in Wayne county and others have moved beyond its borders and are making their successful way in the agricultural, business and industrial pursuits.

Among the attendants both around the dinner table and at the service in the auditorium were those who had come from far and near. This program is carried out each Labor day.

W. E. Rude, active in the life of the church, presided, and prayer was offered by one of the deacons of the church, Mr. Perham. Mr. Curtis had charge of the music as usual and it was inspiring as patriotic and devotional hymns were sung. A violin solo added to the interest also.

The activity of the society has been considerable this last year in behalf of the cemetery association. A plan is now inaugurated by which $2 a year takes care of a plot, and $50 endowment left to the incorporation guarantees the perpetual care of the plot. The editor of this paper was the speaker of the day and the address was appropriate along the lines of lessons from the lives of the pioneers, with present day application of each one's duty to his home, to his church and to his nation. Cashier L. A. Howell of Honesdale National Bank was with Mr. Pennell and Mr. Rude courteously called upon him for a few remarks which were responded to with appropriateness, impressiveness and good will.

After the exercises many lingered for a considerable time renewing acquaintances, greeting old-time friends, planning for the future of the observance and making the day another delightful experience in the history of Pioneer observance which bids fair to go down thru the generations as both helpful and inspiring. "Honor thy father and thy mother" becomes a part of the attendants habits.

PIONEER DAY: SEPTEMBER 2, 1929

Among the historical documents collected by Lois T. (Norton) Curtis is a newspaper clipping entitled "Pioneer Day At Clinton Centre," which was published in The Wayne Independent on a Saturday following the Pioneer Day celebration of September 2, 1929, probably the issue of The Wayne Independent that was published on September 7, 1929. It is from a xerographic copy of that newspaper clipping that S. Robert Powell typed the copy that is given below. Written in pencil on the top of this clipping is "1929."

Pioneer Day At Clinton Centre

Pioneer Day program is held each Labor Day at Clinton Centre Baptist church. It has come to be an important annual event. Old time residents and settlers and their descendants gather for a good time and renew old acquaintances and meeting old friends. This year they are there from the state of Washington, Mississippi, New York, New Jersey and Massachusetts. About 200 partook of the bountiful dinner provided by the Cemetery Association and Ladies Aid society of the church.

At two o'clock all gathered in the church for the entertainment. Rev. Mrs. Bush gave the opening prayer. William Rude, the president, called on the choir led by Arthur Curtis and America was sung. The minutes of the last meeting; of Labor Day 1928 were read by Mrs. Hobart Curtis, secretary. The president then announced there would be a song by the Terrell brothers. Two sons of Ed. Terrell, aged 8 and 10 years, came to the platform and sang O Susanna, Don't Cry for Me, with voices clear as a bell and every word distinctly spoken. For an encore they sang "All Alone in the Moonlight."

Ruth Merwin, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bunting then read the history of the Bunting family. Then the song, Faith is the Victory.

Master Willie Bartholomay recited Lincoln's Gettysburg address. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Curtis and is only 5 years old, but every word was distinctly spoken, and emphasis given to the out-standing words and sentences. It could not have been better recited by a senior, of high school. Miss Norvell Curtis then sang The Bells of St. Marys in a very acceptable manner.

The principal speaker of the day was Prof. Dunseith of The Technical high school of Scranton. He gave a vision of the early settlers on their way from their homes to the place in the wilderness that they chose for their homes, and of the hardships they endured.

The president then called upon Oscar Norton of Mississippi, grandson of Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Norton, who compared our beautiful hills and valleys to the low flat country. He lives very close to the levees that are their only protection from the overflow of the Mississippi river. He was proud that he was the descendant of such fine pioneer stock.

He was followed by Wm. Patey, son of Rev. Mr. Patey and Mrs. Amanda Curtis Patey, of Washington. He wondered why the pioneers wanted to go so far away from their homes and why his parents moved so far away from all their friends and relatives.

The meeting closed by singing The Sweet By and By, and benediction by Rev. Mrs. Bush.-K.R.

Pioneer Day At Clinton Center

(Contributed)

Twenty years ago through the instrumentality of Sheldon Norton and E. M. Peck of Carbondale, a conglomerate rock weighing about six tons was placed in the cemetery at Clinton Center and on that huge stone is a bronze tablet listing the names of the early settlers as well as the early members and pastors of the Clinton Center church.

And on that memorable day, about 400 people from the immediate vicinity and near-by towns, gathered to witness the unveiling and dedication of this monument. At the cemetery a brief history of the first settlers and the early ministers was given by the chairman, E. M. Peck. After repairing [to] the church auditorium Sheldon Norton gave an interesting and instructive address on his boyhood recollections of these pioneer settlers.

At his suggestion, it was voted to set apart a day each year for meeting to commemorate the early settlers. It has been subsequently celebrated on Labor Day for the last two decades.

From time to time as we have listened to the history of the different families, some have dated their ancestry back to Revolutionary soldiers, some to John and Priscilla Alden, and now as we were about to celebrate the Tercentenary of Roger Williams, we unearthed a lineage of his blood.

In 1918, Rev. George Stone (now deceased) a former resident of Clinton was here and gave the history of the West family. During his retirement from the ministry he has lived with his son in Hollywood, Calif. This last winter he spent half a day each week in the Historical Department of Genealogy in the Public Library at Los Angeles. And in his research found he was a descendant of Matthew West. Matthew West was banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony and took refuge with Roger Williams in Rhode Island.

He was associated with Roger Williams in establishing the first Baptist Church in America as well as the first government on the basis of separation of Church and State.

It is interesting to note that the descendants of these two families of Clinton are neighbors living on partial tracts of the original Stone estate. Therefore, these neighbors can shake hands and congratulate themselves on their fraternal and notable ancestry.

It is indeed remarkable that so much history should cluster around so sparsely a settled country as Clinton Center.

While there are many descendants of these different ancestors lying in yonder cemetery there are still descendants living in the vicinities near by, who should accept the heritage of these vital principles so that our nation may ever remain a nation of democracy, whereby we can worship God according to the dictates of our own conscience.

The following is a program given on Labor Day in commemoration of Roger Williams: Song for assembling--"Come to The Church in The Wildwood," Bugle Call, Billy Evans. March and Salutations to the American Flag and to the Bible--by the children of the Bible Vacation School, conducted by Miss Lillian Westcott. Invocation, pastor, Rev. M. D. Singer; address of welcome, Violet Varcoe, a daughter of American Revolution; song by George Hauser, a descendant of Roger Williams; song, Hurrah for the Red, White and Blue, by three little girls, Lillian Singer, Audrey Terrel and Virginia Rude, attired symbolizing the flag; Poetic History, by John Griswold, a son of American Revolution.

The Life of Roger Williams, written by Rev. Dr. Roger Williams of Greensburg, Pa. Rev. Mr. Williams supplied our pulpit during his summer vacation, while attending school at Bucknell about 35 years ago. The paper was read by Mrs. Hobart Curtis.

Song, It Floats for You and Me, by the choir; instrumental music, Billy Bartholomay, a son of the American Revolution; discussion, What Was the Life of Roger Williams Contributed to Our Nation, Politically, Socially and Religiously?

a. Politically, by Rev. Dr. Pugh, Waymart.
b. Socially, by Rev. M. D. Singer, Aldenville.
c. Religiously, by Rev. Dr. Fulton, Carbondale.
Closing song, Oh That Will Be Glory For Me. Benediction, Rev. Elias Jones, Herrick Center.

PIONEER DAY: SEPTEMBER 7, 1936

Among the historical documents collected by Lois T. (Norton) Curtis is a clipping, possibly from a newspaper, entitled "Clinton Center Held Annual Pioneer Day," at the top of which is written in pencil "Sept 7 - 1936." It is from a xerographic copy of that clipping that S. Robert Powell typed the copy that is given below.

Clinton Center Held Annual Pioneer Day

The Pioneer or "Old Home Day" was observed as usual on Labor Day at the Clinton Baptist church. The day being pleasant, many gathered in the dining hall to partake of a bountiful dinner which the ladies had provided. The tables and auditorium were beautifully decorated with flowers. Everyone was in good spirits and at 2 o'clock, the president W. E. Rude called the assemblage to order and a song service was led by A. H. Curtis. Rev. M. D. Singer, pastor of the church, gave the invocation; Song, "The Church In The Wildwood"; Address of Welcome W. E. Rude. It was twenty one years ago today that the monument across the church yard was unveiled in memory of the Old Pioneers, who toiled, prayed and went thru hardships without relief checks, automobiles, luxuries of any kind founded the church in which we are met today. Great men are wanted, great women are needed.

The secretary, Mrs. Lois Curtis read the minutes of last years program which was based on "The Life of Roger Williams". Short readings by Rev. M. D. Singer; recitation, "A place for boys", John Rude; singing, "The Old Spinning Wheel" by the three little Gregory sisters; recitation "The Good Old Times", Calvin Arnold. Rev. A. D. Merrill of the Hawley Baptist church was the speaker of the day and the address was appropriate along the lines of lessons from the lives of the pioneers with present day application of each ones duty to his home, to his church and to his nation. Solo "Far Away" was sweetly rendered by Mrs. Richard Gregory. Closing song, "The Sweet By and By. Benediction by Rev. Singer.

The text of Mrs. W. E. Rude's tribute to a pioneer of Clinton Township (see reference in the text of the minutes for 1937, above) has come down to us. It is included in the minutes for 1937, and a typescript of that tribute is given herebelow.

"1937 For several years past a young man neighboring around eighty has been attending Pioneer Day. He formerly lived in Clinton but since has been living in Scranton.

He has been for 58 years at the mercy of time pieces throughout the valley. Within that time he has received the degree of 'Dr. of Clocks.' He has treated cases from the little time piece on a child's arm to the old grand father's clock of our forefathers day. He makes them run without limping, strike without hitting, and hands pass each other without scrapping. He also makes their faces bright and shiny and tells us when to get up, when to eat, when to work, and when to go to bed.

Having all these qualities, Mr. Garfield Gaylord intended to sing "Grandfathers Clock" at this time dedicating it to this Dr. of Clocks. I'll introduce Dr of Clocks A. B. Baker

PIONEER DAY: SEPTEMBER 2, 1940

The record book of the Secretary of the Pioneer Days, Lois T. (Norton) Curtis, contains the following account of the Pioneer Day celebrations in 1940:

This year commemorates the 25th anniversary of our Pioneer Day. E. M. Peck and Sheldon Norton of Carbondale instituted the idea & the people of the community worked together got the conglomerate rock on the Lillie Road app. cost $50.- He [E. M. Peck] had the pastor names along with the old settlers names on the plate. Mrs. Laura Loomis unveiled the monument. She was the oldest member we ever had in the church being baptized when she was 11 yrs old & died at the age of 97. We had the History of all the families that were settlers in this community. In 1922 we dedicated a conglomerate rock in honor of John Griswold. We had a Roger Williams program & P. P. Bliss program & many different varieties. One year Moses U. Squire from Seattle Washington was here & gave a talk about his boy hood days & others have done the same.

Many pastors have been back to talk to us & bring us cheer & encouragement. Many of the church members & community people that have moved away have been back and many have passed to their reward. Time doesn't permit giving the names of these people.

Many changes have taken place here - One we re-modeled our church in 1931.

Mr. W. E. Rude has been the faithful Pres for these 25 years & Mrs. Rude has prepared the programs. Much credit is due these faithful people of God.

I have most of these family Histories in my possession.

Included in the minutes for 1940 is page one of Augusta Curtis' handwritten copy of the text, "In the Nineties," that she wrote and read at the 1940 Pioneer Day celebration.

In the Nineties

We have in our community or near vicinity a quartet of people in their nineties. For whom I'd like to pay tribute.

We would rather have them here to give them a friendly handshake & hear a few words from them. But that seems impossible.

I think it is fitting at this time to congratulate them on their longevity of life & influence.

First we will mention Mr. George Perkins residing at Waymart he was a member of our Clinton Center church for many years.

Then we still have in our midst Mrs. Emma Goodrich for many years a teacher of our youth & therefore did much in making the splendid history of our community. Then there is Mr. Grandison Loomis, the oldest member of Clinton Center Church & a long time member of Moosic Grange.

The 4th member of this quarter is Mrs. Amanda Cramer. She has just stepped on the threshold of the nineties.

And she is a charter member of our W. C. T. U., an organization which extends a helping hand for the best...

PIONEER DAY: SEPTEMBER 1, 1941

The record book of the Secretary of the Pioneer Days, Lois T. (Norton) Curtis, contains the following account of the 1941 Pioneer Day celebration:

"In Appreciation"

Twenty six years ago 'Pioneer Day' was first established with E. M. Peck as President and W. E. Rude as Vice Pres. After the passing of E. M. Peck to his eternal Home in 1923, W. E. Rude was elected Pres. and Mr. Peck's son Emmons L. Peck was elected Vice Pres.

Since we last gathered here our beloved Pres. W. E. Rude has passed thru the Gates to his Eternal Home.

Mr. Rude was a regular attendant at all meetings pertaining to His church and all organizations in the community which helped to up lift mankind. We always felt we had a staunch friend in Deacon Rude. He gave liberally in time & Money and rejoiced in the prosperity of our church & all its branches by his good judgment carried many burdens we know not of.

He loved companionship of people and retained their friendship. To deacon Rude the need to the church its departments of work, his business life, His Home were a challenge to this Noble character.

Like the Apostle Paul he could well say, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, have kept the Faith, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which is Christ the Lord."

Little did we think when he presided a year ago that His mantle would so soon fall on another.

"Sometimes, long after the sun is gone
As we watch the close of day,
The sky is bright with a lingering light,
Mid the evening shadows gray.
Long after a faithful life is gone
To that fairer land on high,
Our lives are bright with a lingering light,
For a true life cannot die."

"I cannot say, and I will not say
That he is dead. He is just away!
With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand
He has wandered into an unknown land,
And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be, since he lingers there;
And you--oh you, who the wildest yearn
For the old-time step and the glad return,
Think of him faring on, as dear
In the love of There, as the love of Here,
Think of him still as the same, I say;
He is not dead--he is just away!"
Visiting with his saints in Glory. LNC.

NOTE:

It is not known if any Pioneer Day celebrations were held after 1942. See the information that is reported under "Pioneer Day: 1917."

A homecoming day was celebrated in the Clinton Center Baptist Church on September 17, 1978 (see description below). This celebration was not described as, for example, the "twenty-eighth pioneer day" to be celebrated in Clinton Township. That is to say, this 1978 celebration was not, it appears, explicitly related to the pioneer day celebrations that were held in Clinton Township in the period 1915-1942. Rather, the 1978 celebration was a consequence, it would seem, of the same impulse (the desire to honor the pioneers and to celebrate the passage of another year) that resulted in the institution of the pioneer day celebrations in 1915.

HOME COMING DAY, 1978

The following notice was published in The Wayne Independent of Tuesday, September 12, 1978, p. 3:

Clinton Center Church will have Homecoming Day on Sept. 17

The Clinton Center Baptist Church along highway 296 between Curtis Valley and Waymart, was organized in 1831. Through all the years since that time it has stood as a symbol for good will among men, and through the numerous ministers that have served, as well as the members that have given of their time and talent, have endeavored to witness to the saving grace of God through His Son Jesus Christ.

The church will have a Homecoming Day on September 17. The regular Sunday morning service will be at 11 a.m. At 2:30 p.m. the homecoming service will be called to order. There will be a roll call of members, greetings from former ministers in person or by letter, special music by the combined choirs of the Aldenville and Clinton Center Churches, and congregational singing.

The highlight of this service will be a message by the Rev. Milo D. Singer, Edwardsville, who was minister of the Aldenville, Clinton Center and Maple Grove Baptist Churches for most of the 1930s. Everyone will be welcome to attend either or both of these services on this homecoming day. The Rev. Dwight Anderson is the present pastor.

Given below is a typescript of the program of the homecoming service that was held at 2:30 P.M. on September 17, 1978 in the Clinton Center Baptist Church:

"I thank my God upon every remembrance of you." Phil. 1:3

REINSTATE CLINTON TOWNSHIP PIONEER DAYS

TO: DESCENDANTS OF THE PIONEER SETTLERS OF CLINTON TOWNSHIP AND FRIENDS OF CLINTON TOWNSHIP

I propose that a Clinton Township Pioneer Day celebration be held on Sunday, August 22, 1982 in Clinton Township.

The format of the celebration would be the format of the Clinton Center Baptist Church sesquicentennial celebration, namely:

--church service in the morning;

--covered-dish dinner at noon;

--church service in the afternoon, featuring an historical program (a history of the Pioneer Day celebrations held in the period 1915-1942 could be presented; one or more Clinton Township family histories could be presented);

--luncheon following afternoon church service.

What are your thoughts on this proposal? Write to me at the following address:

S. Robert Powell
Post Office Box 161
Carbondale, PA 18407-0161.

KENNETH SINGER'S HISTORY

The following history of the Clinton Center Baptist Church was written by Kenneth Singer from records kept by the late Lois Tryphenia (Norton) Curtis. This history was presented at the afternoon service in the Clinton Center Baptist Church on Sunday, August 23, 1981.

HISTORY OF CLINTON CENTER BAPTIST CHURCH

We are coming together today to review the history of the Clinton Center Baptist Church. Also, to pay tribute to the pioneers who have made possible this church and the beautiful and very productive farms which make up this community. As we do so, it is difficult to visualize the hardships that these early settlers endured during those years, 150 years ago. Most of the early settlers came from Connecticut. Among the first were, Rev. Samuel West, 1808 and Robert Ledyard 1809.

In September 1810, Levi Norton, David Gaylord, Rufus Grenell, S. E. North, and several others came on a trip from the township of Winchester, now called West Minsted, Connecticut, arriving in what is now called Clinton Township. They were so taken up with the prospect of the land that Levi Norton went to Philadelphia and bought nine parcels of land, containing 3000 acres, paying for it with "Pay Certificates" which he had received as pay when he was discharged from the Continental Army, having served under Gen. Putnam in the Light Brigade. In later years, Levi Norton established his home on an elevation from which an excellent view of the surrounding country may be had. It became the Norton Homestead and was named "The Ridge Farm." Today, Mrs. Dwight Rude lives on this farm. (Levi Norton was the first person buried in the [Clinton Center Baptist Church] cemetery--1823).

In 1811, Levi Norton fitted out his son, Alva, and he came to Clinton, arriving Christmas day. Alva, accompanied by another man he met at Mt. Pleasant, came down the North-South road, and erected a cabin at the base of the mountain, opposite what is now the Clinton Center Baptist Church. The cabin was 10 X 12, with split basswood poles for a puncheon floor. Little more could be done as winter settled in with four feet of snow.

In the spring of 1812, other families arrived, began clearing land and making homes in this area which was called "Beech Woods." These families were all Baptists and held services in their homes. In 1813, Alva Norton conducted the first Bible School in Wayne County. Several other families located to this area and began clearing land in order to build homes. Levi Norton had a saw mill on the land where Nellie Reese now lives. The Mt. Republic Post Office was opened in the home of Alva Norton, now owned by Neil Robinson.

At that time, Rev. Elijah Peck was pastor of the Strict Baptist Church of Mt. Pleasant. He preached for them once a month for seven or eight years at homes in the neighborhood. The settlers gathered for miles around to hear the gospel. A number were baptized into the Mt. Pleasant Church.

Rev. John Smitzer, pastor of Bethany, preached for these people in 1823-24. Rev. Horace Jones of Damascus served from 1827-28. Thomas Teasdale and Rev. Charles H. Hubbard preached once a month for three years. Alexander Smith preached in the winter of 1830-31 and was ordained in Rufus Grenell's barn in summer of 1831.

On Oct. 23, 1831, the brethren and sisters, having been granted letters from Mt. Pleasant Church, met at the home of Deacon Rufus Grenell and discussed the propriety of organizing an independent church.

Deacon Grenell, D. S. West and Charles Fox were appointed to report a covenant and articles of faith at a meeting to be held November 3. On that date, the report was presented, adopted, and a call issued, for a council of recognition. On November 10, 1831, representatives assembled from Clifford, Mt. Pleasant, and Bethany. The council unanimously agreed to recognize the new church with 24 members.

Rufus Grenell, D. S. West and John Reynolds were chosen deacons with Ovid Grenell as clerk. Services were held in Deacon Grenell's home for some time. They were also held in the old barn on Theron Loomis farm, later owned by Clarence Singer and presently by Alex Grunski. Some remnants of this old barn remain today. Services were also held in the schoolhouse for fourteen years. The schoolhouse stood on the line of the Norton and Loomis farms, now owned by Ward Lillie and Nelson Corey.

In 1846, it was decided to purchase land and build a meeting house. (Deed for land is on a separate page) The first meeting house was completed in the fall of 1846. Rev. W. K. Mott preached the dedicatory sermon. On July 25, 1851, the building was completely destroyed by a hurricane with some of the material being carried several miles away. Among the things that were recovered was the original communion set, which is now encased in a cabinet mounted in the sanctuary. This communion set has been preserved by the Norton family to this day.

A new meeting house was erected and dedicated January 24, 1855. Rev. Zelotes Grenell preached the dedicatory sermon. A revival followed and forty-one were baptized!!

Many of the members became aroused to their sense of responsibilities and humbled themselves before God. Unbelief and despondency yielded before the gracious manifestation of divine power. The covenant meetings were well attended. At one meeting there were 90 present. The refreshing descended like a gentle shower until it pervaded the entire community. The hearts of the young and old were touched with the divine spirit. Husbands and wives, parents and children, yielded their hearts and consecrated their lives to the service of God.

This church has been responsible for sending many men and women into the full-time service of our Lord and Saviour.

In reviewing the minutes of the covenant meetings, it is very evident that discipline among church members was of utmost importance and held high priority among the members. They were disciplined according to Matthew 18: 15-18. At one meeting, it is noted that on August 22, 1835, while the church met in covenant, quite a degree of coldness was manifested by members present. Whereas, A. Davenport, had spoken harshly and manifested anger toward A. W. Norton at a spelling school last winter. He, at this time, confessed his fault and asked for forgiveness. The church voted to accept his confession and restore him to good fellowship.

At one covenant meeting, the only Christian present was E. K. Norton and one unconverted man. Mr. Norton read the Bible, prayed and talked of God's love and mercy for the sinner, the same as if the house was filled. Later, the man was converted and he dated his conversion to that meeting.

During the years in the middle of the 19th Century, many dedicated men of God filled this pulpit preaching the gospel of salvation. Space does not permit the full review of the work done by these men. One of long and faithful pastorates was Rev. James Remsen. His earnest desire to win souls was evidenced by the record that he baptized over 100 persons during his ministry. It is recorded that because of his loving and gracious demeanor, that no one could preside quite so well at a marriage ceremony, baptismal waters, or funeral services as could Elder Remsen.

Since that time, the church has been blessed with many men who have been filled with the Spirit of the Master. Because of the faithful preaching of the gospel during the years, many have gone forth to teach and preach the gospel. (List of preachers, missionaries, and licensed laymen are listed on a separate page)

Among some of the inspiring events of those early years, one stands out in particular. During evangelistic meetings being conducted by Rev. Brundage, P. P. Bliss, who was conducting a musical convention in the area, attended the meetings. During one sermon the closing words of Rev. Brundage were, "He who is almost persuaded, is almost saved; but to be almost saved is to be entirely lost." Mr. Bliss was so inspired that he went to a home near Aldenville, where he was staying at the time and wrote the very familiar hymn, "Almost Persuaded."

The Wayne Association was formed in 1857. The church joined the association in 1872 having previously had fellowship with the Abington Association. This church has had an active part in the Wayne Association ever since and has hosted the association on several occasions.

In 1866, the church voted to raise money to purchase a cabinet organ. In earlier years, the church had a choir which was led by the leader and a bass violin.

In 1881, Mrs. Laura Rude played her first piano piece during the 50th Anniversary celebration. She became the church organist and pianist for 63 years.

In 1903, Clinton Center and Aldenville became a united field, selecting a pastor jointly. The parsonage was deeded in trust to the trustees of the two bodies.

Five times drafts have been made on the membership to form new churches. Aldenville-1854, Phoenix-1864, South Clinton-1891, also Forest City and Maple Grove. This church and community have been represented in five different wars. (Listed on a separate page)

In 1915, E. M. Peck had erected a natural flint conglomerate rock, taken from the Moosic mountain, west of the church, weighing about six tons. This rock was erected in front of the cemetery in memory of our early pioneers and ministers. Nearly 400 people attended the dedication ceremony.

The church has held anniversary celebrations for the 50th, 75th, 100th, 110th, and 125th years. In 1931, in preparation for the 100th celebration, extensive renovations were made. The Ladies Aid Society of which Kathryn Curtis was president, raised over $1600 for the project. In their efforts to beautify and improve the sanctuary, it was papered, a new floor installed, new seats, a vestibule added, two rugs, choir chairs and a runner. It was also painted inside and out.

On December 3, 1928, an Ecclesiastical council was called by the church for the purpose of considering the propriety of ordaining our pastor, Thomas T. Edwards. The council unanimously voted his ordination. The ordination sermon was preached by Rev. J. Dwight Roberts of Scranton.

In 1936, a goodly number of men and women gathered for a work day and the sheds were torn down and the lumber piled. Thirty-five gallons of paint were applied to the church roof, while the women cleaned the church and supplied a bountiful dinner.

During the 1920's, a homelite 32 volt electrical system was installed to light the church building for evening services. This was prior to the rural electrification program of the 30's. In 1941, a new furnace was installed and hymn books purchased. A communion table inscribed with the words "In Remembrance of Me" was presented by the young people in 1955.

On November 19, 1957, the Wayne and Bridgewater Association joined into one organization upon recommendation of a committee, of which Rev. Russell Edwards and Lois Curtis were members. One of the bases for consideration was taken from Psalm 133:1.

The largest membership of the church was reported in 1876 with 169 members. Several went out to form other churches in the areas of South Clinton and Forest City. Due to a changing community, the present membership is about 35.

As we survey the past and hope for the future, God grant that we may meditate on the faithful, earnest and devoted piety of our forefathers and may it encourage us to be more faithful in our service to the Lord. Today, we find many excuses to stay away from a worship service, but the records relate that one lady walked four miles to church when past 70 years of age!!

In closing, I would like to use the parting words Rev. Zelotes Grenell spoke to this church on the occasion of the Jubilee Celebration.

"When speaking of the harvest fields and the pagan world, waiting for the words of life and of the blessings we employ, those preaching far and near from us, ask ourselves these questions: What have I done? What am I doing? What ought I do in carrying out the Great Commission? Then act for God and in view of eternity."

Christians pray that we may be awakened from our lethargy and help our present pastor in winning lost souls into the Kingdom. We do not labor for Christ in vain and as we walk in His footsteps, we shall be blessed.

Time is short. Improve it while it is given to you. The great good we all can do by our united love can only be measured in eternity.

Written by Kenneth Singer from records kept by Lois Curtis.

* The list of the charter members of the Clinton Center Baptist Church that is given here, as well as this footnote by S. Robert Powell, did not appear in the History of the Clinton Center Baptist Church that was read by Kenneth Singer at the Sesquicentennial Celebration on August 23, 1981. The reason we have substituted the list that is given here for the one that was in Kenneth Singer's history is given in the next paragraph.

All of the published histories of the Clinton Center Baptist Church state that there were 24 charter members of the Clinton Center Baptist Church, but all of those histories list only 23 members. In an effort to resolve this problem, S. Robert Powell consulted the original handwritten record book of the Clinton Center Baptist Church, and found the names of the 24 charter members. Those names are listed here exactly as they are in the original handwritten records. The reader is advised, therefore, that the list of the charter members of the Clinton Center Baptist Church that is given here is the only complete and accurate list in print of the 24 constituent members of the Clinton Center Baptist Church.

Regarding the original handwritten record book of the Clinton Center Baptist Church: Contained in the library of Lois Tryphenia (Norton) Curtis at the time of her death was a record book, 7 3/4" X 12 1/2", which contains:

1. the original handwritten records of the Mount Pleasant Baptist Church from 1807 to 1819;
2. the original handwritten records of the Clinton Center Baptist Church from October 23, 1831 to March 14, 1857.

At the Sesquicentennial Celebration of the Clinton Center Baptist Church on August 23, 1981, Mrs. Wilson B. Smith (506 Robin Road, Lititz, PA 17543) told S. Robert Powell that she owns a typescript, which she made, of the Mount Pleasant Baptist Church and the Clinton Center Baptist Church original handwritten records in the library of Lois Tryphenia (Norton) Curtis at the time of her death.

CLINTON CENTER

190 people registered for the celebration of the 150th anniversary of the Clinton Center Baptist Church on Sunday, Aug. 23. The morning service was held at 10:30 a.m. The church was filled. People were sitting in chairs and standing at the back of the church. The choir sang, "To God Be The Glory," written by Fanny Crosby, a blind woman who wrote over 7000 poems. Many were put to music. She lived to be 95 years of age. Rev. Joseph Westcott, a Carbondale native, the speaker of the morning, gave an inspiring and challenging message. An abundant dinner was served by the ladies of the Aldenville Baptist Church.

At the afternoon service, thanks were extended to all who had helped in planning for the anniversary celebration. There was a showing of hands of members, former members, friends from Carbondale, Waymart, Honesdale, etc. One former pastor was present and given an opportunity to greet the people. He was Rev. Philip T. Shear, Mainesburg. Guests were recognized and letters read from former pastors.

Dr. R. Eugene Crow, executive minister of Pennsylvania and Delaware Baptist Convention, was the guest speaker for the afternoon. His message was based on St. Paul's letter to the Romans, Chapter 12:1, 2.

Out-of-state guests were: Leona Curtis Vaughn, Ferndale, Wash.; Mr. and Mrs. Clark Hungerford, Cleveland Hgts., Ohio; Heidi Crossman, Brighton, Mich.; Darwin, Florence and Mark Geuther, Ithaca, N.Y.; Elva Bates, Endicott, N.Y.; Rev. and Mrs. Joseph Westcott, Parkersburg, W.V.; Mr. and Mrs. Earl Smith, Parkersburg, W.V.; Mrs. Martha Struble, Bloomingdale, N.J.; Joan and Allyn Bartholomay, Endwell, N.Y.; Mrs. and Mrs. Leah Penn, Richmond, Va.; Gwynn, Cindy and Brian Bartholomay, Endwell, N.Y.; John Allen, Endicott, N.Y.; Constance Cooley Johnson, Mahwah, N.J.; Kenneth M. Johnson, Mahwah, N.J.; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bostwick, New York, N.Y.; Beth C. Hungerford, Cleveland, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Saintaire, Pomona Park, Fla.

At the close of the afternoon service, another abundant meal was served. Pictures were taken by Donald M. Powell, Carbondale and Chester. His twin brother, S. Robert Powell, Carbondale and New York, N.Y., was helpful in registering people. Two long time friends of the Clinton Center Church, and active in the Baptist work, were present, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Sheard. As Mrs. Sheard is handicapped with arthritis, she was unable to go inside of the church, but many friends greeted them at their car.

The following letter to the Editor was published in the issue of The Wayne Independent that was published on Saturday, September 5, 1981, p. 4:

Pleasant Mount, Pa. 18435
August 31, 1981

Dear Editor,

In the issue of The Wayne Independent of August 29, on page 12, was an article, in part, that I had sent in regarding the 150th anniversary of the Clinton Center Baptist Church; and as I made an incomplete statement, I would like to make a correction. Also, my report was not published in full. Could this be added to my correction?

First, my incomplete report: In my original report I wrote: An abundant and delicious dinner was served by the ladies of the Aldenville Baptist Church. It should have read as follows: "An abundant and delicious dinner was served by the ladies of the Aldenville and Clinton Center churches, with the help of some non-members."

The omission was as follows: "May the challenge of two excellent messages of the day be long remembered, and may we go forth with the same zeal and loyalty to God that has been done in the past."

Many thanks for your part, in advertising this event, for a wonderful day; 150 years is a long time. And the history of this church is very interesting. Thank you again!

Sincerely submitted by
Rev. G. Fay Crossman
Chm. of Planning Committee

Contained in the collection of historical documents collected by Lois T. (Norton) Curtis is a six-page handwritten text, entitled "Clinton," which is an account of the 110th anniversary of the Clinton Center Baptist Church in 1941. It is from a xerographic copy of those six pages that S. Robert Powell typed the copy that is given below.

Clinton

Most of the early settlers of Clinton Center and vicinity came from Conn. Among the first were Rev. Samuel West in 1808, and Robert Ledyard in 1809. In 1810 Levi Norton, David Gaylord, Rufus Grenell and S. E. North, with several others came to locate in this vicinity. Tracts of land were purchased and they began the task of clearing up farms and making homes. Levi Norton had a saw mill on the place now owned by John Geuther. The Belmont and Easton turnpike was completed in 1821. A mail route was established from Easton to Pleasant Mt. The Mount Republic P. O. was opened in the home of Uncle Alva Norton's on the place now occupied by Jay Robinson.

These early settlers were mostly baptists and for sometime held services in their homes. Rev. Elijah Peck was pastor of Mt. Pleasant Baptist church and after a number from here were baptized into that church, and as time sped on they began to discuss the propriety of organizing an independent church here. They met at the home of Rufus Grenell, who was living near the site recently vacated by Clarence Singer. Having received their letters from Mount Pleasant church, and after the usual discussions, deliberations, and the general routine of business, a council was called for their recognition as a church on Nov. 10th, 1831. The vote was unanimous and the church started with 24 members. For awhile meetings were held at the home of Rufus Grenell and then 14 years, in a school house on the line between the farms of Arthur Singer and Arthur Corey.

The first meeting house was completed in 1846 on the present site, on July 25th, 1851 it was entirely destroyed by a tornado, rebuilt in 1855 when it was rededicated Jan 24th. Rev. Zelotes Grenell preaching the dedicatory sermon. In 1881, the 50th anniversary was celebrated and the Rev. Zelotes Grenell preached the anniversary sermon. In 1906 the 75th anniversary was celebrated. On the 8th 9th & 10th of Nov. 1931 the 100th anniversary was celebrated. At this time as you all know we spent much time and money renovating the church. We had very inspiring and delightful services throughout the whole time allotted for the celebration. Now, to-day we have our 110th anniversary. And as we look back over these years we are aware of the fact we have had pastors of exceptional value, scores have been brought into the kingdom of God. The church doors have never been closed. Time forbids me to go on in detail and state what this church has meant to the community, and to other churches and the state at large, the christian work that has been accomplished in places far and near by some of our members, who have been preachers or missionaries.

I will mention 12 persons now living, who have been on the church record the longest period of time.

Grandison Loomis	79 yrs
Foster Sanders	64 yrs
Augusta Curtis	64 yrs
Lenore Rude	59 yrs	74 yrs
F. H. Curtis	50 yrs
Fred Varcoe	50 yrs
A. H. Curtis	50 yrs
Jessie Lillie	50 yrs
Josie Bunting	49 yrs
dismissed by letter
Jennie Lillie	49 yrs	64 yrs
Rena Cowperthwaite	49 yrs	64 yrs
W. E. Rude	49 yrs

We do not consider these to be on the retired list, but on the honor roll of service, we might say give them a pension, not in money, but in kind thoughts, kind words, kind deeds and a whole lot of charity and appreciation.

We are grateful for a large membership of young people. We are looking forward for these to make their influence felt for good in whatever locality or work that they may pursue.

Caution - Never let these church doors be closed.

Motto - Be constant in faithfulness.

Prayer - May the fires keep burning.

The lights keep shining
 And the blessings of God rest on this little church in the "Wildwood."

Snapshot by an unidentified photographer, reproduced here from an enlarged print of that photograph in the collection of Mrs. Mildred (Rude) Thomas, Carbondale, PA. Shown here, in front of the Clinton Center Baptist Church, are some of the persons who attended the 125th anniversary celebration on November 10-11, 1956. Readers who are able to identify any of these persons are asked to write to S. Robert Powell, Post Office Box 161, Carbondale, PA 18407-0161. A typescript of the program of activities of this two-day celebration is given in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA on pp. 16-17; see also the newspaper account of this celebration, entitled "Clinton Center Baptist Church 125th Anniversary," that was published in The Wayne Independent on Thursday, November 22, 1956.

GENEALOGICAL AND LOCAL HISTORY NOTES

Given on this page and on the following thirteen pages are genealogical and local history data that are potentially useful to genealogists, historians, and social scientists who are engaged in research on either individuals and families from northeastern Pennsylvania or the history of northeastern Pennsylvania. These data, in addition, are intrinsically interesting and can, therefore, be regarded as ends unto themselves. These data are primarily about Clinton Township, Wayne County: township histories, family histories, cemetery inscriptions, personal recollections by township residents, photographs of prominent citizens of the past and of their equally prominent descendants. Four of these pages of genealogical and local history notes are about the Griswold Reunion, one of the most important social gatherings to take place in Clinton Township every year.

Bibliographic Note:

Many of the pioneer settlers of Clinton Township came from Connecticut. Whenever, in these genealogical and local history notes, the author refers to Boyd, the reference is to John Boyd's Annals and Family Records of Winchester, Conn., with Exercises of the Centennial Celebration, On the 16th and 17th Days of August, 1871 (Hartford: Press of Case, Lockwood & Brainard, 1873).

PHINEAS G. GOODRICH ON CLINTON TOWNSHIP

Given below is a typescript of Chapter XXVI of History of Wayne County by Phineas G. Goodrich of Bethany, Penn. (Honesdale, Penn: Haines & Beardsley, 1880).

CHAPTER XXVI.

TOWNSHIPS--CLINTON.

THIS township was erected November 17th, 1834. It is bounded north and north-east by Mt. Pleasant, east by Dyberry and Prompton, south by Prompton and Canaan, and west by Lackawanna and Susquehanna counties. More than one-quarter of the township is taken up by the acclivities and declivities of the Moosic mountain, and is sterile and unfit for tillage. In the western part, as the line extends over the Lackawanna river, there is anthracite coal, the only portion of the county in which it has been found. The west branch of the Lackawanna and its tributaries afford ample water-power for mills. As said before, the Lackawanna river runs over into this township for several miles and a short section of the Jefferson Railroad, at a place called Forest City, where the D. & H. Company has a large saw-mill, crosses over into the township. The chief ponds are the Elk, Forest, and White Oak. The lands east of the mountain are good, are mostly susceptible of a high state of cultivation, and produce good crops of grass, corn, rye, oats, buckwheat, and potatoes equal to any part of the county. There are some large orchards stocked with rare varieties of fruit. The Nortons and David S. West led the way in the selection and cultivation of good fruit, and their success stimulated others to follow their example. This may be called the Pomonia of the county. The old north and south state road, and the Easton and Belmont turnpike road, subsequently following nearly the same route, afforded an early access to the township, and invited an enterprising class of farmers.

The following from Alva W. Norton is an accurate account as to who were the first settlers in the township:

"My father was born in Goshen, Litchfield county, Conn., May, 1759. In 1775, when in his sixteenth year, he went as a substitute for his older brother, Samuel, to defend New York. He enlisted under 'Old Put' for five years, in the Light-horse, and it was three years before he saw home again. When he was discharged, he received what were called pay certificates for what was due him and, in the spring of 1783, went into the township of Winchester, now called West Winsted, Conn., and purchased three hundred acres of land, paying for it at the reduced rate of sixpence on the pound. In 1784, he married Olive Wheeler and removed to his new purchase, where he continued to reside until 1812. His children were Warren W., Alva W., Sheldon, Clarissa, and Samuel. In Sept., 1810, Levi Norton, David Gaylord, Rufus Grinnell, S. E. North, and some others came to Pennsylvania looking for a better country, where they could worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience. In pursuance of that purpose, they examined the wild land in Wayne and Susquehanna counties. After that examination, Levi Norton went to Philadelphia and purchased nine tracts of land, situated in the north part of old Canaan, now Clinton Center. In December, 1811, he fitted out his second son, Alva, and started him for the wilderness, and this son came into Wayne county, Christmas day. At Mount Pleasant he found a young man who had been sent out with some sheep, and the two came down the old north and south road to the base of the mountain, opposite what is now the Clinton Center Baptist meeting-house, built a cabin ten by twelve, and split basswood poles for a puncheon floor. Here they tarried during the winter, but very little improvement could be made, as the snow was four feet deep. Some time in March, Warren W. Norton, with his wife and one child, and Benjamin Johnson, with his wife and five children, came. The first week in June, 1812, Levi Norton, his wife, and the balance of his family, Horace G. Squire, and Michael Grinnell came; they were followed in September by David Gaylord and wife, and D. S. West and wife. At the same time Amasa Gaylord and son, Myron, arrived and made arrangements to move the family the next year and, in November, Rufus Grinnell's wife and eight children, which closed the colony for 1812.

In May, 1813, Amasa Gaylord, wife, and family arrived. About the same time Capt. Wm. Bayley came and lived with my father until he paid for one hundred and seventeen acres of land. In the fall of 1813, John Griswold, Sen., and some of his family came from Torrey lake, and put up a log-cabin on land adjoining that of Rufus Grinnell, and, in January following, moved his family down on an ox-sled. In 1814, S. E. North and wife, and Fisher Case and family came."

Mr. Norton gives also the following account of a great wolf hunt: "In the fall of 1837, a pair of black wolves from the Rocky mountains" (or Canada,) "made their appearance in Wayne and Susquehanna counties. During the fall and early winter, in Herrick township, Susquehanna county, and Mount Pleasant and Clinton townships, Wayne county, they destroyed over five hundred sheep. In Mount Pleasant and Clinton there were societies formed for the purpose of raising money to exterminate them and pay the bounty. The amount of premium raised was ninety dollars. In addition to this sum, Alanson Tilden, of Herrick Center, Susquehanna county, and W. W. Norton, collected forty dollars, making a total of one hundred and thirty dollars. My brother, Sheldon, offered one dollar extra for the scalp of the he-wolf. On the first of March, 1838, Merritt Hines, keeping the toll-gate on the Belmont and Onquagua turnpike, near Sugar-loaf mountain, received information from a traveler going north, that south of the Pete Stevens place he saw two large black animals cross the road towards the Moosic mountain. He supposed them to be bears until he saw their brushes. Hines immediately equipped himself for the chase and followed on, sending a messenger to Col. Calvelly Freeman at Belmont, to follow him. Col. Freeman equipped himself, took the track, and followed Hines. These two men pursued the wolves eleven days and were in at the death. On the third day, having driven them south nearly opposite the Dimock settlement in Frost Hollow, about midday, Hines and Freeman called at a farm-house for refreshments and to replenish their knapsacks. The wolves, wanting their dinner, entered a farmer's yard and killed fifteen sheep. That was the only time that Hines and Freeman gave the wolves any time to satisfy their hunger, for they followed them so closely that when they lay down at night, the hunters could see by the place wherein the animals had lain that they never left it to procure anything to eat."

There are several persons named in Mr. Norton's sketch who deserve further notice. David S. West was spoken of under Canaan township. Alva W. Norton, Esq., now aged about eighty-eight years, taught school at Salem Corners, 1816, and afterwards in Bethany. He was considered a competent teacher, and was for more than forty years a practical surveyor. He was county commissioner for three years, and it is probable he was in that office when those destructive wolves were killed, which made us state, in another place, that he was chiefly instrumental in their capture. He lives with his son, L. F. Norton, and to a remarkable degree retains his physical and mental capacities. Ira B. Stone, Esq., once a county commissioner and now a resident of the town, married a daughter of Mr. Norton. Sheldon Norton was for three years prothonotary of the county. He was a very prominent man in the Baptist church. In 1815 he was assessed as owning forty-five acres of improved, and two hundred and fifteen acres of unimproved land. His son, E. K. Norton now owns the homestead which is considered one of the best farms in the town.

Michael Grennell, Sen., who lived to be one hundred and two years old, settled about one-half mile west of the Baptist church, where Horace G. Squire once lived, and which is now owned by A. R. Squire. He was the father of Michael Grennell, Jr., who married a sister of Mrs. Pope Bushnell. He was also the father of Deacon Rufus Grennell. The sons of the latter were Virgil, once associate judge, Homer, Ovid, Jasper, Michael 3d, and Rufus M., who was once prothonotary.

Amasa Gaylord settled on the north and south road. His sons were David, Carmi, and Giles, all of whom sleep with their fathers. Giles Gaylord married Joanna W., a daughter of Elder Elijah Peck, Sen., and she is still living.

John Griswold, Sen., was the father of Francis Griswold, who for many years kept what was called the Cold Water tavern; so called because it was near a stream of cold water that came rushing down from the mountain. Sumner was another son, and was a farmer. Horace was a son or grandson of John Griswold, Sen.

Sylvester E. North, a farmer, is yet living. He and his family were noted for making the best butter and cheese to be found in the county.

Fisher Case was the father of Ralph, Jerome B., and Robert Case. There are none of them living.

There were many families that have not been mentioned which from time to time added materially to the wealth and importance of the town, among whom were Daniel Arnold, a mason; Chester, Lewis, and Horace Buckland; David Bunting, Daniel Bunting, Jr., and John Bunting, who lived on the west branch; Bunting and Randall, who owned a saw-mill and tannery; John Belknap, who lived and kept tavern on the Judson place; Seth Hayden, and George Hopkins, on the west branch; Joseph Kingsbury, a farmer; Luther Ledyard, a farmer, who lived adjoining Francis Griswold; Pliny Muzzy, a farmer; James and George McMullen, farmers, of Scotch descent, famed as hunters; and Reuben, Cyrus, and Rufus Peck. These latter were the descendants of Elder Elijah Peck, of Mt. Pleasant, whose children were Elijah, Jr., William, Reuben, Lewis, Myra, and Joanna W. Elijah Peck, Jr., had nineteen children. The Sanders family were numerous. There were Samuel, David, Jonathan, Nathaniel C., David 2nd, Selma, and Sheppard, who were all farmers.

The following persons were all farmers: Ashbel Stearns, Levi, Levi, Jr., Jason, Jason D., Alfred, and Elisha Stanton; John Sears; John Sherwood, and William, his son; Charles L. Tenant, Sen., Charles L., Jr., and John A. Tenant; Washington Williams; Nathan Wheeler, son of Benjamin Wheeler; Jabez Welch, who was also a lumberman; and John K. Davison, who lived first in Dyberry and then removed to and died on the farm now occupied by his son, Warren W. Davison. The farms in Clinton are well cultivated for the reason that very little attention was ever paid to lumbering. Almost the whole of the original settlers were of Puritanic origin.

Aldenville was started by Pratt and Alden, who built a tannery at that place, and the village was named in honor of Levi C. Alden, who took charge of and ran the tannery. The village is well-situated for business and has one store, a post-office, a Baptist and a M. E. church. The tannery is kept running under the charge of Henry Alden.

Clinton has six common schools and one school in the Independent District of "Mount Republic." There is a Baptist church in the Norton settlement. The number of taxables, in 1878, was two hundred and ninety-seven.

The Way It Was. A True Story of Clinton Center.

By Alice Mae (Curtis) Lund

Everything has a place of beginning. I guess this will have several starting places. In all probability a road is a good place to get going. The Belmont and Easton turnpike (north and south) was opened in 1812, creating a way to get from here to there. A road invited settlers in the opening of the new country. This article is going to be a history of several families and their part in building Clinton Center. Let's get going with the Griswolds. Now, the Griswold family can trace their roots way back to the 1400s in England, but to do that, it becomes a genealogy, monotonous and uninteresting for a story. So, we will start with John, the Revolutionary soldier, Griswold, who was born in Granville, Hampshire Co. Mass. in 1754 and died Oct. 16, 1843, and is buried in the Clinton Cemetery. He served in the Continental Army, from which he was honorably discharged. In Oct. of 1790 or 91, he was married to Elizabeth Crittenden. To them were born six sons: John, Francis, Orin, Sumner, Horace and Sedate. They moved to Clinton in 1813, coming from Mass. in a heavy, two-wheeled cart, drawn by four year-old steers. The mother rode the horse and the little colt followed. They settled on the higher ground just south of where Moosic Grange Hall now stands. The loose stones of the old foundation were still visible some years ago. The old road was nearer to the mountain than the present one and was the one over which General Wayne marched his army. The family cleared the land and set out an orchard. Some years later a new cabin was built. Wild animals roamed the woods and were a menace to livestock. Nature was a good provider, fish and game were very plentiful. The fertile soil produced crops and grain. Maple trees produced syrup and sugar. Wool and flax were woven into clothing and linens for the family. Dyes were made from the barks. John Griswold was a deacon in the Baptist Church for many years; also prominent in community affairs, a steady and good provider for his family. His son, Francis was also an outstanding man, and pillar of strength spiritually and morally to the benefit of the community. John Griswold took on horseback the first grist of wheat he raised and started for Wilkes-Barre to have it ground. The first night he camped on the forks of a river, near the present site of Scranton. He caught fish for supper, and shot a young deer, which he dressed and hung in a tree to carry home on his return journey. In the morning he continued on his way to Wilkes-Barre and got the grist ground, returning to the same camp site at night. In the morning he picked up the venison and continued his journey home. It was a three-day trip.

In 1819, John Griswold had the homestead at Curtis Valley built for his son, Francis, by Levi Bennett. It was used as a tavern for many years, and was known as the "Cold Water Tavern" from the cold spring water, piped to the building in hand made pump logs. Drovers found shelter for themselves and their cattle for overnight rest.

Francis Griswold married Jane Loomis, to whom eight children were born: Lewis, Laura, Oliver, Helen, Louisa, Nathan, Alvin and Homer.

Now we will mention settlers who came to the area. In September of 1810, Levi Norton, David Gaylord, Rufus Grennell and S. E. North came from Connecticut, and upon arrival in Clinton were so impressed that word was sent to Levi's son Alva, who arrived on Christmas day, 1811, and erected a cabin near where the Clinton Church now stands. The next year more families of the Baptist faith also came. Religious services were held in the homes and in 1813 Alva Norton conducted the first Bible school in Wayne County. In the year of 1831, on Oct. 23, the brothers and sisters of the neighborhood gathered at the home of Deacon Rufus Grennell and discussed the propriety of organizing an independent church. Deacons were appointed to report on a covenant and articles of Faith at a meeting to be held on November 3, 1831, at which time the report was presented and adopted. A call was issued for a council of recognition on Nov. 10, 1831. The new church was recognized by the council with 24 charter members. Charter members were, Michael Grennell, Jonathon Sanders, Reuben Peck, Harriet Norton, Lydia Campbell, Joanna Gaylord, Elizabeth Marshall, Beulah Blanding, D. S. West, Sallie A. Peck, Amanda North, Caroline Walters, John Reynolds, Ruth Kenyon, William Bailey, Rufus Grennell, Olive Norton, Sylvester E. North, Ovid Grennell, Ann Grennell, Jasper Grennell, Susanna Grennell, Phoebe Grennell. Meetings were held in the homes until a proper edifice could be erected, which was completed and the first meeting held in the fall of 1846. On July 25, 1851 the building was completely destroyed by a hurricane, the debris scattered for miles. The original communion set was found and has now been returned to the church and is enclosed in a cabinet. Rev. W. K. Mott preached the dedicatory sermon. A new church was built and dedicated on January 24, 1855. In memory of the old pioneers and ministers, E. M. Peck had a natural flint conglomerate rock erected across the road from the church. The rock came from the Moosic Mountains and weighs six tons. In 1915 when the rock memorial was erected, the flag which covered it was removed by Mrs. Laura Griswold Loomis who was 89 years old at the time. She was the daughter of Francis Griswold. In the fall of 1832 the Bethany church issued a call to Rev. Henry Curtis of Conklin, Broome County, N. Y. to become their pastor. He accepted the call and with his wife, Eliza Banning Curtis, and three children, moved to Bethany (then the County seat) and bought a home, and commenced his work there as pastor. The family lived in Bethany for thirteen years, by now the family had increased to six children, four sons and two daughters. The pulpit of the Clinton Church was filled by supply ministers until 1832 when Rev. Henry Curtis became pastor of Bethany and Clinton (at the time called Canaan). They now decided to buy a farm. Accordingly they purchased one pleasantly located on the west branch of the Lackawaxen, some three and a half miles west of Bethany (Edenville) (the farm was later owned by the Gillow family and is now covered by the waters of the Prompton reservoir). Rev. Curtis was now preaching at Bethany and Clinton. Rev. Curtis was born in Illston, Leicestershire, England, Oct. 11, 1800, the youngest of twelve children, and he bore his father's name. In 1812 they emigrated to this country, and settled on a farm near Gilbertsville, Otsego Co., N.Y., and upon the death of his parents shortly after they came to this country, he went to New York City where he met Eliza Banning. They were married March 13, 1824. He answered the call to God's ministry, his first preaching at Conklin, Broome Co., N.Y., from where he was called to Bethany. Shortly after he started preaching here, he commenced regular preaching at Honesdale on the site occupied by the Liberty Hall. His labors were continued there steadily until the constitution of the Baptist Church in 1842. From 1839 to 1847 he preached one-half his time at Damascus. From 1845 to 1857 his labors were chiefly devoted to the Clinton Church, preaching one-half the time in 1849-1851 for the church in Carbondale. From Feb. 1853-1854 or 5, he preached at Bethany again. During the time nearly 750 persons were added by baptism, and in 1854 his four younger children were converted, baptized and received into the Bethany Church. His labors with the Clinton Church covered a period of fourteen years and during that time the church enjoyed three general revivals. His residence in Wayne County of thirty-five years was one of continued labor in the ministry. During this period he labored more or less with the following churches: Bethany, Clinton, Carbondale, Damascus, Lebanon, Berlin, Ashland, Berlin II, Aldenville, Paupack Eddy, Palmyra, Lackawaxen, Barryville and Shohola, and Jackson in the Bridgewater Association. His field over the part of the last five years extended over a distance of thirty miles, and the nearest church he served was fourteen miles from his residence. The inclemency of the weather never hindered him from keeping his appointments. He was known to go when the roads were considered impassable for others. During his ministry he baptized over one thousand believers who professed their belief in our Lord. All his children were baptized by their reverend father and were settled in life before his departure. With the Clinton Church he preached his first sermon in this state and in the fellowship of that church he died. His last illness was brought about by excessive labors and exposure. His death occurred on August 13, 1867, after an illness of several months due to the above causes. He was sadly missed and mourned by the Abington Baptist Association.

We now come to the merger of the Griswold and Curtis families, by the marriage of Louisa Griswold, daughter of Francis, to Henry Banning Curtis, son of Rev. Henry Curtis. They were married Apr. 21, 1851. Born to them were eleven children: Elizabeth, Francis, William, Harriet, George and Augusta, twins, Laura, Arthur and Amanda. Two died in early childhood. Elizabeth married Albert Corey, Francis married Rena Stanton, William married Marie Peterson, Harriet married Milo Gardner, George married Jeanette Geuther, Augusta remained single, Laura married William E. Rude, Arthur married Kathryn Giles and Amanda married Rev. James Patey. Their descendants are too numerous to go into in this narrative. The descendants of these two bloodlines are generally good, industrious, honest, God-fearing and loving people.

Levi Norton's entrance into Clinton was in 1810. He was also a Revolutionary War veteran, born at Goshen, Connecticut, in May 1759, and married Olive Wheeler in 1784. Their family consisted of Warren W., Alva W., Sheldon, Clarissa, and Samuel. Mr. Norton exchanged his "pay certificates" for 3000 acres in Clinton. Levi's son Sheldon was the owner and developer of Ridge Farm. He was born in Connecticut, Nov. 26, 1793, and was married to Harriet, daughter of Grinnell Spencer. Their children were Edmund Kirby, Oscar, Abigail J. and Mary E. Mr. Norton and his son Oscar died suddenly in the west in September 1838. While Sheldon had cleared much of the farm, most of the improvements were made by "E. K." as his son was familiarly called. E. K. Norton and Clarissa McMullen were united in marriage and born to them were: Sheldon, William C., Elizabeth and Emma. E. K. died Oct. 15, 1895 and his wife followed on April 2, 1897. Ridge Farm passed to Wm. C. Norton, who was twice married, first to Mary Stone, and one son, Oscar, was born to them. His second wife was Jessie, daughter of Albert R. Peck. They had two living sons, Albert and Elwin. Ridge Farm is located in Clinton and borders on the north shore of White Oak Lake (Pond). The residence and the farm buildings are on an elevation commanding an excellent view of the surrounding countryside. Will Norton devoted much time to raising purebred Berkshire swine, many of which he had pictures etched and framed. Some of the pictures still exist. He began the swine business in 1875 and for a number of years his drove captured all prizes at county and state fairs throughout the west. In 1892, he lost his whole drove to cholera. A later attempt to get back into the swine business ended by being wiped out again by cholera. He brought the first purebred Jersey cattle into Wayne County, and had a large herd of registered Jerseys at one time. After 1883, he devoted much of his time to his cattle. In 1888 he began breeding Hambletonian race horses. He bred a number of horses which made good track records. Hambletonian Prince stood at stud for some time at Ridge Farm. His stallion Goldseeker established a track record of 2:26 1/4.

Wm. C. Norton was born in Clinton in 1852 and was educated in the public schools and Delaware Institute at Franklin, N.Y. He was a fine judge of livestock and he was frequently called on to judge at state and county fairs. He served as one of the judges at the World's Fair, in Chicago, in 1893. He served in numerous public offices and as county treasurer; also was elected to the House of Representatives, where his record was an honorable one. Through a series of unfortunate business reverses, he lost Ridge Farm in 1911, and it was taken over by Wm. E. and Laura Curtis Rude. Will Norton's son Oscar and Elwin were veterinarians in Greenville, Miss., for many years. His son, Elwin, was married to Irene, daughter of George and Jeanette (Geuther) Curtis. To them were born Wm. Curtis Norton, Marjorie Louise, Elise Banning and Elwin Sheldon. Elwin Sheldon lost his life in the second World War, the shock leading to the early death of both his parents. Elise Banning Oleinik (Dr. John) is also deceased. Elwin's son Wm. C. Norton also has a son Wm. C.

Another union of the Curtis and Norton families was Hobart Curtis and Lois Norton, Lois being from a Norton line other than the Ridge Farm Nortons. There were other families that went into the make-up of Clinton Center and added their bit but theirs is another story, and will have to be written by someone other than this author.

HIRAM PEASE LOOMIS

The following biographical sketch of Hiram P. Loomis is given in Commemorative Biographical Record of Northeastern Pennsylvania (Chicago: J. H. Beers and Co., 1900, pp. 661-662):

HIRAM P. LOOMIS. The Loomis family has from early pioneer days been prominently identified with the growth and development of Wayne county. Our subject traces his ancestry back for nine generations, the first of whom he has any record being Joseph Loomis, who was born about 1590, and was a woolen draper in Braintree, Essex, England. Deciding to try his fortune in America, he, with his five sons and three daughters, sailed from London, April 11, 1638, in the ship "Susan and Ellen." He died November 25, 1658. From him to our subject in direct line are Joseph, Nathaniel, David, Aaron, Ephraim, and Reuben.

Reuben Loomis (our subject's father) was born October 9, 1785, in Torrington township, Litchfield Co., Conn., and died in 1848. He married Miss Sallie Westlin, and they became the parents of seven children: Erastus, born April 9, 1810, died December 31, 1894; Oliver H., born in 1812, died December 25, 1838; Daniel D., born in 1814, died in 1841; Reuben F., born June 18, 1817, died June 1, 1833; Hiram P., is next in the family; Mariette, born January 2, 1821, died at Mt. Pleasant, Wayne county, in 1848; and Lucretia, born December 5, 1832, is the wife of Rensselaer Stephenson, of Peckville, Pennsylvania.

The subject of this sketch was born December 9, 1819, at Mt. Pleasant, Wayne county, and at the age of twenty-nine purchased a farm in Clinton township, which he successfully operated for several years. The following three years he spent in Delaware, and he afterward, for one, and one-half years, engaged in mercantile business in Carbondale, Penn. Removing his business interests to Aldenville, Wayne county, he continued merchandising at that place for five years, and then returned to the old homestead in Wayne county, where he owns 250 acres of valuable and improved land. Upon this farm Mr. Loomis erected a beautiful residence at a cost of $5,000, and the outbuildings alone are valued at $2,000. A sawmill, belonging to the estate, was burned in 1896, at a loss of $1,500, but it is now being rebuilt by some of the younger members of the family. This model farm is stocked with four horses, thirty head of cattle, besides calves and hogs.

At Aldenville, May 20, 1846, Mr. Loomis was united in marriage with Miss Laura Griswold, and together they have traveled life's journey for over half a century, sharing its joys and sorrows, its adversity and prosperity. Her parents were Francis and Jane (Loomis) Griswold, the former a native of Massachusetts, and an honored pioneer of Clinton township, Wayne county. In the Griswold family were six children, namely: Louis, born January 31, 1822, died January 6, 1832; Alvin, born April 22, 1824, died in New York State in September, 1849; Laura, born July 7, 1826, is the wife of our subject; Louisa, born November 2, 1828, is the wife of H. B. Curtis; Nathan, born March 21, 1832, is a resident of Clinton township, Wayne county; and Homer, born March 14, 1835, died April 1, 1874.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Loomis are as follows: Theron O., born February 25, 1848, is a resident of Carbondale, Penn.; Oliver G., born August 16, 1857, died April 23, 1862; Helen A., born February 25, 1860, died November 17, same year; and Francis E., born December 17, 1861, wedded Mary E. Paynter, and has five children--Flora, Herbert, Nettie, Floyd and Laura. Francis E. Loomis is an energetic and progressive young man, now successfully engaged in lumbering.

Mr. Loomis was reared under Democratic influences, but seeing that Republican principles more closely agreed with his political ideas, he has for more than fifty years supported the platform of the "grand old party." He has never sought public favor, but has capably filled most of the township offices, being assessor four years, town clerk, overseer of the poor and school director. Religiously he and his family are connected with the Baptist Church, and in the social world occupy a prominent position.

JOHN AND MARY BANNING

In 1980, Lois T. (Norton) Curtis graciously allowed the author and Donald W. Powell to borrow and make xerographic copies of a large quantity of historical documents in her collection. All of those documents were copied and returned by the Brothers Powell to Lois Curtis in 1980, and were in Lois Curtis' document archive at the time of her death on May 27, 1981. Among those documents are three typewritten pages of information about the Banning family, a typescript of which, by S. Robert Powell, is given below. Note: Eliza Banning married, on March 13, 1824, Rev. Henry Curtis.

BANNING

John and Mary Banning of the city of Reading, Berkshire, Eng., came to this country in the year 1818, and settled in the city of New York.

Mary, his wife, was married to him at the age of sixteen, and he was then a widower with grown up children. His business was that of a shoe manufacturer, and he employed quite a number of workmen. He was a modest, unostentatious man, and highly esteemed by his friends and neighbors, as was shown by the attention paid him as he with his oldest son stood on the rear of the stage ready to depart from his town, to sail for America. The street was filled with people who gathered to pay their last respects to him, and the picture of his figure as they moved away waving an adieu, was vivid to his oldest daughter Eliza, who after a period of 60 years related the incident with emotion to her children. He came over with his oldest son (John) and the remainder of the family (wife and nine children), came in the same vessel on its next trip. He was seven weeks on the water, and the rest of them five. Sailing vessels then only were known. (A letter written by him on his arrival at New York and sent back to his wife, is still in possession of some of the Olivers, and a copy would be exceedingly interesting to insert here.) Also a view opposite the home in Reading painted by Frederick Scatcherd, and presented to Eliza Banning, but now in possession of her daughter, Mrs. E. P. Haight.

Of John Banning's antecedents nothing is known. Mary Banning was of noble birth. The great great grandfather was Lord Arthur Hamblin, who engaged in a rebellion against the government, the actual fight occurring Oct. 5th, 1715. He owned a large estate which was confiscated on account of the above mentioned facts.

With the hope of recovering the estate, Mary Banning who with her husband were at that time Congregationalists, had her children christened by a rector in the parish church, so as to have their names recorded in a book of the church of England.

John Banning, Sr., died April 17, 1820, of consumption.

Mary, his wife, died July 4th, 1851.

John Banning, Jr., M.D., died July 6th, 1823, in Charleston, S.C. of yellow fever. He was married to Miss Maria Wells, who after his death married a Mr. Booth. John Banning was a student of Dr. Valentine Mott.

Eliza Banning - Curtis, was born in Reading, England, Oct. 19, 1801. Came to this country in 1818. Was baptized in the Oliver St. Baptist Church in New York City by Rev. John Williams, 1819. Married to Rev. Henry Curtis March 13, 1824. Died at Aldenville, Pa., May 26, 1879. She was the mother of eight children.

Maria Banning was married to Frederick Scatcherd. Died Nov. 7, 1859. She had three children - Sara Chester, Maria Rhodes and Charlotte Demeray.

Harriet Banning married Jacob Van Tassel. Died Sept. 27, 1875, at Tarrytown, aged 72 years. Had two children, William and John.

Caroline Banning married Thomas Kelland. Had two children, Jane and John. Died.

Alpheus Banning, born March 2nd, 1809. Married Miss Jane Cochran, Feb. 20th, 1833.

Mary Banning, born Sept. 21, 1812. Married to Frank Nash. Had four children - Mary Buck, Daniel, Frank, and Susan Buxton. Married James Lock 1856. Died July 21st, 1887.

Elizabeth Banning, married Wheelock Corby. She was born Jan. 2, 1815. Was married when she was 16 years old. Had ten children, six girls and four boys. (1 pair of twins.) She died Aug. 15, 1870. "And never was there one better than she or more lovely."--A. B. Corby.

Emma Banning, born Aug. 31st, 1816. Married Joseph Oliver, Dec. 31st, 1833. Died Apr. 21st, 1881. Had six children - Joseph, John, Frank, Mary Emma Peck, Fannie Serples, and Marcie Hendrickson.

Sarah Banning, born May 1st, 1814. Married to John W. Avery, Feb. 1831. Had eight sons. Died May 6th, 1886.

[No indication of author or source is given for the above information on the Banning family.]

MICHAEL GRENNELL

The obituary of Michael Grennell that is given below was published in THE ADVANCE (Volume I, Number 40, Saturday, February 27, 1858, p. 2, col. 6 bottom and col. 7 top), wherein it was discovered by Donald W. Powell, who appended a copy thereof to page 139 (18 April 1979) of his 1978-1979 letter to the author. It is from that copy that the copy that is given below was typed by the author.

DIED,

In Clinton, Wayne Co. Penn'a. Feb. 13th, 1858, Mr. MICHAEL GRENNELL, aged 105 years, 10 months and 13 days.

The subject of this notice was born in Saybrook, Conn., April 1st (March 20th, O.S.) 1752. In 1777, at the age of 25, he was united in marriage with Miss Susanna Balcom, by whom he had six children, four of whom survive him. His wife died in 1825. He took a deep interest in the Revolutionary struggle and early entered the regular army. Having been some months in the regular service he was taken sick, and by the advice of the commanding officer he retired from the army, and returned home to recruit his enfeebled health. He did not return to the regular service but volunteered when necessary for the defence of the towns and military posts on the Hudson River and Long Island Sound and also in the vicinity of Boston. He was in the city of New York in 1776 and witnessed the enthusiasm of the army and people on receiving the news of the Declaration of Independence. He also saw the people pull down the statue of King George and ride it through the streets on a wooden horse. He distinctly recollected those stirring events and frequently related them with great interest and animation. He has voted at every Presidential election in the United States; always supporting the Democratic nominee, except in the case of Washington and Fremont. Can this be said of another! We challenge a parallel!

He early made a public profession of religion and united with the Congregational Church. He became a member of the Baptist Church in 1800, and continued in that communion until his decease. He emigrated to Pennsylvania and settled in Clinton, Wayne Co., in 1825, where he has since lived as an example of consistent piety. He was regular in his religious duties and devotions up to the day of his death. He was accustomed to pray three times each day at stated hours. At about 3 o'clock, p.m., he uniformly prayed for the church and ministry; his country and her rulers and also for the husbandman, that his labors might be blessed, "that he might have wherewith to present before the Lord."

Communicated.

WHITES VALLEY

On September 22, 1981, Rev. G. Fay Crossman (R. D. 1, Box 28, Pleasant Mount, PA 18453) wrote a letter to Donald W. Powell which contained the following paragraph of information about Whites Valley, Wayne County, PA:

"When I was a boy (many years ago) and living in Whites Valley, there was a lumber mill there that made heading for butter and lard tubs, broom handles and umbrella sticks, and I believe wood shingles. It has been gone many years and I don't know if any one around Whites Valley has any pictures of it. Previous to the wood business they had made woven wire bed springs. A grandson of the man that owned the mill still lives there but he is not one for pictures, says 'Just remember how it looks.' If you should be interested, I can easily find out. He and I went to school together (Stone School), played together, and at times fought each other..."

WRIGHT

The following information about the Wright family is contained in the history of Mount Pleasant Township in History of Wayne County by Phineas G. Goodrich (Honesdale, Penn: Haines & Beardsley, 1880), pp. 205-206:

"Dr. Uriah Wright settled in the town in 1814. He came from Berkshire county, Massachusetts. His ancestors were people of note. Asa Wright, his grandfather, was an architect and planned and superintended the building of Dartmouth College, where his father, Dr. Asahel Wright, (the father of Uriah Wright,) was afterwards educated, and who was appointed physician and surgeon in the Navy during the Revolutionary war. He had seven sons, all but one of whom became professional men. The oldest, Asahel, was a lawyer; Worthington, a Presbyterian minister, who also studied medicine and practiced for a time. Dr. Erastus Wright settled in Salem and practiced there during his life. So that at one time there were the father and six sons all in the practice of medicine. There was not a failure among them. Dr. Uriah Wright practiced through a wide extent of territory for fifty-two years, and died in September, 1866, aged seventy-six years."

JACOB VAN METER AND CHARLES VAN METER

The following information about Jacob and Charles Van Meter is given in the history of Mount Pleasant Township in History of Wayne County by Phineas G. Goodrich (Honesdale, Penn: Haines & Beardsley, 1880), p. 194:

"In 1795, Seymour Allen, from Connecticut, bought of Amasa Geer the farm that he first took up; then Allen sold it to Ichabod Starks, who lived on it the rest of his life. Jacob Van Meter moved that year from New Jersey to the place lately occupied by his son, Charles Van Meter."

CAPTAIN LEVI BENNETT

In 1819, Captain Levi Bennett built the John Griswold Homestead in Clinton Township, Wayne County, PA, for John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden. This homestead ultimately became the property of Francis Griswold (one of the sons of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden) and his wife, Jane Loomis, who established therein the Cold Water Tavern. On May 1, 1871, the 1819 John Griswold Homestead, subsequently the Cold Water Tavern, became the property of Henry Banning Curtis and Louisa Griswold, and became known as the Curtis Homestead.

Levi Bennett, who served as a captain in the Civil War, was a member of G.A.R. Post No. 187. His name is listed on the monument in City Hall Park in Carbondale, PA, that was "ERECTED 1885, UNDER THE AUSPICES OF SERG. WM. H. DAVIES POST, NO. 187, G.A.R. AND BY THE CITIZENS OF CARBONDALE, PA. TO THE MEMORY OF ALL ITS CITIZENS WHO BECAME THE BRAVE DEFENDERS OF THE UNION DURING ITS PERIL OF 1861-1865."

From the biographical sketch of Rufus Griswold that is reprinted in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, we learn that Captain Levi Bennett's wife, Clarissa Miles, and Rufus Griswold's wife, Nancy Miles, were sisters:

Reared on the home farm, Rufus Griswold received his education in the public schools of the locality, and during early life he followed lumbering and farming. In 1858 he was united in marriage with Miss Nancy Miles, of Bethany, Wayne county, a daughter of James and Almeda (Brink) Miles, now [1900] deceased. Her father was born in Orange county, N.Y., and when a young man came to Wayne county, where he was married and afterward located at Cherry Ridge, carrying on the stone mason's trade there until his death. His children were: Clarissa, now the wife of Levi Bennett; Mary J., wife of Rev. James Miner, of Watertown, N.Y.; Lucius; Charles N., who drowned at sea; Nancy, wife of our subject; Isaac and William H., who were both drowned in Honesdale in 1872; and Alice, wife of William Bates, of Carbondale...

THE RANDALL FAMILY

In 1980, Lois T. (Norton) Curtis graciously allowed the author and Donald W. Powell to borrow and make xerographic copies of a large quantity of historical documents in her collection. All of those documents were copied and returned by the Brothers Powell to Lois Curtis in 1980, and were in Lois Curtis' document archive at the time of her death on May 27, 1981. Among those documents are three handwritten pages of information about the Randall family, written by Edwin A. Randall. A typescript by S. Robert Powell of the three pages of Edwin A. Randall's text is given below.

Edwin Randall, the eldest of fourteen children of Thomas W. Randall and Ruth Stafford, was born near Oxford, N.Y. Dec. 23rd 1808.

The family moved to Masonville N. Y. in 1825, and at the age of 22 he came to Wayne Co. Pa. where he resided until his death on Thanksgiving Day Nov. 30 - 1882.

He worked in several saw-mills, one near Fortenia and another near the old Glass Factory.

He and Mr John Bunting at one time owned and operated a saw-mill and tannery a short distance below Aldenville.

He then bought a piece of land in the southern part of Clinton township, which was covered with heavy timber, built a mill and cleared up the land and spent the remainder of his life on the farm. He and his family were regular attendants at the Church services.

He was rather small in size and quite lame and found it rather difficult to climb into the high wagons then in use, so taking two 14 ft ash planks he made a wagon that he could easily get into. Later the planks were shortened, and, it is said that was the origin of the much used wagon, The Buck board. Jan. 10 - 1844 he married Lydia Holcomb of Coventry N. Y. They having two sons, George E. and Ralph E. George E. was born Dec. 31, 1846 and died March 27 - 1927. In 1870 he married Emily Lewis and after a short stay in Carbondale, they moved to New Era Bradford Co where he spent his life as a carpenter having built many houses and barns in Bradford Co.

Three children were born to them.

Loomis and lived at Waymart as a Blacksmith, going from there in 1886 to Forest City. His later years were spent in Carbondale. Four sons and a daughter were born to them.

1. Edwin A married Eva C Arnold and lives in Scranton

It used to be the post office. Once a week, after church, we'd stop and get the mail. It was called the Farno Post Office."

AARON G. PERHAM AND S. G. PERHAM

The following information about Aaron G. Perham and S. G. Perham is given in the history of Mount Pleasant Township in History of Wayne County by Phineas G. Goodrich (Honesdale, Penn: Haines & Beardsley, 1880), p. 209:

"Aaron G. Perham was assessed in 1818 with one hundred and sixty acres of land, with buildings and appurtenances, situated south-east of the Bigelow lake. This is supposed to be the farm now owned by S. G. Perham."

GRISWOLD STAINED GLASS WINDOW

On May 29, 1981, Donald W. Powell, Kurt A. Reed, and S. Robert Powell visited the Grace Episcopal Church, corner of Church and Ninth Streets, Honesdale, PA, at which time the Parish Secretary, Marlene Brown, pointed out to them the stained glass window in the church that was created in memory of a member of the Griswold family. On the two panels at the bottom of this window is the following inscription:

Tiffany Studio

Kurt A. Reed reported that he had recently read an article in the June 22, 1893 issue of the Wayne County Herald in which the Gunn/Griswold stained glass window in the Grace Episcopal Church in Honesdale is referred to as the "second" Tiffany window in the Grace Episcopal Church. Donald W. Powell located what he believes to be the "first" Tiffany window in Grace Episcopal Church. On the two panels at the bottom of the "first" Tiffany window in this church is the following inscription:

To the Glory of God and in loving memory of ANNIE RUSSELL DIMMICK 1843-1906	I am the way the Truth and the Life
---	---

Color photographs of both windows were taken by Donald W. Powell on May 29, 1981.

Henry William Arnold (copy print from the original photograph by George W. Robbins, Honesdale, PA) and Electa Marie Griswold (copy print from the original photograph). Both of these copy prints were purchased by Donald W. Powell at the Arnold Reunion 1981, and are presently in his photograph collection. Henry William Arnold was born 08-17-1834 in Clinton Township, Wayne County, and died 09-19-1920 in Clinton Township, Wayne County. He is interred in the Clinton Center Baptist Church Cemetery. On 12-21-1863, at Aldenville, PA, he was married to Electa Marie Griswold. The wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. Baruch B. Bunting, and witnessed by Clarinda I. Giles. Henry William Arnold was the son of Daniel Arnold--who came to Clinton Township from Connecticut about 1817 with his mother, Freelope, widow of James Arnold--and his wife, Christianna Sassman. In her History of the Arnold Family (included in the Record Book of the Arnold Reunion, and dated May 28, 1928), Mrs. Herbert R. Sickler reports the following information about the residence in Clinton Township of Daniel and Christianna (Sassman) Arnold: "Henry William Arnold was born August 17th, 1834. He was the son of Christiania Sassman and Daniel Arnold who were among the early Pioneer settlers of Wayne County. They made their home on the Moosic Mountain on the farm later known as the Milo Gaylord Place. This old farm has since been divided and is now [1928] owned by Jennie Gaylord and Eddie Terrel." Electa Marie Griswold was the daughter of Sumner Griswold (08-20-1798, in MA--09-20-1864, in Wayne County, PA; interred in the Clinton Center Baptist Church Cemetery) and Clarissa Gelatt (10-30-1809, in Susquehanna County, PA--08-16-1881, in Wayne County, PA; interred in the Clinton Center Baptist Church Cemetery). Clarissa Gelatt was the oldest daughter of George Gelatt (07-04-1790, in MA--12--1865, in Gibson Township, Susquehanna County, PA) and Rebecca Whaley (died in 1822). George Gelatt and Rebecca Whaley were married on 10-14-1808. Following the death of Rebecca Whaley, George Gelatt married, on 04-21-1825, Susan L. Williams, who was born in Connecticut on 12-17-1794, and died in 1869. For more information on the Gelatt family of Susquehanna County, see the biographical sketch of Richard W. Gelatt that is given on this page of this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

From Mrs. Herbert R. Sickler's History of the Arnold Family, we learn the following information about the Henry and Electa (Griswold) Arnold family: Following their marriage, on 12-21-1863, Henry and Electa (Griswold) Arnold resided in Clinton Township, where two children were born to them: Jennie Ophelia Arnold and Lewis Henry Arnold. In 1870, the Arnold family moved to Kansas and established a homestead. There two more children were born to them: Clarion Oliver Arnold and Eva Christianna Arnold. During their stay in Kansas, the family encountered many hardships, as that part of the country was visited by a two-years' drought and then followed by the year known as the "Grasshopper Year"--swarms of grasshoppers destroyed everything that survived the drought. In addition, the Arnold family was afflicted by sickness on account of the climate. The Arnold family, therefore, decided to return to Clinton Township, Wayne County, PA. There two more children were born to them: Clarissa Belle Arnold and Susan Anna Arnold. In 1878, the Arnold family purchased land and built a home on the Moosic Mountain in Clinton Township. They resided on this farm until 1907, when they purchased the Jerry Darling place. There, Henry and Electa Arnold lived with their son Clarion until his death on 08-03-1920. On 09-19-1920, Henry William Arnold died. Electa Arnold then went to live with her daughter Eva (Mrs. Edwin A. Randall) in Scranton, where Electa Arnold, who was born in Clinton Township on 04-23-1846, died on 05-25-1929. She is interred in the Clinton Center Baptist Church Cemetery.

Henry William Arnold and Electa Marie Griswold were the parents of six children: (1) Jennie Ophelia Arnold (01-22-1865--04-14-1940, interred in the Clinton Center Baptist Church Cemetery), married on 03-31-1886 to Charles A. Gaylord (1857--05-15-1904, interred in the Clinton Center Baptist Church Cemetery); (2) Louis Henry Arnold (05-26-1868--10-18-1952, interred in the Clinton Center Baptist Church Cemetery), married on 08-03-1889 to Harriet McAvoy (04-06-1868--09-12-1945, interred in the Clinton Center Baptist Church Cemetery); (3) Clarion Oliver Arnold (01-17-1871--08-03-1920, interred in the Clinton Center Baptist Church Cemetery); (4) Eva Christianna Arnold (03-30-1874--06-27-1936), married on 09-07-1904 to Edwin A. Randall (1876--02-27-1938); (5) Clarissa Belle Arnold (11-10-1877--08-21-1959), married on 03-06-1894 to Rev. Stephen Treat (04-20-1873--09-23-1918); (6) Susan Anna Arnold (02-24-1880--01-19-1960), married on 06-23-1897 to John L. Cook (11-26-1872--11-05-1946). A complete list of the descendants of Henry William Arnold and Electa Marie Griswold is given in Volume 11, Number 2 (November 19, 1980) of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

The biographical sketch of Richard W. Gelatt that is given below is from Commemorative Biographical Record of Northeastern Pennsylvania (Chicago: J. H. Beers and Co., 1900, pp. 1276-1277):

RICHARD W. GELATT, a well-known wagon manufacturer at Gelatt, Susquehanna county, is a member of a prominent pioneer family, and was born at his present homestead January 10, 1831.

The first of the name [of Gelatt] to come to this country was George Gelatt, a native of France, who took part in the Revolutionary war, and afterward settled in Massachusetts. Between 1809 and 1812 he came to Susquehanna county, locating upon a farm one mile south of the present village of Gelatt, on what is known as the Newburg turnpike. He was a devout Christian, and helped to found the Baptist Church in his locality. He was married in Massachusetts, and his wife died in 1849, aged ninety-two years; his death occurred in 1852, at the great age of 102 years. Their remains now rest in the family burial plot at Gelatt. They had the following children: Robert, who died at Thompson; George, our subject's father; Collins and Jonathan, who died at Thompson; Richard, who died in Iowa; and Abigail, who married Ebenezer Blanchard, and died in Gelatt.

George Gelatt (2), our subject's father, was born in Massachusetts July 4, 1790, and died in December, 1865, in Gibson township, Susquehanna county, where he had been engaged in farming many years. To the last he was interested in public affairs, being an ardent supporter of the Republican party, and he was also identified prominently with the Baptist Church at Jackson, which he helped to build. He was married, on October 14, 1808, to Rebecca Whaley, who died in 1822, and on April 21, 1825, he married Susan L. Williams, who was born in Connecticut December 17, 1794, and lived to the age of seventy-five years. By his first marriage he had children as follows: Clarissa, born October 30, 1809, married Sumner Griswold, and died in Gibson; John, born March 31, 1812, died in Gibson township; Elvira, born in 1814, died aged four years; Samantha, born August 25, 1816, married Griswold Bill, and died in March, 1895; George Washington, born August 16, 1818, died in Gibson in 1889; Rebecca, born April 20, 1820, married Elliott Benson. By the second union there were six children: Susan E., born February 17, 1826, died January 18, 1833; Almada, born August 22, 1827, died November 13, 1830; Marnel, born January 7, 1829, died May 7, 1832; Richard W. is mentioned more fully below; Gordon, born April 10, 1833, died December 2, 1872; Silas C., born November 1, 1839, resides at Susquehanna, Penn., and is more fully referred to in the sketch of Charles J. Gelatt, which appears elsewhere...

See also the biographical sketches of the following members of the Gelatt family in Commemorative Biographical Record of Northeastern Pennsylvania (Chicago: J. H. Beers and Co., 1900):

1. Edrick R. Gelatt (pp. 1058-1059), who is the son of Clarissa (Gelatt) Griswold's half-brother, Richard W. Gelatt
2. Charles Judson Gelatt (pp. 1110-1111), who is the son of Clarissa (Gelatt) Griswold's half-brother, Silas C. Gelatt
3. O. W. Gelatt (p. 1791), who is the son of Clarissa (Gelatt) Griswold's brother, George Washington Gelatt.

EARL MELVILLE PECK

The biographical sketch of Earl Melville Peck that is given below is from Portrait and Biographical Record of Lackawanna County, Pa. (New York and Chicago: Chapman Publishing Co., 1897, p. 402):

EARL M.[elville] PECK, superintendent of the lumber department of the Delaware & Hudson Railroad at Carbondale, was born in Aldenville, Clinton Township, Wayne County, Pa., June 24, 1838, and is a son of Reuben and Sallie Ann (King) Peck, natives of Mount Pleasant, that county. The Peck family was represented among the early settlers of Connecticut, whence our subject's grandfather, Rev. Elijah Peck, a native of Litchfield County, removed to Pennsylvania and became a pioneer preacher of the Baptist Church in Wayne County and vicinity. The maternal grandfather of our subject was Benjamin King, a man of prominence in his day, and the incumbent of a number of local offices, among them that of justice of the peace.

Born in 1799, Reuben Peck grew to manhood in Wayne County, where he gave his attention to farming throughout his entire active life. Like his father, he was a believer in Baptist doctrines and an earnest worker in that denomination. For many years he served his church as deacon and took the lead in religious work. After a long and useful life, he died at the home farm in 1870. From that time his widow made her home in Carbondale, until her demise in 1875. Like him, she was an exemplary member of the Baptist Church. Of their four children, one died in infancy and another at the age of fourteen years; Albert R. is a farmer residing at Aldenville.

The early years of our subject's life were passed on the home farm, and his education was such as the common schools afforded. At different times while a boy he was employed in various positions on the Delaware & Hudson Railroad. In 1865 he came to Carbondale to accept the position of assistant to Emmons Eaton, who was then in charge of the lumber department, and a few years later was promoted to be superintendent of that department, a position he has filled ever since with marked ability. He is a careful, conservative business man, and guards well the interests of the company.

In 1867 Mr. Peck married Miss Emeline M. Ledyard, of Mount Pleasant, Pa. They are the parents of an only son, Emons L., who is preparing for the medical profession in Bucknell University, at Lewisburg, Pa. Mrs. Peck is a daughter of Hiram Ledyard, who was born in 1802 and is still living. In spite of his advanced age he retains the use of all his faculties except his eyesight, and can relate many interesting incidents dating back to the War of 1812. For years he was a prominent farmer and stockman of Mount Pleasant and held a number of local offices there. Both Mr. and Mrs. Peck are members of the Baptist Church, in which he has been an active worker and a deacon for many years. In politics he has always been a Democrat and is a firm believer in sound money. Outside of his connection with the railroad he has been successful in business affairs and is the owner of much valuable property, including one of the finest homes in the city.

"The winter of 1792 was severe, and really terrible. According to father's [Asa Stanton's] account, the snow began on the 18th of November, and fell most of the time for two weeks. He had raised some corn that season, and he bought some rye, but it was not fit for food until it had been ground. So, in the winter of 1793, Elijah Dix, Elder Elijah Peck, and he [Asa Stanton] went to mill at Slocum Hollow, (now Scranton,) with three yoke of oxen and a span of horses, and, being snowed in, they were gone nine days. They fed out one-third of the grists to the teams."

Michael Grennell was born 03-02-1752 in Saybrook, CT, and died 02-12-1858 in Clinton Township, Wayne County, PA. On December 21, 1777, he married Susannah Balcom, who was born in 1760 and who died 08-01-1825 in Clinton Township, Wayne County, PA.

In her 1955 book, Ancestry of Ora Loomis Russell [and] Edna Loomis Loomis and Descendants of Ora Loomis Russell, Edna Pearl Loomis reports (p. 81) the following information about the military career of Michael Grennell:

... served as private in Captain Water's company, Colonel Parson's Connecticut Regiment. Later he served three tours, one of two wks., one of four days, and one of six wks. as a private under Capt. Gaylord & Col. Hooker in the Conn. troops.

MICHAEL GRINNELL

On page 305 of Boyd is the following information on Deacon Michael Grinnell:

DEACON MICHAEL GRINNELL's name is on the tax list of this year [1788]. He was born in Saybrook, Conn., March 20, 1752; removed with his parents to Salisbury, Conn., at the beginning of the Revolution, and about 1788 came to Winsted. He first owned land on the east side of Long Lake. In 1793 he bought the Wedge lot at the northeast corner of the town, lately owned by Joel Mead, on which he lived (in the Partridge House) until 1823, when he removed to Clinton, Wayne Co., Penn., where he resided until his death, on the 12th day of February, 1858, aged one hundred and six years. He served in the Revolutionary Army, and witnessed the tearing down of the leaden statue of George III. at the Bowling Green in New York. His hearing almost entirely failed during the last thirty years of his life, while his sight continued nearly unimpaired until past his hundredth year. He was a deacon of the Baptist Church in this town, and was always in his place in the stated meetings of the Church, until more than one hundred years old. He married in 1777, Susanna Balcom, perhaps daughter of John; she died in August, 1825, aged 70 years. Of their six children only two births are recorded in this town.

GRENNELL MONUMENT PHOTOGRAPHS

In addition to the photograph of the Grennell Monument in the Clinton Center Baptist Church Cemetery that is given in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA on page 7, two other photographs that were taken at the time of the unveiling of the Grennell Monument in August, 1919, both in the collection of the late Lois Tryphenia (Norton) Curtis, are known to the author:

1. Grennell Monument Draped Completely with American Flag. Photograph, 2 10/16" X 1 7/16", photograph in the collection of the late Lois T. (Norton) Curtis. The reverse of this photograph is inscribed: "The Stone, dedicated Aug. 27, 1915." This inscription is incorrect. This inscription refers to the monument in Clinton Cemetery that was erected "IN MEMORY OF THE EARLY SETTLERS OF THIS [Clinton] TOWNSHIP AND THE FOUNDERS AND MINISTERS OF THE CLINTON BAPTIST CHURCH"--and not the Grennell Monument. This photograph of the Grennell Monument shows the monument from the rear.
2. Grennell Monument Draped Partially with American Flag, Bronze Plaque Readable. Photograph in the collection of the late Lois T. (Norton) Curtis. To the right of the Grennell Monument in this photograph can be seen (a) the Henry Banning Curtis/Louisa Griswold Monument (in the upper right hand corner of the photograph), and (b) the Elisha A. Elmer Monument (in the lower right hand corner of the photograph).

ALFRED MATTHEWS ON CLINTON TOWNSHIP

A very comprehensive history of Clinton Township, from the earliest settlements during the first decade of the nineteenth century up to 1886, is given in Chapter XIX of Alfred Matthews' History of Wayne, Pike and Monroe Counties, Pennsylvania. (Philadelphia: R. T. Peck & Co., 1886, pp. 576-588). Given the fact that Matthews' book was recently reprinted by the Wayne County Historical Society, we will not reprint here the chapter from that book on Clinton Township. Readers who are interested in the history of Clinton Township and its citizens before 1886 who fail to consult Matthews' highly important History of Wayne, Pike and Monroe Counties, Pennsylvania have overlooked a valuable source of information.

REV. JAMES RAINEY

Rev. James Rainey was pastor of the Clinton Center Baptist Church in 1905. Very little is, at present, known about Rev. James Rainey.

ELIJAH PECK AND FAMILY

The following information about Elijah Peck is given in the history of Mount Pleasant Township in History of Wayne County by Phineas G. Goodrich (Honesdale, Penn: Haines & Beardsley, 1880), p. 195:

"Elijah Peck moved in about 1795, from Connecticut. He became a Baptist clergyman and was extensively known and honored as an ornament to his profession. His oldest son, Elijah Peck, is living. William Peck and Reuben Peck are deceased. Lewis Peck, Myra Peck, who married Jesse Dix, Joanna W., widow of Giles Gaylord, late of Clinton, deceased, are all living. Elijah Peck, 2d, had nineteen children."

Edith A. Gardner. Photograph, 3 9/16" X 5 3/16", by Cramer, Carbondale, PA, in the collection of Edith A. Gardner, Carbondale, PA; copy print by Donald W. Powell. Miss Gardner, a descendant of pioneer settlers of Clinton Township (John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden), is shown here in a photograph that was taken by Cramer before 1916. Following her graduation from Carbondale High School in 1916, Miss Gardner attended Bucknell University, from which she was graduated in 1920. Miss Gardner taught in the public schools of Pennsylvania for forty years: 1920-1930, Lansford; 1930-1960, Carbondale High School. Miss Gardner is one of the leading authorities on the history of Clinton Township, Wayne County, and has graciously served on the Advisory Board of this historical quarterly from its creation in 1979. She resides in Carbondale in the house that was built by Hiram Worden (her father's brother-in-law) for her parents: Milo M. Gardner (04-19-1859--07-03-1950) and Harriet Annis Curtis (11-02-1859--12-17-1946). A photograph of Miss Gardner's sister, Gertrude, is given in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA on page 25.

REV. HENRY CURTIS / ELIZA BANNING

On October 3, 1981, Edith A. Gardner told S. Robert Powell the following information about the descendants of Rev. Henry Curtis and Eliza Banning:

"Rev. Henry Curtis and Eliza Banning had eight children:

1. Henry Banning Curtis, who married Louisa Griswold on April 10, 1851
2. Ann Eliza Curtis
3. Euphemia P. Curtis, who married Henry P. Haight
4. Caroline Curtis
5. John Judson Curtis, who married Ella Saylord
6. George Boardman Curtis, who married Augusta Cook
7. Julia Ann Curtis, who married James Robert Knapp
8. Eugene Kincaid Curtis, who married, first, Maria Clift, and second, May M. Stevens.

George Boardman Curtis and Augusta Cook had six children:

1. Augustus D. Curtis, who married ? ; he had two sons: Kenneth (who had a son, Kenneth) and Darwin; Kenneth Curtis is the one who established the Great Masterpiece Gardens in Lake Wales, Florida
2. John Curtis; he became a doctor
3. Eugene Curtis; he remained single
4. Helen Curtis, who married Robert Peck
5. Julia Curtis, who married, if I am not mistaken, Arthur Morgan
6. Harriet Curtis, who married Horace Leekley

Augustus D. Curtis was quite an important man. Here is some information on Augustus D. Curtis [what follows is a copy of the information that is on the typed page that Edith A. Gardner handed to S. Robert Powell when she made the preceding remark about Augustus D. Curtis]:

"Augustus D. Curtis, president and founder of the Curtis Lighting, Inc., of Chicago, Ill., who was educated in the Honesdale schools and born at Hawley, Pa., October 14, 1865, died suddenly

April 29, at Beverly Hills, Cal. His death culminates a life devoted to the art and science of illumination, his major contribution being the introduction of indirect lighting. He invented the X-ray reflector and his concern did a business of over $2,000,000 annually.

Among his notable achievements, in addition to his being a successful electrical manufacturer, he rescued a man from the erupting volcano Kilauea in Hawaii, barely escaped death from trampling by an enraged elephant in Ceylon, captured a baby baboon in Algeria, and was severely injured by enraged members of the tribe, flew with Bleriot, first to fly across the English Channel, on an altitude flight, was instrumental in forming the present Chinese Republic, and lighted Michael Angelo's paintings on the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel in the Vatican in Rome."

DEACON RUFUS GRENNELL

The following information about Deacon Rufus Grennell is contained in the account of Captain Matthias Keen and his family that is given in the history of Canaan Township in History of Wayne County by Phineas G. Goodrich (Honesdale, Penn: Haines & Beardsley, 1880), p. 181:

"Matthias Keen, better known as Captain Keen, a native of Orange county, N.Y., first moved to Milford, Pike county, and thence to Canaan, in 1815. He first lived on Orchard hill, and made a dam at the mouth of Keen's pond, then called 'Canoe pond,' and built the frame for a grist-mill. About this time, in drawing a gun towards him in a canoe, it went off and the ball was lodged in his hip. After he had suffered much, Dr. Mahony extracted the ball, but he was left a cripple for life. He erected the first carding-machine in that region of the country, and to it there was a wool-picker attached. Before this all the wool was picked and carded by hand, but the machine diminished much of the labor of the women, and Captain Keen was complimented as a public benefactor. He built the first grist-mill in that part of the town, and Deacon Rufus Grennell was the mill-wright."

BARTHOLOMEW

The following information about the Bartholomew family is given in the history of Mount Pleasant Township in History of Wayne County by Phineas G. Goodrich (Honesdale, Penn: Haines & Beardsley, 1880), p. 205:

"Ezra Bartholomew and Wooster Bartholomew came into the county together. Razamon Bartholomew was the only son of Ezra. His oldest daughter was the wife of Baxter Bicknell; after the death of Bicknell she married James Bolkcom, of Lebanon township. After the death of Ezra Bartholomew his widow was married to Elder Chase, a Baptist preacher. The above mentioned three families came into the township in or about 1810 from Connecticut."

SAMUEL WEST AND HIS SON, DAVID S. WEST

The following information about Samuel West and his son, David S. West, is contained in the history of the Stanton family that is given in the history of Canaan Township in History of Wayne County by Phineas G. Goodrich (Honesdale, Penn: Haines & Beardsley, 1880), p. 176:

"Samuel Chumard settled about one mile and a half above us [the Stantons], on the old road. He sold out to Hezekiah Leach. Samuel West, a Baptist clergyman, next began north of us. His son, David S. West, who occupied his father's improvements, was a man of education and a noted surveyor."

JOHN BUNTING AND HIS SON, DANIEL

The following information about John Bunting and his son, Daniel, is contained in the history of Canaan Township in History of Wayne County by Phineas G. Goodrich (Honesdale, Penn: Haines & Beardsley, 1880), pp. 174, 176:

"John Bunting, a Quaker, made the first clearing between Col. Asa Stanton's and the Swingle Settlement, near the old Cortright tannery [in Canaan Township]. He made an assessment of the town, in 1800, when there were only thirty-four taxables, including Salem, Sterling, part of Cherry Ridge, and part of Clinton. He assessed to himself 446 acres of land. In the year 1802 he was appointed the first justice of the peace in Canaan. Daniel Bunting, his son, succeeded him as assessor, and served several years, and then removed and settled on the west branch of the Lackawaxen below Aldenville, took up a large quantity of land, and there, for some years, kept a house of public entertainment. All the families afore-mentioned, save that of John Bunting, were Germans.... The first man that settled and made a clearing between us and the Shaffer Settlement was John Bunting."

The following account of the Memorial Day 1981 tribute to the Remsen family that took place in Queens, New York City, was written by Margaret A. (Remsen) Rude and published in The Wayne Independent of Thursday, June 4, 1981, p. 7:

MARGARET REMSEN RUDE GUEST AT MEMORIAL DAY TRIBUTE TO NEW NETHERLANDS SETTLERS

Memorial Day Weekend 1981 is a time I will never forget. So many first time experiences happened to me that I still find it hard to comprehend all the events.

To start at the beginning: Last year my daughter Marjorie and her husband, Gerald Cook, were volunteer curators for a traveling art exhibit from Bacone College, which is situated at Muskogee, Okla. One of their tour stops was New York City, where they were hosted by the New York City Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Marjorie mentioned her desire to see Remsen Street in Brooklyn in Brooklyn, which was named for her family. Her hostess had just purchased four DAR grave markers which the N.Y.C. chapter planned to install at a memorial ceremony in remembrance of the Remsen Revolutionary War heroes, whose graves had been located in a small cemetery in Queens, N.Y. The Queens Memorial Day parade and ceremony committee had tried to locate some Remsen descendants. Marjorie's and Gerald's visit was just in time to have her featured as honored guest and speaker at the ceremony.

My four children and I decided that this year we would all go to the Queens Memorial Day parade and ceremony. I had not been back to Brooklyn (where I was born and had lived as a child) for many years. The children wanted to see the houses I had lived in, the schools and church I had attended. I had never been to the Remsen Cemetery - the little old family cemetery where some of my ancestors had been buried. The whole family wanted to visit the scenes of my childhood and the Remsen cemetery. We also wanted to walk and worship where our ancestors had been.

Saturday we spent visiting these childhood scenes. We were able to enter the church in which I had worshipped as a child. We walked on Remsen Street in Brooklyn Heights, Middagh Street, and Rapelje Street. These streets were named after ancestors of mine who were the earliest settlers in New Netherlands.

Historically, my seventh great-grandfather and grandmother, Joris de Rapelje and Catalina Trico, were Walloons, whose families had fled from France at the time of the 16th century religious wars in that country. They eventually arrived in the Netherlands. When the Dutch West Indies Company planted their first colony in the New World in 1624, Joris and Catalina were among the passengers on the ship "Unity." Their daughter, Sarah, was the first white girl born in the New Netherlands. Sarah was a grandmother of mine. Their third daughter, Jannette, was also a grandmother of mine. Jannette married Rem Jansen Vanderbeeck, who came to this country about 1640.

Rem Jansen Vanderbeeck and Jannette Rapalje lived at the Wallabout (This is now Brooklyn Heights) and reared a family of fifteen children. One of these children was named Abraham. The children of Rem Jansen Vanderbeeck took the name of Remsen. This was the old Dutch custom. Abraham was known as Abraham son of Rem, or Abraham Rem's son - which became Remsen.

When Abraham married Anna Aertsen Middaugh, he and his wife moved to Newtown. This location was exactly what the name implied - a new town. Abraham and his family were extensive land holders in that region of Queens county. Newtown eventually became part of what is now known as the Borough of Queens, City of New York. Abraham Remsen and his wife Anna Aertsen Middaugh, are two of the people buried in the old Remsen cemetery.

Sunday morning, we worshipped in the Newtown Dutch Reformed Church. The cornerstone of the original church is dated 1732. Four of the congregation members who contributed to the building of the first church (which was octagonal in shape in order to afford better protection) were Remsen Family members. One was Abraham Remsen (the direct ancestor of mine) and the other three were sons of his: the church members welcomed us most warmly.

Sunday afternoon, we went to the special Revolutionary War Encampment by the Historic Commands of the American Revolution at Green Field. Young men and women (and some not so young) were dressed in authentic reproductions of the uniforms worn by the Scottish, Hessian, and English soldiers. Michael Albetta (who was responsible for most of the enthusiasm, planning, and execution of the Encampment and Memorial Day parade and ceremony, (and who also was the visionary force behind cleaning up the cemetery and making Remsen Day a reality) personally escorted our family around the encampment. Each group of soldiers explained to us the history of their group (i.e., Scottish, Hessian, English Colonial), their uniforms, and the paraphernalia which accompanied each soldier. Bagpipes were played and Scottish dances were performed for our family.

Memorial Day, May 25, 1981, was proclaimed Remsen Day by Donald R. Manes, president of the Borough of Queens, City of New York. This was the day for the parade and the special ceremonies. American Legion Post #1424 was in charge of the affair. The parade was the largest in Long Island. There were 27 bands and 4,000 marchers. A limousine was provided for me to ride in the parade, accompanied by my daughter Marjorie. This was the first time I had ever ridden in a parade - let alone riding in a chauffeured limousine. The rest of the family marched with a DAR contingent.

Gertrude (Gardner) Snyder. Photograph, 3 5/8" X 5 5/8", by Cramer, Carbondale, PA; in the collection of Edith A. Gardner, Carbondale, PA; copy print by Donald W. Powell. Mrs. Snyder, a descendant of pioneer settlers of Clinton Township (John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden), is shown here in a photograph taken on the occasion of her graduation from Carbondale High School in 1918. Following her graduation from Bucknell University in 1925, Mrs. Snyder taught in the public schools of Pennsylvania for thirty-seven years: 1925-1926, Bradford; 1926-1962, Danville. On April 4, 1958, Gertrude Gardner and Charles Snyder (08-15-1889--02-04-1974) were married. Mrs. Snyder, a frequent contributor of important historical information to this quarterly, resides in Danville, where she is a resident member (National Number: 487166) of the Fort McClure Chapter (Bloomsburg, PA), Daughters of the American Revolution. A photograph of Mrs. Snyder's sister, Edith, is given in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA on page 24.

The parade went along Metropolitan Avenue to Remsen Square. There we were escorted to the dignitaries' platform which has been erected at the Remsen Cemetery. Marjorie introduced our family to the assembled crowd. My son, Dr. Frederick Remsen Rude, gave a short speech. Then I was introduced and gave a little talk. This was another great thrill for me.

My direct ancestor, Abraham Remsen, and his wife Anne Aertsen Middaugh are buried in this little Remsen Cemetery. Several of their children and other descendants are also buried here. It was a most moving experience for me to hear "taps" being played in this particular place.

Yes, Memorial Day Weekend 1981 is a time I shall never forget. Imagine an 82-year-old woman being: The center of attention at the Encampment, chauffeur driven in a limousine in a parade, guest of honor at the Remsen Day Ceremonies, guest speaker at the celebration. And as if that were not enough, pictures of the parade and ceremony were taken by the N. Y. television station channel 2. The camera men took pictures of me while I was giving my talk - and these pictures were televised on the 6 o'clock evening news!

Memorial Day Weekend 1981 is a time I shall never forget. So many wonderful experiences happened to me. Throughout the experiences, I was always surrounded by the companionship, concern, and loving care of my marvelous family. Those present were Marjorie Rude and Gerald Cook, Hilton, N. Y.; John Remsen and Amy Rude, John Remsen II, Ridge Farm, Waymart; Virginia Rude and Clark Hungerford, Cleveland, Ohio; Nancy Hungerford and Robert Bostwick, N.Y.C.; Dr. Frederick Remsen and Ruth Ann Rude, James Curtis, Philadelphia.

Lois Tryphenia (Norton) Curtis. Photograph, 3 5/8" X 5 5/8", by Cramer, Carbondale, PA, in the photograph archive of Lois Curtis at the time of her death on May 27, 1981; copy print by Donald W. Powell. Lois Curtis, a descendant of pioneer settlers of Clinton Township (John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden), is shown here in a photograph that was taken on the occasion of her graduation from Clinton High School. It is Lois Curtis who recorded, gathered and preserved virtually all of the information that has come down to us about the Clinton Township Pioneer Days, 1915-1942. At the time of her death, Lois Curtis was writing a sesquicentennial history of the Clinton Center Baptist Church. That history was presented by Lois Curtis' nephew, Kenneth Singer, at the sesquicentennial celebration of the establishment of the Clinton Center Baptist Church, and is reprinted on pages 14-16 of this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

RUFUS GRISWOLD

The biographical sketch of Rufus Griswold that is given below is from Commemorative Biographical Record of Northeastern Pennsylvania (Chicago: J. H. Beers and Co., 1900, pp. 1771-1772):

RUFUS GRISWOLD has throughout his active business life been principally identified with the agricultural and lumber interests of Wayne county, and now owns and successfully operates a fine farm in Mt. Pleasant township. He was born in that township, in February, 1824, a son of Orin and Lois (Denning) Griswold, natives of Connecticut and early settlers of Mt. Pleasant township, Wayne Co., Penn., where the father purchased 122 acres of wild land and transformed the same into a good farm. His residence was a little frame building, the first house of its kind in the township. He resided upon this property during his entire residence in the county, and when life's labors were ended he died there in 1878. His wife had passed away three years previously.

In the family of this worthy couple were three sons and one daughter: (1) Alfred, born in Mt. Pleasant, in 1822, married Sarah A. Lowery, of Wayne County, and engaged in the butcher business in Carbondale, where he died in 1858. He left a widow and three children, of whom, Charles died at the age of nineteen years; Altha is now the wife of Stephen Tagley, of Carbondale, and has six children, George, Charles, Edward, Orin, Bell and Ollie. Orin, a conductor on the railroad between Pottsville and Milkes Barre, is married and has one son. (2) Rufus, our subject. (3) Ambrose, born on the present home of our subject, in 1828, followed farming until his death (he did not marry). (4) Mary, born on the same place, married Hiram Dibble, of Wayne county, and they made their home in Peckville, where she died, leaving no family.

Reared on the home farm, Rufus Griswold received his education in the public schools of the locality, and during early life he followed lumbering and farming. In 1858 he was united in marriage with Miss Nancy Miles, of Bethany, Wayne county, a daughter of James and Almeda (Brink) Miles, now deceased. Her father was born in Orange county, N. Y., and when a young man came to Wayne county, where he was married and afterward located at Cherry Ridge, carrying on the stone mason's trade there until his death. His children were: Clarissa, now the wife of Levi Bennett; Mary J., wife of Rev. James Miner, of Watertown, N. Y.; Lucius; Charles N., who drowned at sea; Nancy, wife of our subject; Isaac and William H., who were both drowned in Honesdale in 1872; and Alice, wife of William Bates, of Carbondale. To Mr. and Mrs. Griswold were born two children, but Emma Jane, born in 1872, died in childhood, and the other died at birth. In 1873 they adopted Lula Drake, who remained with them until she became the wife of Wallace Mills, of Wayne county. They now reside in Mt. Pleasant township and have a family of four children: Bessie, Orasmuth, Gladys and Rufus.

After his marriage Mr. Griswold located in Clinton, Wayne county, where he resided for some time. During the dark days of the Rebellion, he manifested his love of country by enlisting, in 1862, and from Wayne county proceeded to Philadelphia, thence going to Newport News, Va., and later to Yorktown, Va., where he did guard duty, being detailed as provost guard until honorably discharged in August, 1863. Returning to Wayne county he engaged in farming in Dyberry township for four years, and later for a number of years was in the employ of the Delaware & Hudson Co. In 1875 he returned to the old home farm, where he and his wife cared for his father until the latter's death two years later. Our subject then purchased the place, and has since successfully operated it. He is an honored member of the Grand Army Post at Forest City, is a Jacksonian Democrat in politics, and has held office. His wife is a member of the Baptist Church, and in the social circles of the community they occupy a prominent position.

The following biographical sketch of Sylvanus P. Peck is from Commemorative Biographical Record of Northeastern Pennsylvania (Chicago: J. H. Beers and Co., 1900, p. 559):

SYLVANUS P. PECK, one of the representative citizens of Mt. Pleasant township, Wayne county, was born May 19, 1858, on the farm where he still resides, and belongs to one of the old and prominent families of Wayne county, whose identification with her history dates from an early period in the development of this section of the State. His paternal grandfather was Rev. Elijah Peck, a pioneer Baptist minister of northeastern Pennsylvania.

Hiram Peck, our subject's father, was also born on the old homestead in Mt. Pleasant township, August 11, 1819, and there grew to manhood amidst pioneer scenes. He was married, September 27, 1848, to Miss Maria Perham, who was born and reared in Mt. Pleasant township, a daughter of Aaron Perham, one of the first settlers of Wayne county. Seven children were born of this union, namely: Chloe, Mrs. Kennedy; George; Hiram E.; Sylvanus P.; Charles and Fred, both deceased; and Francis A. The father died in February, 1889, at the age of nearly seventy years; the mother is still living. Both were consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he was a Democrat in politics. Throughout his business career he engaged in stage driving and farming, and he most creditably and satisfactorily filled the offices of collector and constable in his township.

Under the parental roof Sylvanus P. Peck passed his boyhood and youth in much the usual manner of farmers' sons of that day. On April 7, 1880, he married Miss Lottie Hacker, a daughter of Samuel Hacker, and to them have been born seven children: William Frederick, Mabel Ellen, Elizabeth Perham, Samuel Reese, Anna May, Charles Egbert and Harold Sylvanus. The parents attend the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in the social circles of the community occupy an enviable position. Mr. Peck is a thorough and systematic farmer, and is meeting with success in the operation of the farm, which comprises 160 acres of rich and arable land, under a high state of cultivation and well improved. His comfortable and convenient residence was erected in 1897, at a cost of $1,500. In the exercise of his elective franchise he supports the men and measures of the Republican party, and he always takes a deep and commendable interest in public affairs.

ERASTUS W. LOOMIS

Reprinted below is the biographical sketch of Erastus W. Loomis that is given on pages 588-590 of Alfred Matthews' History of Wayne, Pike and Monroe Counties, Pennsylvania. (Philadelphia: R. T. Peck & Co., 1886):

ERASTUS W. LOOMIS.

The Loomis family is of English origin, the paternal ancestor, Joseph Loomis, having emigrated from Braintree, Essex County, England, in the ship "Susan and Ellen," which sailed from London April 11, 1638, and arrived in Boston July 17th of the same year. In the following year he moved with his family, consisting of his wife and five sons and three daughters to Windsor, Litchfield County, Conn. Of his sons, Nathaniel was born in England, and married Elizabeth, daughter of John Moore, November 24, 1653. He died August 19, 1688. His children were Elizabeth, Nathaniel, Abigail, Josiah, Jonathan, David, Hezekiah, Moses, Mindwell, Ebenezer, Mary and Rebecca. Of these David was born January 11, 1667; married, December 8, 1692, Lydia Marsh. He died January 9, 1751. His children were Lydia, David, Aaron, Hephzibah, Eliakim, Elizabeth, Richard and Hannah. Aaron was born September 5, 1686; married, February 5, 1718, Elizabeth Horman, who died April 15, 1783. He died September 13, 1773. Their children were Deborah, Grace, Aaron, Mindwell, Moses, Abner, Esther, Ephraim, Richard, Eli, Issachar, Naomi, Abiah and Lemuel.

Ephraim was born April 1, 1731; married October 31, 1756, Ruth Hifford; for his second wife he married, October 18, 1764, Jane Campbell. He died April 4, 1812. His children were Ephraim, Ruth, Amy, Aaron, Solomon, Jane, Silas, Bildad, Rebecca and Elias. Of these Ephraim, Jr., was born July 12, 1758; married, October 30, 1784, Jane Fyler, who died March 30, 1789; married, second, July 20, 1789, Zervia Hill. He died in 1824. His children were Reuben, Oliver, Ephraim, Asahel, Zerviah, Ruth, Ephraim, Charles G., Roman and Caroline. Reuben Loomis, or the father of our subject, was born in Torrington, Litchfield County, Conn., October 9, 1785. At the age of seventeen he became a member of his uncle Stephen Fyler's family, with whom he resided until he reached his majority. He then spent some time in New Hampshire, working on a turn-pike. After his marriage, in 1807, to Miss Sarah Westland, who was born in Windsor, Hartford County, Conn., November 25, 1787, he worked at farming or anything which offered until January 18, 1817, when he loaded his household goods, his wife and three sons (the eldest but six years old) into a large covered wagon, and, with two yoke of oxen as motive power, started for Mt. Pleasant, in Wayne County, Pa., one hundred and fifty miles away. At Mt. Pleasant they had a distant relative, whom they called uncle Ichabod Demens, and at whose door the two yoke of oxen and wagon, with its cold and weary occupants, came to a halt in the night of January 27th, just nine days after starting. Erastus W., though but six years old at the time, well remembers that long ride in mid-winter, and the joy they experienced when, crying with cold and hunger, they reached Uncle Demens' door. Mr. Loomis bought fifty-seven acres of wild land adjoining Uncle Demens' farm, and at once commenced the work of building a small log house and cutting away the timber around the same. During the winter the family lived with Daniel Roberts, who was a widower and was glad to have Mrs. Loomis look after his house and little ones.

On the 1st of June following their arrival the family moved into their own house, which was of the most primitive make. The fire-place was but a few feet high, and, for want of a chimney, the smoke was allowed to escape the best way possible. To his farm there was only a lumberman's road, and the country for miles around was new and wild. Deer, wolves, panthers and bears were plenty, and Mr. Loomis kept his table well supplied with venison and other game. Erastus W., the eldest son, remembers well going to sleep many a night with the howling of wolves sounding in his ears; and that his father's and their neighbors' sheep were often killed by them. The family for years saw hard times and always hard work. One winter the steady cold weather froze the dams, and the mills stopped running, and the whole neighborhood was out of flour, and, with only potatoes to eat, the settlers saw hunger staring them in the face. Finally Uncle Demens, with oxen and an old sled, started for Mr. Keen's mill in Canaan township, and, with flour for the whole neighborhood, returned just at night of a winter's day. Mr. and Mrs. Loomis lived to see the wilderness changed into farms and the log houses replaced with more pretentious ones, and with prosperity came schools, churches and a better civilization. They cleared their farm, built farm-houses and barns, reared a family of children, and passed away mourned and regretted by those who knew them best. Mr. Loomis was for many years in the militia service, and was a lieutenant both in Connecticut and in Wayne County. He was a Democrat, but not an active politician. Mr. Loomis died November 10, 1849; his wife, August 4, 1866. To them were born children as follows: Erastus W., Oliver H., born in 1812; February 20; Daniel D., born November 27, 1814; Reuben F., born June 18, 1817; Hiram P., born December 9, 1819; Marietta, born January 2, 1821, and Lucretia J., born December 25, 1823. Hiram P. married, May 20, 1846, Laura Griswold, who was born July 7, 1826. Their children are Theron O., born February 25, 1848; Oliver G., born August 16, 1857; died April 21, 1857; Helen A., born February 21, 1860; died November 17, 1860; and Francis E., born December 17, 1862. Erastus W., the subject of this sketch, was born in Torrington, Conn., April 9, 1810. Until seventeen years of age he remained with his father, laboring as soon as old enough for the common good. He then went to live with Francis Griswold, with whom he remained, working by the year, until he was thirty-one years old. Part of the time he received ten dollars per month, and paid his wages until he was of age to his father. On the 20th day of May, 1841, he led to the altar Miss Mehitabel Muzzey, who was born February 22, 1819, and was daughter of Pliny and Mary (Draper) Muzzey. They were Massachusetts people and from a prominent family. They moved into Wayne County about 1825, and bought the farm now owned by Hiram Loomis. In August, 1841, Mr. Loomis bought of W. W. Norton the farm now owned by William Rood, and the newly-married couple commenced life thereon. It was in a bad condition, and Mr. Loomis at once commenced the work of improvement. The house and barns were repaired, fences built and fields cleared, thus doubling its value and making it a pleasant home. Mr. and Mrs. Loomis were for nearly half a century members of the Baptist Church, and for many years both sung in the choir, she as leading soprano, he as tenor. The land on which the church stands was donated by Mr. Loomis. For several years before her death Mrs. Loomis was an invalid and a great sufferer, which she bore with Christian fortitude. She passed away October 18, 1863, leaving a void in Mr. Loomis' home that could never be filled, and four years after he sold the farm, since which time he has lived with his relatives. Mr. Loomis is one of the few who has seen Wayne County a wilderness and now sees it a thickly settled country. The howl of the wolf he hears no more, but, instead, the whistle of the engine and the whir of the mowing machine and reaper; and now, at a ripe old age, he is awaiting calmly and without fear the end of a long and well-spent life.

Powell, of the line engraving, 4 3/8" X 6 3/8", that is given on page 589 of Alfred Matthews' History of Wayne, Pike and Monroe Counties, Pennsylvania. (Philadelphia: R. T. Peck & Co., 1886). The biographical sketch of Erastus W. Loomis that is given on pages 588, 590 of Matthews' book is reprinted on this page of this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA. Erastus W. Loomis and his wife, Mehitabel Muzzey, daughter of Pliny and Mary (Draper) Muzzey, owned the land on which the Clinton Center Baptist Church stands. On July 14, 1846, they sold that land to the Clinton Center Baptist Church for $50--a typescript of the deed of sale is given herein on page 16. Two of Erastus W. Loomis' younger brothers were Reuben F. Loomis and Hiram Pease Loomis. A paper entitled "Reuben Loomis Family History" was prepared and read by Flora (Loomis) Brown on Pioneer Day, September 5, 1927--that paper is reprinted in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA on page 10. The biographical sketch of Hiram Pease Loomis that is given in Commemorative Biographical Record of Northeastern Pennsylvania (Chicago: J. H. Beers and Co., 1900, pp. 661-662) is reprinted herein on page 19.

GRISWOLD REUNION 1981

Ridge Farm, Waymart, R. D. 1, established in 1812 by Levi Norton when he moved from Goshen, Ct to Clinton Township, Wayne County, Pa., and today the home of Mrs. Margaret Rude, was the site of the 75th meeting of the Griswold Reunion, on Wednesday, August 19, 1981. The day was clear, breezy and warm, and beneath the majestic Norway spruce trees which surround the family house sixty-two descendants of John Griswold and his wife, Elizabeth Crittenden, and friends of the Griswold descendants, gathered around four heavily laden picnic tables for a covered dish dinner at 12 noon. As the tables were being cleared in readiness for the annual program and business meeting, a drawing and awards ceremony, organized and presented by S. Robert Powell, took place, and seven "extremely valuable" prizes - Chinese paper fans, oriental tea, and others - were drawn for. Among the winners were Mrs. Leona Vaughn, who came the longest distance - from the state of Washington, five miles from Puget Sound, and Mrs. Margaret Rude, who came the shortest distance. The business meeting and program, presided over by Mrs. Beatrice Bartholomay, acting President, commenced by the entire group standing and singing one verse of America, and by a prayer by Rev. G. Fay Crossman. The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, John Rude, Vice-President, Stephen Gravalec, Secretary-Treasurer, Donald W. Powell, Program Committee Chairman, Alice Lund. The former table committee, Mildred LaBarre, Gertrude Snyder and Dorothy Oliver, were unanimously reelected.

The Griswold Reunion always takes place on the third Wednesday of August, and the third Wednesday of August is also one of the four publication dates of the historical quarterly, Northeastern Pennsylvania, the historical quarterly dealing with the history of the eleven counties of northeastern Pennsylvania. The issue of Northeastern Pennsylvania published on Wednesday, August 19, 1981, is entitled "Studio Photography in Northeastern Pennsylvania, 1839-1900, Part III." The issue also contains 8 pages of "Genealogical and Local History Notes," a regular feature of the quarterly. In the November 19, 1980 issue of Northeastern Pennsylvania, appeared a detailed history of the Griswold family entitled, "John Griswold 1754-1843 and Elizabeth Crittenden 1761-1851 of Clinton Township, Wayne County, Pennsylvania: Their Ancestors, Their Descendants." The author of that history, S. Robert Powell, has in the past year been energetically and methodically engaged in gathering as much material as possible on the Griswolds, and a questionnaire seeking basic biographical information on births, deaths, marriages and graduations, was sent to many Griswold descendants. Griswolds who could not be at Ridge Farm on August 19, 1981, for the Reunion, sent in their questionnaires by mail. An invitation to the Reunion was sent to the daughter of Gertrude Irene Loomis and Henry H. Schaffer, and her husband, Audrey and Terje Steinstø, who live in Norway. Two days after the Reunion an audio cassette was sent by Mrs. Steinstø to Mrs. Margaret Rude. In that cassette Audrey Steinstø talks about her family and about the geography of Norway. In addition to the wealth of new information from the returned questionnaires, much new information was read aloud to the assembled group by Mrs. Verna C. Varcoe, acting head of the committee on births, deaths and marriages, and by Mrs. Stephen Treat, Mrs. Margaret Rude, and S. Robert Powell.

Mrs. Alice Lund, head of the Program Committee, then presented Mrs. Mildred Anderson, who played her auto-harp and led the group in singing old time songs and hymns. Mrs. Lund then gave a violin solo, "Whispering." By popular demand she repeated her performance and the entire group sang along with her. Mrs. Lund then read a text which she prepared on her recollections of the buildings and life as it was lived at the family ancestral home, the John Griswold Homestead, built in 1819 by Captain Levi Bennett for John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden, and in later years owned by Francis Griswold and his wife, Jane Loomis, who established therein the Cold Water Tavern. On May 1, 1871, the Cold Water Tavern became the property of Henry Banning Curtis and Louisa Griswold and then became known as the Curtis Homestead. The Curtis Homestead still stands. Since the seventy-fourth reunion of the descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden on August 20, 1980, two honored members of the Griswold family died: Lois Tryphenia (Norton) Curtis and Dwight William Rude. In order to pay tribute to these honored family members, S. Robert Powell prepared and read to the group a paper entitled "In Memoriam Lois Tryphenia (Norton) Curtis In Memoriam Dwight William Rude."

After some remarks to the group by Rev. Anderson and by Rev. Crossman, various members of the group spoke of past reunions, of previous get togethers, and about the Griswolds. Fred Oliver spoke of a personal connection between his mother and father and Ridge Farm, Leona Vaughn, who hadn't been East from the state of Washington since 1970, recalled some moments when she was a little girl living with her family in South Dakota, Darwin and Eleanor Brudos, from South Dakota, recalled some visits of Mr. and Mrs. Dwight W. Rude to South Dakota many years ago for the pheasant hunting. The gracious offer of John and Amy Rude, enthusiastically seconded by Mrs. Margaret Rude, to have the Reunion next year at Ridge Farm, was unanimously agreed upon by the group. The group then adjourned to the front lawn of the Rude home where the above group portrait was taken by Donald W. Powell.

ALICE LUND ON THE GRISWOLDS

The following text was written by Alice Mae (Curtis) Lund and read by her at the Griswold Reunion, August 19, 1981:

"John Griswold was born in Granville, Hampshire Co. Mass. in 1754, and died Oct. 16, 1843. He served in the Continental Army, from which he was honorably discharged. In Oct. 1790 or 91, he was married to Elizabeth Crittenden. Six sons were born to them, John, Francis, Orin, Sumner, Horace and Sedate. They moved to Clinton in 1813 and settled on the higher ground, near (south) where the Moosic Grange now stands. (Behind the Alex Grunski house), where stones from the house foundation could be seen some years ago. John's son Francis carried the line to our forebears. Francis married Jane Loomis and to them eight children were born Lewis, Laura, Oliver, Helen, Louisa, Nathan, Alvin and Homer. Louisa Griswold married Henry Banning Curtis Apr. 21, 1851. Eleven children were born to them, Elizabeth, Francis, William, Harriet, George & Augusta (twins), Laura, Arthur and Amanda, two died in early childhood. John Griswold had the homestead at Curtis Valley built by Levi Bennett for his son Francis in 1819, who kept the cold spring tavern, so named from the supply of never-failing cold water from a spring on the mountain. This same water supply flows into the homestead to this day. The water was run from the spring in hand made pipe logs, which were replaced in my memory. Pipe logs were again installed but these were machine made. Buildings which surrounded the home have pretty much disappeared, so this part of the story will be from memory. On the corner of the North and South turnpike and the Forest City road, stood the barn for stabling cattle, oxen and horses for the drovers and travelers. At the left of the entrance were two horse stalls, in front of them, tie stalls for oxen, back of which were more horse stalls, I believe six stalls. Hay was stored in the loft and the space downstairs aside from stalls was for the storage of vehicles. Toward Forest City stood the pig pen, a two story building, the downstairs part contained the pig pens, and upstairs was partitioned off for poultry. Turkeys were always a part of the landscape, the big toms striking terror into the heart of a small child, but we had our revenge when the old fellow was served on the platter at the Thanksgiving dinner. Next to the pig pen stood the carriage house for the storage of family vehicles. This building still stands. The name on the door changing from H. B. Curtis, to A. H. Curtis, then to H. H. Curtis. The dairy barn was toward Forest City. On the house side of the road were the other outbuildings necessary to the running of full family sustenance. There was a granary, a little to the west of the present fountain, the necessary house sat partly over the brook where it had a continuous flush system. When it was learned that this system was a source of pollution to down river, the building had to be moved to its present location. The mill was located near the brook, a race being built to carry the water to the large waterwheel which furnished power for any equipment relative to the dairy and household. The rug loom was in this building. Grandmother grew and processed flax for linens, which she wove into cloth for family use. She made butter and other dairy products for her large family, the imprint of her thumb being worn into the butter-ladle. Sheep were raised for meat and wool products. This was a self-sufficient family reared to love and believe in God. A large woodshed and summer kitchen were a part of the main house. The woodshed has since been torn down, the summer kitchen now storage space for wood and coal. Fruit trees and grape vines were many. The grape vines had climbed the trees on the knoll back of the house. In grape season this was a gathering place for grape lovers. I ate my weight in them. In the basement were the storage bins for apples, potatoes, and other staples for year round use. The center of the basement was the base for the many fireplaces to heat the house. As I recall there were five fireplaces, one in the dining room, one in the living room, and one in the parlor, and one each in two upstairs bedrooms. The present living room was the tavern room, the bar being removed some years ago. Grandmother and her home will be lovingly remembered as long as there are those of us left to recall.

The first reunion of the Griswold family was held in the year before I was born, so this yearly get-together has always been a part of my life. Memory takes me happily back to these family gatherings of those other years.

TRIBUTE BY SILAS ROBERT POWELL

Given below is the text that was written by Silas Robert Powell on June 25, 1981, and read by him on August 19, 1981, at the Griswold Reunion at Ridge Farm, Clinton Township, Wayne County, Pennsylvania, in memory of Lois Curtis and Dwight Rude.

IN MEMORIAM LOIS TRYPHENIA (NORTON) CURTIS

IN MEMORIAM DWIGHT WILLIAM RUDE

Since the seventy-fourth reunion of the descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden on August 20, 1980, here, at Ridge Farm, two honored members of the Griswold family have died: Lois Try-phenia (Norton) Curtis and Dwight William Rude. As Griswolds, we can not, and we shall not, allow this day, August 19, 1981, to pass, without here and now, at this the seventy-fifth annual Griswold Reunion, paying tribute to these our honored dead. I am come before you, therefore, to sing the praises of our departed sister, Lois Tryphenia (Norton) Curtis, whose life on earth ended in her eighty-sixth year on Wednesday, May 27, 1981. I am come before you, at the same time, to sing the praises of our departed brother, Dwight William Rude, whose life on earth ended in his eighty-first year on Saturday, February 14, 1981.

To all those persons who, from this day forward, shall ask: "Who was Lois Tryphenia (Norton) Curtis?" and "Who was Dwight William Rude?" be it known that they were, both of them, believers in God. That Lois Curtis believed in God and that her life represents perfectly the wholeness of a Godly life can not be denied. Not only was Lois Curtis a life-long member of the Clinton Center Baptist Church, she was, at the time of her death, its oldest member. Her devotion to the Clinton Center Baptist Church was great. Shortly before her death, she completed the sesquicentennial history of that church, a history that will, in fact, be read this Sunday, August 23rd, at the celebrations commemorating the establishment of the Clinton Center Baptist Church on November 10, 1831.

That Dwight William Rude believed in God and that his life represents perfectly the wholeness of a Godly life can not, similarly, be denied. His worship of God in, and service to, the Clinton Center Baptist Church constitute, be it known, the kind of peaceful testament that is the fundamental strength of the Protestant church. It was by men such as Dwight Rude, and by women such as Lois Curtis, that the Clinton Center Baptist Church was established one hundred and fifty years ago. To give you an idea of just how old the Clinton Center Baptist Church is, know that in 1831, the year in which that church was established, Andrew Jackson was the President of the United States. Two former Presidents of the United States, James Madison and John Quincy Adams, were still alive. Only five years before the establishment of the Clinton Center Baptist Church was the Erie Canal opened (October 26, 1825) between Buffalo and New York City. Only three years before the establishment of the Clinton Center Baptist Church did Noah Webster first publish the American Dictionary of the English Language. In the year in which the Clinton Center Baptist Church was established, 1831, Honoré de Balzac was 32, Nathaniel Hawthorne was 27, Felix Mendelssohn and Abraham Lincoln were 22, Frédéric Chopin was 21, Victoria Alexandrina (later Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and Empress of India) and Herman Melville were 12, Gustave Flaubert was 10, Johannes Brahms was 2. Not until 30 years after the Clinton Center Baptist Church was established did the American Civil War break out. The "Little Church in the Wildwood"—which was Lois Curtis' church, which was Dwight Rude's church—is indeed a grand and venerable institution. As long as there are among us men and women of the sterling quality of Dwight Rude and Lois Curtis, the future of the Protestant church, in general, and of the Clinton Center Baptist Church, in particular, is bright. Without men and women of the quality of our departed brother and our departed sister, however, the future of the Protestant church, in general, and of the Clinton Center Baptist Church, in particular, is not secure. With the passing of Dwight Rude and Lois Curtis, therefore, we must acknowledge the fact that an awesome obligation to carry on with their work and in their footsteps has been passed on to us, the living. Let us not show ourselves unworthy of that spiritual legacy.

Lois Curtis and Dwight Rude were, at the same time, believers in the earth. Throughout her entire life, Lois Curtis believed in the earth, and the strength of her belief was such that she not only heard, but recorded, the song of the earth, Das Lied von der Erde, for Lois Curtis was an historian, a lifetime member of the Wayne County Historical Society, and the Secretary of all of the Pioneer Day celebrations that were held in Clinton Township. With loving care, she recorded the proceedings of the annual Pioneer Day celebrations, and with loving care she gathered and synthesized data and wrote numerous family, church, and township histories. And in writing those histories, her belief in the land was strengthened, and in writing those histories she revelled in the earth. Throughout his entire life, Dwight Rude both lived on and loved the earth. His love for this very land where we are met today was great. And because Dwight Rude believed in this land, and because Dwight Rude loved this land, many of the secrets of the earth were known to him, and knowing those secrets, he was a gentle man, and knowing those secrets, life for Dwight Rude was joyful.

Lois Curtis and Dwight Rude were, at the same time, believers in the human mind and in its capabilities and in its strengths, for both were teachers. Not only did their clear and guiding minds make known to their students many of the wonders of the world of nature but also many of the magnificent creations of the human mind. As teachers, they, at the same time, provided their students with the tools that they, the students, might independently explore and know, both in a literal sense and in a figurative sense, the world. As teachers of the first order, Lois Curtis and Dwight Rude both knew, and made every effort to make known to their students, that to be perfectly educated is to be, above all else, tolerant.

Lois Curtis and Dwight Rude were, at the same time, believers in the family. Both rejoiced in their roots. Through her mother, Lydia, Lois Curtis was a Perham. Through her father, Myron, Lois Curtis was a Norton. It is through her father, Myron Norton, that Lois Curtis traced her line to the Mayflower: Myron Norton was the son of Sidney M. Norton and Harriet W. Gaylord. Harriet W. Gaylord was the daughter of Myron Gaylord and Susanna Grinnell. Susanna Grinnell was the daughter of Rufus Grinnell and Ann Marshall. Rufus Grinnell was the son of Michael Grinnell and Susanna Balcom. Michael Grinnell was the son of Jasper Grinnell and Sarah Hill (or Hills). Jasper Grinnell was the son of Peabody Grinnell and Ruth Nettleton. Peabody Grinnell was the son of Daniel Grinnell and Lydia Pabodie. Lydia Pabodie was the daughter of William Paybodie and Elizabeth Alden. Elizabeth Alden was the daughter of John Alden and Priscilla Mullins. It is through her father, in addition, that Lois Curtis was a descendant of Levi Norton, who, in 1812, established Ridge Farm in Clinton Township, this very farm where we are met today. In May, 1812, Levi Norton, the youngest child of Samuel and Mabel Norton, moved from Goshen, Connecticut, to Wayne County, Pennsylvania, where he foreclosed on five thousand acres of land. Levi Norton's wife was Olive Wheeler. Levi and Olive Norton had five children, the oldest of whom was Warren, who married Polly North. This couple had two children, Hiram and Sidney M. Sidney M. married Harriet W. Gaylord, and this couple became the parents of Myron Norton, who was Lois Curtis' father. Ridge Farm was established, in other words, by Lois Curtis' paternal grandfather's paternal grandfather. The third child of Levi Norton and Olive Wheeler, Sheldon Norton, it should be noted, married Harriet Spencer. The oldest of the four children of Sheldon Norton and Harriet Spencer, Edmund Kirby Norton, married Clarissa N. McMullen, and this couple, in their turn, lived here at Ridge Farm. Clarissa McMullen's oldest brother, James Ensign McMullen, it will be recalled, married Harriet Saunders. Their daughter, Phebe McMullen, married Wallace J. Varcoe, and they became the parents of Ensign Henry Varcoe, who, on June 17, 1920, was united in marriage with one of the four daughters of Francis Henry Curtis and Rena Stanton, namely, Verna Agatha Curtis, who is with us here today. Through her husband, Lois Curtis was, at the same time a Curtis and a Griswold: Hobart H. Curtis was the son of Arthur Hamblin Curtis and Catherine M. Giles. Arthur Hamblin Curtis was the son of Henry Banning Curtis and Louisa Griswold. Louisa Griswold was the daughter of Francis Griswold and Jane Loomis. Francis Griswold was the son of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden. Lois Curtis, to be sure, had every right to be proud of her roots, as did Dwight Rude. Through his father, Dwight Rude was a descendant of Nathan Rude, Senior, a native of Norwich, Connecticut, who in the winter of 1799-1800, came to the wilds of Pennsylvania and established a homestead. His son, Nathan, married Rachel Purdy, and they became the parents of William N. Rude, who married Helen J. Fritz. William N. Rude and Helen J. Fritz became the parents of four children, two sets of twins. The younger twin of the older of these two sets of twins, William Edward Rude, married Laura Melinda Curtis, and it is this couple who were the parents of Dwight William Rude. Through his mother, Laura, Dwight Rude was, at the same time, a Curtis and a Griswold: Laura Melinda Curtis was the daughter of Henry Banning Curtis and Louisa Griswold. Louisa Griswold was the daughter of Francis Griswold and Jane Loomis. Francis Griswold was the son of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden. And so Dwight Rude had every right to be proud of his roots.

Lois Curtis and Dwight Rude believed, at the same time, in rational continuity, a belief that can, surely, be defined in terms of biological procreation. A belief in rational continuity should not, however, be defined exclusively in terms of biological procreation, as the life of Lois Curtis so brilliantly illustrates. On May 22, 1923, in Bridgeton, NJ, Lois Tryphenia Norton and Hobart H. Curtis were united in marriage by Reverend McKenzie. Children were not born to them, yet they were not, at their death, without heirs, for they, Lois and Hobart Curtis, were in their turn, the owners and protectors of one of the great houses in Clinton Township, the John Griswold Homestead, built in 1819 by Captain Levi Bennett at present-day Curtis Valley, Clinton Township, for John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden, who in the fall of 1813 settled in Clinton Township at the foot of the Moosic Mountain up behind the present Moosic Grange Hall on the "North and South." The Griswold Homestead that was built in 1819 for John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden later became the property of their son, Francis Griswold, and his wife, Jane Loomis, who established therein the Cold Water Tavern, which, as is well known, flourished at its strategic location on the Belmont and Easton Turnpike, the "North and South." On May 1, 1871, the 1819 John Griswold Homestead, subsequently the Cold Water Tavern, became the property of Henry Banning Curtis and Louisa Griswold, and became known as the Curtis Homestead. By inheritance, the Curtis Homestead ultimately became the property of one of the grandchildren of Henry Banning Curtis and Louisa Griswold, Hobart H. Curtis, and his wife, Lois Tryphenia Norton. It was in that historic house that Hobart and Lois Curtis lived, and for which they lovingly cared to the end of their days. Incarnated--literally and figuratively--in that house, it must be recognized, are the values, ideals, and aspirations of not only those persons for whom it was built, but also the values, ideals, and aspirations of all successive generations who have lived therein. The imprint of all those generations is there, and it is there in a state of harmony. It is that harmony that Hobart and Lois Curtis inherited, and enriched, and it is that harmony that they passed on, rationally, to the present generation.

On July 12, 1922, at the Rensen-Gaylord Homestead in Aldenville, Dwight William Rude and Margaret Abbie Rensen were married. They became the parents of five children: Marjorie Angeline, Dwight William, John Rensen, Virginia Laura, and Frederick Rensen. Dwight William, Jr. died as a child. The other four children of Dwight and Margaret Rude lived to adulthood, married, and became the parents of families of their own. In the children of Dwight and Margaret Rude, and in the grandchildren of Dwight and Margaret Rude, and in the great grandchildren of Dwight and Margaret Rude, the values, ideals, and aspirations of our departed brother, Dwight Rude, and of his wife, Margaret, who is with us here today, live at present. They--the children, grandchildren, and great grandchildren of Dwight and Margaret Rude--are now the legatees of the values, ideals, and aspirations of Dwight and Margaret Rude, and the responsibility of the descendants of Dwight and Margaret Rude to not only uphold those values, ideals, and aspirations, but also to be true to themselves in upholding those values, ideals, and aspirations, is great. But just as Dwight and Margaret Rude showed themselves capable of upholding the ethical legacy of their parents, while at the same time remaining true to themselves--hence, an ethical continuity of reason--so too will the children, grandchildren, and great grandchildren of Dwight and Margaret Rude show themselves capable of upholding the ethical legacy of Dwight and Margaret Rude while at the same time remaining true to themselves. Of that we can be certain.

To all those persons who from this day forward shall ask: "Who was Lois Tryphenia (Norton) Curtis?" and "Who was Dwight William Rude?" be it known, therefore, that Lois Tryphenia (Norton) Curtis and Dwight William Rude were both believers: they believed in God, they believed in the earth, they believed in the human mind, they believed in the family, they believed in rational continuity, they believed in history, and because they did, their lives were rich in meaning, and because they did, their lives made sense, and because they did, they shall not be forgotten. Thank you.

Eleven rather detailed footnotes accompany the above text. Those notes are not given here. Rather, they, as well as the text of "IN MEMORIAM LOIS TRYPHENIA (NORTON) CURTIS IN MEMORIAM DWIGHT WILLIAM RUDE" are given in the Appendix of Volume I of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA GENEALOGICAL AND LOCAL HISTORY REPRINTS (Carbondale, PA: Sheffield Publications, Inc., 1981).

Mrs. Irene M. Fish enclosed a newspaper clipping about the death of John W. Oliver. Mrs. Bernice Dolan enclosed a newspaper clipping from The Wayne Independent (Saturday, April 11, 1981, p. 1) entitled, "Dr. Samuel Curtis heads agricultural education dept. at Penn State." Mrs. Mildred Wright LaBarre enclosed the program of the 107th annual commencement exercises at Canton Area Jr.-Sr. High School. It was at those graduation exercises that Karen Louise Stiles was awarded a high school diploma. Mr. and Mrs. Davy R. Stiles enclosed two items: (1) a color snapshot of their three children--written on the back of this photograph is the following information: "Richard Stiles 6 1/2 yrs. Donald Stiles 6 mo. Bob & I would love to attend this reunion and meet many of the relatives but it is impossible. The weather here is in the 60's & 70's. We have had alot of rain. All of July--every day. Very unusual weather. Anything is better than 60's & 70's below. Next year we will send pictures of all our family. Hope all have a great time on this special occasion. Everyone is welcome to come see us--(Not all at one time). Love, Esther & Bob Brown David & Karen Son - Robert Deborah & Nancy."

Diane Bessie Stone (Mrs. Gerald William Stiles) wrote the following letter to the Secretary of the Griswold Reunion, Mrs. Margaret R. Rude:

July 8, 1981

Dear Mrs. Rude,

We are sorry we can not attend the reunion this year but we have one in Honesdale July 12th and therefore we will not be making the trip again. Maybe another year we can plan it now that we know about when it is.

Here are a few unimportant facts about our immediate family and also a couple photos* for your books: Jerry [Gerald William Stiles] works at Masonite Corp. plant in Towanda, about 28 miles from home. He works in the shipping dept. and just finished his 15th year. I was working as an instructional aide at the elementary school but had my job cut because of federal cut backs. I was employed under Title I working in the Math Lab. I enjoyed what I was doing so will do some volunteer work there this year. Karen's newspaper clipping tells pretty much what she's been doing and going to do [Karen Louise Stiles graduated from Canton Area High School on June 10, 1981; she will attend Lock Haven State College where she will study social work]....

Kevin likes sports & played J. V. football & baseball. Although he won't be playing this year as he just had knee surgery done July 1st. He had the inter cartilage of his right knee removed. He is presently on crutches.

Karen & I are both members of Lady Canton Rebekah Lodge. Me for 22 years and Karen for 1 year.

Nothing very exciting but that's us.

Thank you for your interest.
Hope you all have a nice day.

The Gerald Stiles Family.

* Enclosed with this letter were the following items, all of which were filed with the permanent records of the Griswold Reunion:

1. a color snapshot of the Gerald William Stiles family. Written on the back of this photograph is the following information: "This is our most recent family photo. Taken Dec. 1979. Gerald William Stiles - 40 Dianne Stone Stiles - 38 Karen Louise Stiles - 16 Kevin Gerald Stiles - 14"
2. a newspaper clipping, with photograph, of Karen Louise Stiles; the text of the clipping reads as follows: "Karen Louise Stiles of Canton RD 1, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Stiles. She is an Academic Student. She participated in: Marching Warriors; Sr. Ball Committee; Sr. Concert Band, Jr. Prom Committee; Chorus; Pop Singers; Foreign Language Club; Sr. High County Band; Camelot; Sr. High County Chorus; Fiddler on the Roof; YEA. Plans after graduation: To attend Lock Haven State College for Social Work."
3. graduation announcement: "The Senior Class of Canton Area High School announces its Commencement Exercises June Tenth Nineteen hundred eighty-one eight o'clock Nelle Black Westgate Auditorium."

Mrs. Minna (Oliver) Blair wrote the following letter to Margaret (Rensen) Rude on August 9, 1981:

Dear Margaret,

I'm sorry that I won't be attending the Griswold Reunion this year, as August is an unusually busy month for me.

Since I have already made one trip to Carbondale this summer, I'm urging Judy to go and represent me. She has been very busy, too, and will soon be back to her teaching job, but you may see her, as she hopes to spend a few days with Fred and Dot.

My younger son, Douglas, has retired from the United States Air Force after 29 years of service. His retirement ceremony was held at Elgin Air Force Base, Florida.

Among his service medals are the Distinguished Flying Cross, several Air Medals, Purple Heart and Vietnam Service Medal. His wife, Helen, was presented with Certificate of Appreciation. She has been very supportive during his career.

Next year I hope to report a new member in the family, as my grandson Rick, Bryce and Nancy's son, is to be married in November.

I have many happy memories of my summers spent on the Griswold Farm, and the Griswold Family Reunion in particular. I especially remember Aunt Hat Arnold's delicious maple sugar cake. I've never tasted anything quite like it since.

One of the highlights of each summer was the day after the reunion, when I would walk crosslots with my aunt, Rena Cowperthwaite, to clean the Grange Hall. There we would meet Josie Bunting and others and spend a pleasant day. I must admit it wasn't so much the cleaning I enjoyed as the good lunch they provided.

I'm sending a few pictures which I treasure very much*. The names are on the backs of each. Also enclosed is an envelope for their return.

Love to all my relatives, and special loving concern for you and your family.

Mrs. Audrey Ruth (Schaffer) Steinsh, daughter of Gertrude Irene Loomis and Henry H. Schaffer, sent an audio cassette to Mrs. Margaret R. Rude on the occasion of the Griswold Reunion 1981. Given below is a transcription, by S. Robert Powell, of that audio cassette:

Dear Mrs. Rude:

I'd like to thank you very much for the invitation to the 75th Griswold Reunion, but, because of distance [Mr. and Mrs. Terje Steinsh and their daughters, Christina and Diana Berly, live in Tonsberg, Norway] and time, regret to say that my attendance this year is impossible. If my records are correct, John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden were the grandparents of Louisa Griswold, who married Henry Banning Curtis. That would make John Griswold my children's great grandparents six times over.

Family trees have long interested me. On my husband's side, who is 100% Norwegian, we have copied and framed pictures back to his great, great, great grandparents on both his mother's and his father's side. Four greats to my two girls. These pictures hang in my hall, which is a sort of family gallery. I've made a book for my girls, filled with not only dates, but stories heard, and in cases, personal accounts, about what these people did and what they were like. It has entailed a good bit of letter writing and foot work collecting these things, with satisfying results.

My girls are being brought up in Norway, a long way from America. Contacts with people back home slide with the years--not everyone is a good letter writer. So it is my great desire to collect my family gallery. I have photographs of only my great grandparents, of only my grandparents, Mervin Loomis and Carrie Curtis. Does anyone have black and whites, couples or individuals, that I could have copied? It is not my wish that my lineage be forgotten as the years pass. Information concerning this would be appreciated.

My husband and I were married over 10 years ago, seven of which we have lived in Norway, first in the fjords, where he comes from, a breathtaking place of rocks, vast snow covered mountain ranges, valleys, and houses snuggled by the sea. Here the farming is poor. The work still done in the old ways. Plowing, where possible, by horse, and making hay by the use of the scythe. The ranges are filled by small cabins, where the young girls used to spend their summers, grazing the sheep, goats, and cows, churning butter, making cheeses, which the men came in intervals to collect. When grazing in an area became poor, they moved the animals higher up the mountain to the next cabin. A free life, but a hard one. We spent our summer vacation this year in one of those cabins, just us and our girls, with the waterfalls, the creeks, the birds, and the sheep and cows as our only neighbor, and the sea, far, far below, at our feet. No roads, and a long day's hard climbing by foot. Our baby sat in a backpack on the way up. Our five year old walked, and my husband carried supplies on his back, and we hated to come down again. A two hour's drive from the fjords is Hardangervidda, the largest mountain plateau in Europe. It was here that heavy water was made during the War. There are still reindeer herds running wild here, and I've walked on the great glaciers, skied here, and driven the single road over the plateau many times. Winter, this road is closed because of the great blizzards. We also lived for a year on the west coast in a place called Bergen, it's a fishing and shipping town. You can buy live fish, among other things, at the outdoor market places, and men repairing nets at the docks isn't an uncommon sight. We then moved to Oslo, the capital of Norway, unique because of the many trees that are in the town. It's surrounded by great forests, filled with moose and ski trails. Back home, you see signs "Deer Crossing," here it reads "Moose Crossing." Three years ago, we purchased a home near Tonsberg, on an island called Notterdy. We live in a quiet area, two minutes' walk to the shore. As you would think, boating is the largest summer pastime. It is also the area of Norway which has the most sun days. Winters here are very cold and very dark, but in the summer the sun shines 24 hours a day.

I work full time as a radiograph in the X-ray department at Central Hospital in Tonsberg. My husband works in the Norwegian police force with foreign affairs. We enjoy living here and it's a good place for the girls to grow up. The problems here are small compared to many other places in the world.

We'd all of us like to send our regards to everyone we know, and wishing you a lovely day for the Reunion.

On September 1, 1981, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schaffer (R. D. #1, Box 197, New Milford, PA 18834) wrote a letter to S. Robert Powell in which were enclosed copies of the Historic Old Harford Days programs that were celebrated in 1980 (July 12-13) and 1981 (July 11-12). Given below is a typescript of that very informative letter from Henry and Gertrude (Loomis) Schaffer:

Dear Griswold Cousin,

I was surprised to receive your letter and very pleased with the transcription of the tape which our daughter, Audrey, sent to the Griswold Reunion. It was very thoughtful of you to send it to us. Because of a series of circumstances, we did not get to this year's reunion. We had been making trips to Endicott because of the passing of Henry's mother, some of our children from a distance were here and our daughter Carol's family car was hit by a truck as they left the funeral home. Carol was banged up and cut pretty bad but will heal. The children too will heal and cars can be replaced. We are very thankful that our son-in-law is alright but it was only his heavy Cadillac which saved him. This all left us exhausted.

In her letter Audrey tells of the book she is preparing. She asked me to write about her grandparents. I was glad to do this. I go back home and hear about what a good community worker my Mother was. Today my reply is, "But my Father was a wonderful man too." He didn't lead the meetings and was very quiet. When they furnished a chicken for a church dinner, he killed two and took the better parts and kept the neck and wings home. He did many things to help his farmer neighbors. Mother didn't mean to overshadow him. He wanted it that way and it was because of him that we grew up thinking Mother who graduated from Bloomsburg College knew everything!

Audrey speaks of the heavy water which was made in Norway during the War. It was when Norway was occupied and the Americans climbed up the impossible to climb mountains and got in thru the sewer pipes and sabotaged the plant while the Norwegian workers watched. Heavy water is used to make ammunition and this created a set back which helped win the War. To the Norwegians this is a big thing and they are grateful to the Americans. Readers Digest featured a book review of this 10 or more years ago.

Audrey works as a radiology technician. She received her training in Pennsylvania. Her husband worked at that time as a pilot. Flying is his first love! His parents own 9 green houses near Bergen, Norway, and are visited by tours from America. The parents of Terje (we call him Terry) attended a church service at Clinton Center Baptist Church and had a picture taken with the other people there to take back as a memento of their visit in 1974. The people were very friendly and they were very touched by it.

Terje and Audrey want very much for some of the family to visit them. We can't leave our farm business. Some can't afford the trip. My brother's family did plan on going but my sister-in-law became ill and is tied up with chemotherapy treatment. Right now she is going to New York City. Should you go to Norway, they would welcome you as family....

I will try to locate some of the pictures our kids in Norway want. If they succeed they are going to have a more complete family history than those of us who live in America.

This was the year I planned to bake enough apple pie for everyone at the [Griswold] reunion, but it was not the year of the apple. I also wrote Dwight Rude shortly before he died suggesting that we honor our in-laws at the reunion who have been such good reunion workers, and of course all in-laws because without them we would not be. Margaret [Rude] told me he [Dwight Rude] thought it was a good idea.

Yes, I would enjoy having the tape Audrey sent from Norway. I also hope that we can get enough of the younger cousins interested in their Roots to keep the Griswold Reunion alive and strong. Again our sincere thanks.

Sincerely

[signed] Henry and Gertrude Schaffer

On September 21, 1981, Gertrude (Loomis) Schaffer wrote the following letter to Donald W. Powell:

Dear Griswold Cousin:

Your brother, Robert, wrote to me and said that you would forward the audio cassette which our daughter, Audrey Steinsh, sent to the [Griswold] reunion.

I received a letter from my son-in-law and he said that if the tape did not arrive on time that it was his mistake for not mailing it when he should have. He told me to be sure to listen and to try to get copies of pictures for their family wall.

If you send the tape I will pay the expense and send it to you when I find out how much it is.

I was sorry not to be able to come to the 1981 reunion. I wish more of the younger generation would go but the middle of the week is not convenient for people as it was when most of the family were either farmers or teachers and lived nearby. As a family we suffered a great loss this last year when Dwight Rude died. I grew up in a sister church to Clinton Center Baptist but it was there we went for summer bible school and the same girls I was in 4-H Club with and all of us cousins in one degree or another and it was the church my grandparents and the greats were members of.

Sincerely,

LETTERS RECEIVED

Mrs. Wilma C. Wilsea (186 No. Bloomfield Rd., Canandaigua, NY 14424) wrote the following letter to S. Robert Powell on August 20, 1981:

Dear Mr. Powell:

I await each publication of the "Northeastern Pennsylvania" with great anticipation. I would like to commend you on your good work and much success in bringing such an enjoyable and educational quarterly to those interested in preservation of our heritage.

I wish to add a very special thank you for printing the information from my April 15, 1980 letter in your LETTERS RECEIVED section of the August 19, 1981 publication which I received yesterday.

I have not found anything on the information I need from the Scranton, PA area. However, I have a considerable amount of patience and faith that some day, I will find a connection. It might be noted that Clarence WILSEA was married to a Mary BENTLEY. I have discovered that there were and are WILSEY'S AND BENTLEY'S in this area and surrounding areas.

My family and I have become interested in going to local flea markets and whenever they have a postcard booth, I always look through the Pennsylvania postcards. I recently bought one which has a picture of "House of Good Shepherd," Scranton, PA and also one of the new station LACKAWANNA RAILROAD, Scranton, PA. I would be very interested in finding out what type of institution, "House of Good Shepherd" was. I do not at this moment wish to let go of these post cards, however, I am making a Xerox copy of the one (LACKAWANNA RAILROAD) and forwarding same to you as you might be interested in the message and name & address of person to whom it had been sent.

My husband and I are planning to visit Scranton, PA by bus (staying a week), the week of October 26th. We will be celebrating our 34th wedding anniversary on October 26, 1981 and can think of no better way to spend that week. We have a new 1980 Chevette but have over 30,000 miles on it in a year, so decided to take the bus for this trip.

I belong to the Lackawanna Historical Society, so plan to stop there and any other suggestions would be helpful. I am enclosing a SASE, in case you might have any other suggestions to help me when I arrive in Scranton.

Sincerely,

[signed] (Mrs. Wilma C. Wilsea)

On August 24, 1981, Mrs. Marjorie Pierson Nims (79 Maple Avenue, Keene, NH 03431) wrote a letter to S. Robert Powell which contained the following paragraph:

"I must congratulate you on your remarkable publication [NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA]. It is very interesting. I hope some day to attend one of the [Griswold] reunions."

On September 14, 1981, Mrs. Ruth Yarns (232 Melrose Avenue, Clarks Summit, PA 18411) wrote the following letter to Edwin M. Sheffield:

Dear Mr. Sheffield:

The copies of Northeastern Penn. came a week or so ago, and needless to say I have enjoyed them so much and have read each one from cover to cover. I never realized there was such a publication--they are all so interesting. I was particularly interested in the "Cemetery" edition [Volume II, Number 3, February 18, 1981] as a good many of my husband's people are buried there--and I also picked out the homes where some lived on the map. Mrs. Kirkbride was a Yarns, also, a sister to G. L. Yarns--who was my husband's father. My husband passed away last Oct. 17 but is buried near here.

Would you kindly send me Mr. Sherwood's address so that I can write and thank him for these subscriptions.

May I wish you continued success with your paper. I am looking forward to the next edition.

Sincerely,

[signed] Ruth Yarns

Dr. R. Eugene Crow, Executive Minister, American Baptist Churches of Pennsylvania and Delaware, Valley Forge, PA 19481, wrote, in part, the following letter to Donald W. Powell on September 24, 1981:

Dear Mr. Powell:

...Thank you very much for the copy of the history of the Berean Baptist Church of Carbondale, Pennsylvania [published in Volume I, Number 2, November 21, 1979 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA]. I want to put a copy in our files and I also want to see that a copy goes to the American Baptist Historical Society at Rochester.... This copy is exceedingly well done and it represents a considerable amount of work and research. I wish that we had something like this for each one of our churches.

Thank you so much for your thoughtfulness.

Cordially yours,

Dr. R. Eugene Crow

Acknowledgments

The history of the Clinton Township Pioneer Days that is presented in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA could not have been written were it not for the fact that the late Lois Tryphenia (Norton) Curtis graciously allowed the Brothers Powell (Donald W. and S. Robert) to borrow and photocopy a large quantity of historical documents that were either written by or collected by her throughout her life. All of those documents were photocopied and returned to Lois Curtis in 1980 and were in the document archive of Lois Curtis at the time of her death on May 27, 1981. We, and all subsequent generations, are very much indebted to the late Lois Curtis not only for having recorded, gathered and preserved virtually all of the information that has come down to us about the Clinton Township Pioneer Days but also for having recorded, gathered and preserved a great deal of information about Clinton Township in general. The author of this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, S. Robert Powell, is pleased, therefore, to here acknowledge the important role played by Lois Curtis in the writing of the present history of the Clinton Township Pioneer Days. Were she alive today, it would, doubtless, give Lois Curtis great pleasure to know that her archive of information on the Clinton Township Pioneer Days served as the foundation of the history of those celebrations that is presented herein.

Reprinted in the history of the Clinton Center Baptist Church that is presented in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA is Kenneth Singer's History of the Clinton Center Baptist Church that was presented at the sesquicentennial celebration, on August 23, 1981, of the establishment of that church on November 10, 1831. For allowing us to reprint that history herein, we here offer our thanks to Kenneth Singer of Waymart, PA.

The present writer's history of the Clinton Township Pioneer Days and of the Clinton Center Baptist Church, as well as the Genealogical and Local History Notes presented in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, were enriched (1) because Marjorie (Rude) Cook of Anadarko, OK, Rev. G. Fay Crossman of Pleasant Mount, PA, Edith A. Gardner of Carbondale, PA, Alice (Curtis) Lund of Pomona Park, FL, Gertrude (Gardner) Snyder of Danville, PA, and Verna (Curtis) Varcoe of Waymart, PA all provided the author with historical information for inclusion herein, and (2) because Minna (Oliver) Blair of Milton, PA, Mabel Bunting of South Canaan, PA, Laura (Loomis) Rude of Carbondale, PA, and Mildred (Rude) Thomas of Carbondale, PA graciously gave us permission to reprint herein photographs from their collections. For allowing us to do so, we here offer our sincere thanks.

For producing the copy prints used to reproduce eight of the photographs in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, and for allowing us to reprint herein two of his original photographs, the author, S. Robert Powell, is pleased to here offer his thanks to Donald W. Powell of Carbondale and Chester, PA.

Volume II, Number 2 (November 19, 1980)

John Griswold (1754-1843) and Elizabeth Crittenden (1761-1851) of Clinton Township, Wayne County, Pennsylvania: Their Ancestors, Their Descendants.

Together with the present issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, they constitute an extraordinary portrait of Clinton Township.

The next issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA (Volume III, Number 3, February 17, 1982) will be a history of the amusement parks of northeastern Pennsylvania of the past and present. One of the features of that history will be a history of the Lake Ariel amusement park by Kurt A. Reed of Lake Ariel, PA. Another feature of that history will be a report by Derek Shaw of Scranton, PA, on roller coasters and amusement parks in the eleven counties of northeastern Pennsylvania of the past and of the present. Readers who have information on or photographs of amusement parks in northeastern Pennsylvania who would like to share that information with other readers of this quarterly are asked to write to the Editor of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA at Post Office Box 161, Carbondale, PA 18407-0161.

The second part of the history of Maplewood Cemetery, Carbondale, PA, which, it will be recalled, was to be presented in Volume III, Number 3 of this historical quarterly, will not be included in Volume III, Number 3. Rather, it will be published in Volume III, Number 4, May 19, 1982.

AMUSEMENT PARKS IN NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA + GENEALOGICAL AND LOCAL HISTORY NOTES

From the Editor:

This issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA is the product of the collective efforts of the following individuals, all of whom have contributed articles or maps to this history of amusement parks in northeastern Pennsylvania: Christine Bower, Mrs. Helen Kelley, Dick Knoebel, Christopher Paul, S. Robert Powell, Kurt A. Reed, B. Derek Shaw and Charles K. Stumpf. The following individuals and organizations, in addition, have allowed us to reprint herein photographs from their collections: Olwen Adler, John Miner Caruthers, Jimmy Croop, Lackawanna Historical Society, Edward Lee, Christopher Paul, S. Robert Powell, Kurt A. Reed, Russell Homestead Library, B. Derek Shaw and Mrs. Mae Sterling. Without the resources made available to us by those individuals and organizations, it goes not without saying, this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA could not have been brought into existence. We are pleased, therefore, to here express our thanks to all of the above-named individuals and organizations for their contributions to this history.

Two contributors deserve special mention, not only because this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA is largely composed of the fruits of their research, but also because of the nature of their contributions: B. Derek Shaw of Scranton and Kurt A. Reed of Lake Ariel. The articles by B. Derek Shaw that are featured herein constitute the most comprehensive history ever written about the 27 amusement parks--past and present--of northeastern Pennsylvania. The article by Kurt A. Reed on the amusement park at Lake Ariel that is presented herein is, similarly, the most comprehensive account of that park that has ever been put to paper.

Also presented in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA is a great deal of information on roller coasters, not only in northeastern Pennsylvania, but also throughout the commonwealth. This information was gathered and synthesized by B. Derek Shaw, who is the Director of the Regional Representatives of the American Coaster Enthusiasts.

The next issue of this historical quarterly will be entitled Maplewood Cemetery, Carbondale, Pennsylvania (Part II). It will be written by S. Robert Powell and published on May 19, 1982.

STERLING'S ROCKY GLEN PARK, MOOSIC, PA.

MIDWAY SCRANTON AND WILKES BARRE

Sterling's Million Dollar Coaster, Rocky Glen Park, Moosic, PA. Color post card, in the collection of B. Derek Shaw, Scranton, PA. Printed at the top of the front of this post card is the following: "STERLING'S ROCKY GLEN PARK, MOOSIC, PA." Printed at the bottom of the front of this post card is the following: "MIDWAY SCRANTON AND WILKES BARRE." Printed on the back of this post card, which was never sent through the mail, is the following: "STERLING'S MILLION DOLLAR COASTER was built in the winter of 1945 by Mae and Ben Sterling with mostly World War II Veteran labor. One of the world's largest coasters, 4,700 ft. long, 96 ft. high at the highest point, this huge Coaster rode 1,000,000 men, women and children during the first 3 years of operation without as much as a scratch to anyone." At one time there were at least 27 amusement parks in northeastern Pennsylvania, and many of those parks had roller coasters. The history of 27 of those amusement parks, written by B. Derek Shaw, is presented in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

AMUSEMENT PARKS IN NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

ALL THAT'S LEFT

By B. Derek Shaw

Americans work hard, and play hard too. Northeastern Pennsylvanians are no exception. Around the turn of the century, they needed places to relax, enjoy themselves, talk with their friends, and just get away from their routine ways of life. Amusement parks filled that void, with rides, games of chance, exhibits, displays, food and refreshments.

At one time there were as many as 27 amusement parks in the eleven-county area of northeastern Pennsylvania. Most of these parks were thriving picnic parks at the end of, or on the route of, trolley lines.

Why do amusement parks die? The reasons are many: decline in popularity, poor location, bad management, natural disasters, bankruptcy, competition, lack of family interest to continue operation, no maintenance. The list goes on and on. Some of these things may have happened to the defunct parks in our area.

There are, today, six amusement parks in northeastern Pennsylvania. I've had the pleasure of visiting five out of six of them. All of them have a few things in common:

1. They are all "traditional" parks, as opposed to being "theme" parks. I find this to be a revelation in this day and age, where the feeling is that "big is better."

A theme park is just its name implies: a park with a particular atmosphere. Busch Gardens--the Old Country, Walt Disney World, Six Flags over Texas, Great Adventure, and King's Dominion are just a few of the mid-twentieth-century developments. They usually consist of three to six different areas, with a particular theme or motif.

A traditional park, on the other hand, usually has one main midway, with a variety of rides, attractions and places to eat. They are as nice, or as dilapidated, as their owners--usually a family--care to be, as opposed to a theme park, which is usually owned by a corporation. Examples of excellently maintained traditional parks include Kennywood Park, West Mifflin (near Pittsburgh), PA; Dorney Park, Allentown, PA; Idlewild Park, Ligonier, PA; Riverside Park, Agawam, MA; Lake Winnebago, Rossville, GA; and Crystal Beach, Ontario, Canada.

2. They are small. Theme parks usually cover miles and miles and require full days to cover. Traditional parks can be enjoyed in a few hours.
3. They are friendly. The atmosphere at a traditional park is usually much more friendly, courteous and helpful than at a theme park.
4. They are usually less congested than theme parks, and ride lines are usually short.
5. Picnic facilities are provided. Theme parks most times want you to eat their food and drinks only.

The six amusement parks in present-day northeastern Pennsylvania are:

ANGELA PARK, INC.

Location: Route 309, Hazleton/Wilkes-Barre Highway, and Interstate 80, Exit No. 39.

The following information about this park is given in Permanent Amusement Parks & Attractions (p. 31): "... PH.: 717-788-2325 & 455-1511; Winter Address: Exit 40, Interstate 81, Harwood, Pa.; Angela Park Corp., Owners; Frank Barletta, Pres.; Rocco Barletta, Vice Pres.; Jack Barletta, Mgr.; Art Di Pierro, Pur. Agt.; Joe Barletta, Ride Supt.; Jay Barletta, Food Dir.; 8 major rides, 8 kiddie rides, 4 refreshment stands, novelty and souvenir stands, arcade, swimming pool, stage area, athletic field, picnic facilities, miniature golf, books orchestras, stage shows, name bands, vaudeville, free acts, fireworks. Free gate and parking..."

Angela Park has been owned by the Barletta family since its opening. The park has been billed "The Playground of Northeastern Pennsylvania." It features rides plus a swimming pool, miniature golf course and arcade. The train is very unique and circles the park. The roller coaster, designed in 1956/1957 by John Allen, was built by the Philadelphia Toboggan Company. It is 36 feet high and 700 feet long. The time of this out-and-back, junior-sized, wooden coaster is 1 minute and 10 seconds. Rumour has it that this park is up for sale.

DON HANSON'S AMUSEMENT PARK

Location: 15 Lakeside Drive, Harvey's Lake, PA 18618. Phone: 717-639-1642.

Donald J. Hanson and his wife, Shirley, run this traditional park, which has a few unique rides, including the Carousel and the Flying Scooters. In addition, the entrance to the park is right through the framework of the roller coaster, which was built in 1935 by Oscar Bitler (who also built the Lake Ariel Park coaster) and John Miller. This 65-foot high coaster only seats 12 riders, but it offers a great view of the waterfront. This park is situated on Harvey's Lake, the largest natural lake in eastern Pennsylvania (660 acres). The coaster is in the out-and-back configuration and travels over a road at one point. It uses squeeze brakes. The coaster was down all during the 1981 season, due to damage in one of the main support beams at the top of the lift hill, which occurred on Labor Day weekend 1980. There was a time when the coaster's future appeared bleak. However, current plans include rehabilitating it for the 1982 season.

Don Hanson's Amusement Park is situated on the site of the old Lehigh Valley Railroad's picnic grounds, which were purchased by Don Hanson's father.

GHOST TOWN IN THE GLEN

Location: Rocky Glen Road, Moosic, PA 18507. Take Exit 50 from Interstate 81 to Moosic Rt. 502. Phone: 717-457-8377. Mailing address: Post Office Box 37, Avoca, PA 18641. G. T. Management, Inc., Owners; Walter A. Mockett, Pres.; Austin Pendley, Vice-Pres.; Vic Stigliano, Mgr.; 21 major rides, 12 kiddie rides, arcade, bathing beach, picnic facilities, stage shows. P.O.P. gate, free parking. Annual Attendance: 200,000.

This is the oldest park still around in northeastern Pennsylvania. It was founded by Arthur Frothingham, who won it in a land auction in 1885 for $15.00. He convinced the Lackawanna & Wyoming Valley Rail Road (more commonly known as the Laurel Line) to build a third rail electric railway station at Rocky Glen. This proved to be an excellent business decision. Mr. Frothingham opened Rocky Glen Park in 1904 and retained it until 1921, when it was sold to Joseph Jennings, John Nallan and Mr. Butler for $60-65,000. However, the Laurel Line had some interests in the Park, namely back rent, and under Anthony J. Duffey took control of half of it in 1928. P. J. Murphey and George Esslinger were the managers of the Laurel Line side of the Park. Ben and Mae Sterling, in 1936, at a cost of $55,000, purchased the Murphey and Esslinger interests. Between then and 1950 was a time of lawsuits, fires, and the "spite" fence. The Sterlings assumed complete ownership of the Park in 1950 at a cost of $73,000. In 1970, at a price of $300,000 (not $500,000 as newspaper accounts reported), the Park changed hands once again. This time National Recreation Service of Atlanta held the deed. In 1979, the current owner, G. T. Management, Inc., took charge. In 1980, the management of the Park was leased to J. R. Management.

The management claims that the only theme of this traditional park is fun. The 64-acre park is surrounded by 38-acre Glen Lake. Standard flat rides are in the park, along with go-carts, paddle boats and a sky ride.

The park has been the scene of 6 wooden roller coasters, including the famed "Million Dollar Coaster" which existed for a brief time in the 1940s. The present coaster, the "Jet Star" or "Comet" was designed by John Allen in 1959 and built by the Philadelphia Toboggan Company. Some of the 55-foot high coaster's timbers came from the old Million Dollar Coaster. The time of this 18-rider coaster is 1 minute and 30 seconds. The park will open the 1982 season with 10 new flat rides (i.e., new to the park), a laser show, and with a new name for its roller coaster, Rocky Glen Jet. In addition, the park will again be called, Rocky Glen Park.

He acquired the land on which the park was built in 1885 for $15.00. In 1904 he opened Rocky Glen Park, and retained it until 1921, when he sold it to Joseph Jennings, John Nallan and Mr. Butler, for $60-65,000. For information on Rocky Glen Park, see "Ghost Town in the Glen" in the article by B. Derek Shaw, entitled "All That's Left," in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

Ben and Mae Sterling. Photograph in the collection of Mrs. Mae Sterling, Moosic, PA; reproduced here from the original photograph. This photograph was taken of the Sterlings in 1958 in Brussels, during their six-country tour to visit amusement parks. In 1936, Ben and Mae Sterling purchased one-half of Rocky Glen Park; in 1950, they became the sole owners of the park. In 1970, they sold the park to National Recreation Service of Atlanta. For information on Rocky Glen Park, see "Ghost Town in the Glen" in the column at left.

KNOEBELS' GROVES

Location: Route 487, Elysburg, PA 17824.
Phone: 717-672-2641

The following information about this park is given in Permanent Amusement Parks & Attractions (p. 31): "...H. H. Knoebel Sons, Owners; Hartman H. Knoebel, Mgr.; Violet Appel, Gift Shoppe Pur. Agt.; Walt Hartline, Restaurant Pur. Agt.; Richard Knoebel, Ride & Game Supt.; Ron Knoebel, Personnel and Prom. Dir.; 20 major rides, 8 kiddie rides, penny arcade, shooting gallery, swimming pool, roller rink, ballroom, athletic field, picnic facilities, miniature golf; Books orchestras, free acts. Free gate and parking. Annual Attendance: 600,000. Operates: Memorial Day - Labor Day."

This park is located partly in Columbia County and partly in Northumberland County. The dividing line is Roaring Creek. When the park was established, Roaring Creek was a swimming area. It still is today. The park is owned by the Knoebel family, who also own the adjacent lumber yard and campground. The park contains 25 traditional rides, including one of the few remaining carousels where you can still reach for a brass ring. Two metal coasters are in operation here: the Jet Star (a four-seater that moves within its own structure) and the High Speed Thrill Coaster (built in 1955 by the Overland Construction Company). Although only twenty feet high, the High Speed Thrill Coaster manages to give quite a fast ride up and down speed bumps on the oval layout. This is a very pretty park, due to its natural setting. This park suffered $250,000 in damage during Hurricane Agnes in June 1972. This park once used the theme "Kids are Kings at Knoebels." Their 1981 original Christmas card contained the following verse: "My reindeer flight, throughout the night, will be fast and smooth and mobile, / With the promise that the next day, we will picnic at Knoebels."

NAY AUG PARK

Location: Scranton, PA 18503. Phone: 717-342-8366.

The following information about this park is given in Permanent Amusement Parks & Attractions (p. 33): "... Winter Address: 8th floor, Mears Bldg.; Phone: 717-961-8405 and 717-342-3211; Karl H. Strohl & S. Ralph Strohl, Owners, Mgrs. & Pur. Agts.; 7 major rides, 7 kiddie rides, pool, penny arcade, picnic facilities, zoo. Free gate, free parking."

This park, owned by Nay Aug Amusement Park Company, is part of the Nay Aug Zoo and swimming pool complex. Rides are few, but include a Tilt-a-Whirl, train, Scrambler and Comet Junior Roller Coaster, which was built in 1951 by International Amusement Devices. The coaster is a 20-foot high, standard production model, with a double oval construction. Structurally, it appears to be in need of a great deal of attention and maintenance. This is true of the rest of the carnival-type park as well. The site is near the former Luna Park, which was on the other side of the ravine. This park had a scenic railway. The tunnel and a few remains can still be located. It is possible that the zoo, and perhaps Nay Aug Park, will close. Collections are currently under way to keep them open.

POCONOS' MAGIC VALLEY AND WINONA'S FIVE FALLS

Location: Route 209, Bushkill, PA 18324.
Phone: 717-588-9411.

The following information about this park is given in Permanent Amusement Parks & Attractions (p. 31): "... Owners, Harry F. Lee, President; Peter Ahnert, V. P.; Bob Ahnert, V. P.; Jim Feuda, General Manager; Jacques Ringler, Director of Marketing & P.R.; Madeleine Budroe, Personnel Manager; 10 major rides, 5 kiddie rides, restaurants, refreshment stands, arcade, games, craft shops, picnic facilities, shooting gallery, entertainment, stage shows, petting zoo, Winona Falls, gift-souvenir shops, hotel, indoor-outdoor tennis courts & swimming pools, golf courses, ice skating rink, ski slopes, horse back riding, special events and free guided tours. Pay gate, free parking. Operates: Mid April to Memorial Day, weekends only. Memorial Day to Labor Day full time, weekends to November."

Sterling's Rocky Glen Park, Aerial View. Photograph in the collection of Mrs. Mae Sterling, Moosic, PA; reproduced here from the original photograph. Shown in this photograph is the Million Dollar Coaster, which was built in the winter of 1945 by Mae and Ben Sterling with mostly World War II Veteran labor. At that time, it was one of the world's largest coasters (4,700 feet long and 96 feet high at the highest point). For more information on this roller coaster, see the list of "Wooden Coasters in Pennsylvania, 1894-1982" on pages 17-18 of this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA. Also seen in this photograph are the tracks of the Laurel Line (the Lackawanna & Wyoming Valley Rail Road), which ran along the side of the roller coaster. On January 15, 1982, Edward Lee (manager and later owner of the now defunct Sans Souci Park) told B. Derek Shaw: "At one time there were four amusement parks located along the tracks of the Laurel Line."

This is the newest of the six parks in northeastern Pennsylvania. It was built in the 1970s, and is an offspring of the Winona 5 Falls scenic waterfalls. The park is located in a narrow, low lying area beside Saw Creek. Standard amusement rides, along with a petting zoo and various working craftsmen, make up the majority of the park. Two attractions, a Cinema 180 Theater and the "Screamin' Demon" metal Galaxy Roller Coaster, are the most noteworthy. A few years ago, the park discussed the possibility of obtaining the "Old Chicago Loop" steel looping coaster from a defunct suburban Chicago amusement park. That ride is now at Fair Park Kiddieland at the Alabama Fairgrounds in Birmingham. The 1981 theme of the park was "Crazy, Crafty and Wild!"

Northeastern Pennsylvania is fortunate to have these six parks. Although neither massive in size nor overloaded with rides and attractions, they do provide an afternoon, evening or day of enjoyment for northeastern Pennsylvanians.

LAKE ARIEL AMUSEMENT PARK

By Kurt A. Reed

Dwight Mills, whose life was closed December 23, 1894, after a successful career in Lake Ariel as a merchant, mechanic and engineer, and who was also connected, as contractor and overseer, with the building of the Croton aqueduct, and the construction of the New York & Erie Railroad between Chester and Goshen, NY, can be considered the father of Lake Ariel Park.

Dwight Mills was born April 14, 1819, in Otsego County, NY. In 1823, his father, John Mills, settled on a tract of land in Carbondale, PA, and there cleared and improved a farm. It was here that Dwight Mills was reared, working through the summer time and attending the neighborhood school for a short period during the winter season.

When about eighteen years of age, he went to New York City and learned the machinist's trade at the Allaire Works, serving three years at the trade. He then returned to Carbondale, and for several years was engaged in the mercantile business with his brother. He was next employed as engineer on the Gravity Railroad, which was then being built between Jones' Pond (Lake Ariel) and Hawley. Later, after John B. Smith (who was with Dwight Mills in New York) became superintendent of the railroad company, Dwight Mills became master mechanic under him. The division over which Dwight Mills had charge for the Pennsylvania Coal Company was between Hawley and No. 21, Wimmers, on the Erie & Wyoming Valley Railroad. On May 7, 1851, he moved his family to Jones Pond (now Lake Ariel), which was then considered an extremely remote area. There he gradually acquired considerable land, he and his son eventually possessing over 300 acres.

Jones' Pond had acquired some fame as a resort prior to the abandonment of the Pennsylvania Gravity Railroad, but when Dwight Mills came into possession of the land in 1887, city people had abandoned it. Dwight Mills began improving the property and when the Erie & Wyoming Valley Railroad was completed, Lake Ariel immediately bounded into prominence.

Every year saw improvements, and the park was well on its way toward becoming one of the most popular excursion places in northeastern Pennsylvania. Then on May 16, 1889, The Wayne County Herald ran the following ad: "Messrs Joseph Curt of the Westminster Hotel, Scranton; F. H. Freeman, also of that city; and A. T. Schaffer, of Syracuse on Saturday completed the negotiation for the transfer of the Jones Pond Property to their charge, the present proprietors, Dwight O. Mills and son, retiring yesterday. The new proprietors have made a lease of the premises for eight years and will at once enter upon the making of many extensive improvements which will place the favorite resort (now to be known as Lake Ariel) well up among the favored spots in Northeastern Pa. They are all men of energy and with the experience of Mr. Curt as caretaker, the lake will find many new friends among its visitors in the coming years."

Dwight Mills. This likeness of Dwight Mills accompanies the biographical sketch of him that is given on pages 300-301 of Commemorative Biographical Record of Northeastern Pennsylvania Including the Counties of Susquehanna, Wayne, Pike and Monroe Containing Biographical Sketches of Prominent and Representative Citizens, and Many of the Early Settled Families. Illustrated. (Chicago: J. H. Beers & Co., 1900).

Dwight Mills was born on April 14, 1819 in Otsego County, NY and died on December 23, 1894 in Lake Ariel, PA. He is the father of Lake Ariel Park, Lake Ariel, PA. Kurt A. Reed's history of Lake Ariel Amusement Park is presented in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

Dwight Mills married Jane Beekman. The following information about the children of Dwight and Jane (Beekman) Mills, and about the ancestors of Jane Beekman is given in the biographical sketch of Dwight Mills referred to above:

"On December 8, 1838, at Tarrytown, N.Y., our subject [Dwight Mills] was married to Miss Jane Beekman, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Speers, a minister of the M. P. Church, and the following children came to bless the union: Elizabeth, born June 16, 1841, married James Bigart, a farmer of Cherry Ridge, Penn.; William W., born June 23, 1843, and married to Agnes Moffit, is a machinist at Dunmore, Penn.; Mary F., born November 4, 1845, married Jonathan Brown, and died November 4, 1876; Charles, born September 27, 1854, married Allie Bunnell, and they reside at Honesdale, Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Jane (Beekman) Mills was born March 12, 1821, at Mount Pleasant, N.Y., the site of her birthplace being now owned by John D. Rockefeller and brother. She is a daughter of Gerard G. and Elizabeth (Adams) Beekman, the former of Mt. Pleasant, Westchester Co., N.Y., the latter of New York City. The Beekmans are of royal blood. Mrs. Mills possesses a record of the family for many generations back. The first of the family in this country was William Beekman, who came from Holland in 1646, locating in New York City. He was the son of John Beekman, of Hasselt, in the province of Overijssel, Holland. Mrs. Mills' great grandparents were Gerard and Ann (Van Horn) Beekman, and her grandparents were Gerard and Cornelia (Van Cortland) Beekman. Beginning with the eldest son of William, the first ancestor in America, it has been the custom in the Beekman family to name the eldest son Gerard. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Gerard G. Beekman were: Cornelia married Clark Hammond; Joan married States Hammond, and both are now deceased; Pierre is deceased; Catherine married Morris Bartlett; Philip Van Cortland is deceased; William died in 1895; Stephen died in Florida, where he had gone to take charge of a school; Jane married Dwight Mills; Gertrude married Adolphus Beekman, of Tarrytown, N.Y.; and Susan married Samuel Thomas, of Pavilion, N.Y. The father of these died on the old home place April 7, 1836, when aged sixty-five years. He was butted by a ram when in the act of letting down some bars, the animal striking him in the back and causing the bursting of a blood vessel. The mother lived until 1871, dying at North Tarrytown, N.Y., when aged eighty-six."

This photograph, the only known photograph to have been taken in Lake Ariel Park, also appears on page 99 of Centennial and Illustrated Wayne County. Historical, Biographical, Industrial, Picturesque, Commercial, Financial, Agricultural. Second Edition. (Honesdale, PA: Benj. F. Haines, Publisher, 1902). Therein, it is captioned: "Pavilion in the Park." A pen and ink drawing of the refreshment pavilion at Lake Ariel Park (shown in this photograph), by Kurt A. Reed, is owned by the artist, whose history of Lake Ariel Park is presented in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

Dumman's Island, Lake Ariel, PA. In 1897, Charles H. Schadt, P. J. Horan and M. J. Healey, all of Scranton, PA, formed the Lake Ariel Association. For $75,000, they purchased from Charles E. Mills, Lake Ariel itself, the lake property, Lake Ariel Park and two hotels. By the turn of the century, 200 row boats were available for rental on Lake Ariel, and two steamers plied their way around the Lake. Dumman's Island served as one of the stations for the steamers on their way around Lake Ariel. The Wayne County author, Homer Greene, celebrated this island in his Dumman's Island. A Story of Lake Ariel, written for The Youth's Companion, and copyrighted by the author in 1893. In 1981, this story was reprinted by the Citizens for the Preservation of Our Local Heritage, and copies are presently available from the Citizens for the Preservation of Our Local Heritage, Post Office Box 27, Honesdale, PA 18431. Two other important Wayne County histories were reprinted in recent years by the Citizens for the Preservation of Our Local Heritage, and are available at the address given here. Those two histories are: (1) F. W. Beers' Atlas of Wayne Co., Pennsylvania. From Recent and Actual Surveys and Records Under the Superintendence of F. W. Beers. (New York: A. Pomeroy & Co., 36 Vesey St., 1872), and (2) Rev. Samuel Whaley's History of the Township of Mount Pleasant, Wayne County, Pennsylvania. A Discourse Delivered on Thanksgiving Day, November 22, 1855 by the Rev. Samuel Whaley. (New York: Published by M. W. Doud, No. 59 Chambers Street, Rear of the Park, 1856). This photograph of Dumman's Island, taken by Curtis E. Jones of Lake Ariel, is in the photograph collection of Kurt A. Reed, Lake Ariel, and is here reproduced from that photograph. Curtis E. Jones was born in 1867 and died in 1926. He is buried in the Tisdell Cemetery, Lake Ariel, wherein are also interred his parents (Emory E. Jones, 1831-1923; Arabella H. McKane, 1842-1923), his brother (James R., 1870-1890), and his six sisters (Elizabeth A., 1861-1864; Maggie L., 1863-1891; Anna B., 1865-1881; Helen A., 1873-1901; Florence E., 1878-1967; Arabella M., 1888-1976). For detailed information on the photographic career of Curtis E. Jones, see Volume I, Number 4 (May 21, 1980) of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA (p. 15). The most comprehensive history of studio photography in northeastern Pennsylvania ever written was written by Donald W. Powell and published in three separate issues of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA: Volume I, Number 4 (May 21, 1980), Volume II, Number 1 (August 20, 1980), and Volume III, Number 1 (August 19, 1981).

Mr. Curt and Co. kept their word about "extensive improvements." Soon the hemlock-shaded picnic grove of Dwight Mills was equipped with various amusements, including swings, merry-go-round, and a dancing pavilion, 40 X 200 feet in size. The park was well supplied with tables and seats, also booths and a kitchen. During this time, a number of dams were built on the stream of spring water that runs through the park, converting it into a series of lakelets, which added to the beauty of the grounds.

On July 4, 1889, The Wayne County Herald ran the following notice: "The excursion to Lake Ariel to-day, Thursday, by Bauer's Band of Scranton is engaging the attention of many hundreds who propose enjoying the delightful outing the occasion affords. The band promises a great programme for the day which includes their choicest music, the best of dancing, amusements in the woods and on the lake and the very best of refreshments. Many will spend the Fourth at Lake Ariel from this place [Honesdale]." This newspaper account is the first reference to the Lake under its new name, Ariel instead of a Jones' Pond reference. It is also the first reference to a Park ("amusements in the woods"), indicating improvements over the original "picnic grove." On July 18, 1889, The Wayne County Herald ran another notice about the Park: "The Erie & Wyoming Valley Railway has fixed the rate for round trip excursion tickets from Honesdale to Lake Ariel at $1.30."

Little is known about the Park of the mid-1890s, except for now and then a brief newspaper line about a picnic by some group or a fourth of July excursion. One such notice appeared in The Wayne County Herald of July 6, 1893: "Lake Ariel had five or six thousand visitors on the fourth. The cars from here [Honesdale], White Mills and Hawley went over the E. & W. V. R. R. crowded. The only drawback to the day's enjoyment was that the cupboard was bare too soon. The excursion was under the auspices of St. Paul congregation of Green Ridge. Trains from Scranton, Honesdale, and Hawley along with other places were arriving every half hour laden with people. Prof. Wm. Davidson entertained the excursionists by some thrilling performances on the tight rope. The lake was covered with boats and the woods filled with people, so there was no lack of amusement for the pleasure seekers." But by 1897, the eight-year lease of Mr. Curt and Co. was up, and the man who named Lake Ariel and built up the Park fades into history.

The year 1897 was not the end of Lake Ariel Park. Rather, it marked a new beginning, because Charles H. Schadt, P. J. Horan and M. J. Healy, all of Scranton, PA, formed the Lake Ariel Improvement Association. For $75,000, they purchased from Charles E. Mills (son of Dwight Mills), the lake property, consisting of 500 acres of land; the Lake, which covers about 400 acres; the Park; and two hotels, the Lake House and the Pines. Shortly afterward, the farm owned and occupied by Byron Jones was purchased, and in 1899, the Hotel Columbia (presently the Lake Ariel Hotel) was bought from the Simons Brothers. Soon 200 row boats were available for rental and two steamers plied their way around the Lake. At the far end of the Lake, Duman's Island was tastefully groomed for small picnic parties. The Island also served as one of the stations for the steamers on their way around the Lake, which is about a mile from north to south and about a quarter of a mile wide.

The Association made a specialty of accommodating picnic parties, and in the summer season, rarely a day passed that the Park was not occupied by a large excursion party. Ads read that hotel accommodations were up to date, summer boarders could quietly enjoy themselves at the hotels, on the Lake or in the Park, as they chose, and excellent transportation facilities were arranged each season by the Erie & Wyoming Valley Railroad for the convenience of boarders from Scranton, New York and Philadelphia.

The Illustrated Wayne County 1900 boasted: "The present proprietors are catering to the best class of people and no expense is spared in improvements, conveniences and in making the place pleasant and homelike to the patrons. A large farm is conducted by them from which the tables are furnished with fresh fruits and vegetables in their season. The proprietors are successful business men. Mr. Schadt, who has personal supervision of all the business of Ariel, served one term as Treasurer of Lackawanna County... Messrs Horan and Healy are wholesale grocers in Scranton."

About this same time (early 1900s), a strange accident occurred in the Park. The Merry-Go-Round had been shut down during lunch, and upon restarting, had only a little girl, dressed in white, and a few adults on it. As the ride came to an end, the man running it pulled the lever to stop it. Instead of stopping, however, the governor slipped and the Merry-Go-Round went faster and faster. The adults got on the inside of the horses to hold on, but the little girl lost her grip and the centrifugal force threw her into the air. Luckily, a man by the name of Gaston Shaffer caught her in his arms, just as the Merry-Go-Round slowed down to stop.

This advertisement is here reproduced from a Kodak ektaprint copy of this advertisement in the copy of this catalogue in the collection of Kurt A. Reed, Lake Ariel, PA. In 1928, Floyd E. Bortree became the sole owner of Lake Ariel Park, Lake Ariel, PA. At that time he had a roller coaster built in Lake Ariel Park. The coaster was designed by the Philadelphia Toboggan Company and built by Oscar Bittler, with Gus Nilsen as foreman. For more information on this roller coaster and on Lake Ariel Park, see the history of Lake Ariel Park by Kurt A. Reed that is presented in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

Printed at the bottom of the front of this post card is the following: "SIMPSON'S BOAT HOUSE, LAKE ARIEL, PA." Printed on the back of this post card is the following: "G. V. MILLAR & CO. / SCRANTON, PA." The post mark on this post card is as follows: "ARIEL PA 7 PM 1910." This post card, which bears a one-cent stamp (green, Benjamin Franklin in profile, facing left), was sent to: "Mrs. E. E. Mitchell / 7 Wheeler Ave / Scranton / Pa." The message on this card consists of one word, the name of the sender: "Ray." The history of Lake Ariel Amusement Park, written by Kurt A. Reed, is presented in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

Ticket No. 44664, Erie & Wyoming Valley R. R. Printed on the front of this ticket, in the collection of Kurt A. Reed, is the following: "ISSUED BY ERIE & WYOMING VALLEY R. R. ON ACCOUNT OF PEOPLES STREET RAILWAY CO. GOOD FOR ONE PASSAGE BETWEEN ERIE AND WYOMING VALLEY DEPOT AND CORNER LACKAWANNA & FRANKLIN AVE. 44664." The printed message on this ticket notwithstanding, we know that this ticket was used by a passenger whose destination was Lake Ariel. This we know from the rubber stamp on the back of the ticket with reads: "E. & W. V. R. R. JONES LAKE [the former name of Lake Ariel] Sep 20 1894."

The Park and Lake were entering one of the darkest periods in this history. Around 1907 Mr. Charles Schadt died, and his wife did not have the knowledge nor the money to operate the facilities. So Lake Ariel Park closed for the first time since it opened in 1887. Then on March 8, 1916, the well-known Lake Ariel House, one of the oldest hotels in Lake Ariel, was destroyed by fire. The loss was over $20,000. At the time of the fire, the mercury registered four degrees below zero. Soon after, the excursion trains stopped for three reasons: (1) there wasn't much to see at Lake Ariel anymore, (2) World War I was taking its toll on the crowds, and (3) the introduction of the automobile meant that people could now go wherever they wanted to and whenever they wanted to go there.

The Park's luck was about to change, however. The Park was bought by Judge George W. Maxey; Frank Peck Benjamin, a lawyer; Matt A. Coar, a coal operator, all from Scranton; and Floyd E. Bortree, Buick Distributor of Lake Ariel and Scranton. It was a long, hard and expensive job to rebuild a park that had been shut down for so long. As a result, by 1928, Maxey, Benjamin and Coar sold out to Bortree, making him sole owner. On May 26, 1928, The Wayne Independent ran the following notice: "Every one is looking forward to a big time on Memorial Day as Lake Ariel Park will be opened that day for excursions, having been closed to the public for a number of years. There have been added by Manager Floyd Bortree many attractions. A large dancing pavilion has been erected [this should read "rebuilt"] also a boat house, bathing house and a number of refreshment stands. There will be a ball game on the athletic field in the afternoon, and other attractions. A large crowd and a good time is being anticipated. Mr. Bortree stated that scores of Sunday Schools and lodges have been booked for the summer."

In 1928, Mr. Bortree also added a roller coaster. The designer was the Philadelphia Toboggan Company. Oscar Bittler was the builder and Gus Nilsen, foreman. Guy Gibbs, Tom Palmer, Ted Franc, Art Lombardi, Charlie Bortree and Carl Saar were workers. The coaster was built for $40,000 out of West coast spruce, on a slightly sloping lot as an "L" shaped "out and backer." The cars, four in all, with four seats each, weighed a ton each and were brought in on railroad cars and winched into place.

Paying customers would have found themselves stepping from the loading station area into a car. They would make a short curve to the first lift hill. As the party would begin to climb, they would pass a large fly wheel (8 feet in diameter) under a shed roof and then plunge down the hill only to hear the steady "click-click-click" of the chain pulling them up again.

Most of the track was 15 to 20 feet off the ground until you reached the impressive and beautiful turn-around curve at the bottom of the "L." This turn was approximately 56 feet high, and some sources claim it was the highest part of the ride. Then it was ground level the rest of the way in, except for a few large hills. The last hill included a tunnel. Then the track curved at a sharp right angle into 240 feet of brake and then returned to the station.

This coaster was rebuilt at least three times. When it was first constructed, the first hill wasn't secure, and once before its 1928 debut, a wind storm knocked out three and a half hills in the process. Secondly, the back curve was originally built at practically a right angle. When a car went through a test run, it went straight off the track. This move to skimp on lumber and cut costs could have been costly in loss of lives. So it was back to the drawing board for a second time.

In terms of accidents, only one claimed the life of a rider. This was due to carelessness on his part, not on the part of Lake Ariel Park. The rider in question did not have the lap bar down and was standing up and took off. Most local historians feel that it was suicide. The police came, and for four and one half hours they, along with the ride operators, rode the coaster every way imaginable to try to determine what had happened.

In the late 40s or early 50s, the roller coaster was rebuilt for a third time. Sources state that a Mr. Hoover from Philadelphia Toboggan Company supervised the reconstruction. The roller coaster was 4,000 feet long as measured at ground level.

During the 1930s, Lake Ariel reached the height of its popularity. The Beach saw a great change, along with the Park, in this period. Floyd Bortree had several boardwalks built from the Park to the Beach, which was covered with tons of clean, white sand imported from New Jersey. Floyd Bortree also built a Sellner Water Toboggan. The track was 25 feet high and approximately 75 to 100 feet long. Two riders could sit on the toboggan and go racing down the slide and skimming over the water.

Business Card: Hotel Columbia Barber Shop, D. Brundage, Proprietor. This business card is reproduced here from an ektaprint copy of the original in the collection of Kurt A. Reed. At the turn of the century, the Hotel Columbia was one of the leading hostleries of Lake Ariel. Its "strictly up to date" barber shop provided gracious service to the thousands of visitors to Lake Ariel and Lake Ariel Amusement Park.

The 1930s also saw the steamers replaced by a launch. The launch was run by a gas engine instead of steam. "Nationality Days" were popular events. People from different backgrounds would have a day dedicated to them. They would meet at Lake Ariel and enjoy the day, the food and the friendship. Each Sunday night during the 1930s and 1940s there were fireworks, and the crowds would thrill to the spectacular shapes and resounding booms.

Rides and attractions were continually being added, and in 1939, Richard Hettes of Hamlin built a one-fourth scale model of an American-type passenger engine from the Pennsylvania Railroad. The train had a Model A engine and a Model T rearend, with two cars to pull the kiddies around in. Not far from Richard Hettes' train, the Seminole Indians, for many years, spent the summer months and put on exhibitions and wrestled alligators. Some of the other attractions were Reckless Johnson and Ruby, balloon aerialists; Joe Penner, "Wanna Buy a Duck"; and Edgar Bergen. Town legend has it that when Edgar Bergen played the Park with Charlie McCarthy, he met Snooky Shieks, one of the more colorful people of Lake Ariel, and patterned Mortimer Snerd after him.

The 1940s saw the United States enter World War II and the Park faced rough times once more, as we learn from the following clipping from the August 6, 1942 issue of The Wayne Independent: "Lake Ariel Park closed for season - Lake Ariel Park, a $100,000 amusement center on a 10-acre site overlooking Lake Ariel, is closed for the season because of meager attendance caused chiefly by gasoline and tire rationing, say The Scranton Tribune. F. Burton Derby [Floyd Bortree's son-in-law], president of the Park corporation, said however, that if conditions permit the park will open 'bigger and better' next year. The park, which has been one of the most popular resort centers in this area for the past 15 years has 12 amusement devices, including a $40,000 roller coaster. All of these will be closed down and winter shutters put up. Derby said that the number of employees in peak days ran between 50 and 75, most of them residents of Lake Ariel. Derby said he had no particular plans in view, except that he very likely will file application for enlistment in the Army 'if they have a place for me.' Meanwhile, crowds were thin and meager at other lakes and resorts. Rocky Glen was busy, however the Laurel Line services this Park. Motor Police said highway traffic was also light."

The Park did reopen, but the War was still taking its toll on attendance. This was to last two more years. In 1945, seven Scranton high school boys between the ages of 16 and 17 stole $100 worth of fireworks and did considerable damage to the Amusement building. The boys were caught, charged with burglary and released into the custody of their parents until they could appear before Judge C. E. Bodie in Wayne County's Juvenile Court.

By 1946, the Park was booming again. On July 27, the World's Largest Fire Truck was exhibited and the Park was booked solid with firemen and Sunday School picnics. But tragedy struck again in September 1946 when Floyd Bortree, bank president and owner of the amusement park, died suddenly. The Park passed into the hands of Park President and Mrs. F. Burton Derby (son-in-law and daughter, respectively, of Floyd Bortree).

The end was in sight now, for the Derbys were more partiers than businesspeople, and the Park began to show it. Buildings fell into disrepair, shows and acts were not rescheduled, and the grounds grew up. Then in 1955 a severe snowstorm caused the dance hall and the refreshment stand to collapse. Before they could be rebuilt in 1956, Hurricane Hazel dealt the final blow. What was left was sold, and the Park was gone.

Thus ends this saga of the life and death of Lake Ariel Park, one of the early favorite resorts of northeastern Pennsylvania. Lake Ariel Park was once visited by as many as 10,000 people daily. Now Lake Ariel Park is an overgrown ruin, visited only occasionally by kids throwing a beer bash or by an eager historian interested in recording for posterity an account of what once was.

LAKE ARIEL AMUSEMENT PARK

By S. Robert Powell

The Sunday School of the Berean Baptist Church in Carbondale, PA, used to hold its annual picnic at Lake Ariel Amusement Park. It was an event that we all looked forward to with great anticipation.

As I think about Lake Ariel Amusement Park now, three things come immediately to mind: (1) the trip to Lake Ariel, (2) the roller coaster, (3) the picnic lunch.

I don't remember any of the preparations that were made at home prior to our departure nor do I remember the trip from our house into Carbondale. For me, the annual trip to Lake Ariel always began when we started our ascent (in the family car, Mom at the wheel) of Salem Mountain, heading for Lake Ariel. I remember the trip over Salem Mountain particularly well because, in all probability, I subconsciously associated that trip up one side of Salem Mountain and down the other with a ride on a roller coaster. The ascent always seemed to take forever, and the descent always seemed to be over all too quickly, as I recall. My brothers and I were always so eager to arrive at the Park that we quickly memorized the route. We knew that when we passed a certain landmark (a particular house, a group of trees, for example) that we were about half way to Lake Ariel, even though we didn't have any idea where we were at the time. Many years after Lake Ariel Amusement Park closed, I was in a car that was traveling on the road to Lake Ariel, a road on which I had not traveled for many years. Suddenly, I spotted a row of trees that I had not seen nor thought about for perhaps twenty years, and I instantly recognized those trees to be one of my childhood temporal landmarks on the road from Carbondale to Lake Ariel Amusement Park. After you passed those trees, I learned in childhood, you were half way to Lake Ariel, even though, as a child, I didn't have any idea where Lake Ariel was located.

The only two rides that I can remember at Lake Ariel Amusement Park are the two roller coasters. My brothers and I were not allowed to ride the bigger coaster, which didn't bother us in the slightest, because we were allowed to ride the smaller one, and that we did, over and over. The ascent of the lift hill was particularly exciting because there were trees all around the roller coaster--and throughout the Park as a whole as well--and as one ascended the lift hill one got a very good sense of just how high one was by looking at the trees by the side of the track. I'm sure that as children we had the impression that we were ascending higher than the treetops, even though we were probably not higher than twenty feet in the air. The concept "twenty feet high" is not very meaningful to a child. The concept "as high as the treetops" is. It was all very exciting.

After we (my brothers Jim, Donald, Russell and I) had thoroughly exhausted ourselves on the rides, and running from one ride to the next, we would head back to the picnic table in the Park that the family had selected immediately upon our arrival at Lake Ariel, and where my mother (Helen Russell Powell) and her mother (Ora Loomis Russell) and my maternal grandfather's two youngest sisters, Aunt Nettie (Jeannette Locke Russell) and Aunt Jennie (Jane Martha Russell), had organized, while my brothers and I were on the rides, a bountiful picnic lunch. I can not recall all of the items on the annual menu, but I do know that, in my opinion, a picnic at Lake Ariel would not have been complete without sliced tomatoes, cucumber wedges, potato chips, lemonade (served from a large, jug-like thermos with a spigot of the kind frequently found on coffee urns and samovars) and lemon meringue pie. The lemon meringue pie was always prepared by my Grandmother Russell, and it was always the gastronomic highlight of the day. The recipe for this legendary pie, which is included in the recipe file of my mother, is as follows:

ORA (LOOMIS) RUSSELL'S LEMON PIE

Wet three tablespoons cornstarch with cold water. Add about one and one-half cups boiling water--until right thickness.

Add yolks of two eggs, grated rind and juice of one lemon (about one-half cup), butter, salt, one cup sugar. Cook until cornstarch is clear. Stir constantly.

Pour into baked shell. Spread meringue on top and brown in oven.

After the picnic lunch, my brothers and I again went on the rides. The grown ups would clean up after the picnic and put the picnic baskets back in the car, and then take a leisurely stroll through the Park. Lake Ariel Park, like Newton Lake Park, had lots of trees, and benches to sit on. Even when there were lots of people around, as there frequently were, one always had the impression that there was room to breathe and a place to sit down if you wanted to.

Not surprisingly, I don't recall a single ride home in the family car from Lake Ariel Amusement Park. After having participated for an afternoon in the magical world of Lake Ariel, the ride between Lake Ariel and Carbondale in the family car doubtless appeared, to my brothers and me, to be uninteresting in the extreme.

INFORMATION ON LAKE ARIEL

An important source of information on Lake Ariel is Centennial and Illustrated Wayne County. Historical, Biographical, Industrial, Picturesque, Commercial, Financial, Agricultural. Second Edition. (Honesdale, PA: Benj. F. Haines, Publisher, 1902). On pages 4-5, a history of the lake itself is given. On page 4, there are photographs of: (1) "Lake Ariel," (2) "A Picturesque Drive Near Lake Ariel." On page 98, there is a biographical sketch of Hon. Giles Greene, as well as information on his descendants. On page 98 there are photographs of: (1) "Giles Greene," (2) "The Greene Homestead at Ariel," (3) "Homer Greene's Residence at Honesdale," (4) "J. W. Sandercock's Residence at Ariel," and (5) "A View of Lake Ariel." On page 99, a history of Lake Ariel Park is given, as are photographs of: (1) "View of Ariel from Hotel Columbia," (2) "Pavilion in the Park," (3) "Entrance to the Park," and (4) "Hotel Columbia at Ariel."

AMUSEMENT PARKS I REMEMBER

By Mrs. Helen Kelley

In her letter of November 28, 1981 to S. Robert Powell, Mrs. Helen Kelley of Holland, PA, reported the following information on six amusement parks in northeastern Pennsylvania that she is familiar with:

1. HANSON'S (Harvey's Lake)

"This spot was special to me in my childhood. First, it was really the only large lake in the area known to me then and secondly, getting there was a big part of the attraction, as it involved about an 18-mile ride in an open trolley car through the countryside (very beautiful then). Having arrived at the 'Lake' (the end of the line), one had a brief chance to admire the lovely Oneonta Hotel (later burned), after which one boarded the 'Boat' to sail across to the Picnic Grounds on the opposite side. Being able to experience two such excursions on the same day was quite a treat in those days. Then, of course, after the crossing, there was all the excitement of seeing 'the rides' (merry-go-round, roller coaster, etc.). The latter, however, was not my favorite ride, as 'I didn't and still don't' have any affection for this type of ride. I loved to dance in my youth and Harvey's Lake Picnic Ground included an excellent Dance Pavilion.

Also, during those days, there were some impressive summer places at one end of the Lake, which has always been a favorite, local, summer resort. To the right, as one walked to its shore from the trolley, was Worden Place, with a number of summer cottages, and the Lakeside Hotel (also burned, I believe). I remember spending one week during the summer when I was about 9 or 10 years old, at a Girl Reserve Camp somewhere beyond Worden Place, along the Lake, and I got very homesick--didn't enjoy myself at all and definitely never learned to swim!

Still another well-patronized section of the Lake is Sunset, which was, and remains, more of a public bathing area."

2. FERNBROOK PARK

"This quite wooded 'Park' was located in a grove of trees about halfway to Harvey's Lake (the same line)--the trolley stopped at the entrance. Sadly, the 'Park' is no more but there is a village or small town of 'Fernbrook' in the same area but I don't know whether the 'Park' or the town originated first.

Picnic tables and benches were provided, as well as swings, sliding-board and merry-go-round. I don't recall a roller coaster. There was also a fine Dance Pavilion and some of the fine bands of those days played here. I frequented the dances some evenings during the summertime.

I think Fernbrook Park was smaller in area than Harvey's Lake and was more of a picnicking spot without a lot of concession stands, etc., if I recall correctly."

3. SANS SOUCI PARK

"This amusement park was located south of Wilkes-Barre, on the trolley line to Nanticoke. The trolley stopped at the 'Gate.' It was in a larger, slightly more wooded area than Fernbrook Park, and had a lot more 'attractions' available, including the carousel, a roller coaster and a Dance Pavilion, the latter also very popular then. I guess my mother took me to this Park more often when I was a child because it was located nearer to where we lived and was more convenient."

4. ROCKY GLEN PARK

"I am sure this large Park near Scranton may be more familiar to you than it was to me. I only visited it once (?) and that was during our Class Day outing during graduation week (Coughlin High School).

To get to Rocky Glen from Wilkes-Barre, one took the Laurel Line (electric) and back in those days. I guess I must have considered the trip not a must--and it seemed quite a distance from home! Anyway, I can't remember much about my one visit there, except that the large area seemed unattractive and had a very large roller coaster which didn't interest me."

5. CROOP'S GLEN PARK

"This Park was located at Hunlock's Creek, Penna., a train stop enroute to Berwick and Bloomsburg, so I never got there very frequently. However, its main attractions (not mechanical) were the large rock formations and waterfall. I believe that this spot, too, was more for picnicking than to 'do the rides,' as I do not recall any of the latter.

Of the two small photos taken at Croop's Glen that are enclosed, the one showing all of the 'greenery' is special. The greenery covers the tall, arched metal structure located at what was the entrance to the Park, and my son and I were able, upon very close inspection, to recognize the large metal letters, "CROOP'S GLEN," at the top of the arch, beneath all of the vines covering the structure. It was rather eerie!"

6. MOUNTAIN PARK

I know very little about this place, except that it was located in the vicinity of Mountain Top, Pa., and evidently was reached by taking the train from Wilkes-Barre. I never visited it but knew of it from hearing my mother speak of it. I am sure it was just a lovely spot where one picnicked only, and with no other diversions, as it was not that accessible via good roads and with the auto practically non-existent during my mother's youth."

Included in Mrs. Kelley's letter of November 28, 1981, to S. Robert Powell were three color photographs that Mrs. Kelley graciously allowed S. Robert Powell to borrow and make copies of.

Those three photographs are of the following:

1. Old Roller Coaster, Harvey's Lake, PA. Photograph taken by Mrs. Kelley, April 21, 1978.
2. View of Waterfall and Rocks of Old, Now Defunct, Croop's Glen Amusement Park, Hunlock's Creek, Pa. Photograph by Mrs. Kelley, October 1966.
3. Former Entrance to Old Croop's Glen Amusement Park, Hunlock's Creek, Pa., Entrance Barely Discernible thru Overgrowth. Photograph by Mrs. Kelley, October 1966.

REFLECTIONS ON SANS SOUCI PARK

By B. Derek Shaw

Although I did not grow up in northeastern Pennsylvania, I am familiar with many of the now defunct amusement parks that were located here. One park that everyone agrees was a great one was Sans Souci Park, in Hanover Township, just a few miles southwest of the Wilkes-Barre city line, along the Sans Souci Parkway. Roller Coaster Fever (a 1979 publication by John Waldrop, Richard Munch, and Jon-Michael Reed; published by STARLOG Press, O'Quinn Studios, Inc., 475 Park Avenue South, New York, NY 10016) rated the roller coaster at Sans Souci Park, the Bear Cat, as one of the most exciting, original and daring ever built. In an article in Roller Coaster Fever entitled "The Classics Gone But Not Forgotten" (p. 96), Richard Munch says this of the Sans Souci Bear Cat: "Another huge coaster which sat comfortably in a ravined landscape. Contained two beautiful tunnels, one similar to that of the Kings Island Beast. Another great Philadelphia Toboggan Company coaster."

I had the opportunity to talk with Edward Lee, manager and later owner of the park, on Friday, January 15, 1982. Sans Souci Park was established around 1900, and was owned by Ed Lee's parents. It was, as most parks were at that time, a stop on the streetcar line. One early ride of interest was the aerial railway, which was a scenic railway ride. Not much is known presently, except that it is known to have existed between 1912 and 1920, and I'm sure perhaps longer. Up to 1952, the park was leased from a local coal company on a yearly basis. After that, the Lee family assumed ownership.

Ed Lee recalled that the Bear Cat was built by carpenters in 1928 at $1.25 per hour. The coaster ran two trains each carrying twenty-four passengers. "When we first opened, the response from the school kids was so great that we had to stay open until 2 A.M. We only charged 25¢ per ride. I was amazed how many times some of them re-rode the coaster."

In 1961, Wilkes-Barre mayor, Frank Slaterry signed a proclamation setting aside the week of May 28, 1961, as Outdoor Amusement Park Week. The accompanying photograph shows Edward J. Lee, past president of the Pennsylvania Amusement Park Association, president and general manager of Sans Souci Park; Ben Sterling, president of the Pennsylvania Amusement Park Association, of Rocky Glen Park; Mayor Slaterry, and Attorney James Lenahan Brown, secretary-treasurer of Sans Souci Park. Ed Lee: "Ben and I got along real well. If I ever needed a part, temporarily, to get a ride back in running order, he was the first person to lend assistance."

By the mid-1960s, the Ballroom was becoming quite popular. "Joe Nardone and I [Ed Lee] would follow the national music charts. When we saw an up and coming act, we'd book them at a real cheap rate." Stars that played at Sans Souci Park included: The Association, Gary Puckett and the Union Gap, Sam the Sham and the Pharaohs and Neil Diamond. The dancehall lasted two years after the park was officially closed, in 1970.

Sans Souci Park also had a 75 X 220 feet swimming pool, with three diving boards. Rides and attractions that were operating during the last few years of the park's existence included: The Penny Arcade, Photo Gallery, Roller Skating Rink, Fun House, Dark Ride, Whip, Hey Dey, Mini Train, Tilt-a-Whirl, Wild Mouse, and Tumble Bug. Ed Lee was proud of his train ride, which followed the old streetcar bed. It was one of the longest rides around. Each trip took about five minutes, and went out around the ball park. The train had two locomotives and ten cars, with each car having the name of a different community. The train took first prize at the Chicago I.A.A.P.A. (International Association of Amusement Parks & Attractions) convention. At one time, Ed Lee was the President of the Pennsylvania Amusement Park Association. Sans Souci Park closed in 1970, because of competition from larger amusement parks. Rocky Glen Park (now Ghost Town in the Glen) and Hersheypark, and others, were doing quite well then.

What becomes of rides at a defunct amusement facility? Well, for one, Ben Sterling bought a lot of rides for Rocky Glen, including the Flyer Planes. The Tilt-a-Wheel and Wild Mouse went to Game and Fun Park in Buffalo. The Ferris Wheel is at Hanson's. The Merry-Go-Round went to Myrtle Beach, SC, with West Point Park (near Lansdale) purchasing the Caterpillar and the Tumblebug. They (West Point Park) were going to buy the Bear Cat Roller Coaster, but decided it would be too much work and expense to disassemble. In 1975, the roller coaster fell victim to the wrecker's ball. The Bloomsburg Fire Company purchased all of the kiddie rides. The well known fast food stand, Nathan's Famous Coney Island, bought the shooting gallery and the "You Got It" game. Finally, the railroad train, the tracks and cars went to a businessman from Elmhurst, who bought it for his kids. They had such an attachment for it that the father felt they should own it.

GONE, BUT NOT FORGOTTEN

By B. Derek Shaw

Northeastern Pennsylvania at one time had 27 different amusement parks in operation. Today, six remain in business (see "All That's Left," in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA). What happened to the twenty-one amusement facilities that entertained hundreds of thousands of people every summer? I've tried to trace and piece together as much information as possible about these defunct establishments. It is interesting to note that most of these parks were located along lakes. Included in this list are only those parks that had at least one amusement ride. Picnic parks are not included herein.

BERNESCO PARK, Nescopeck.

For information on this park, see the article by Christine Bower in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

COLUMBIA PARK, Bloomsburg.

This was a small park with a picnic area, swings, a few stands and a ballfield. It was located near where Shaffer's barn used to stand. It was originally called Shawnee Park and had various amusement devices including a carousel built by Alan Herschell. This merry-go-round is now owned by the Millville Fire Company, who have a picnic every July 4th.

CROOP'S GLEN, Hunlock Creek.

This park was located right off Route 11. It was owned by the Croop family. This small park had a waterfall running right through the middle, which proved to be the biggest attraction. Croop's Glen began operation in 1908 or 1909, under Benjamin F. Croop. It was adjacent to the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Station. The picnic park had a large roller coaster and a small one, both built in 1926, a whip, carousel, skooters, big and small dance pavilion, penny arcade and other standard attractions. There was also a swimming pool and bath houses. The park also boasted having the first nickelodeon in the valley.

This park was the scene of church outings, family reunions and school picnics. I'm told the pavilions were always booked solid from Memorial Day through Labor Day.

Croop's Glen had its final season the summer of 1941. The park closed in part due to the war effort and the rationing going on and also because insurance rates for the attractions were getting prohibitive.

The big pavilion operated as a roller skating rink until the early 1950s, when it was destroyed by fire.

A few remains of the Philadelphia Toboggan Company coaster are left, including some of the footers, along with the main entrance archway.

EVERGREEN PARK, North St. Johns, near Conyngham.

This 18-acre park was two-thirds covered with trees. It was located on the Wilkes-Barre and Hazleton Railway right of way (now the intersection of Interstates 80 and 81). See the article by Charles K. Stumpf in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

FERNBROOK PARK, Shavertown.

The Dallas & Harvey's Lake Trolley Company (part of the Wilkes-Barre Traction Company) owned this park. The company is now known as the Luzerne County Transportation Authority. This park, which was established in the early 1900s, was primarily a picnic park. The early success of the dance pavilion made it possible to add amusement rides and attractions to the park. Perhaps the biggest ride was the roller coaster, located in a wooded section. This coaster, reported to be one of the largest in its day, was built in the 1930s. Other rides included the whip, dodgems, merry-go-round, an auto ride, plus other rides and many stands.

The big bands played Fernbrook on Saturday nights. Among the well known bands that played here are Glenn Miller, Les Brown, Kay Kaiser, Vaughn Monroe, Paul Whiteman, Ted Lewis, Wayne King, Rudi Valle, Jimmy and Tommy Dorsey and Cab Calloway. Lesser known acts sometimes got to participate, including one-armed Wingy Manone, and frequent Indian dancing shows. To gain entrance into this dance pavilion (which could hold 2,500 persons), one had to conform to an announced dress code. In more recent times, the dance pavilion has become a skating rink. In 1948 this park was sold to Bloomsburg Mills. Today the site is occupied by Offset Paperback.

HARRISON PARK (later TOBEY'S), one mile south of Blakeslee Corners on Route 115.

Little is known about this park which operated on both sides of the highway. Known attractions included a merry-go-round, mini railroad, skating rink, dining hall and food stands. Playground equipment for the kids was also part of this park, situated along the Lehigh River. The park operated between the 1930s and the 1950s.

HAZLE PARK, 202 West Broad Street, West Hazleton.

Forty acres of land for this park were set aside in 1861 by Alvin Markle, Sr. It served as a picnic park until 1892, when it became an amusement park. The following year, Mr. Markle, who also owned the Lehigh Traction Company Electric Railway, provided transportation to and from the park. Hazle Park, often referred to as "The Peoples' Playground," always opened one weekend prior to Memorial Day and stayed open through October.

The 1897 brochure describing the "Hazle Park--Lehigh Traction Company Pleasure Resort" referred to it as "the home of rational amusement and recreation," and rightly so. The park had a carousel, aeroplane swings, the old mill, fun house, tumble bug, scrambler, and bubble boats. A manmade swimming pool and the other usual attractions rounded out the bill of fare. Entertainment included a performance on August 13, 1912 by John Philip Sousa, and on July 2, 1925 by Ben Bernie. Yuma the Mystery Man and His Gold Chest also appeared. Newspaper accounts tell of between 14,000 and 17,000 people on hand for opening day of the 1926 season. It opened with long lines for a

Sans Souci Park, Aerial View. Photograph by Charles Meehan, Ashley, PA; in the collection of Edward Lee, manager and later owner of Sans Souci Park; reproduced here from the original photograph. This park, which everyone agrees was a great one, was established around 1900; it officially closed in 1970. For information on this park, see the article in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, on page 9, by B. Derek Shaw, entitled "Reflections on Sans Souci Park." The roller coaster at Sans Souci Park, the Bear Cat, was rated by Roller Coaster Fever, published in 1979, as one of the most exciting, original and daring ever built. This coaster was built by the Philadelphia Toboggan Company (8th and Maple Streets, Lansdale, PA 19446), whose leaflet, "Coastin' Through Time A History of Roller Coasters," contains a brief, but highly informative, history of the roller coaster. The following information about the first roller coaster is from that leaflet: "In 1804, a roving Frenchman, upon his return from Russia where he was introduced to and impressed by the ice-slide as a form of outdoor amusement, built a slide more conducive to the warm, French summers. In a public garden, in the Ternes quarter of Paris, he constructed an artificial hill of timber and devised a small carriage which rolled on a track laid on the incline. He called it The Russian Mountains." This Parisian coaster, not unlike the Sans Souci Bear Cat, was extremely popular. When the latter coaster, which ran two trains each carrying 24 passengers, was opened in 1928, the public response was such that the coaster ran until 2 A.M. Rubber stamped in black ink on the back of this photograph is the following: "CHARLES MEEHAN / PHOTOGRAPHER / ASHLEY, PA." Handwritten in black ink on the back of this photograph is the following: "Andrew Barber / 514 Fellows Ave. Breslau / Wilkes Barre Pa."

This photograph was published in a local newspaper in 1961, with the following caption: "Mayor Frank Slattery signed a proclamation setting aside the week of May 28, 1961, as Outdoor Amusement Park Week. Pictured left to right, Edward J. Lee, past president of the Pennsylvania Amusement Park Association, president and general manager of Sans Souci Park; Ben Sterling, president of the Pennsylvania Amusement Park Association, of Rocky Glen Park; Mayor Slattery, and Atty. James Lenahan Brown, secretary-treasurer of Sans Souci Park."

Roller Coaster, Croop's Glen. Photograph by P. Garick, Croop's Glen Park, in the collection of Jimmy Croop, Hunlock Creek, PA; reproduced here from the original photograph. This roller coaster, which was built in 1926, was in operation in 1941, when Croop's Glen closed. The first commercial roller coaster in the United States opened in 1884: LaMarcus A. Thompson's Switchback Gravity Pleasure Railway, located on Coney Island.

brand new attraction--the Greyhound roller coaster (of the out-and-back variety, more thrilling than the first one).

During the early 1930s, rail service to the park was interrupted. In 1932, the Lehigh Traction Company ceased making runs to Hazle Park; in 1933, the Wilkes-Barre & Hazleton Railroad stopped making runs to the park.

C. W. Elrod assumed ownership on May 30, 1933. His premier season he introduced a new dance pavilion called "The Tokio Gardens." By 1936 rides included a ferris wheel, roller coaster, whip, scooters, carousel, motor and row boats, fun house, penny arcade and shooting gallery. Tickets for all of the rides, except the roller coaster and the fun house, cost five cents. In 1940, only the following rides remained: ferris wheel, whip, scooter and merry-go-round. The biggest loss was the Greyhound roller coaster. A race track was built in the upper park to the south of the groves. The 1941 Hazleton Plain Standard Speaker-Sentinel, Golden Jubilee Edition, mentioned that the site is now occupied by Myers Lumber Yard, Spalding Bakeries and some bulk oil concerns. The 1948 season was the last year Hazleton High School held its prom in the dance pavilion. In the 1950s, the big rides in the park were dismantled. The summer of 1956 was Hazle Park's last season. In 1964, the carousel building was demolished. In 1980, the archway entrance to the park was razed and given to the newly-formed Hazleton Historical Society.

KEYSTONE PARK, Sayre.

Little is known about this park in Bradford County. According to Ed Lee, former Sans Souci Park manager, there was a figure-eight roller coaster at the park, which ran partly in a gully. The park had the usual rides, including a merry-go-round. A summer stock theatre was located in Keystone Park. The theatre later became a roller skating rink; more recently it has been used for bingo. This park was on the Waverly/Sayre/Athens trolley line.

LAKE ARIEL PARK, Lake Ariel.

See the article by Kurt A. Reed on this park in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

LAKE LODORE PARK, Lake Lodore.

This park was located on the shores of the largest of the 80 lakes in Wayne County. Little is known about this park except that it had a free-standing dance pavilion, merry-go-round, baseball field, and a shoot-the-chutes at the lake. Transportation to the park was provided by the Delaware & Hudson Railroad, which carried thousands of people there on excursion trains.

The park ceased operating about 1915. After the park closed, the carousel was sold to Newton Lake Park. This park later became Camp With-a-Wind. In 1967, at a price of $700,000, the Salvation Army purchased this park. The pavilion and merry-go-round concrete slab are still being used today.

LAKE WINOLA, Route 307, Lake Winola.

This park encompassed 50 acres around the 200-acre lake. Lake Winola Park was owned by the Northern Electric Railroad, which also owned Northern Electric Park in Clarks Summit. At one time this park was so popular that trains arrived from the Lackawanna valley every 15 minutes at each of the two Lake Winola stations, Park Station and North Station. Fares were 45¢ from center city Scranton.

Attractions included an air-driven merry-go-round, ferris wheel, tumble bug, shooting gallery, lake ferry, and park and freak's pavilion.

Robert M. Davenhall of R. D. #2, Dalton, recalls some memories: "My grandfather (William Davenhall of Main Street, Old Forge) had an ice cream parlor in Moosic. Later, he purchased a portable ferris wheel. I remember that it took a couple of days to set up and that it had to be erected with a block and tackle on a truck." This was gear powered, not run by cables as they are today. The axle alone weighed 5 tons. Bob's father, Charles, was the only person his grandfather trusted to move the ferris wheel. Bob's job was to keep his foot on the truck brake until he was told to release it. His older brothers, Fred and Charlie, also worked on setting it up. Proper leverage was important to successfully erecting the ferris wheel. Grandfather Davenhall once said: "You can move the world if you have the right leverage."

Sam Davenhall, an uncle of Bob's, ran the high striker attraction. A customer would get 3 shots for 10¢. If he rang the bell, he'd win a cigar. When business was slow, young Bob would try his luck, with the wire having more tension on it, thus making it quite easy for the young lad to ring the bell. This created some interest and also some business for his uncle.

Bands like Russ Morgan, the Scranton Sirens and others played in the two-story dance pavilion. On May 30, 1923, a section of porch on the second floor collapsed because of weight.

Today the circular cement slab from the old carousel still remains. One pavilion, owned by the Lake Winola Cottage Association, still stands.

LAUREL HILL PARK, Clay Avenue, Dunmore.

Although this was primarily a picnic park, there was a merry-go-round located there, along with a dance pavilion, a big kitchen, several refreshment stands and swings. Outdoor band concerts and exhibitions were staged here. This park was promoted around 1890 by the Suburban Street Railway and Scranton Traction Company. Gilmore's Band led by Patrick Sarsfield Gilmore, gave a concert at Laurel Hill Park for the benefit of the Cymrodorion Society, then getting ready to compete in the choral concert at the 1893 Chicago World's Fair. An exhibition called "The Last Days of Pompeii" was popular, as were the scheduled boxing matches. The park's popularity declined with the emergence of the horeless carriage.

LUNA PARK, Scranton.

In a promotional brochure on Luna Park that was published prior to its May 21, 1906 opening, this park was described as "...unquestionably the grandest and most complete amusement and recreative place between the great ocean resorts." This "architectural fashion plate" was built by Pittsburgh's Frederick Ingersoll for $300,000, on a site obtained from Andrew P. Bedford. It was located across the ravine from May Aug Park Zoo, where Interstate 81 now lies. The park was controlled by Adolf Blau and later by David J. Davis.

The 1906 promotional brochure on the park described it as "...necessarily a place of novel diversions; a land of laughter for the little ones, and a mecca for rest, retrospection and recreation."

Getting to the park was not a problem because four railway companies provided main entrance service: Scranton; Laurel Line; Delaware, Lackawanna & Western; Erie.

A rich variety of architectural styles could be found at Luna Park: Byzantine, Moorish, Japanese, Arabic, Gothic, French Renaissance, etc. The buildings were all covered with hundreds of white lights, making this truly a dream city. This may have been one of the reasons why Scranton was known, for many years, as "The Electric City." Buildings included the Casino, Arcadia, Edsonia Palace, Chateau Alphonse (Fun House), Scenitorium, ballrooms, restaurants, etc. Rides and attractions included a 350-foot long shoot-the-chutes incline with 80-foot lagoon, roller coaster, Cavern of Capri, aerial swing, dog and poney shows, carousel, bon voyage boat ride and ballyhoo bands. The brochure had this to say about the roller coaster: "It is a marvel of mechanical skill and constructive ingenuity, there is no danger. The curves are banked and the car works in a chute, making derailment impossible. Each car is manned by a trained operator and one may dash along at a rate of ninety miles per hour and feel no uncomfortable sensation after the trip is ended."

The park featured a circus ring, which was the main feature of the mall area. This circus featured acrobatic, aerial, equestrian and animal acts from American and European rings. "No human skeletons, fat women, tattooed freaks, or other distasteful features of the tented shows will be tolerated."

Bob Bauer and his band was a regular favorite. Len Schloss was manager, coming from Glen Echo Park in Washington, DC. Prior to that, he had opened Coney Island Dreamland in 1904. Matt Lynott was a ticket taker at the dance pavilion, while Arthur Kellar was the press agent. If people wanted information about the park, anytime during its ten-year existence, all they had to do was call the excursion department at Bell Phone, Old No. 470, New No. 2021. The first local Welsh Day was held here, drawing 25,000 people.

Despite its physical beauty, the park lost money each season. The beginning of the end occurred one day when a Mr. Babson advertised a free gate. Upon arriving at the park, people were charged 10¢. Many irate people never came back, opting to go to nearby Rocky Glen Park instead.

At 3:00 A.M. on August 23, 1916, a fire raged through most of the main building, leaving only a steeple and part of the floor. The losses: $15,000. Park policeman John J. Horn discovered the blaze, which took until 5:00 A.M. to get under control, because of poor water pressure. It has been said that a spark from an Erie or a Lackawanna engine caused the fire.

Victor J. Graybill, manager of Luna Park at the time of the fire, said that everything would be rebuilt. It was not rebuilt, and that was the end of Luna Park.

LUZERNE GROVE SECTION OF ESPY GROVE, near Mountain Top.

This park was opened in 1882. It was located 12 miles east of Wilkes-Barre, 2 miles line of sight. In 1883, improvements were made, including service by the Lehigh Valley Railroad. A carousel was located in this park. No other attractions in this park have thus far been discovered.

MOOSIC LAKE, near Mt. Cobb.

Exact dates are not known, but it is believed that this park was opened in 1904 or 1905. It was owned by the Burke family of Dunmore. Amusements of all kinds were available at Moosic Lake, "The Gateway to the Clouds." In an article by an unidentified author, in the collection of John S. Chiodo of New York City, the following information about this park is given: "The excursion trains running to Moosic Lake soon called for a roller coaster to be built, merry-go-round to be installed and a very large pavilion to be erected for dancing and other events." The pavilion, known as "The Pavilion of Pleasure," had an area of over 8,800 square feet, and nationally known bands, including Cab Calloway, Tommy Dorsey, Wayne King and Paul Whiteman, played at Moosic Lake.

The park survived and thrived for over 20 years, until a dispute erupted in 1925 among the owners of the lake. This led to the suspension of the amusement facility. In 1938 there was a sheriff's sale of all of the rides and attractions of the Moosic Lake Park Company. On June 20, 1941, Moosic Lake was closed as a public park. At that time, it had been operating as a picnic park for some time. When this park was developed as a summer resort, newspaper ads announced: "No Toll Gate Charges--All Amusement Buildings Removed--15 Minutes to Scranton."

The Moosic Lake pavilion was leveled by fire on June 28, 1962. Replacement estimates exceeded $100,000. Unfortunately, it was never replaced.

This area, incidentally, was first known as Moosic Lake. Later it was known as Moosic Lakes.

MOUNTAIN PARK, east of Wilkes-Barre, near Mountain Top.

This park was one of the first amusement facilities in northeastern Pennsylvania. It opened in May 1883. This 50-acre park was situated along the right of way of the Jersey Central Railroad, on what is known as the Ashley Plain, 9 miles from Wilkes-Barre.

Attractions included a building housing a laugh gallery and a house of trouble. The $15,000 carousel was housed in a building which served as a shelter for park patrons when it rained. This triple merry-go-round, or Flying Horses, was the only one of its kind in the world, and was patented and built by Charles Beisel of Wilkes-Barre. Other attractions included a roller coaster, ferris wheel, mini railroad, 50' X 50' dance pavilion, bowling alleys and hand ball courts. The baseball field at Mountain Park had a set of bleachers capable of seating 1,000 persons.

In 1902, the park spent $10,000 in improvements, and operated under new management, Ogden Brothers & Company of Philadelphia. Promotional material about this park described this facility as "The Queen of All Summer Excursion Resorts." On one occasion, 9,000 people attended a picnic there.

A contemporary article about this park gave running times on the Jersey Central Railroad to Mountain Park from various locations:

55 minutes from Scranton to Mountain Park,
50 minutes from Taylor to Mountain Park,
45 minutes from Moosic to Mountain Park,
40 minutes from Avoca to Mountain Park,
35 minutes from Pittston to Mountain Park,
20 minutes from Wilkes-Barre to Mountain Park.

Shoot-the-Chutes, Luna Park, Scranton, PA. Cover page of a pamphlet about Luna Park, published in 1906 by the Scranton Luna Park Co., in the collection of the Lackawanna Historical Society, Scranton, PA. From the title page of this pamphlet, we learn that the 1906 season opened on May 21, and that the officers of Luna Park at that time were the following: J. Frank Penman, President; Frederick Ingersoll, Vice President and General Manager; John Brooks, Treasurer; C. Reynolds Bedford, Secretary.

Curlifinia Thetosca Ruch. Photograph in the collection of Olwen (Ruch) Adler, Elmhurst, PA; reproduced here from a copy print of that photograph by Donald W. Powell, Carbondale and Chester, PA. Curlifinia Thetosca Ruch ("Aunt Tossie") was a ticket seller at Luna Park, Scranton, PA. She is shown in a second photograph in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA (page 15). Luna Park was opened on May 21, 1906. On August 23, 1916, it was destroyed by a fire. The manager of Luna Park at that time, Victory J. Graybill, said that everything would be rebuilt. It was not, and that was the end of Luna Park.

The park closed at the end of the 1908 season because of possible cave-ins on northern Wilkes-Barre Mountain, the site of the park. Many of the rides were moved to Sans Souci Park in Hanover Township.

NEWTON LAKE PARK, Greenfield Township, near Carbondale.

This park was one of the few parks in northeastern Pennsylvania that was not built on a trolley line. It was built and owned by Frank Bernhardt Wagner, and opened for the 1917 season. To get people to visit the 50.5 acre park, good roads and electric lines had to be installed.

Rides included a mini railroad, whip, carousel, heyday, dodgem, ferris wheel, roller coaster, boat ride, 3 kiddie rides and a 50-passenger show boat on Newton Lake itself. The ferris wheel carried the serial number 003. The roller coaster was built by a Mr. Neary in 1924. It had a 6-inch wide and 4-inch high "T" iron rail in the center. This is what held the cars on the track. To get the cars off the track, part of the track would have to be taken off. The lift hill was powered by a one-cylinder diesel engine that could have been patented. The carousel was built in 1881 in Austria. It contained forty-eight figures that were hand carved, making it one of only three of its kind in the world. This beautiful carousel originally was located in Lake Lodore Park.

This park, later managed by Frank Wagner's son, Franklin E. Wagner, was the scene of the "Miss Anthracite" beauty contest, Sunday School picnics and other group outings. Assisting Franklin E. Wagner in the management of the park was Paul ("Doc") Stenson.

The 80' X 90' dance hall was built in 1919, with bridge-type joists. It was remodeled in 1924 with a 6-foot promenade added. In 1953, a new floor was installed. In the early days of the park, big bands played there. The dance hall was the last structure in use when the park ceased operation in the 1970s.

Newton Lake Park bottled its own soda and manufactured its own ice cream. The park advertised frequently in Scranton newspapers. Following one fourth of July celebration, the management, in a newspaper ad, thanked the 75,000 people who spent Sunday and July 4th at "Lackawanna County's Lake Resort. All Previous Records Were Shattered Once Again."

In 19__, a man riding the roller coaster at Newton Lake Park unlocked the chain and stood up in the moving car. He lost his life. In 1952, the coaster, which was damaged by Hurricane Hazel, was closed because it did not comply with safety requirements. It did not, for example, have a catwalk all along the track.

Anna E. Wagner, the daughter of Frank Bernhardt Wagner, operated the park for a time, before leasing it to several different people. On November 17, 1976, the park was sold by Miss Wagner to Newton Lake Park Estates, Inc. for $75,000. The new owners tried to run the park for the 1977 season, but had bigger plans on their minds. Thomas J. Kenney, of Finch Hill, the former operator and new owner of the park, announced on June 10, 1977 that the park was no longer open to the public. All of the amusement buildings were demolished and all of the rides were sold. The carousel did manage to find a new home at Marriott's Great America in Santa Clara (Riverside), California.

As for the land, Mr. Kenney had visions of creating a $16 million development, to include town houses, a theatre-in-the-round, jai lai fronton and a greyhound track, if permission was granted by the state legislature. Future plans called for a hotel and a heliport. In a newspaper interview, Mr. Kenney was asked why he was interested in doing what he was planning on doing at Newton Lake. He replied: "For the first time in my 50 years, Lackawanna County is witnessing a steady increase in population growth and significant expansion in building activities." His projections for Newton Lake Park, unfortunately, never materialized. If they had, between 1,500 and 2,000 new jobs would have been created.

NORTHERN ELECTRIC PARK, Clarks Summit.

This park was located near the intersection of Grove and State Streets. The park continued back to the ravine opposite Abington Heights High School, South Campus.

The park was owned by the Northern Electric Railroad, which also owned Lake Winola Park. The train ride from Scranton to this park cost 15¢.

It is believed that this 11-acre park was started in the early 1900s. Scranton dance instructor, J. Frank Siegel, was the manager. The usual rides and attractions were found at this free admission trolley park: roller coaster, carousel, dance pavilion, picnic tables and concessions. One brochure described Northern Electric Park as "...the most popular resort of the elite class of Scranton and vicinity." The roller coaster was once given this impressive description: "The up-to-the-minute roller coaster with its many sensational dips is the longest ride furnished anywhere in the country."

Northern Electric Park, situated six hundred feet above the city, was sold to R. W. Day, General Manager of the Scranton/Binghamton/Montrose Railroad.

On June 20, 1921, at 9:30 P.M., sixteen people were hurt on the roller coaster, five of them seriously. Thomas Reddington was the manager of this one-minute ride.

The end of Northern Electric Park came on November 6, 1925, when the dance pavilion was destroyed by fire, and part of the coaster was damaged. Two boys were suspected of having started the fire. The losses due to the fire were estimated to be $12,000.

The land area of this park was unused until August 3, 1936, when it was purchased by Ewart F. York of Clarks Summit from William Y. Moffat of Dunmore.

SANS SOUCI PARK, Hanover Township, near Wilkes-Barre.

Sans Souci Park was established in 1902 on a 150-acre section of land. From the 1890s up to that time, this was the site of a picnic park known as Hanover Park. The biggest social event in the history of Hanover Park occurred on Saturday, August 18, 1894: the Eleventh Annual Caledonian Games, sponsored by the Caledonian Clubs from Pittston and Wilkes-Barre. Several thousand persons were in attendance, and 31 prizes, valued at $117.00, were awarded to the winners in athletic events and dancing contests.

Commander Louis N. Kuenhnle of Atlantic City and George K. Brown were the two principal founders of this park, naming it after the summer house of King Louis XIV of France. "Sans souci" means "without care" or "care-free." Brown was the general manager of the park until Kuenhnle sold his interest to L. K. Barr in 1928. Bob and Nellie Barr were in charge of the park and soon brought in their relative, Edward J. Lee, to help.

The 1913 season opened with two new rides, "The Circle Wave" and "The Giggler." A new restaurant was opened and the dance pavilion was enlarged. Oppenheim's orchestra furnished music for the occasion. Manager Brown noted a total of 59 school picnics were booked for the month of June.

Because the park was so successful, Herman F. Phillips broke ground for 20 modern bungalow-style houses on the land adjacent to the park. The summer of 1925 saw the opening of the 500,000 gallon swimming pool. Ben Kupstas was the first life guard at this anthracite filtering system pool.

The 1928 season opened with a new roller coaster, the Bearcat. Life guard Kupstas was one of the passengers on the initial run. He stood up and was tossed from the car as it veered. Fortunately he was not seriously hurt. He did, however, stop playing football for Bucknell University at this time.

Animals were on exhibition in the park, which was illuminated by gas which was piped from a regional mine.

The rides operating during the 1957 season included: Bearcat roller coaster, dodgems, fly-o-plane, ferris wheel, pretzel, whip, train, bug caterpillar, jet fighter, pony cart, eight-car auto, boat, rocket, junior jet, carousel and the new attraction, a tilt-a-whirl.

A July 8, 1957 article in The Billboard, now called Amusement Business, noted that the park opened in that year on Easter Sunday, the earliest it had opened in 55 years. From this same article, we learn that the park had had 10 weeks of ideal operating weather; June 23 was the first washout of the season. Dances were also in full swing that season, with farm dances on Tuesday nights. Harry Wilkie and Carl Hanks were the callers. Professor Pat Finley directed the band for the old time dances on Friday nights, while Saturday evenings featured modern and polka dancing. Sunday nights had two area name bands alternating each week. Sheldon C. Wintermute, city editor and feature editor of the Sunday Independent joined the Sans Souci staff that year as promotion director. Manager Ed Lee Entrance Booth No. 9, Luna Park, Scranton, PA, with Seven Men and Two Women, All Standing. Photograph in the collection of Olwen (Ruch) Adler, Elmhurst, PA; copy print by Donald W. Powell, Carbondale and Chester, PA. The woman standing by the side of the booth is Curlifinia Thetosca Ruch. In 1980, Olwen (Ruch) Adler told Donald W. Powell that Curlifinia Thetosca Ruch worked at Luna Park, selling tickets at Entrance Booth No. 9. In her letter of December 4, 1977, to S. Robert Powell, Olwen (Ruch) Adler stated the following information about Curlifinia Thetosca Ruch: "Tossie Ruch was born after the Civil War. Her real name was Curlifinia Thetosca Ruch. She was a half-sister to William A. Ruch (01-14-1878--01-07-1955). Her mother died when she was 2 and her father remarried. Her mother taught school and Thetosca was an Indian name. Tossie Ruch was a Practical Nurse and I think she was present at the birth of all the children of your Grandmother Olivia (Reese) Powell (12-25-1885--05-08-1953). She also assisted at the birth of all the 5 Ruch children born to Olwen (Reese) Ruch (07-14-1879--10-05-1936). We all, including your father [Walter Silas Powell], called her Aunt Tossie. She often took care of us. She lived with Jack [Adler] and myself until her death."

was thrilled that not one of the 171 school picnics that were scheduled to take place in the park between May 19 and June 13 was cancelled because of bad weather. Ed Lee convinced the Hanover Amusement Company to get three new rides for the 1958 season, and to institute a five-year modernization program for the sixtieth anniversary, in 1962.

In 1963 the company name was changed to Sans Souci Realty Company, with the purchase of 53 acres at a cost of $122,000. After its 68th season, the park closed (1970). The dance pavilion closed in 1972. The park was sold for $360,000, which included 46.6 acres. In addition, Blue Coal Corporation donated 50 additional acres. Razing of the park for the ten million dollar Hanover Area Middle-Senior High School started in May, 1975. The contractor was John Baloga. The school itself was built where the dance hall stood, and the stadium is southwest of the old ballroom.

A New Jersey man paid $500 for the Bearcat roller coaster, but then stopped payment on it. Interestingly, a game stand continued to operate right up to the arrival of the wrecker's ball. The school district received $100 monthly from one concessionaire who sponsored weekly games as a pastime for area senior citizens.

VALLEY VIEW PARK, Inkerman (Jenkins Township).

This park was built by the Laurel Line on land leased from the Pennsylvania Coal Company in 1904. The park catered to patrons living between Scranton and Wilkes-Barre. David Galvin was the first manager of the park, which had previously been known as Clipper Park and Inkerman Grove.

Attractions included a 60' X 100' dance pavilion, merry-go-round, shooting gallery, penny arcade, swings, picnic shelters and a baseball diamond. Moonlight picnics were a popular feature of this park. Cars were auctioned off every year as a part of the promotion of this park.

In May 1928, the park was leased to Frank Killian and Edmund J. Granahan, both of Inkerman.

The park closed in 1941. A portion of the park was strip mined in 1945.

WOOLFE'S GROVE, Sylvan Lake, near Silkworth.

According to Peter Woolfe, Jr., this park was constructed in 1933 "20 miles from nowhere." Attractions included a merry-go-round, ferris wheel, mini railroad, four kiddie rides, swimming pool, roller skating rink, boating, large dance pavilion, kiddie playground and picnic groves. It was the scene of many family outings.

Peter Woolfe, Jr. later took over the park, which, due to personal reasons, closed in 1965. The park was heavily vandalized after it closed.

OTHER PARKS

Three other parks in northeastern Pennsylvania have been identified. They are: (1) Rumbles, Drums; (2) Lake Carey, in Wyoming County; and (3) Happy Land, Shickshinny. Nothing has, as yet, been learned about these parks.

KNOEBEL'S GROVE: THE FIRST HALF CENTURY

By Christopher Paul

In the 1920s, a favorite swimming hole and picnic spot in southern Columbia County was located on Roaring Creek, at the farm of Henry Knoebel. So many people used the spot that it gave Henry Knoebel an idea of how to add to his family's income, and he put in a sand bathing beach, fenced off the creek around the beach and the hole, and charged people 5¢ for use of the area. In 1926, he purchased a merry-go-round and two kiddie rides. From these beginnings grew an amusement park, Knoebel's Grove.

The first few years, some rides were added along with a restaurant, dance hall, penny arcade and numerous cottages. By 1929, the swimming hole was so frequently crowded that it became necessary to construct a concrete swimming pool nearby.

Business was doing well until the "Great Depression" of the 1930s, and it affected Knoebel's Grove the same as everyone else. It was not until the 1940s that major improvements were begun. During this time, the present "old" area of the park was developed. Such rides as the Dodgem cars, ferris wheel, motor boats, steam train, Lindy loop, whip, Traver "strato-ship," and a new merry-go-round were installed, along with expanded picnic facilities. The 1940s also saw the building of a new restaurant, a combination roller skating rink/dance hall, and the enlargement of the pool facilities (a three-level diving tower and a new bathhouse with two thousand lockers) and pool (250,000 gallons).

In the 1950s and 1960s, many older rides were replaced, and a new 250-site campground was completed, but it was not until the early 1970s that any real expansion was started. Before this time, nearly all of the park was located to the eastern side of the creek, but now rides were placed on the opposite side. This produced much the same appearance that we see at the present time.

Today, with thirty rides and twelve games, Knoebel's Grove is one of northeastern Pennsylvania's top attractions. The park's grounds are filled with trees and flower beds. The patrons can bring a picnic lunch and spend the day on such rides as the Jet Star, an Intamin-Schwarzkopf steel roller coaster, The Haunted Mansion (a dark ride rated as one of the best anywhere) or The Cosmotron (a unique light and sound ride). If you are looking for something a little milder, try The Pioneer Train (a 1 1/4 mile trip through the forest) or The Country Bear Jamboree (an animated show performed by hillbilly bears).

Knoebel's Grove has, therefore, during its first half century, grown from nothing more than a swimming hole, to a small, local park, to a good, medium-sized park. It will be interesting to see what changes will take place over the next fifty years.

BERNESCO PARK

By Christine Bower

Jerome Pifer, who built Bernesco Park at the end of the Berwick-Nescopeck Bridge, was a doctor and had to get out of the business of doctoring. He purchased a merry-go-round and put it in Hazle Park in Hazleton. He attempted to buy the park and when he could not, he moved this ride to Columbia Park. He tried the same thing there and that didn't work either, so he built his own park, Bernesco.

The park's main building was on two levels. On the upper level was a skating rink/dance hall. On the lower level was a bowling alley/penny arcade/shooting gallery. In 1928, a pool was built.

At one time, he brought back two alligators from Florida. He had an aquarium built, with a wire fence around it. The alligators, needless to say, didn't like their accommodations, and escaped into the Susquehanna River. Several days later, they were found and killed.

Bernesco Park was largely destroyed by the flood of 1936.

NOTES ON EVERGREEN PARK

By Charles K. Stumpf

The Evergreen Hotel was built by Kemp in . In 1903, the Wilkes-Barre & Hazleton began operations with a stop at North St. Johns, near the Hotel. The railway system's power plant was located at St Johns, where an abundant supply of water was readily available. In 1907, the power plant was expanded and heavier rails were also laid. The Wilkes-Barre & Hazleton remained in operation through 1933. Around the hotel was a beautifully wooded grove and this was turned into a popular picnic grove. Some recreational facilities were also installed. It is reported that Alvan Markle, who had developed Hazle Park at Hazleton, was interested in obtaining Evergreen Park and turning it into a park which rivaled Hazle Park in size and scope. The owner of Evergreen Park was not interested in selling.

For the 1927 season, Evergreen Park gained a new owner, William Polgrean, who made many improvements to the hotel, dance hall and picnic grove. New outdoor furnaces and ovens were installed. The grand opening of the season took place on May 30, 1927. Frankie Carr and His Bell Hops, a highly popular dance band from Freehold, supplied music for the dancers. Each season an "Old Home Day" was held at the park and brought visitors from many parts of the country. A merry-go-round was added for the children's enjoyment. It was the only large amusement ride ever used in Evergreen Park.

The next owners of the park were Pete and Esther Salutko. The Hotel burned to the ground. Mr. Salutko cleared the park of many of its beautiful trees. The old dance hall was converted into Club Evergreen, which had its grand opening on October 8, 1940.

During the late 1940s, the Park came into its greatest period of glory, when the management was assumed by Frank P. Mazzo, Sr. An outdoor stage was constructed, with many rows of bleachers for spectators. Many of the top country and western entertainers were booked for personal appearances and brought overflowing crowds to the park. Evergreen Park had a grand reopening on July 27, 1947, with the opening attraction being "The Lone Star Ranger with His Wonder Horse Silver." When the park opened for the 1948 season on June 27th, the main attraction was a personal appearance by the highly popular local radio favorites, Texas Slim Rogers and His Pals of the Purple Sage. Dances continued in the pavilion. Stage shows were featured every Sunday afternoon and evening, and sometimes on other days of the week. Bingo games were also held in the dance hall. Top name attractions continued at Evergreen Park through the mid-1950s--drawing capacity crowds.

During the late 1950s, an auto race speedway was added to the park. After Mr. Mazzo gave up booking stage shows, auto races and dances continued, but the park fell into disrepair. During the late 1970s, Club Evergreen was converted into a night spot called The Woodshed Lounge, owned by Dominic Palumbo. In 1980 the Lounge and 3 1/2 acres of park grounds were put up for sale. The Lounge burned to the ground on Sunday, April 12, 1981. Arson was suspected.

NEWTON LAKE AMUSEMENT PARK

By S. Robert Powell

We went to Newton Lake Amusement Park at least once a year when we were kids. The occasion was the annual "Kids' Picnic," which was sponsored by the city of Carbondale. On that day, early in the morning, the trucks full of kids would all go by our house on Route 106 between Carbondale and Newton Lake. A holiday mood prevailed, and we could always hear the trucks coming before we could see them. Every conceivable kind of truck was pressed into service for the occasion. I most clearly recall the large coal trucks and dump trucks, which were full of kids who were singing and yelling and generally having a wonderful time. We never went up to Newton Lake in the trucks. Rather, we would follow along later in the family car.

I remember three rides in particular: the merry-go-round, the roller coaster and the whip. The whip was my favorite ride in the Park. The roller coaster was along the side of the Lake, out in the direction of Newton Mud. The merry-go-round was a very large one. It seems to me it was larger than any merry-go-round I have seen since that time. That impression could, of course, be the result of my comparing my child-perspective of the Newton Lake merry-go-round with my adult-perspective of merry-go-rounds I have known subsequent to my childhood. Perhaps not. I recall that we, my brothers and I, would go on the merry-go-round only after we had gone on most of the other rides in the Park. The merry-go-round was not nearly as exciting as the other rides. I think we went on it in order to rest. Today, I always head straight for the merry-go-round whenever I am in a park that has one. One of the attractive features of the merry-go-round is that, depending on one's mood, one can ride (1) a horse that goes up and down, (2) a stationary horse, or (3) in one of the chariots. Very young children, when they are taken on the merry-go-round by their parents, very frequently ride the stationary horses. Older children and most adults invariably seek out the horses that go up and down. The chariots, it would appear, are the first choice of only a very small percentage of those persons who ride merry-go-rounds. Whenever I ride a merry-go-round today, I always sit in a chariot, in the back seat. Last summer at Coney Island, on three successive Saturdays, I rode the merry-go-round five times in succession on each of those Saturdays. During only two of those fifteen rides were there other riders in the chariots on the merry-go-round at Coney Island. For all fifteen rides, I had a chariot all to myself and was, I must say, delighted that that was the case.

Why am I fascinated by merry-go-rounds? Why is anyone fascinated by a merry-go-round? Why is Derek Shaw fascinated by roller coasters? Why is anyone fascinated by roller coasters? What, in a word, is the fascination of amusement parks? Part of the fascination is related to the fact, doubtless, that amusement parks abound in superlatives: the fastest, the biggest, the longest, the most terrifying, the most punishing, the most death defying, the most gaudy, the most disorienting, the most out of the ordinary, etc. Circuses, too, abound in superlatives. The main difference between the two being, it would appear, the fact that at a circus one is a spectator of superlatives, whereas at an amusement park one participates in the superlatives. Part of the fascination of amusement parks is explained, in all probability, by the fact that one can participate in what appear to be high-risk situations, knowing full well that everything will turn out OK, e.g., the train on a Schwarzkopf/Intamin shuttle loop with vertical reverse points ("Greezed Lightin'" at Astroland) looks like it should fall off the track at the top of the loop, but it does not. Part of the fascination of amusement parks is also explained by the fact that at amusement parks we can, without the slightest fear of any kind of reproach from anyone, participate in activities which, in the world outside of the amusement park, are regarded as either illegal or impossible: while we are at the wheel of our bumper car ("Dodg'em"), it is perfectly legal to ram our car into any or all of the other cars on the road; the cars on the whip spin and whirl and should, were they a part of the "real" world, fly off the track, but they don't. Similarly, we are fascinated by amusement parks because of the surreality of many of their components: the overt and intense artificiality of the horses on the merry-go-round; as we walk through the funhouse, walls and floors and ceilings and doors disappear and reappear before our very eyes. Part of the fascination of amusement parks, in addition, is related to the fact that while we participate in the superlatives of amusement parks we are, at the same time, running away from home: we mount the gaudy quadripeds on the merry-go-round (or take our place in a chariot) and gallop (figuratively) off into the sunset; we take our place in a roller coaster car, and before we know it, we are coursing (figuratively) at full speed over hill and dale, without a care in the world.

Given those qualities of amusement parks, is it any wonder that we are fascinated by them? Certainly not. Given those qualities of amusement parks, is it any wonder that I have, as I type this text, a desire to visit the site of the first amusement park that I knew as a child (Newton Lake Amusement Park, Greenfield Township, Lackawanna County)? Certainly not.

PLACES OF AMUSEMENT

In the 1900-1 Carbondale [Pa.] City Directory (page 190), the following places of amusement are listed for the city of Carbondale:

Academy of Music, S Main c Seventh av

Grand Opera House, 51 N Main

AMUSEMENT PARK AT TOBYHANNA?

B. Derek Shaw (01-13-1982): "Some people believe that there was an amusement park at Tobyhanna."

LAKE LODORE AMUSEMENT PARK

On August 22, 1981, Verna A. (Curtis) Varcoe, of Waymart, PA, stated:

"There used to be an amusement park at Lake Lodore. I went there as a child. Ensign [Varcoe] and I went there after we were married."

In an article entitled "Calvary United Methodist Church 125th anniversary" that was published in The Carbondale (Pa.) News (Wednesday, September 23, 1981, p. 12) is the following paragraph of information about Lake Lodore Amusement Park:

"About the turn of the [twentieth] century and after the demise of the D&H Gravity Railroad, Waymart's population was about 400. The D&H steam railroad served the area and many persons rode the rails to visit the popular Lake Lodore Amusement Park."

AMUSEMENT PARKS AND STREETCAR LINES

The history of America's amusement parks and the history of America's streetcar lines are inseparable. As Ink Mendelsohn of the Smithsonian News Service points out in his article, "Carousels caught in vicious circle" (The Wayne Independent, July 4, 1981, page 11), carousels, as well as amusement parks, were built by the streetcar companies to encourage the public to use their lines:

"Once, thousands of carousels were to be found on America's fairgrounds, playgrounds and beaches. They were bright lures dangled at the end of streetcar lines, as trolley companies built amusement parks to encourage riders."

THE FIRST AMERICAN ROLLER COASTER

From "Coastin' Through Time A History of Roller Coasters" (published by The Philadelphia Toboggan Company), we learn the following information about the first American roller coaster: "Almost 70 years after the development of the first roller coaster in Paris [1804], an inclined mining railway located in Mauch Chunk, Pennsylvania was modified to transport passengers to a mountain peak. Although the cars dropped at a less than alarming rate, the ride was quite a stimulating and scenic experience. As a result, the Mauch Chunk Switchback became a popular tourist attraction."

The American Coaster Enthusiasts is a group of approximately 1,000 persons, of all ages and diverse backgrounds, who share a common interest in the roller coaster. The organization is devoted to riding, studying the history of, protecting and preserving this unusual amusement ride. Every roller coaster is unique, and only very rarely is the form of any given roller coaster duplicated. Nowhere in the world have roller coasters developed to the extent that they have in the United States.

Members' interests in roller coasters take many forms--some photograph them, some build models, some write the history of early coasters, some collect postcards, photographs and memorabilia of existing and defunct coasters. Almost all members enjoy riding roller coasters.

The magazine, Coaster World, published four times a year, contains coaster-oriented articles, pictures and news. From time to time, the "ACE News," a single sheet containing news and announcements of some immediacy, is also published. A national convention is held each summer. The 1982 convention will be held in June at Hershey Park, Hershey, PA. In 1978 the convention was held at Busch Gardens' Old Country in Williamsburg, VA; in 1979 it was held at King's Island, near Cincinnati, OH; in 1980 it was held at Kennywood Park, Pittsburgh, PA; in 1981 it was held at Six Flags over Texas, near Dallas, and at Astro-world, Houston, TX.

The American Coaster Enthusiasts was organized in 1978. For further information and/or an application for membership, write to either:

LAKE WINOLA / NEWTON LAKE

Walter S. Powell (Carbondale, PA) told S. Robert Powell the following on 08-30-1981:

"The Canoe Club is at Lake Winola. Uncle Walter [Reese] was one of its charter members. The Winola House is on the other side of the lake from the Canoe Club. Myer Greenfield bought the Winola House about 25 years ago. It was a summer boarding house. The Northern Electric went there from Scranton. On the same side of the lake as the Winola House, there was an amusement park. I don't remember whether or not there was a roller coaster at Lake Winola. There was a roller coaster at Newton Lake. Annie Wagner could tell you all about it. She lives out by the entrance to where the Newton Lake Park used to be."

STEAMERS

Helen R. Powell (Carbondale, PA) told S. Robert Powell the following on 01-08-1982:

"The lakes used to have steamers. There were steamers on Lake Lodore, Newton Lake and Crystal Lake."

LAKE LODORE

LAKE LODORE AMUSEMENT PARK

The following information on Lake Lodore and on Lake Lodore Amusement Park is given on page 143 of Centennial and Illustrated Wayne County. Historical, Biographical, Industrial, Picturesque, Commercial, Financial, Agricultural. Second Edition. (Honesdale, PA; Benj. F. Haines, Publisher, 1902):

"LAKE LODORE—Among the numberless mountains of Wayne county there are seventy-six lakes. The largest of these, as well as the most beautiful, is Lake Lodore. It is approached by the Honesdale branch of the Delaware & Hudson railroad which, by a gentle grade, winds down the mountain south of Farview, affording the passenger a view of surpassing loveliness and grandeur. Nothing on the line of the Delaware & Hudson railroad between Wilkesbarre and the Adirondack mountains match the scenery of this ride, and the excursionist's ecstasy is not yet spent when he is landed in the shade of a magnificent grove on the shores of Lake Lodore. Few belts of woodland hereabouts have been so well preserved as this. It is still primitive forest with many trees several feet in diameter. The undergrowth has been cleared, leaving pleasant greensward intersected by a stream which is spanned by rustic bridges. Scattered through the great grove are refreshment stands, summer kitchens, swings, seats, etc., all connected by serpentine paths and smooth roads protected from the sun's rays by overhanging boughs. At Lake Lodore all is cool and comfortable even on the hottest days in midsummer.

One of the chief features of the grove is the dance pavilion, the largest and most artistically designed in this entire region. It is two stories in height with sliding glass windows on the second story. A balcony containing three rows of seats extends around the entire building. The orchestra gallery consists of an elevated platform or stage reaching out from an alcove in the middle of the eastern side. A sea-shell shaped sounding board behind the orchestra rolls back the melody to every part of the great pavilion. The floor of the pavilion is of highly polished wood. It is 60 X 126 feet, and not a single pillar or column obstructs the entire area of 7,560 square feet. The building is constructed so that it may be closed up and used as a great convention hall or a magnificent theatre.

Through the vista of the trees in the grove is seen the placid bosom of the water. The lake has an area of 300 acres and an ever-winding shore line of more than five and a half miles. Its scenery varies from gently sloping meadows to precipitous cliff, from the top of which there is a sweeping view of mountains and valley twenty miles north and fifteen miles to the south. Two large and elegantly finished naphtha launches glide over the waters of Lake Lodore and hundreds of row boats dot its silvery surface. Naphtha launches are the safest and most comfortable craft afloat, so safe that engineers of naphtha launches are not required to take out government licence as are engineers of steam launches and other boats run by power. The row boats are light, safe and easy of manipulation.

Lake Lodore is owned and operated by the Lake Lodore Improvement Company, a corporation organized under the laws of Pennsylvania. Its capital stock is $150,000. This Company owns also Elk Lake and Keen's Lake. The stockholders are all residents of Wayne, Lackawanna and Luzerne counties. The directors are Charles Robinson, Scranton, president; M. W. O'Boyle, Pittston, first vice-president; Edmund J. Robinson, Scranton, second vice-president; James J. Croghan, Scranton, treasurer; John H. Jordan, Scranton, secretary and general manager; William H. Malia, Scranton, assistant general manager; Patrick McNally, Honesdale; John H. Foy, Pittston, and R. W. Jordan, Scranton."

LAKE LODORE

LAKE LODORE AMUSEMENT PARK

Contained in the document archive of Kurt A. Reed, Lake Ariel, PA, is "A BRIEF HISTORY OF THIS REGION AND CAMP LODORE" that was prepared by the Salvation Army. The following information about Lake Lodore and Lake Lodore Amusement Park is given on page 2 of that two-page history:

"Water supply or 'feeder' lakes had to be constructed in order to assure adequate water level in the [D&H] canal. Stanton's Pond (Lake Ladore), 265 acres, was constructed in 1832. The D&H Canal Company had brought 200 Irishmen to mine coal. The mines were not ready so the company put them to work building Stanton's Pond. Water from this pond was released to supplement water in the boat basin at Honesdale.

Passenger service was inaugurated in 1877 from Honesdale to Carbondale. Because of the unusual scenic beauty--Moosic Mountain (now Farview Area) and Stanton's Pond--this area quickly gained fame. Stanton's Pond became Lake Ladore. Lake Ladore Improvement Company developed what was known as an excursionist's delight. Scattered through the shady groves at Ladore were refreshment stands, summer kitchens, swings and seats. Major features were the Dance Pavilion (present Activity Building), and Carousel (present Dining Hall). The Carousel is still in operation at Newton Lake. Visitors would get off the open passenger cars where the Hilltop Cabins are now located. They walked to the Pavilion. Some passengers would unload from passenger cars below the dam and ride a stern-wheel sightseeing boat from the dam to the dock at the Carousel...

The 'Amusement Park' at Ladore must have operated until about 1915. About 1920, St. Rose in Carbondale converted the excursion area into a summer camp (Camp Coffy). In 1935 two women acquired the property and began operating a summer camp, Camp With-A-Wind. The Pen-Del Division of the Salvation Army bought the camp in 1967 and began its first summer camp here in 1968."

CAROUSELS

In 1981, there were 284 all-wood, hand-carved, carousels in the United States. One of those carousels is owned by Hillside Park Ceramics, owned by Jim and Eva Landers, Honesdale, PA. It is a Herschell-Spillman carousel that Jim and Eva Landers purchased in 1969 from a travelling carnival in Fitchburg, MA. The carousel is 40 feet in diameter, with 24 Herschell-Spillman wooden horses and two chariots. For more information on this carousel, see the article entitled "Honesdale has rare, handcarved wooden carousel," by Richard Reiff-Meiman, that was published in The Wayne Independent, Saturday, July 4, 1981, p. 1.

Seventeen of the 284 all-wood, hand-carved carousels in the United States are located in the state of Pennsylvania. Only three states have more carousels than Pennsylvania: New York (32), California (28), and Ohio (18). For a great deal of information on carousels, see the article entitled "Carousels caught in vicious circle" that was written by Ink Mendelsohn of the Smithsonian News Service and published in The Wayne Independent, Saturday, July 4, 1981, p. 11.

The Jet Star Coaster is one of two coasters in operation at this park, the history of which, by B. Derek Shaw, is given in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA. Management reserves the right to revoke the license granted by this ticket by refunding purchase price."

Printed at the center of the bottom of the front of this post card is "FAIRVIEW [sic], CARBONDALE, PA." Printed in the lower left corner of the front of this card is the name of the store that sold the post card: VAN BERGEN'S STATIONERY STORE CARBONDALE, PA." This post card, which was never sent through the mail, was printed by the Albertype Co., Brooklyn, NY. When passenger service on the Gravity Railroad between Carbondale and Honesdale was inaugurated in 1859, Farview Park, a stop along the route of the Gravity Railroad, very quickly became a popular tourist attraction. Thousands of passengers took the Gravity Railroad to Farview where, from atop the Moosic Mountain, they picnicked and enjoyed the scenery. The Wayne County photographer, William A. Doud (see Volume I, Number 4, May 21, 1980, p. 8, of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA) opened a gallery at Farview in 1885.

Boating Scene at Rocky Glen. Color post card, in the collection of the Russell Homestead, Carbondale, PA. Printed in the upper left corner of the front of this post card is the following: "Boating Scene at Rocky Glen." Printed in the lower right corner of the front of this post card is the following: "2860." The post mark on this card is as follows: "SCRANTON PA JUL 8 1910 5 PM." This card, to which a one-cent stamp was attached (green, Benjamin Franklin in profile, facing left), was sent to "Miss Bertha Salzman / Honesdale, / Penna" by "Marion." The message on the card reads as follows: "Say Bertha, I see you kept your word about the wedding. We went down to see Irvin Hartman's wedding and I didn't see you. Only your mother & father & your little brother. I thought you would change your mind. Marion."

GENEALOGICAL AND LOCAL HISTORY NOTES

Presented on this page, and continued on page 24, are various genealogical and local history data. These data, it is our opinion, are potentially useful to genealogists, historians and social scientists who are engaged in research on either individuals and families from northeastern Pennsylvania or the history of northeastern Pennsylvania. These data, in addition, are intrinsically interesting and can, therefore, be regarded as ends unto themselves. Presented on page 23 is information on Volume I of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA GENEALOGICAL AND LOCAL HISTORY REPRINTS. It is our intention to publish annually, both in a hard-cover edition and in a microfilm edition, one volume in this series. Given the fact that this series is an outgrowth of the "Genealogical and Local History Notes" column that has been published in this historical quarterly since Volume II, Number 3 (February 18, 1981), it is altogether fitting and proper that a notice of this new series of reprints be published in this column.

NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA GENEALOGICAL AND LOCAL HISTORY REPRINTS

Volume I

WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY

1981

SHEFFIELD PUBLICATIONS, INC.
POST OFFICE BOX 161
CARBONDALE, PA. 18407

Introduction

Reprinted in this volume are seven out-of-print books that are not only intrinsically interesting but also potentially useful to genealogists, historians, and social scientists who are engaged in research on either individuals and families from northeastern Pennsylvania or the history of northeastern Pennsylvania.

We have chosen to reprint these seven books for one reason: they are the standard works on the topics in question.

Three of these books have been out of print for one hundred years or more: (1) History of the Township of Mount Pleasant..., published in 1856, (2) The Descendants of Joseph Loomis..., published in 1875, and (3) Catalogue of "Ridge Farm" Herd..., date of publication is not given on the published copy, but internal evidence suggests that this catalogue was published in 1881 or 1882; the copy of this work in the Ridge Farm Library is the only extant copy of this important catalogue that is known to us.

Centennial History First Presbyterian Church..., although published in 1929, was published in a very limited edition and was out of print shortly after it was published. Ancestry of Ora Loomis Russell... was privately published in 1955 and was never available to the general public. It is included herein because Ora Loomis Russell and Edna Loomis Loomis are descendants of pioneer families of northeastern Pennsylvania, and many of the descendants of Ora Loomis Russell presently reside in northeastern Pennsylvania. The Descendants of Joseph Loomis..., a monumental genealogical work on all accounts, is herein included because many of the descendants of Joseph Loomis settled in northeastern Pennsylvania in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, and because many of their descendants presently reside in northeastern Pennsylvania.

A Comparison of Lord Chesterfield's Letters to His Son with the Conduct Books of the Sixteenth Century is included herein because its author, Edna P. Loomis, was born and raised in Clinton Township, Wayne County, PA.

JOHN JERMYN. (Photograph No. 90, Stoddard, p. 23); "Born Suffolk, England, October 27, 1825--May 29, 1902. Educated London, England. Married Susan Knight, October 20, 1851. Coal Operator. Director First National Bank; Miners & Mechanics' Bank, Carbondale; Consolidated Water Supply Co. Director in various other corporations." (Stoddard, p. vi).

GEORGE B. JERMYN

GEORGE B. JERMYN. (Photograph No. 91, Stoddard, p. 23); "Born Scranton, Pa., May 9, 1862. Educated Granville, N.Y. Married Annie E. Adams, April 20, 1892. Coal Operator. Secretary and Treasurer Consolidated Water Supply Co., The Great Bend Water Co. Executor John Jermyn Estate. Director in various other corporations." (Stoddard, p. vi).

Note: For additional information on the Jermyn family, see the two-part history of the family that was published in THE CARBONDALE (PA.) NEWS in 1981. Part I: "John Jermyn's Life A Classic American Success Story," March 11, 1981, p. 10; Part II: "Jermyn's Children Gained Success in Their Own Right," March 18, 1981, p. 5. Two photographs accompany Part I of this history: one of John Jermyn as a young man, and one of John Jermyn shortly before his death (this is the same photograph of John Jermyn that is given here). Two photographs accompany Part II of this history: one of John Jermyn and his 6 sons (George, Walter, Joseph, Rollo, Frank and Edmund or "E.B."), and one of St. James Episcopal Church on Washington Street and East Jermyn Road in the borough of Jermyn (this church was organized by John Jermyn). This two-part history was written by Bill Savage on the basis of information presented by Rev. William P. Lewis in a lecture at the Catlin House (The Lackawanna Historical Society building), Scranton, PA, in early March, 1981.

THE VILLAGE OF UNDERWOOD

On January 9, 1982, S. Robert Powell telephoned Mike Grayson of 409 Grant Street, Olyphant, PA 18447 (phone: 717-489-1933). Mike Grayson reported the following information on the village of Underwood:

"There is information in the Olyphant Centennial book on Underwood. The book was published about five years ago. Bobby McDonough and I did the research on Underwood and Olyphant for the book. In doing the research, I talked with Claire Browning Perry, who used to work in the village store in Underwood. I also located the foundation of the bowling alley in Underwood. The Clark family, who live on Marshwood Road, know a lot about Underwood."

UNDERWOOD COLLIERY

Mr. Hartford Reed (Lake Ariel, PA) told Walter S. Powell (Carbondale, PA) the following information on January 9, 1982:

"We furnished the sawed cap pieces and ties for the tracks for Underwood colliery. We also furnished some props and lumber to rebuild the coal cars. Fourteen or fifteen hundred people worked in the mines at Underwood."

On November 14, 1981, John V. Buberniak (Carbondale, PA) told S. Robert Powell (Carbondale, PA):

"Ed Baka, Senior, used to work at the colliery in Underwood. He lives in Eynon."

On November 15, 1981, Walter S. Powell (Carbondale, PA) told S. Robert Powell (Carbondale, PA):

"Clarks Patch is in Marshwood. Mr. and Mrs. Billy Clark lived there. Billy Clark was an amateur boxer. Pilger's had a barroom in Marshwood. The Kaylor family and the Travis family are related to the Pilger family. Harry Kaylor lived in Jessup by the railroad tracks. The Travis family lived in Underwood."

HARVEY'S LAKE

For a great deal of information of Harvey's Lake, the largest natural lake in Pennsylvania (the Lake covers 1,285 acres), see the article "Benjamin Harvey Discovers A Lake" that was published on page 32 of the Citizens' Voice, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Friday, July 24, 1981. S. Robert Powell is pleased to here thank Mrs. Helen Kelley of Holland, Pa., for allowing him to borrow and copy this clipping from her collection of historical documents.

The research necessary to write the article was undertaken by Glenn Grosek and Joseph Hoinski; the article was made available to the Citizens' Voice by the Harvey's Lake Historical Society.

LETTERS RECEIVED

On December 10, 1981, William B. Weinstein (214 Mulberry Street, New York, NY 10012) wrote the following letter to Edwin M. Sheffield:

Dear Mr. Sheffield:

I enjoy your publication a good deal. Mr. S. Robert Powell's meticulous forays into the past, themselves intrinsically interesting, cast broad illumination over the present, the latest issue [Volume III, Number 2] about Pioneer Day offering a contrast to an experience I had in your locale this August, which I would like to share with you.

I arrived in Carbondale on August 26 on a bicycle, having entered Pennsylvania that day at Lanesboro. I have learned so much about northeastern Pennsylvania from your periodical that I wished to see it firsthand. To my pleasure and surprise, I arrived on the second of Carbondale's revival of Pioneer Days, whose focal point was an encampment around your beautiful City Hall, with a carnival atmosphere and lots of good food. I live in New York City on a street which has hosted a fair every September for the last 75 years, a celebration whose significance has become a perfunctory excuse to make as much money as possible during the ten-day festivities. I naively assumed that all of the people of the region shared the respect for the past which is your paper's hallmark, doubly so if they bothered to celebrate their region's pioneers so bountifully. Everyone seemed to enjoy himself and herself, and I was no exception, tasting wonderful food of all kinds, and winning a goldfish, and $5.42 at bingo.

Nevertheless, I learned from one of the concessionaires that the primary motive behind Carbondale's Pioneer Days was to make money (a worthy enough aim during the nation's present difficulties), not to celebrate the spirit which forged northeastern Pennsylvania out of the wilderness. Perhaps this was simply the opinion of one man; admittedly, one or two charitable enterprises were selling chances in order to benefit worthy causes. Nevertheless, a Pioneer Days whose major focus seemed to be the anticipated visit of the Lone Ranger, with no time set aside, that I could see, to summon up the pioneers whose spirits gave the present celebration its name, does not seem a worthy heir to the kind of Pioneer Day presented in your recent issue. Perhaps on other days the organizers of the current Pioneer Days set aside moments of respect and reflection typical of the twenty-five-odd gatherings detailed in your pages.

The documents from these events make clear that the men and women assembled over these years not merely to recall the existence of the pioneers (yet living in the memory of many of them), but to preserve our understanding of the strength of character that made them pioneers. Equally impressive is the breadth and literary quality of these reminiscences, by Sheldon Norton, Wilford M. Peck, E. M. Peck ("The Old Tin Lantern"), Mrs. Emeline Ledyard Peck, Grandison Loomis, and Kenneth Singer (in a latter-day gathering of fact and anecdote), to name a few. Many of the people they describe stand out as individuals. I would certainly like to have met Michael Grinnell, as well as Rufus, though whether I would have stood the latter's scrutiny I cannot say.

I would also like to thank Mr. Powell for his tribute to Lois Tryphenia (Norton) Curtis and Dwight William Rude. His subjects came alive in this address to one otherwise unfamiliar with them. In passing I would also like to note the numerous references in the text to the Gettysburg Address, which could hardly have failed to stir those present to hear it.

Speaking for one reader, may I add that I would be very interested in reading issues of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA devoted exclusively to the topics of the life of children (your issue on schools was wonderful) during the period of settlement, or to the special contribution women made to the pioneer life. I am sure there are many unsung heroines of these times, as wife, mother, or perhaps in roles we are presently seeing more readily.

Thank you again for the ongoing pleasure of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

Sincerely,

[signed] William B. Weinstein

The letter that Anne M. O'Malley (305 Chester Road, Syracuse, NY 13219) wrote to Sheffield Publications in November, 1981, contains the following two paragraphs:

"My father, Charles Paul O'Malley, lived in Honesdale, in fact, he was born there. His maternal ancestors lived in Honesdale since mid-1800s. They were: Francis Doherty (Dougherty) and Elizabeth Cavanaugh, his grandparents. They are buried in St. John's Catholic Cemetery in Honesdale. Francis Doherty worked (owned?) on a tugboat on the D&H canal for years.

His father was brought up in Hawley, having arrived there in 1869 from Ireland. His name was Martin J. O'Malley. He worked on the railroad but I can't discover much else about his life previous to his marriage in Honesdale to Mary Doherty."

Do any of the readers of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA have any information on the O'Malley, Doherty or Cavanaugh families of Honesdale, or information on the ancestors of those families? If so, please write to Anne M. O'Malley at the address given above.

GENEALOGICAL AND LOCAL HISTORY NOTES

From the Editor:

In Volume II, Number 3 of this quarterly it was announced that Part II of the history of Maplewood Cemetery would be published in Volume III, Number 3 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA. Unavoidable scheduling conflicts made it impossible for us to follow that schedule. For that reason, Part II of the history of Maplewood Cemetery is presented herein, and the history of the amusement parks, of the past and present, in northeastern Pennsylvania was published in the last issue of this quarterly. We regret that it was necessary to rearrange the schedule, and hope that none of our readers were inconvenienced by the change.

With the publication of Part II of S. Robert Powell's history of Maplewood Cemetery in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, the interment records of the oldest and largest cemetery in Carbondale (the oldest incorporated city in Lackawanna County) are now accessible to all genealogists, historians and social scientists who are engaged in research on the history of northeastern Pennsylvania. Single copies of Part I of this history of Maplewood Cemetery are available from the publisher.

The response by readers to the last issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA was extraordinary. As frequently happens when the history of any given topic is published, additional information on that topic surfaces as soon as that history is in print. Such was the case with the history of the amusement parks in northeastern Pennsylvania that was published in the February 1982 issue of this quarterly. We have, therefore, included in the Genealogical and Local History Notes herein a large quantity of new information on amusement parks in northeastern Pennsylvania. This information was gathered and synthesized by B. Derek Shaw, who is, without doubt, the leading authority on amusement parks in northeastern Pennsylvania.

MAPLEWOOD CEMETERY (Part II)

This history of Maplewood Cemetery, Carbondale, Pennsylvania, in the period 1832-1892, was presented in Volume II, Number 3 (February 18, 1981) of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA. Presented in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA is the history of Maplewood Cemetery from 1893 to the present.

In the year in which we begin Part II of this history of Maplewood Cemetery, 1893, the city of Carbondale was in its prime. What was the state of the city of Carbondale in 1893? The following description of "Carbondale of Today" was published on pages 5 and 8 of the Anniversary Edition of The Carbondale Leader on May 18, 1893:

CARBONDALE OF TODAY.

"Carbondale today is an active community of 12,000 inhabitants. Since 1886 within the city limits the population has increased fully fifty per cent, while just over the city line in the contiguous territory the number of residents has quadrupled during the same period. New collieries have been opened and the coal output has been more than doubled within six years. Four railroads centre in this city over which sixty-four passenger trains are run every day, viz., the Delaware & Hudson railroad, the New York, Lake Erie and Western railroad, the New York, Ontario & Western and the famous Gravity railroad over the Moosic mountains, all of which makes Carbondale an important railroad centre, with shipping facilities equal to any interior city in the state of Pennsylvania. The Hendrick Manufacturing company have just finished large additions to their machine shops and oil works. The Van Bergen & Co., foundry and machine works and a score of smaller establishments are located here and the owners of a large number of interests make this city headquarters. Two of the largest banking houses in this section are located here and the mercantile establishments are as large as any to be found in cities of the interior. Unlike most coal districts the central portion of this city is not undermined and the deeds for property in the business part of the city are made without the coal reserve clause.

During the past summer an electric street railway was constructed connecting this city with the suburban towns of Simpson on the north and Jermyon, Mayfield and Archbald on the south, which brings into market several tracts of land that will be speedily taken up and covered with dwellings. A low estimate of the population of the compactly built up district of which Carbondale is the centre would be 20,000 and judging the future by the past it is safe to predict that the population of the district will exceed 30,000 people when the next decennial census is taken. That many industries will be added to those in operation, during the next two years, is absolutely certain.

THE CITY'S SCHOOLS.

The City has most excellent schools. The new high school cost with the ground $41,500. It has the largest school library in the county, numbering over 1300 volumes. Seven teachers are employed at the high school. The average number of pupils in attendance at the present time is 176. The Belmont street school is one of the handsomest in the city and was completed during the past year at a cost of $21,000. The Farview street school just finished cost $7,500, and the White bridge school is valued at over $4,000.

BUILDING OPERATIONS.

An elegant new hotel, equipped with all the latest conveniences, will be erected this summer at a cost of $50,000. Several handsome new business structures are already under way, and will tend to further beautify the city. A new Methodist church is being erected at a cost of $40,000. A new Masonic hall will soon be commenced to cost $25,000. The new city hall now nearly completed is a commodious and imposing building, costing entire $50,000. The new public hospital to be opened during the coming month is a model institution of pleasing architecture and will cost $20,000. St. Rose convent is one of the largest Catholic institutions of the kind in this section and a magnificent chapel is now being added to the structure at a cost of ten thousand dollars.

The spirit of progress and prosperity spreads over all the city and the end is not yet. Carbondale has made great strides in the past few years and her future advancement will be even greater. She is at the door of the outlet to the great lakes and northern regions and the key of the situation in the coal traffic, situated 1100 feet above the sea level, in a remarkably healthy region no finer spot for home or business venture could be found."

Such was the state of the city of Carbondale in 1893. What can be said of Maplewood Cemetery in the early 1890s? The Trustees of Maplewood Cemetery, at their regular business meeting on August 24, 1892, reported that the Cemetery was just about full and that a new site in Carbondale for the burial of the dead would have to be soon found. In the newspaper account of that business meeting, published on page 4 of The Carbondale Leader on August 25, 1892, are the following two paragraphs:

"The old grave yard which forms the south end of Maplewood cemetery was set apart for the burial of the dead sixty years ago, the first interment having taken place in the year 1832. When the old plot was well nigh filled, what was then considered, a considerable piece of land, was added to the old burial place, and the trustees doubtless thought the new addition, would be ample to meet all demands for grave lots, that might be made for half a century.

At that time there was little prospect of the increase in population that has taken place during the past eight years and the trustees had fairly good reasons for believing as they did. With the increase in population and the proportionate increase in the death rate, came other changes that invariably follow the rapid growth of every community. The old time family plot of six places was considered too small and lot purchasers asked for four or five times the usual space, in order to have room for such improvements as they desired to make."

To meet the demand for grave lots in the Cemetery in the 1890s and thereafter, the Trustees acquired more land adjacent to the Cemetery. Maplewood Cemetery presently occupies the entire bluff between the Lackawanna River and present-day Cemetery Street (formerly Bluff Street), and extends from present-day Robinson Avenue (formerly Cemetery Street) to a point about midway between present-day Cherry and Chestnut Avenues.

In the period 1893-1982, no less than 3,496 persons were interred in Maplewood Cemetery. The interment records for those persons are given herein on pages 2-19.

RECORD OF INTERMENTS, &amp;c.

Given below are the interment records of Maplewood Cemetery for the period 1893-1982. The reader will note that in these records, unlike those for the period 1832-1892 (see Volume II, Number 3, February 18, 1981, of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA), the cause of death is not given for any of the persons interred in Maplewood Cemetery. This is not because that information is not known. Rather, the cause of death has here been omitted in order to protect the privacy of the immediate families of those persons interred in Maplewood Cemetery in the past ninety years. The ages of the persons listed below are reported in terms of years (column 1), months (column 2) and days (column 3). The abbreviation "s.b." in the age column means "still born."

GENEALOGICAL AND LOCAL HISTORY NOTES

Presented on this page, and continued on the following seven pages, are various genealogical and local history data. These data are potentially useful to genealogists, historians and social scientists who are engaged in research on either individuals and families from northeastern Pennsylvania or the history of northeastern Pennsylvania. These data, in addition, are intrinsically interesting and can, therefore, be regarded as ends unto themselves. All of the data on pages 20-25 were gathered by B. Derek Shaw of Scranton, whose history of the 27 amusement parks--of the past and present--in northeastern Pennsylvania was presented in Volume III, Number 3 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA. The data on pages 26-27 were gathered by S. Robert Powell.

Sterling's Million Dollar Coaster, Rocky Glen Park, Moosic, PA. The photograph reproduced above, and the four photographs on the following two pages, are all of Sterling's Million Dollar Coaster. All five photographs were taken by John Rygiel, Wyoming, PA, in August 1954, and are here reproduced with his permission. These photographs are all copyrighted by the Rygiel Studio of Photography, Wyoming, PA, and it is, therefore, unlawful to copy any or all of them by any means whatsoever without the permission of the photographer. The prints of these five photographs from which the copies shown here were reproduced were obtained from John Rygiel by B. Derek Shaw (Scranton, PA), whose history of the twenty-seven amusement parks--of the past and present--in northeastern Pennsylvania was presented in the February 17, 1982 issue (Volume III, Number 3) of this historical quarterly.

Printed on the back of the color post card of this roller coaster that was reproduced on page one of Volume III, Number 3 of this historical quarterly (post card in the collection of B. Derek Shaw, Scranton, PA) is the following information about this roller coaster: "STERLING'S MILLION DOLLAR COASTER was built in the winter of 1945 by Mae and Ben Sterling with mostly World War II Veteran labor. One of the world's largest Coasters, 4,700 ft. long, 96 ft. high at the highest point, this huge Coaster rode 1,000,000 men, women and children during the first 3 years of operation without as much as a scratch to anyone." This coaster was in operation until 1958.

Shown in this photograph, taken about 1917, in the port of the picnic grounds are the Shoot-the-Chutes and the steamboat landing with steamboat in port. An important history of the steamboats and gasoline launches that plied the waters of Harvey's Lake in the past is reprinted below.

STEAMERS AND LAUNCHES ON HARVEY'S LAKE

Reprinted below is a newspaper article (from an unidentified newspaper) by Harrison H. Smith, entitled "Lake Steamboat Rides Recalled." This newspaper article, which is in the collection of Attorney F. Charles Petrillo (95 Miner Street, Wilkes-Barre, PA 18702), is accompanied by two photographs: (1) "Acoma." Piloted by one of the earliest and best known lake navigators, "Cap" George Anderson, the "Acoma" provided many a thrill for young and old for nearly 30 years while they were vacationing or enjoying an outing at Harveys Lake; (2) "Na-To-Ma." Most majestic of all the lake steamers was the "Na-To-Ma," an Indian name meaning "Queen of the Waters," which could accommodate 300 passengers on its awning covered top decks and in the spacious cabins in the lower sections of the ship." Here, then, is that newspaper article:

LAKE STEAMBOAT RIDES RECALLED

by Harrison H. Smith

Memories of the "good old days" at Harveys Lake, when four coal-burning steamers used to carry thousands of merrymakers between the popular Picnic Grounds and the Oneonta Dock, which served the Street Car Terminal, are recalled as another jam-packed season of swimmers, picnics, motorists and boating enthusiasts is about to come to a close with the approach of Labor Day.

The hey-day of the Lake steamers existed from the time of the extension of electric car service to Harveys Lake in 1897, up until the late 1920's, when it was found that the automobile era had made such inroads on passenger traffic that gasoline launches were then substituted for a limited time.

"Shawnee" and "Rosalin"

At the turn of the century, the Lake Transit Company, of which Phil Raife was president, held a monopoly on steamer travel around Harveys Lake. Two boats, the old "Shawnee" and the "Rosalin," each with a capacity of 100 passengers, were the only steamers to ply the Lake waters, since the "Mistletoe," a small canvas-covered steam launch serving the Rhodes Hotel, and the "City Charter," owned by Captain Bond and connecting with the Lehigh Valley Railroad depot at Alderson, had been withdrawn from service on the Lake several years before.

Several years later, the Wilkes-Barre and Kingston Boat Company was organized under supervision of Captain Dymond, with owners of the line including John Redington, Judge Strauss, Sam Lewis and I. T. Honeywell, who brought two additional boats, the "Wilkes-Barre" and "Kingston," into service along the Lake's shore.

The Wilkes-Barre and Kingston Boat Company survived only a short time, when the interests of the group were purchased by the pioneer firm, the Lake Transit Company.

It was at that time that the company then ordered two new boats to replace the "Shawnee" and "Rosalin." These ships, the "Natoma" and "Acoma," were considerably larger than their predecessors and were constructed on the Hudson river by W. R. Osborne, veteran boat builder of the period.

Colorful Pilot

The "Acoma" was the first to arrive at the Lake, where it was piloted by one of the earliest and most colorful Harveys Lake navigators, George "Cap" Anderson. Later the largest of the combine, the $6,800 "Natoma," arrived at the Lake scene. The old "Shawnee" which had been skippered by Captain Carpenter, a retired army officer, and then later by Rube Shafer, was ripped apart and the "Rosalin" went to Lake Carey.

When automobiles were still a novelty, the "Acoma," "Natoma," "Wilkes-Barre" and "Kingston" were daily churning their paths through the waters of Harveys Lake, providing the speediest and most comfortable method of going from the Oneonta Terminal to the picnic grounds or other points around the Lake. Those were the days when double-header open street cars served the resort with the quickest transportation.

At one time, prior to World War I, there were eighteen landings along the Lake shore, including Rhodes Hotel, Laketon, Hunlock's and many others. The trip around the lake required about one hour and cost twenty cents. Holidays were boom days for the Lake steamers. Many of the hotels would sponsor entertainments for the festive crowds and moonlight excursions aboard the boats were extremely popular, when the decks would be colorfully decorated and orchestras, including the Ruggles Band of that day, provided music for dancing and entertainment.

Upper Deck Popular

Each of the boats was equipped with a cozy cabin, which served as a refuge from storms, but most of the excursionists would flock to the upper deck to get views of the Lake front.

The steam whistles of the Lake boats sounded a cheery note from one end of the resort to the other, the custom being to sound one blast upon entering or leaving a landing, while passing other boats was accompanied by blowing one whistle if passing on the port side and two blasts for signaling passing on the starboard side.

The boats also served picnics scheduled by the various societies, glee clubs and railroad organizations, and a ride on a Harveys Lake steamer attracted thousands of followers from New York, Philadelphia, Boston and other East coast cities each summer season, at times when launch and skiff races were held during the holidays.

By the late 1920's, the automobile was beginning to sound the doom of the Lake steamers. A short interim marked the advance of private launches, motor boats or "water jitneys," as they were called. Lake Transit Company pressed into service a spacious launch, "Emily," when it was found no longer feasible to operate the coal-burning steamers, but even this less expensive means of transporting passengers to points around the Lake met with failure as automobile traffic to the Lake increased.

Finally, in 1933, a year after the Harveys Lake electric line was abandoned, assets of the Lake Transit Company, including the steamers, were sold to John A. Griffiths of Forty Fort. Holders of stock at the dissolution sale included the Nellie H. Stegmaier estate, P. R. Raife estate, Victoria Schmitt family, Peter Forve, Margaret Edwards estate, J. B. Reynolds estate, Mary Stegmaier estate, Mary E. Sturdevant estate, Harry E. Sweeney estate and J. Lucas Williams.

LETTERS RECEIVED

On February 17, 1982, Doris F. Stansbury (Editor, PENN IN HAND, The Genealogical Society of Pennsylvania, 1300 Locust Street, Philadelphia, PA 19107) wrote the following letter to S. Robert Powell:

Dear Mr. Powell:

...Thank you very much for sending me the five issues [Volume I, Number 4; Volume II, Numbers 1-4 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA] in July 1981. I have very much enjoyed reading them, and it has been a pleasure to review them in the February 1982 issue of PENN IN HAND. They are a gold mine for anyone researching in that area and I hope you get a good response. I realize that other issues have been published since then, but for genealogists this material will not be stale.

I wish you much success with your publication as it is really excellent.

Sincerely,

[signed] Doris F. Stansbury

On March 17, 1982, Mary Louise Wilkinson, CGRS (232 Burrwood Avenue, Collingswood, NJ 08108) wrote the following note on the bottom of her subscription renewal form:

"Please don't let my subscription [to NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA] fail or falter. I look forward to each fascinating issue!"

James L. Sullivan (8 Roswell Terrace, Glen Ridge, New Jersey 07028) wrote the following letter to Edwin M. Sheffield on March 23, 1982:

Dear Mr. Sheffield:

I recently received a complimentary copy of Volume III, Number 3 of Northeastern Pennsylvania. My thanks.

Being rather unfamiliar with the publication and having also received a listing of prior editions of Northeastern Pennsylvania, I quickly became interested in the usefulness of the periodical's purpose. As I reviewed the issue, I became captivated by your comprehensive, detailed chronicling of northeastern Pennsylvania's amusement parks--past and present. I particularly enjoyed the writings of S. Robert Powell, whose personal recountings of family visits to Lake Ariel and Newton Lake Amusement Parks reminded me of my own family's frequent visits to the several western Massachusetts amusement parks many years ago.

The people of northeastern Pennsylvania are indeed fortunate to have in their midst a gentleman like you who is so interested in permanently recording the area's rich history. In fact, the pleasure which I have derived from my review of this issue which I received has prompted me to continue my interest in your work by submitting a two-year subscription request, which I enclose herewith.

Your efforts are to be heartily applauded.

Sincerely,

[signed] James L. Sullivan

On April 4, 1982, Jean S. Morris (Quarterly Editor, Western Pennsylvania Genealogical Society, 4338 Bigelow Boulevard, Pittsburgh, PA 15213) wrote the following letter to Edwin M. Sheffield:

Dear Mr. Sheffield:

We were delighted to receive copies of Vol. I Nos. 1-2-3-4; Vol. 2 Nos. 1-2-3-4 and Vol. 3 Nos. 1-2-3 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA: An Historical Quarterly About Northeastern Pennsylvania..... for review in our Quarterly Magazine.

I am impressed with your quality publication and the in-depth articles along with quality photography to implement same....

Your Quarterly will be reviewed in the August issue, as the May magazine is already filled.

Thank you again for your generous gift to our library. I know it will be well used.

Sincerely,

[signed] Jean S. Morris
Quarterly Editor

CARBONDALE CALENDAR 1983

NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

A PORTRAIT OF NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, ITS POLITICAL AND ADMINISTRATIVE AREAS, NATURAL AND MAN-MADE PHENOMENA, INSTITUTIONS, ARTS, INDUSTRIES, AND CITIZENS--PAST AND PRESENT

Volume IV, Number 1

August 18, 1982

From the Editor:

This calendar is Volume IV, Number 1 (August 18, 1982) of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA. It was designed, written and produced by S. Robert Powell.

Presented on the top page of the two pages that are devoted to each month are photographs and engravings of important Carbondale citizens, buildings and historical sites, all with detailed captions. Presented on the bottom page of the two pages that are devoted to each month are: (1) a calendar for the month in question, and (2) a list of events that are important in the history of Carbondale that took place in the past during the month in question. In each list of events, the first number indicates a day of the month, and the second number indicates a year. On the January page, for example, the number "01-1855" before the first item in the list on the bottom page means that on January 1, 1855, THE DEMOCRATIC STANDARD AND KNOW NOTHING EXPOSITOR issued its first number. Similarly, the number "05-1851" before the fifth item in the list means that on January 5, 1851, Reverend Henry Curtis preached his last sermon in the Berean Baptist Church.

Presented on the page immediately below, and concluded on the final four pages of this calendar, is an article by S. Robert Powell entitled "Carbondale City Hall." This article not only details the history of Carbondale's three city halls but also presents information on the concerted effort that is presently being made by a group of concerned Carbondale citizens to restore Carbondale City Hall, the most important public building in the city of Carbondale and one of the few extant, highly integrated, Romanesque Revival public buildings in northeastern Pennsylvania.

Note

With this issue, NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA will suspend publication. Subscribers whose subscriptions to this historical quarterly have not expired will, of course, be reimbursed for the unused portions of their subscriptions.

From the summer of 1979 up to the present time, we, Edwin M. Sheffield, as well as the principal writers for NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, S. Robert Powell and Donald W. Powell, have had the pleasure of working with three individuals without whose advice and spiritual support NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA would not nor could not have been published. Those three individuals are the members of the Advisory Board of this historical quarterly, namely: Edith A. Gardner, of Carbondale, PA; Sheryl W. Gross and Faythe M. Weaver, both of New York City. For all that they have done to make this historical quarterly the success that it is, we are indebted to them. To each of them, here and now, it is our pleasure to say: "Thank you."

Carbondale City Hall

By S. ROBERT POWELL

CARBONDALE'S FIRST CITY HALL

On March 15, 1851, the charter of the city of Carbondale, which was drawn up by the Honorable Lewis Jones, was approved by an act of the Assembly, and Carbondale became an incorporated city with four wards.

The following city officers were elected on March 21, 1851: MAYOR, James A. Archbald; SELECT COUNCIL, Joseph Benjamin, Peter Campbell, Thomas Gilliespie, Michael Flynn; COMMON COUNCIL, Thomas Sweet, Daniel Scurry, William Ball, Patrick Moffitt, James Clarkson, W. W. Bronson, Edward Jones, Alexander Bryden, Richard Howarth, Terence Powderly, Patrick Connor, Daniel Thatcher; PROSECUTING ATTORNEY, George W. Perkins; CLERK OF THE MAYOR'S COURT, WILLIAM BRENNAN; TREASURER, Lewis Pughe; ASSESSOR, Philip Wilson; AUDITORS, William H. Richmond, James Stott, Thomas Voyle; POOR MASTERS, John Campbell, John Lee.

For the first year of its existence, the city government was housed, provisionally, in the Methodist Episcopal Church and in the Carbondale House. It was in that church, for example, that the oath of office was administered, on March 26, 1851, to the mayor, the clerk of court and the prosecuting attorney, by the Honorable William Jessup, president judge of the judicial district. Similarly, when the Select Council organized and chose Peter Campbell as president and Michael Flynn as clerk, and when the Common Council organized and chose James Clarkson as chairman and William Ball as secretary, they did so in the Methodist Episcopal Church.

In 1852, Carbondale's first City Hall, a wooden building in the Greek Revival style, was erected at a cost of $3,000. This building, which was erected on the area occupied by the two-story wing of present-day Carbondale City Hall, served as Carbondale's City Hall until February 14, 1859 when, in a fire that originated in one of the prison cells in the building, the entire building was destroyed.

It was in Carbondale's first City Hall that the Mayor's Court, one of the earliest judicial bodies established in northeastern Pennsylvania, was held. This explains why this building is sometimes referred to as the Court House. The Mayor's Court, which was abolished on December 31, 1875, was provided for by the city's charter. This court was styled the recorder's court, and was presided over by the president judge of the judicial district sitting as recorder, assisted by the mayor and such of the aldermen as might be present.

This court had concurrent jurisdiction with the county courts, except in oyer and terminer cases and in cases belonging to the orphan's court. Its jurisdiction extended at times over Fell, Carbondale, Blakely and Greenfield Townships. The first session of the Mayor's Court was held in the Methodist Episcopal Church on May 13, 1851, with Judge Jessup presiding. No business was done at this term, except to provide for the drawing of juries. A grand jury was impaneled for the term beginning September 8, 1851, of which Judson W. Burnham was foreman. Courts were held in the Methodist Episcopal Church until 1852, and a room at the Carbondale Hotel, Jonathan Gore, proprietor, was used as a jury room. From 1852 to 1859, this court sat in Carbondale's first City Hall.

CARBONDALE'S SECOND CITY HALL

Following the fire on February 14, 1859, in which Carbondale's first City Hall was destroyed, a two-story brick city hall was erected. This building, erected during the administration of Mayor John M. Poore, served as Carbondale's City Hall from 1859 up to the time when Carbondale's third City Hall, present-day Carbondale City Hall, was erected in 1892-1894.

Carbondale's second City Hall is still standing in downtown Carbondale. It is the two-story wing at the back of present-day Carbondale City Hall. Here is what happened: When Truman I. Lacey of Binghamton, NY, designed present-day City Hall, he incorporated Carbondale's second City Hall, the 1859 building, into his overall design for the new building. In order to do so, he designed a new interior and a new roof for the old building, and then had the old building joined to his new building.

The contractor who, in 1894, executed Lacey's design for the new interior and the new roof on the 1859 building and who joined its eastern side to the 1892-1894 building (at a cost of $3,500) was George H. Tryon of Carbondale. Tryon was engaged by Lacey to do this job when the contractor who erected the three-story wing of present-day City Hall, W. D. Stevens of Binghamton, ceased work on his contract in the fall of 1893.

The 1859 City Hall had two stories. Lacey's design for the 1892-1894 City Hall called for the addition of a third story to the 1859 building. In accordance with Lacey's plan, construction on the proposed third story was begun in late 1893. When the city's councils drew up a budget for 1894, however, no funds were allocated for the completion of the third story on the old City Hall. As a result, construction on the third story was halted. The partially-built third story can be seen today beneath the present roof on the two-story wing of Carbondale City Hall.

Carbondale's second City Hall, like its predecessor, was a rectangular Greek Revival building. Five slender vertical rectangular windows on each story on the north and south sides of the rectangle; three vertical rectangular windows on the second story of the eastern side and two vertical rectangular windows, plus a door in the left bay, on the ground level of the eastern side. Although it is not known for certain, it is likely that there were three vertical rectangular windows on each story of the western side of the building. The windows on the northern and the southern sides of the two-story wing of present-day City Hall, with their greystone lintels and scrolls, are the original windows of the 1859 City Hall. The dentil moulding that can be seen today at the level of the eaves on the southern side of the two-story wing of City Hall is that of the 1859 building.

What about the interior of the 1859 City Hall? We know that the vaults that extend through both stories of the two-story wing were not in the 1859 building. This we know because these vaults, for the safekeeping of the records of the mayor, the city treasurer and the city engineer, were installed by George H. Tryon. In April 1894, Tryon's workmen began digging the foundation for these vaults, which cost $2,000 to install. On September 4, 1894, the bid of $970 by the Fenton Metallic Manufacturing Company to equip these vaults with steel cases was accepted by the city's legislators, and the steel file cases were installed shortly thereafter.

The following changes to the 1859 building were also made in 1894: (1) the main hallway on the second floor was narrowed eight feet; (2) a stairway was eliminated and replaced by an entrance to the station house; (3) the city engineer's office was divided by a partition; and (4) the court room was replastered. During this remodeling, the city treasurer moved, on April 3, 1894, from his office in the 1859 building to the first story tower room in the 1892-1894 building. We can visualize what the 1859 City Hall looked like, then, by imagining the present two-story wing of Carbondale City Hall minus the interior and exterior modifications described above, that were carried out in 1894 by George H. Tryon, in accordance with Truman I. Lacey's plan for the new building.

The 1859 City Hall served as the seat of the executive and legislative branches of the city government from 1859 to 1894. It was in this building, too, that the Mayor's Court sat from 1859 to December 31, 1875, when it was dissolved. Various rooms in this building, in addition, served as the town meeting hall, concert hall and public lecture hall. Important local societies and clubs (the Lackawanna Club, the Lackawanna Medical Society) also held their meetings in this 1859 building.

CARBONDALE'S THIRD CITY HALL

On August 2, 1892, the plan for a new Carbondale City Hall that was drawn up by the Binghamton architect, Truman I. Lacey, was accepted by the Common Council and the Select Council, meeting in joint session. Immediately thereafter, City Engineer Frick notified Lacey of the acceptance by

JOSEPH BIRKETT. Engraving, reproduced here full size from the original engraving that accompanies the biographical sketch of Birkett that is given on pages 487-488 of PORTRAIT AND BIOGRAPHICAL RECORD OF LACKAWANNA COUNTY PENNSYLVANIA. (New York and Chicago: Chapman Publishing Co., 1897), hereinafter referred to as 1897. Joseph Birkett, Mayor of Carbondale, 1877-1878, was born in Cumberlandshire, England, on 01-19-1823. The family of which he is a member originated in Scotland, later removing to England. His father, John, and his grandfather, William, were both, for many years, agents for the Dixon Manufacturing Company. His mother, Ruth Cragg, was born in Cumberlandshire, of Scotch ancestry. At the age of 14, Joseph Birkett learned the carpenter's trade. In the spring of 1849, he and his wife, Ann Drummond (b. 03-13-1823, d. 09-19-1895), came to the United States, their destination being Nashville, TN. On their arrival there, however, the cholera was raging and the couple immediately left and on 07-06-1849 arrived in Carbondale. From 1849 to 1854, Birkett worked in the car shops of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company, under Homer Grennell. From 1854 to 1856, the couple lived in Gibson, where Birkett followed his trade and, at the same time, engaged in farming. In 1856, the couple returned to Carbondale where, until 1865, Birkett was Mr. Orchard's assistant in the car shops. In 1865, Birkett purchased land in the northeast part of the city of Carbondale and there opened up coal mines, which he operated for four years, and then leased them to other parties, preferring to give his attention to the opening and improvement of that part of the city, the fifth and sixth wards. Joseph Birkett was treasurer of the Electric Light, Heat & Power Company, director of the Crystal Lake Water Company, and a stockholder in the Miners' & Mechanics' Bank. He was a councilman in Carbondale for two years. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church and at one time a trustee thereof. He was a Mason, a Knight Templar and a member of the Veterans Association of Scranton.

11-1808: Jesse Fell of Wilkes-Barre, a blacksmith and later a judge, conducted the experiment of burning in a grate at his home in Wilkes-Barre the stone coal of the Lackawanna Valley, and found that it answered the purpose of domestic fuel. As early as 1788, Jesse Fell used anthracite in the manufacture of nails. In speaking of its use for that purpose he said: "I found it to answer well for making wrought nails, and instead of losing in the weight of the rods, the nails exceeded the weight of the rods, which was not the case when they were wrought in a charcoal furnace."

12-1892: The Andrew Mitchell Hose Company was organized.

14-1859: Carbondale's first City Hall, a wooden building in the Greek Revival style, burned to the ground in a fire that originated in one of the prison cells in the building. The building was erected in 1852 at a cost of $3,000.

The contract for the other three locomotives (the "Lion," "the Delaware," and the "Hudson") was awarded to Foster, Rastrick and Company of Stourbridge. The "Lion" was shipped from Stourbridge to Liverpool in February 1829, and from Liverpool, on the John Jay, to New York on 04-08-1829, reaching New York on 05-13-1829. It cost the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company delivered $2,914.90. On 08-08-1829 (see entry under that date), the "Lion" was driven by Horatio Allen from Honesdale to Seelyville and back. ADON L. CRAMER. Cabinet photograph by Cramer's studio, 312 Main Street, Carbondale, PA; in the collection of Cramer's grandson, John M. Cramer, R. D. 1, Carbondale; photograph reproduced here from a larger than actual size copy print by Donald W. Powell, Carbondale and Chester, PA. Adon L. Cramer was born on 03-15-1859 at the Cramer Homestead, Greenfield Township, Lackawanna County. In 1882, at the tail-end of the carte-de-visite (a print 2 1/4 to 2 3/8" X 3 3/4 to 4" on a mount 2 1/2" X 4") period in American photography, Adon L. Cramer, at the age of 23, opened his first photographic studio on Main Street in Carbondale. With the sudden arrival into fashion, a year or two later, of a new photographic format, the cabinet photograph (a print 5 1/2 to 6" X 4" on a mount 6 1/2" X 4 1/4"), Adon L. Cramer became one of Carbondale's five cabinet photographers, and the founder of Carbondale's longest lived photographic dynasty. Adon's son, Delbert C. Cramer, and his two grandsons, John M. and Carl D., succeeded him in business at the Main Street locations (312, 21 North, 23 North, 19 North) of the family photography business. At times, the family also had studios in Jermy, Scranton, Olyphant and Forest City. Herbert S. Cramer, brother of Adon, was active in studio photography in Scranton from 1897 to at least 1904. Walter N. Manchester of Factoryville, George P. Chase, Frank Jewell and Marcellus M. DeWitt, all of Scranton, and Adon L. Cramer are the brightest stars in the galaxy of northeastern Pennsylvania studio photographers. Adon L. Cramer's only serious competitors in the cabinet format in Carbondale were William B. Foster (born 12-12-1868, still working in 1916), who opened his Carbondale studio at the corner of Sixth Avenue and Main Street in 1893, and who produced some artistically brilliant portraits of sitters, frequently with a sophisticated attitude. Edward J. Pierce (working at 7 Salem Avenue, 1888-1889), Henry H. Pierce (working at 55 Salem Avenue, 1893-1894), the latter Pierce producing some stylistically very mature portraits. Willis R. Barger and Henry C. Yarrington also did cabinet photography in Carbondale. Adon L. Cramer died on 03-12-1946 at his home at 37 Laurel Street, Carbondale.

William Morrison's mother was Honora Conlan, who was born in Ireland and who died in Carbondale in August 1891, at age 98. The family of Bartholomew and Honora Morrison consisted of nine children, three of whom were living in 1897: James C., of Carbondale; Michael, in the livery business in Carbondale; and William, whose likeness is given above. William Morrison received a common-school education, but at an early age left school. For 14 years he was a blacksmith. For 18 years he was in the ice business in Carbondale, where he established the Crystal Lake Ice Company. In 1876, he became an undertaker and furniture dealer. He was one of the charter members of the Catholic Knights of America. In 1868, he married Jane Quinn, who was born in Carbondale. Their issue: Nora, William F. CARBONDALE CITY HALL. Engraving of Truman I. Lacey's design for present-day Carbondale City Hall that was published on page 4 of THE CARBONDALE LEADER, August 13, 1892; reproduced here, 77% full size. With only minor modifications in design, this is the building that was erected, under the architect's direct supervision, in 1892-1894. On 08-02-1892, Lacey's plan for a new Carbondale City Hall was accepted by the Select and Common Councils of Carbondale. On 09-12-1892, the contract for the construction of the three-story wing and the tower of the new city hall was awarded to W. D. Stevens of Binghamton, who subsequently contracted with Frank Carlucci of Scranton to supply the dressed bluestone and trimmings for the new building from his quarry at Nicholson. On 09-15-1892, City Engineer Frick (see engraving on FEBRUARY page) placed the ground stakes that formed the outline of the three-story wing and the tower. On 09-16-1892, W. D. Stevens broke ground for the foundation. On 09-30-1892, the first stone of the foundation was placed in a corner of the tower. Work on the three-story wing and the tower progressed rapidly, and both were under roof by the spring of 1893. The building was completed and occupied by the fall of 1894. For a complete history of the building, see the article entitled "Carbondale City Hall" by S. Robert Powell that is presented in this calendar on the page preceding the January pages and on the pages following the December pages.

Line engraving, reproduced here full size from a xerographic copy of the engraving that is given on page 6 of the Twenty-First Anniversary Edition of THE CARBONDALE LEADER (May 18, 1893). Accompanying that engraving is the following text: "BELL & BROWN. Hardware Dealers, Plumbers and Tanners, of Salem Avenue. Among the valuable additions to the ranks of our business men are F. A. Bell and F. A. Brown, hardware dealers on Salem Avenue. Both are experienced men in mercantile pursuits but the present partnership was formed but a few months ago and since that time they have established a large and growing trade. They occupy the John Williams building, one of the handsomest structures erected during the past year, a cut of which is given herewith, and take up all the available space in its three floors and basement of the building in their business. The ground floor is their general salesroom and contains a countless array of the smaller articles in hardware and cutlery. The second story is used for the display of stoves and ranges while the upper floor is devoted to the tinners and plumbers in their employ. A large elevator runs through the building making access easy to any portion. A specialty made by this firm is the pipe joint, which is especially recommended as the best in use for sanitary plumbing. Messrs. Bell & Brown are also agents for Clark's greenhouse at Scranton."

01-1825: Benjamin Wright, the principal engineer of the Erie Canal, was engaged, in May 1823, by the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company to make a survey from the Hudson River to a point as near as possible the coal mines at Carbondale. This survey was made and completed in November 1823. On 05-21-1825, he rendered a report discussing the route that should be adopted for the construction of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company's canal, and on 06-01-1825, this report was submitted to the Managers. In it Wright not only expressed a clear preference for the route that was, in actual construction, substantially adopted, but he also recommended the building of a railway as the final link between the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company's canal and the mines. On 06-02-1825, he was appointed the Chief Engineer of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company, effective from 04-15-1825.

In 1868, he built the Nealon Building on North Main Street: the lower floor was occupied by two stores; the hall (95 feet X 46 feet, with a height of 28 feet, with seats for 800 people) took up the entire second and third stories of the building. John Nealon was Mayor of Carbondale, 1875-1877. On 04-27-1856, he married Mary Moffitt of Carbondale.

Their issue: James Russell Jones (b. 10-11-1877, d. 03-23-1965), and Eleanor Pritchard Jones (b. 03-04-1883, d. 02-06-1970). They spent the first night at Bolton, the second at Wurtsboro, and the third, June 18, at the mouth of the Lackawaxen. They arrived in Honesdale on the 19th at 4 P.M. On Tuesday, June 22, they traveled from Honesdale to Carbondale over the Gravity Railroad. This appears to have been the first use of this railroad for passenger travel, and for many years thereafter no passengers were regularly carried. The arrangements made for the comfort of the party were crude, but satisfactory. Philip Hone and his nineteen guests were accommodated in two coal cars, which formed the train. These two cars had been provided with seats and in other respects were made tolerably convenient. The party reached Carbondale at 5 P.M. and Philip Hone and his traveling companions dined at Townsend's Hotel.

ORA ESMARILDA LOOMIS and EDNA PEARL LOOMIS. Studio photograph by Cramer (21 Main Street, Carbondale), here reproduced actual size, in the RHPA. Ora and Edna Loomis are the daughters of Theron Orsemus and Mary Emma (Squire) Loomis of Clinton Township, Wayne County, and Carbondale. On 03-24-1880, Theron Orsemus Loomis and Mary Emma Squire were married in the Squire homestead in Clinton Township by the Reverend James Remsen, pastor of the Clinton Center Baptist Church. From 1880 to 1886, the Theron Loomis family resided in Clinton Township where, on 08-17-1881, Ora Esmarilda Loomis was born, and where, on 12-29-1885, Edna Pearl Loomis was born. In 1886, Theron Loomis was forced to discontinue farming--due to an asthmatic condition--and to seek employment in a place where pollen dust was less dominant in the atmosphere than in Clinton Township. In that year, the Theron Loomis family moved to 161 Lincoln Avenue, Carbondale, where Theron Loomis secured a position, first with the New York, Ontario & Western Railway Company (as a car inspector and also as a member of a wrecking crew), and later with the Hendrick Manufacturing Company (in the shipping department). In the meantime, Mary Emma Loomis directed herself to the careful rearing of her two daughters, Ora and Edna. In 1902, Ora Loomis was graduated from the nursing school of the Carbondale Emergency Hospital, and served as a registered nurse in Carbondale from 1902 to 1907. On 04-10-1907, she married William Anderson Russell, a prosperous dairy farmer of Fell Township, and they had three children: Martha Jeannette Russell (b. 04-16-1908, d. 04-16-1908), Margaret Louise Russell (b. 06-09-1910, d. 04-22-1974, m. Albert Wesley Winter), and Helen Loomis Russell (b. 06-29-1913, m. Walter Silas Powell). Ora Russell was an active member of the Ladies' Board of the Carbondale General Hospital and served as vice president and secretary thereof; she was a member of the Berean Baptist Church of Carbondale. On 11-18-1954, she died; she is interred in Valley View Cemetery, Montdate, PA. Edna Pearl Loomis, following her graduation from Carbondale High School on 06-24-1904, began, in the fall of that year, her 34-year teaching career in the public schools of northeastern Pennsylvania. For 12 of those years, 1915-1927, she taught in Carbondale High School. In February 1927, she was awarded a Bachelor of Arts degree from the Pennsylvania State College; in August 1932, she was awarded a Master of Arts degree in English from that same college. On 07-20-1938, at Ocean Park, ME, Edna Pearl Loomis and LeRoy Besley Loomis, of Detroit, were married. On 07-04-1976, Edna Loomis died at Highland Park, MI; her earthly remains are interred in Woodlawn Cemetery, Highland Park, MI.

ALICE VOYLE RASHLEIGH. Studio photograph by an unidentified photographer, reproduced here full size from the original photograph in the RHPA. Alice Rashleigh, a dedicated teacher and outstanding citizen of Carbondale, was born, as she herself said on the occasion of her 76th birthday, "at 9 P.M....in a thunder storm--but later the sun shone through the rain drops producing a rainbow for me," on 08-29-1870 at 36 River Street, Carbondale. In 1888, she graduated from Carbondale High School and immediately began her 52-year teaching career in Carbondale. At the time of her retirement, she was the Principal of the John Marshall School. In March 1946, she wrote a 7-part article on the history of Carbondale that was published in THE CARBONDALE NEWS. In 1951, she wrote CARBONDALE, MY CARBONDALE: A HISTORY OF THE PIONEER CITY. She was the daughter of Frank and E. Louise (Voyle) Rashleigh. Her maternal grandfather, Thomas Voyle, was Mayor of Carbondale three times, 1867-1869, 1873-1874 and 1882-1883. Alice Rashleigh was an enthusiastic supporter of the Columbia Hose Company. In 1946, the members of that hose company awarded her a Gold Badge Life Membership and Membership Card No. 5. On 07-13-1954, Alice Voyle Rashleigh died. Her earthly remains are interred in Maplewood Cemetery, Carbondale.

VIEW OF SHEPHERD'S CROOK ON THE DELAWARE AND HUDSON CANAL COMPANY'S GRAVITY RAILROAD, Carbondale, PA. No. 1119 of a series of 67 stereograph cards, numbered 1100-1166, of photographs taken and published by L. Hensel, Hawley, PA. The series is entitled "A Ride over the Del. & Hud. Gravity Road into the Coal Regions." The view shown here is reproduced actual size from the stereograph card in the collection of Donald W. Powell of Carbondale and Chester, PA. On 10-09-1829, the Gravity Railroad became operational; on 10-29-1898, the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company announced that on 12-31-1898 the last train would travel on the Gravity Railroad. On 01-03-1899, several loads of coal that had accumulated at various points along the line were run off and more than 4,600 coal cars were moved to convenient locations for disposal. Work began immediately on converting portions of the gravity line into a locomotive line. This involved moving each rail out  $2\frac{3}{4}$ " from its original position, making the 4'3" gauge into standard gauge (56 1/2"). This job was finished by 01-22-1899 and 23.74 miles of the old road were opened for regular locomotive operation. Naturally the steep inclined planes could not be negotiated by any regular locomotive so the route was altered to comply with a more conventional railroad. From Carbondale the loaded track was used south to the junction of both lines near Bushwick. There the light car track down from the summit was picked up and used as the main line up the mountain to the head of Plane No. 20. From that point, a new stretch of track was built south to the town of South Canaan, where a wide horseshoe curve swung the route back up to Waymart. From Waymart on to Honesdale, the old loaded car track served as the rebuilt stretch of line. The standard gauge trains operated around the famous Shepherd's Crook for a time but the short radius proved to be an excessive strain on the equipment and a switchback replaced the familiar landmark. The switchback was called Panther's Bluffs and its existence required all passenger trains leaving Carbondale to run with the engines operating tender-first, at the head of the train, as far as the switchback. There the engine was run around the train allowing a normal looking arrival at Honesdale. On freight movements, the helper engine at the rear of the train ran backwards out of Carbondale so that no time was lost at the switchback, where the helper became the road engine for the remainder of the trip. The old gravity passenger cars were equipped with standard gauge trucks and used in the passenger service provided on what was now called the Honesdale Branch, but after about a year vanished from the line as regular equipment from other parts of the system replaced them. The old gravity passenger cars, along with the 36 open excursion cars, were sold off to private individuals.

01-1894: John Nealon was appointed Postmaster of Carbondale. (See entry under 06-18-1830.) 02-1868: The managers of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company entered into a contract with the Erie Railroad to build a line north from Carbondale to connect with the Erie main line at Lanesboro Junction, just east of Susquehanna, PA. This line (the Jefferson Branch) was completed and opened to traffic on 10-28-1870, when the first loads of coal rolled north out of Carbondale and on to Binghamton, where they were switched to the Albany &amp; Susquehanna (which was under lease to the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company). The Erie's 34.6 mile Jefferson Branch was purchased outright by the Delaware and Hudson Company on 01-01-1955 for $3,500,000, at which time the Delaware and Hudson Company granted trackage rights to the Erie Railroad until the year 2015. An agreement similar to this 1868 agreement between the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company and the Erie Railroad was entered into twenty-one years earlier between the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company and the Wyoming Coal Association, namely, the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company made an agreement, in 1847, with the Wyoming Coal Association to transport their coal to market through the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company's canal. The Wyoming Coal Association soon grew into the Pennsylvania Coal Company, and, in March 1848, this company began to build a gravity railroad that was similar in design to that of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company. The Pennsylvania Coal Company's Gravity Railroad had 22	planes. It extended from Port Griffith on the Susquehanna to Hawley (47 miles) on the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company's canal. Construction was completed in the spring of 1850, and the first load of Pennsylvania Coal Company coal went down the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company's canal in May 1850. In 1855, over a million tons of coal were shipped through the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company's canal, with about one-half of this coal belonging to the Pennsylvania Coal Company. In 1885, the Pennsylvania Coal Company's Gravity Railroad was abandoned and quickly dismantled and a locomotive road was run through the valley to take its place. 03-1901: The monument on the site of the first Delaware and Hudson Canal Company mine at Carbondale was unveiled at 12 P.M. This mine, near Seventh Avenue, was opened in June 1831, by Archibald Law, the first Mining Engineer of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company. 06-1918: Albert H. Crane, Adjutant of the 109th Infantry Regiment, was killed in action during the crossing of the Veste River in Germany. The Albert H. Crane Memorial Armory, built and occupied in 1928, was dedicated to his memory. 09-1842: Thomas R. Lathrope was born, in Carbondale. He became a director of the First National Bank and also aided in founding the Miners' and Mechanics' Bank, of which he became a director and of which he was the first cashier. 10-1903: The Liberty Discount and Savings Bank was organized.	11-1850: Carbondale Lodge, No. 249, F. &amp; A. Masons, chartered in July 1850, was instituted. Charter members: J. W. Burnham, W.M.; Robert Maxwell, S.W.; John G. Murray, J.W.; Rice Lewis, Secretary; William Root, George H. Leach, Henry Evans. 13-1844: At a political rally held on the Parade Ground in Carbondale, Galusha A. Grow made his maiden political speech. 13-1970: The Berean Baptist Church that stands today at the corner of Lincoln Avenue and North Church Street was dedicated. 15-1866: A fire destroyed the buildings on the east side of Main Street in Carbondale, from Salem Avenue to Memorial Park. 16-1855: A fire destroyed W. M. Bronson's Railway Hotel and over twenty other buildings in downtown Carbondale. It was the opinion of many that the fire, which broke out on the upper story of the Railway Hotel, was caused by the carelessness or drunkenness of some of Washburn's Circus Company, who were then occupying the whole of the upper story of the Railway Hotel. 17-1851: P. T. Barnum's Asiatic Caravan, Museum and Menagerie visited Carbondale. 25-1786: Luzerne County was established. Lackawanna County was a part of Luzerne County until 08-13-1878. 28-1850: A fire, which broke out in the Carbondale House, destroyed virtually all of the buildings in the block in Carbondale bounded by Main Street, Park Place, North Church Street and Salem Avenue.

C. D. WINTER & CO., Jermyn, PA. Line engravings, reproduced here full size from xerographic copies of the engravings on page 14 of the Twenty-First Anniversary Edition of THE CARBONDALE LEADER (May 18, 1893). Accompanying those engravings is the following text: "GREAT INDEED IS the Business Done by the Firm of C. D. Winter & Co. The history of the firm of C. D. Winter & Co. is the most brilliant in the annals of the progressive borough of Jermyn. This business was established in August 1884. Since that time their continually increasing business has rendered many additions to their facilities necessary until now they have one of the largest establishments in Jermyn. In one year after their start of business the first enlargement was made necessary and in 1886 another enlargement was made doubling their former space so that they then occupied floor space 48 X 100 feet. Carpenters are now engaged in building stairs to the upper floor in addition to their present quarters. The firm has always done a large business. The experience of the proprietors combined with the fact that they carry the largest line of goods to be found between Carbondale and Scranton at popular prices is attracting customers from many of the surrounding towns. Their stock of dry goods, notions, boots and shoes, hats, caps, carpets, oil cloth, wall paper, &c., &c., is complete and when they occupy rooms on the second floor they will be able to show goods to still better advantage. They also carry a full and fresh line of groceries."

C(harles) D. Winter was born in Binghamton, NY, on 05-23-1851, and died on 08-08-1902. He was educated at Wyoming Seminary. On 09-15-1872, he married Jennie M. Wells. The present Community House in Jermyn is the former C. D. Winter residence. C. D. Winter was a director of the First National Bank of Carbondale and a prominent member of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Jermyn.

09-1829: The Delaware and Hudson Canal Company's Gravity Railroad became operational, and the first car load of coal was shipped from Carbondale to Honesdale. This first coal was mined at the foot of Davies' or No. 28 Plane, from the bed of the river. The river was diverted from its channel and a level was run into the hill. This was Ingram's Level. The coal was run out on a wheelbarrow. Any of the five ascending planes on the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company's Gravity Railroad from Carbondale to Honesdale could carry 7 1/2 tons of coal one-half a mile in 8 minutes. In 1831, the Company owned 275 railroad wagons and 130 canal boats. In 1839, 122,300 tons of coal were shipped over the canal; in 1841, 192,200 tons of coal were shipped over the canal; in 1872, the peak year, the canal carried 2,930,333 tons of coal (about 1/2 belonging to the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company, and 1/2 belonging to the Pennsylvania Coal Company). In 1847, the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company's Gravity Railroad was extended to Archbald; in 1858, it was extended to Valley Junction (just south of Olyphant). 11-1816: Rev. William B. Grow, the tenth minister of the Berean Baptist Church, was born. He married Mary Ann Hackett, who was the sister of Mrs. Eli E. Hendrick. 15-1981: Volume I of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA GENEALOGICAL AND LOCAL HISTORY REPRINTS was published by Sheffield Publications, Inc., Carbondale. Reprinted in this volume, with an Introduction by S. Robert Powell, are seven monographs on local history.	16-1828: In October 1828, water was let into the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company's canal and the Company announced that the 108-mile long canal was open. The channel was originally 4' deep, 20' wide at the bottom 32' wide at the water line. On three different occasions the canal was enlarged: (1) September 1842--1844: the depth was increased to 5', which made it possible for the canal to support a boat carrying a cargo of 40 tons; (2) 1845-1847: the depth was increased to 5 1/2', which made it possible for the canal to support a boat carrying a cargo of 50 tons; (3) 1847-1850: the depth of the canal was increased to 6', the canal was widened, and all 108 locks were rebuilt, at a cost of $1,105,000. Boats carrying 130 tons of cargo could now use the canal and, unlike all earlier Delaware and Hudson Canal Company canal boats, were large enough to move from the canal into the Hudson River and down to New York City. The time consuming and costly unloading and loading process at Rondout, therefore, was no longer necessary. The first boat to navigate the entire length of the canal was the Orange Packet, which left Rondout on 10-16-1828, with many Company officials on board, and arrived at Honesdale, 972 feet above the level of the sea, two days later. The Orange Packet was followed by a flotilla of 10 cargo boats. Into each coal boat went 10 tons of coal, which had been laboriously hauled from Carbondale over a hastily built, rough and tortuous wagon road through Rix's Gap. As soon as the cargo boats were loaded, they began their historic journey to tidewater. The flotilla, which at every lock was cheered by groups	of local citizens, was led by a boat named Superior, commanded by Captain Hickson. At Rondout, the coal was transferred to the sloop Toleration, and on 12-10-1828, the first shipment of Delaware and Hudson Canal Company anthracite reached New York City. 16-1839: The first Trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Carbondale were elected, namely: Jesse Gardner, James Birdsall, Wanton Hill, Silas Burrows and Judson Clark. 22-1827: John B. Jervis, who became Chief Engineer of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company following the resignation of Benjamin Wright on 03-14-1827, submitted his master plan for the Gravity Railroad from Carbondale to Honesdale. JAMES ARCHBALD. Oil painting, 29" X 35 3/4", by J. M. Raught, after Elliott, in the collection of the city of Carbondale; painting presently hanging in the office of the Mayor, the Honorable Fred J. Mancuso, in the tower room on the second floor of Carbondale City Hall; reproduced here from a photograph taken by Donald W. Powell on 11-27-1981. The four-line inscription on the plate attached to the frame reads: "Hon. James Archbald / FIRST MAYOR OF THE CITY OF CARBONDALE, PA. / PRESENTED BY HIS DAUGHTER / MARY WOODROW ARCHBALD CATLIN." The inscription on the back of the canvas reads as follows: "Copied by J. M. Raught 1901. / From painting by Elliott dated 1845." James Archbald, Mayor of Carbondale, 1851-1855, was born on 03-03-1793 on Little Cumbrae Island. He died on 08-26-1870 in Scranton, and is interred in Dunmore Cemetery. On 11-27-1832, he married Sarah Augusta Temple Frothingham. Three biographical sketches of James Archbald are known to exist: (1) "James Archbald," pages 159-161 of J. A. Clark's THE WYOMING VALLEY, UPPER WATERS OF THE SUSQUEHANNA, AND THE LACKAWANNA COAL-REGION, INCLUDING VIEWS OF THE NATURAL SCENERY OF NORTHERN PENNSYLVANIA, FROM THE INDIAN OCCUPANCY TO THE YEAR 1875. Photographically illustrated. (Scranton, PA: J. A. Clark, publisher, 1875); (2) "James Archbald," pages 712-714 of PORTRAIT AND BIOGRAPHICAL RECORD OF LACKAWANNA COUNTY PENNSYLVANIA. EMERGENCY HOSPITAL, Carbondale, PA. Black and white post card, reproduced here from the original post card in the RHPA. The Emergency Hospital's charter was approved by R. W. Archbald, President Judge, County of Lackawanna, on 11-09-1889, and on the following day it was signed and sealed by the hospital's Board of Directors, namely: Samuel Sheldon Jones, Julius Moses, William Walker, John B. Davis, M. F. Norton, J. B. Van Bergen and R. Manville. The Charter was recorded in the office of the Recorder of Deeds, Lackawanna County, on 10-15-1889. The Recorder of Deeds at that time was Eliezer D. Jenkins. Carbondale's Emergency Hospital was designed by Architect Duckworth. John Hansen was the contractor for the wood work, A. C. Monies was the contractor for the plumbing, and B. Leonard was the contractor for the heating plant. The hospital was opened for admission of patients on 05-01-1893. A school of nursing was attached to the hospital. Written in black ink on the back of the post card shown here is an invitation to the graduation exercises of the Carbondale Emergency Hospital School of Nursing in 1908: "Graduating exercises 1908. The pleasure of your company and that of your friends is requested on Wednesday Aug 12th at 8 p.m."

05-1898: Delaware and Hudson Canal Company Canal Boat No. 1107, under Captain Hensberger, was loaded and cleared Honesdale for tidewater. This was the last canal boat to move down the canal before it was permanently closed. The Gravity Railroad continued to operate, but only for the movement of passengers. On 01-03-1899, several loads of coal that had accumulated at various points along the line were run off and more than 4,600 coal cars were moved to convenient locations for disposal. On 01-04-1899, the fires of the stationary boilers at the heads of the planes were dropped and they cooled off forever. Work began immediately on converting portions of the Gravity Railroad into a locomotive road. This involved moving each rail out 2 3/4" from its original position, making the 4'3" gauge into standard gauge (56 1/2"). This job was finished by 01-22-1899, and 23.74 miles of the old road were opened for regular locomotive operation.

06-1981: At a 10:30 A.M. meeting between David J. Baum and S. Robert Powell at the office of THE CARBONDALE NEWS (41 North Church Street), The Committee to Restore Carbondale City Hall, Inc. was formed.

07-1899: Carbondale General Hospital was organized.

10-1876: James Clarkson died. He was the Chairman of the first Common Council of the city of Carbondale.

14-1892: The wholesale meat house of the Carbondale Beef Company was opened for business by Bell and Francois, representing the firm of Swift & Co., Chicago, Kansas City and Omaha.

19-1824: The New York legislature passed an act, in further amendment of the act incorporating the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company, authorizing it to employ $500,000 of its capital, actually paid, in the business of banking. On 06-27-1825, the Company's bank opened for business at 13 Wall Street, New York. These privileges were continued for 20 years, and at the expiration of the period of authorization, the Company made no effort to have them renewed. On 03-31-1825, the Board of Managers of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company ordered the engraved copper plates for printing bank bills, and the first bank paper was ordered.

19-1855: St. James' Church, Dundaff, was organized by Rev. A. Beatty, Rector of Trinity Church, Carbondale.

22-1843: Charles Rosner, cabinet maker and dealer in furniture, was born in Germany. In November 1866, he came to Carbondale, and on 03-15-1877, established his business at the junction of South Main Street and the Turnpike. He married Mary Birrer of Carbondale.

22-1852: The North Baptist Church, Greenfield Township, was organized. Elder James Brown was chosen as pastor and Daniel Green and John Worth were chosen as deacons. The meeting house was dedicated on 11-07-1873.

22-1855: Reverend Samuel Whaley delivered his 96-page discourse entitled, "History of the Township of Mount Pleasant, Wayne County, Pennsylvania." In 1856, this discourse was published by M. W. Dodd, No. 59 Chambers

Street, Rear of the Park, New York. This discourse was reprinted in 1981 in Volume I of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA GENEALOGICAL AND LOCAL HISTORY REPRINTS. (See entry under 10-15-1981.)

23-1975: Carbondale National Guard Armory, Clidco Drive, was dedicated.

27-1832: James Archbald, Mayor of Carbondale, 1851-1855, and Sarah Augusta Temple Frothingham--the youngest daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Frost) Frothingham--were married by the Reverend Dr. Gregory, in Sand Lake, NY.

29-1858: The Berean Baptist Church (a wooden building in the Doric style) that stood between the Methodist and Catholic Churches on North Church Street in Carbondale was dedicated.

29-1886: Although Richmond, VA, had the first successful large scale electric trolley system in operation (01-07-1888) in the United States, Scranton claimed the distinction of having the first commercially successful streetcar system in the United States. Charles J. Vanderpoole, inventor of the system, supervised the installation of the electric equipment for the Scranton Suburban Railway. Vanderpoole operated the first car on its initial test trip on the afternoon of 11-29-1886. The first trip started at the corner of Lackawanna and Franklin and went north on Franklin to Spruce and east on Spruce to Washington. By 1912, the system operated almost 100 miles of track, and its 152 passenger cars carried over 24 1/2 million people in that year.

Jennie Russell (born 12-03-1868, died 01-30-1954) and her sister, Nettie, lived most of their lives in Carbondale, in the residence established at 35 River Street (now razed) by their mother's half brother, John Gillespie Murray, and their maternal grandmother, Jeanette (Gillespie) Murray Locke, during the second quarter of the nineteenth century.

JEANETTE ("Nettie") LOCKE RUSSELL. Enlarged copy print by Donald W. Powell of a studio photograph by Cramer (21 Main Street, Carbondale) in the RHPA. Nettie Russell (born 10-29-1866, died 04-22-1963) and her nine brothers and sisters were all born and raised at the Russell Homestead, R. D. 1, Carbondale. Nettie and Jennie Russell, as well as their parents (James and Margaret Russell) and six of their brothers and sisters are interred in Maplewood Cemetery, Carbondale.

03-1852: James Ruthven was elected the Chief Engineer of the Carbondale Fire Department.

10-1824: By the sloop Tripler, from Philadelphia, "Lackawaxen" coal first arrived in the city of New York. The COMMERCIAL ADVERTISER of this date mentions the arrival of this cargo, with the comment that "our citizens will have an opportunity of examining and testing the quality of this coal, the rich mines of which it is intended to open to the New York market by means of a canal." This coal was shipped by the Wurts brothers from Carbondale to Philadelphia and from Philadelphia (on 12-05-1824) to New York. Exactly four years after the first "Lackawaxen" coal arrived, via Philadelphia, in New York City, the first "Lackawaxen" coal to be transported by means of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company's canal from Honesdale to Rondout, and from Rondout to New York City by means of a sloop, arrived in New York City. (See entry under 10-16-1828.)

12-1892: The Belmont and Brooklyn Schools were opened in Carbondale, the former was an entirely new building that was built by W. D. Stevens at a total cost of $14,480, the latter was a remodeled building.

15-1850: A devastating fire laid waste to the greater portion of Carbondale above the Public Square.

16-1892: M. H. Dale & Co. (who sold the dressed meats of Armour & Co., of Chicago) opened for business on Dundaff Street. H. J. Hall was the manager. In 1893, they handled about two railroad carloads (40,000 pounds) of meat per week.

17-1981: The Committee to Restore Carbondale City Hall's fund-raising campaign was officially launched.

18-1954: The final run on the final trolley line of the Scranton Transit Company (the Green Ridge Suburban Line) ended at 11:20 P.M. Cars 501 and 503, with two extra cars (Nos. 506 and 510) left from Wyoming and Lackawanna Avenues at 10:18 P.M. At 11:20 P.M. the four cars reached the end of the line. The May Aug Park and Petersburg lines had ceased to operate in the preceding year, both having made their final runs on 06-20-1953.

21-1828: The road from Carbondale to the Milford and Owego Turnpike was laid out.

25-1801: James Dickson was born in Berwickshire, Scotland. He came to the United States in 1832, and settled in Canada, but soon after came to Carbondale and succeeded Mr. McAlpine as the head of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company's machine shops.

25-1825: More than 500 people gathered at Crystal Lake to witness an ice skating competition in which Dilton Yarrington participated. That competition was described by Dilton Yarrington as follows: "Christmas, 1825, I ran a race on skates, on Crystal Lake, with Benjamin P. Bailey, for ten dollars a side. I took the skates, distance, one mile from north to south corners. I ran it in two minutes and thirty-three seconds. I then ran one-fourth of a mile with Gould Phinny for twenty dollars a side. Judge decided that he was half way when I was out. At the end of the last race, I jumped fifteen feet six inches on skates. The ice was smooth and the day pleasant; and, as word had been sent to neighboring towns, there were more than five hundred people to see the race." Dilton Yarrington, blacksmith, lumberman and justice of the peace of Dundaff, was born in Wilkes-Barre on 10-08-1803. He married Rebecca Lambert of Wyalusing. In 1847, the couple moved to Carbondale. 29-1885: Edna Loomis Loomis, historian, genealogist and teacher of English in the Carbondale High School from 1915 to 1927, was born in Clinton Township, Wayne County. She is the author of: (1) ANCESTRY OF ORA LOOMIS RUSSELL (and) EDNA LOOMIS LOOMIS AND DESCENDANTS OF ORA LOOMIS RUSSELL, 1955; and (2) A COMPARISON OF LORD CHESTERFIELD'S LETTERS TO HIS SON WITH THE CONDUCT BOOKS OF THE SIXTEENTH CENTURY, 1932. The latter book was written in partial fulfillment for the Master of Arts degree in English at the Pennsylvania State College in 1932. Both of these important works were reprinted, in 1981, in Volume I of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA GENEALOGICAL AND LOCAL HISTORY REPRINTS. (See entry under 10-15-1981.)

31-1875: The Mayor's Court, as provided for in the Charter of the City of Carbondale (03-15-1851), was abolished.

31-1952: The electrified "Laurel Line," owned by the Lackawanna and Wyoming Valley Railroad, made its final run. This railroad, which provided passenger and package service between Wilkes-Barre and Scranton, began operation in 1903.

Carbondale's legislators of his proposed plan for a new city hall. On August 4, 1892, Lacey arrived in Carbondale to confer with the public building committee as to the work to be done.

On September 12, 1892, the contract for the construction of the three-story wing and the tower of Carbondale's third City Hall was awarded to W. D. Stevens of Binghamton. Also bidding for that contract were George H. Tryon and P. Byrne & Co., both of Carbondale. W. D. Stevens subsequently contracted with Frank Carlucci of Scranton to supply the dressed bluestone and trimmings for the new building from his quarry at Nicholson.

On September 15, 1892, City Engineer Frick placed the ground stakes that formed the outline of the three-story wing and the tower. A great stone was removed from in front of the 1859 building, four shade trees were cut down, and the fence in front of the 1859 building was removed. On September 16, 1892, W. D. Stevens broke ground for the foundation of the three-story wing and the tower. On September 30, 1892, the first stone of the foundation was laid in a corner of the tower.

Work on the three-story wing and the tower progressed rapidly, and both were under roof by the spring of 1893. On March 29, 1893, at the close of business, Postmaster Yarrington had the post office furniture moved into the new post office on the ground floor of the three-story wing (where the Police Department is now located).

The contractor who, in 1894, executed Lacey's design for the new interior and the new roof on the old City Hall and who joined its eastern side to the three-story wing, at a cost of $3,500, was George H. Tryon of Carbondale. Tryon was engaged by Lacey to do this work when W. D. Stevens, the contractor who erected the three-story wing and the tower, ceased work on his contract in the fall of 1893.

The 1859 City Hall had two stories. Lacey's design for the 1892-1894 City Hall called for the addition of a third story to the old City Hall. In accordance with Lacey's plan, construction on the proposed third story was begun in late 1893. When the city budget for 1894 was drawn up, however, no funds were allocated for the completion of the third story on the old City Hall. As a result, construction on the third story was halted. The partially-built third story on the old City Hall can be seen today beneath the present roof on the two-story wing of Carbondale City Hall.

The plumbing in the new City Hall was installed by Joseph Vannan. The heating system was installed by Thomas W. Parry. Both Vannan and Parry had offices on Salem Avenue in Carbondale. The question of whether or not to install a direct-indirect or a direct system of heating is one that was discussed at length by the building committee of the Select and Common Councils during the summer of 1893. On July 18, 1893, the both councils, meeting in joint session, agreed that a direct system of heating was best adapted to the building and not a direct-indirect system, as had originally been planned. The contract for a direct system was awarded to Thomas W. Parry, who installed a Bolton system of hot water heating (two fire pots, a large sized heater, and 4,700 feet of radiation) at a cost of $3,243.80.

On January 5, 1893, in his annual message to the Select and Common Councils, Mayor Charles E. Rettew made twelve recommendations and suggestions to the city's legislators. His ninth proposal to them was that fireproof vaults be constructed and arranged for the convenience of the treasurer, controller, mayor and city engineer, in order that all records, maps and dockets might be properly cared for. In accordance with that proposal, Tryon's workmen began digging the foundation for four vaults, extending through both stories in the two-story wing, in April 1894. The cost of installing the vaults was $2,000. On September 4, 1894, the bid of $970 by the Fenton Metallic Manufacturing Company to equip these vaults with steel cases was accepted by the legislators and the steel file cases were installed shortly thereafter.

On February 15, 1893, it was announced in THE CARBONDALE LEADER (page 4) that the new City Hall would contain: one very large room for a public hall, two rooms for the post office, one large room for common council, one large room for select council, one room for the poor department, one room for the board of health, one room for the board of assessors, one room for the mayor's office, one room for the police department, two rooms for the city engineer, one room for the city solicitor, one room for the city treasurer, one room for the city controller, one room for the city clerk, five rooms for the jailer's family, three rooms for prisoners, numerous offices for rental to professional men and women, clubs and social organizations.

The annual fees to be charged to those persons and organizations who rented the offices in the three-story wing and the tower that were not used by the city officials were announced in THE CARBONDALE LEADER of September 19, 1893 (page 4). First floor: post office, $500; tower room, $240. Second floor: tower room, $180; two front rooms, $240; one corner room, $180; one side room, $120. Third floor: tower room, $120; two front rooms, $200; one corner room, $120; one side room, $100.

On September 19, 1893, the Select and Common Councils accepted two rental offers that were made for rooms in the three-story wing of City Hall: (1) the offer of Alderman Samuel Sheldon Jones of $150 a year for the tower room on the second floor; (2) the offer of Messrs. George Van Keuren and W. F. Sadler, Jr., representing the club of business and professional men of Carbondale, of $360 a year for the three rooms on the third floor.

It has not yet been learned whether or not an official dedication ceremony took place to mark the completion of present-day City Hall. We do know, however, that by the fall of 1894, all of the city's officials were housed in their new offices in the completed building. The treasurer's office was in the tower room on the ground floor, the mayor's office and the office of the chief of police were on the ground floor in the two-story wing.

The original plan for the building called for locating the Common Council Chamber and the Select Council Chamber at the north end of the second story in the three-story wing; the Common Council in the front room and separated from the Select Council by roll partition doors, the dimensions of the double room being 17 X 33 feet. These rooms were apparently found to be inadequate for the city's legislators, for it was later decided that the old court room in the two-story wing (present-day Council Chambers) would be more appropriate for Council Chambers. Accordingly, a sliding partition was put through the center of the old court room, and the Common and Select Councils moved from their rooms in the three-story wing to their chambers in the two-story wing of Carbondale City Hall, on September 4, 1894. The legislators' chambers were furnished by Kin-back Brothers of Carbondale, who also supplied other furnishings for the interior of City Hall. The cost of the furniture for Select and Common Council Chambers was $360.

PRESENT-DAY CARBONDALE CITY HALL:
A DESCRIPTION

CARBONDALE CITY HALL is a detached, masonry (brick and Pennsylvania bluestone) building in the Romanesque Revival style, composed of a tower, a three-story wing and a two-story wing. No alterations have been made to the building, nor has its wholeness been impaired in any way: it appears today as it did when it was erected in 1892-1894.

THE TOWER. This massive, square, five-story, brick, corner tower rests on a slightly battered ashlar podium. The eight vertical rectangular windows on the first and second stories (four/story) are topped by massive bluestone lintels. The four vertical rectangular windows on the third story are topped by Romanesque arches of bluestone with bluestone impost blocks. The windows on the fourth story are lancets, situated in a Romanesque blind arcade, supported by a slightly projecting pilaster of red brick with lighter red brick coins and bluestone capitals. The lancets (six on the south and east sides, three on the north and west sides), which are flat arched and disposed in an alternating 2-1-1-2 rhythm, are not unlike those in the tower of Richardson's Allegheny Court House (Pittsburgh, PA, 1884-1888). The third and fourth stories and the fourth and fifth stories of the tower are separated by a continuous string course of bluestone. On the fifth story is the tower clock. The wall surfaces above the faces of the clock are filled with six levels of recessed coffering, supported by a secondary pilaster order. Below the recessed surfaces of the clock faces are two round-headed arches which rest at the level of the string course. Also below the clock faces--at the top of the fourth story and immediately below the string course--is, in each face of the tower, a decorative brick balcony. The tower is topped by a pyramidal roof that is pierced by four wooden dormers, each with two louvered windows, and surmounted by a copper globe.

THE THREE-STORY WING. The eastern face of the tower and the eastern face of the three-story wing constitute the facade of Carbondale City Hall. Like the tower, the three-story wing rests on a slightly battered ashlar podium. The dominant feature of this wing on the ground level is the massive, half-circle, primary entrance arch of bluestone with a spandrel of bluestone, which is surmounted by a baluster in the form of a Romanesque arcade. This massive entrance arch, which is not unlike the entrance arch of Richardson's Crane Memorial Library (Quincy, MA, 1880-1883), is echoed in the facade by the secondary entrance arch at the north end of the facade on the ground level. The northern side of the primary entrance arch and both sides of the secondary entrance arch are flanked by rusticated stone turrets. The deeply carved foliate capitals and bases of these three bluestone turrets are the only area of carved decoration on the facade of the building. Like the primary entrance arch, the secondary entrance arch has a bluestone spandrel. The six paired vertical rectangular windows on the eastern face and the five vertical rectangular windows on the northern and western faces of the third-story of this wing are topped by bluestone Romanesque arches that rest on bluestone lintels, and are not unlike the paired windows on the second story of Richardson's Allegheny Court House. The impost blocks on the third story of this wing create the impression of a continuous string course which unites the third story of this wing and the tower. The Romanesque arches on this story repeat the round-headed arches on the ground floor of this wing. The roof of this wing contains, in its eastern face, a gable, the northern face of which is pierced by a dormer. Both this gable and this dormer are of brick and are outlined by a bluestone stepped gable which is topped with a metal band. In the gable are four interlocking vertical rectangular windows, topped with bluestone lintels; in the dormer is a single vertical rectangular window, topped with a bluestone lintel. Both the gable and the dormer are flanked by circular, engaged, decorative brick turrets, which by bluestone bands are visually and structurally connected to the string course which unifies the third-story of this wing. These turrets are reminiscent of those on the tower of Richardson's Trinity Church (Boston, MA, 1872-1877). The turrets flanking the gable on this wing of Carbondale City Hall are topped with domed lead caps which echo the rounded corners of the pilasters on the fourth and fifth levels of the tower, and, therefore, help to unite the three-story wing and the tower. These turrets, as well as those flanking the dormer, have bases of rusticated bluestone. A rectangular chimney, reaching to the height of the center of the clock, rises above the roofline from a point near the peak of the roof on the eastern side of the three-story wing.

THE TWO-STORY WING. This wing of Carbondale City Hall was formerly an autonomous building: the brick City Hall that was erected immediately following the fire on February 14, 1859, in which Carbondale's first City Hall (a wooden building) was burned to the ground. When Truman I. Lacey designed the present-day City Hall, he incorporated the brick 1859 City Hall that was situated on the lot where the two-story wing of present-day City Hall stands into his design for present-day City Hall. In order to effect that integration, Lacey remodeled the interior and redesigned the roof of the brick 1859 City Hall, without moving that building from its original site. The building designed and built by Lacey in 1892-1894 (present-day City Hall) is not, therefore, an amplification of the brick 1859 City Hall that stood on the lot where the two-story wing of present-day City Hall now stands. Rather, Lacey's 1892-1894 Carbondale City Hall is a new building that incorporates, literally, the building that was situated on the lot where Carbondale City Hall now stands.

In structurally and aesthetically integrating this 1859 building into his design for Carbondale City Hall, Lacey did not find it necessary to redo the windows of the 1859 City Hall that was situated on the site of his new building. The fenestration of this two-story wing of Carbondale City Hall is, therefore, that of the original 1859 building: ten slender vertical rectangular windows on each story, topped with greystone lintels and scrolls. These windows are completely in harmony with the vertical rectangular windows that are found not only in the tower but also in the three-story wing of Carbondale City Hall. In order to effect a perfect integration of the 1859 City Hall into his design for Carbondale City Hall, Lacey, however, did find it necessary to redesign the roof on the 1859 City Hall, and created the roof on the two-story wing that exists today. This roof, which is raked at a steeper angle than the roof that was on the 1859 City Hall, is pierced with three identical dormers (one each in the northern, western and southern faces of the roof) which, like the gable and the dormer in the three-story wing of Carbondale City Hall, are constructed of brick and topped by a stepped gable of bluestone which is surmounted by a metal band. Each dormer contains three interlocking vertical rectangular windows with Romanesque arches composed of five concentric courses of brick which rest on bluestone impost blocks. These windows, which are not unlike the triple interlocking Romanesque windows on the second story of Richardson's Allegheny Court House, are flanked by two vertical rectangular windows with bluestone lintels. The roof of this wing, like that of the three-story wing, is topped with a copper roof tree that terminates in fleur-de-lis like finials.

THE INTERIOR OF CARBONDALE CITY HALL. Like its exterior, the interior of Carbondale City Hall is grand: a large entrance hall with a gracious, double-ramped iron stairway leading to the second and third stories; 35 offices and salons, many with moulded tin ceilings, oak woodwork and hardwood floors.

THE IMPORTANCE OF CARBONDALE CITY HALL IN AMERICAN HISTORY

Carbondale City Hall is not only an embodiment in brick and bluestone of the Romanesque Revival style of architecture, it is, at the same time, an embodiment in brick and bluestone of the values and beliefs of late nineteenth-century America.

What are some of the values and beliefs that are incarnated in Carbondale City Hall? The following can be named: a high regard for materials and principles of construction, a predilection for the forthright and the utilitarian and the stable, a willingness to tolerate variation, an ability to establish unity from a great many seemingly disparate elements, a belief in oneself and in the future, an insistence on honesty, integrity and self-reliance. Those values and beliefs are, it can be argued, the values and beliefs that constitute the cornerstone of the American democracy.

To contemplate Carbondale City Hall from the perspective of the present is, therefore, to contemplate the ethical structure of pioneer America. In contemplating that structure, it is inevitable that we compare and contrast ourselves and our world with the world that is embodied in brick and bluestone in the building before us. We are, to be sure, neither better nor worse because of our similarities to and our differences from pioneer America, but because we have, in undertaking that experience, seen ourselves in terms of our ethical roots, we are the better for the experience.

To contemplate Carbondale City Hall from the perspective of the present is, at the same time, to contemplate an aesthetic structure that was created during the late nineteenth century in America. To contemplate that structure as an autonomous aesthetic phenomenon is to regard the givens embodied therein as ends unto themselves. Those givens are, to be sure, neither more nor less valid than the givens of our world. If, in contemplating that structure, we acknowledge that fact, we have learned the meaning of tolerance. To contemplate the givens embodied in Carbondale City Hall from the perspective of the present as ends unto themselves is, therefore, to contemplate a phenomenon that is, in fact, a work of art.

THE COMMITTEE TO RESTORE CARBONDALE CITY HALL, INC.

The Committee to Restore Carbondale City Hall was formed in November 1981 for the following reasons:

1. To restore Carbondale City Hall;
2. To preserve and restore all those buildings and historical sites in Carbondale and the surrounding area that are significant in local history and culture and which, collectively, constitute Carbondale's irreplaceable cultural and architectural heritage;
